

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

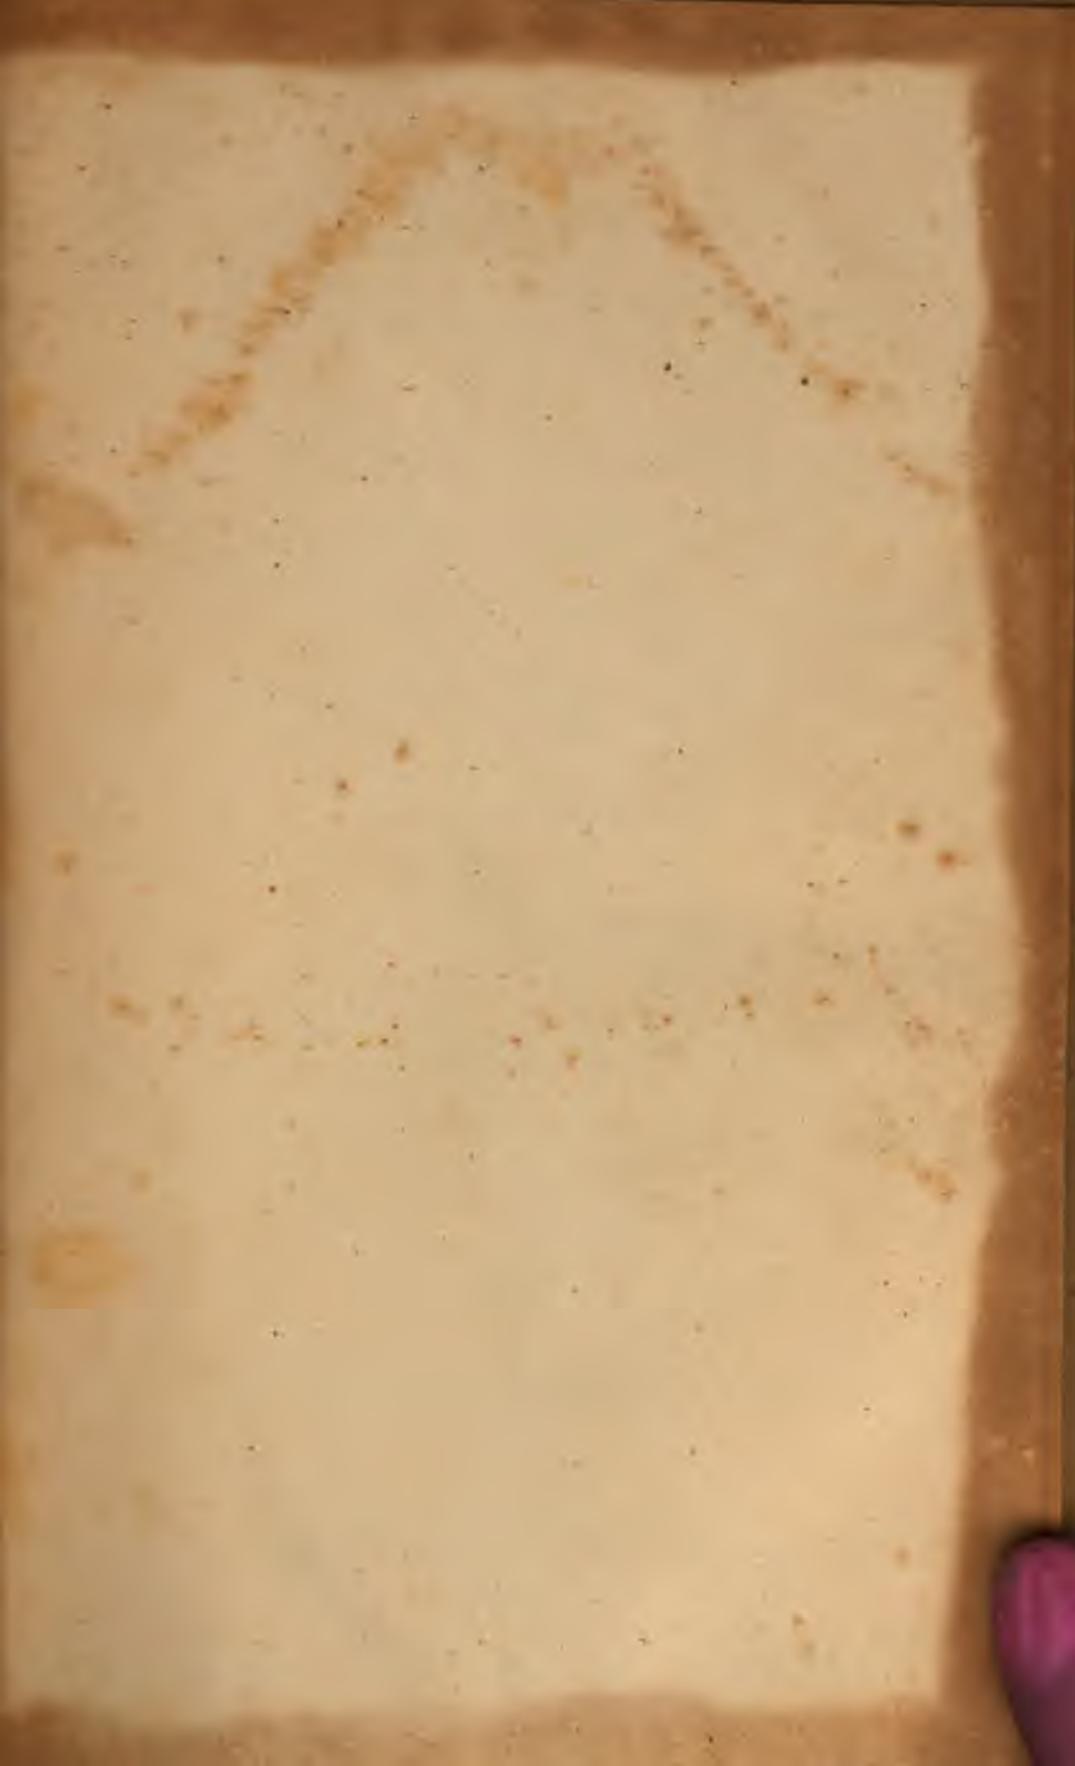

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at <http://books.google.com/>

REPORTS
OF CASES ARGUED AND DETERMINED.
IN THE High Court of Chancery,
FROM THE YEAR M DCC LXXXIX TO M DCCC XVII.

WITH A DIGESTED INDEX.

BY FRANCIS VESEY, JUN. ESQ.
OF LINCOLN'S INN, BARRISTER AT LAW.

In Twenty Volumes.

VOL. VII.

M DCCC II. XLI. GEO. III.

FROM THE LAST LONDON EDITION, WITH THE NOTES OF FRANCIS VESEY, JUN. ESQ.
AND THE EXTENSIVE ANNOTATIONS OF JOHN E. HOVENDEN, ESQ.
OF GRAY'S INN, BARRISTER AT LAW.

THE WHOLE EDITED,

WITH NOTES AND REFERENCES TO AMERICAN LAW,

AND SUBSEQUENT ENGLISH DECISIONS,

BY
J. C. PERKINS, ESQ.

Omnis ius, quod est certum, aut scripto, aut moribus constat. Dubium equitatis regula examinandam est. Quia scripta sunt, aut posita in more civitatis, nullam habent difficultatem: cognitio sua est enclit, non inventio. At que consultorum responsa explicantur, aut in verborum interpretatione sunt posita, aut in recti pravique discrimina. Quintilias, de Jure Civili.

BOSTON:
CHARLES C. LITTLE AND JAMES BROWN.

M DCCC XLIV.

LIBRARY OF THE
LELAND STANFORD, JR., UNIVERSITY
LAW DEPARTMENT.

ENTERED ACCORDING TO ACT OF CONGRESS, IN THE YEAR M DCCC XLIV, BY CHARLES C. LITTLE AND JAMES BROWN,
IN THE CLERK'S OFFICE OF THE DISTRICT COURT OF MASSACHUSETTS.

LIBRARY OF THE LELAND STANFORD JR. UNIVERSITY.

a.56393

JUL 23 1901

BOSTON:
C. HICKLING'S STEAM-POWER PRESS,
DEVONSHIRE STREET.

T A B L E
O R
THE CASES REPORTED IN VOLUME SEVEN.
DOUBLY ARRANGED.

N. B.—“VERSUS” ALWAYS FOLLOWS THE NAME OF THE PLAINTIFF.

	PAGE		PAGE
A
ABBOT, Cary v.	490	Bromley v. Holland	3
Adams, The Bishop of Hereford v.	324	Broom, Longmore v.	124
“ Lady Twysden v.	324	Brown v. Bigg	279
Alcock, Knollys v.	558	Brudenell v. Elwes	382
Andrew v. The Master and Wardens of the Merchant Taylor's Company	223	Brummell v. M'Pherson	237
Andrews v. Emerson	420	Buckmaster v. Harrop	341
Anonymous	222	Buxton, Mott v.	201
Arrowsmith, The Earl of Shaftesbury v.	480	C
Aylesbury (Countess of), Howe v.	137	Cary v. Abbot	490
B
Bailey v. Ekins	319	Chambers v. Minchin	186
“ v. Hammond	590	Clarke, Bastard v.	489
Barclay, Ex parte	597	Cockayne, Ex parte	591
Bastard v. Clarke	489	Coghill, Holmes v.	499
Bayne, Trimmer v.	508	Collins, Robson v.	130
Beaumont v. Boulbee	599	D
Bell v. Phyn	453	Damon, White v.	30
Bigg, Brown v.	279	Dann v. Spurrier	231
Blunt, Scawen v.	294	Dartmouth, Earl of, Howe v.	137
Boulbee, Beaumont v.	599	Darwin, Ridgeway v.	404
Bott, Gibson v.	89	Dawson v. Dawson	173
Branstrom v. Wilkinson v.	421	Day, Ex parte	301
		Denne, Osborne v.	424
		Detillin v. Gale	583
		Donlevy, Ex parte	317
		Downes v. Thomas	206

E	J
Edmonson, Ex parte	303 Jackson v. Jackson
Ekins, Bailey v.	319 Jervis v. White
Ellis, Ex parte	135 Jortin, Ex parte
Elwes, Brudenell v.	382
Emerson, Andrews v.	420
Etches v. Lance	417
	K
	Kemp v. Pryor
F	King, Ex parte
	" Urquhart v.
Fauquier v. Tynte	292 Knollys v. Alcock
Fenton v. Hughes	287
Ford, Ex parte (the Case of Drury Lane Theatre)	617
	L
	Lambe, Thompson v.
G	Lance, Etches v.
	Lingham, Miles v.
Gale, Detillin v.	583 Lobb, Ex parte
Gardiner, Hanson v.	305 Longmore v. Broom
Gibson v. Bott	89
	M
H	M'Pherson, Brummell v.
	Mattheson, Pickard v.
Hall, Ex parte	261 Matthews, Moody v.
Hammond, Bailey v.	590 Maundrell v. Maundrell
Hannay, Taynton v.	460 Merchant Taylors' Company, (Master and Wardens of)
Hanson v. Gardiner	305
Harris, Iveson v.	251 Andrew v.
Harrop, Buckmaster v.	341 Miles v. Lingham
Hearn, Woollam v.	211 Millet v. Rowse
Hereford, The Bishop of, v. Adams	Minchin, Chambers v.
Hill v. Simpson	324 Moggridge v. Thackwell
Hodgson, Newman v.	152 Moody v. Matthews
Hole v. Thomas	409 Morgan, Wynn v.
Holland, Bromley v.	589 Morris v. Preston
Holmes v. Coghill	3 " v. Stephenson
Horton, Nannock v.	499 Mott v. Buxton
Howe v. Countess of Aylesbury	391
" v. Earl of Dartmouth
Hughes, Fenton v.	137
Hunter v. Seton	137
	N
	Nannock v. Horton
	Newman v. Hodgson
	265 Noysomhed, Case of the Danish Ship
	593
	O
Ilchester, Ex parte The Earl of	348 Oldham v. Oldham
Iveson v. Harris	251 Osborne v. Denne
	410
	424

CASES REPORTED IN VOL. VII.

P		Spurrier, Dann v.	231
Perry, Sibley v.	522	Stephenson v. Morris	474
Petre, Ex parte	403	Stokes, Ex parte	405
Pettward v. Prescott	541
Phyn, Bell v.	453		T
Pickard v. Matheson	293
Pigott v. Waller.	98	Taynton v. Hannay	460
Pistor, Wiley v.	411	“ Rainsford v.	460
Plume v. Plume	258	Thackwell, Moggridge v.	36
Powell v. Robins	209	Thomas, Downes v.	206
Prescott, Pettward v.	541	“ Hole v.	589
Preston, Morris v.	547	“ Wallis v.	292
Pryor, Kemp v.	237	Thompson v. Lambe	587
		Thomson v. Thomson	470
R		Trevor, Sperling v.	497
Rainsford v. Taynton	460	Trimmer v. Bayne	508
Ridgeway v. Darwin	404	Twysden (Lady) v. Adams	324
Ripley v. Waterworth	425	Tynte, Fauquier v.	292
Robins, Powell v.	209
Robson v. Collins	130		U
Rougement v. The Royal Exchange Assurance Company	304	Urquhart v. King	225
Rowse, Millet v.	419
Royal Exchange Assurance Company, Rougement v.	304		W
		Walcott v. Walker	1
S		Walker, Walcott v.	1
Scawen v. Blunt	294	Waller, Pigott v.	98
Seton, Hunter v.	265	Wallis v. Thomas	292
“ v. Slade	265	Ward, Waring v.	332
Shaftesbury, The Earl of, v.		Waring v. Ward	332
Arrowsmith	480	Waterworth, Ripley v.	425
Shaftesbury, Earl of, Webb v.	480	Webb v. The Earl of Shaftesbury
Shaftoe v. Shaftoe	171	bury	480
Sharland, Ex parte	88	White v. Damon	30
Sibley v. Perry	522	“ Jervis v.	413
Simpson, Hill v.	152	“ v. White	423
Slade, Seton v.	265	Wiley v. Pistor	411
Sperling v. Trevor	497	Wilkinson, Branstrom v.	421
		Woollam v. Hearn	211
		Wynn v. Morgan	202

T A B L E
OF CASES CITED IN VOLUME SEVEN.

MANUSCRIPT, AND THOSE IN PRINT] IMPEACHED, CORRECTED, OR OTHERWISE PARTICULARLY NOTICED.

THIS TABLE DOES NOT EMBRACE THE CASES CITED BY THE EDITORS.

A	Christopher v. Christopher, 354, 5 Clarke, Westley v. 195, 8 Cleaver, Powell v. 142 Cranch v. Cranch, 141 Creese v. Irwin, 258
Acherly v. Vernon , 108 Anderson, Edie v. 302 Att. Gen. v. Baxter, 76 " v. Downing, 108 " v. Doyley, 58 " v. Syderfin, 43 " v. Taylor, 424 " v. Whorwood, 496	D Dagley v. Leake , 142 Dawes, Fearon v. 587, 8 Downing, Attorney Gen. v. 108 Dooley, Attorney General v. 58 " v. Dooley, 58 Draper, Smith v. 293
B	E Edie v. Anderson , 302
Bainton v. Ward, 503 to 507 Barthelomon v. Scholey, 142 Baxter, Attorney General v. 76 Bennet's Case, 436, 7 Bolt v. Stanway, 252 to 257 Bolton, Franco v. 19 Bonney v. Ridgard, 167 Brown v. Irvin, 258 Browne v. Yeall, 50 Brydges v. Landen, 210, 211 Burt v. Thomas, 321, 2, 3 Byne v. Potter, 4 to 28 " v. Vivian, 4 to 28	F Fearon v. Dawes , 587, 8 Finch v. Hattersley , 210, 211 Franco v. Bolton , 19
C	G Gibson v. Patterson , 269 Gifford, Nugent v. 166 Gompertz, Isaac v. 61, 494 Gregson v. Riddle , 268, 270, 5
Champion's Case, 150 Chancey v. Rees, 142

Grieve, Griffiths v. 142
 Griffiths v. Grieve, 142

H

Hattersley, Finch v. 210, 211
 Hawes v. Wyatt, 358, 373, 4
 Henderson, Ex parte, 137, n.
 Holder v. Holder, 146

I

Irvin, Brown v. 258
 " Creese v. 258
 Isaac v. Gompertz, 61, 494

J

Jewell, King v. 258

K

Kempton v. Packman, 176
 King v. Jewell, 258

L

Landen, Brydges v. 210, 211
 Latham, Ex parte, 35
 Leake, Dagley v. 142
 Lifford, Swannock v. 572 to 582
 Lloyd, Vaughan v. 489
 Lousado, Mocatta v. 423
 Lovewell, Peppin v. 142

M

Mead v. Lord Orrery, 167
 Mocatta v. Lousado, 423
 Morley, Ex parte, 262, 3
 Mould v. Williamson, 211, n.

N

Nugent v. Gifford, 166

O

O'Reilly, Ex parte, (The Case of the Opera House), 617
 Orrery (Lord), Mead v. 167

P

Packman, Kempton v. 176
 Paris Mountain, Case of, 590
 Patterson, Gibson v. 269
 Peppin v. Lovewell, 142
 Pinchard, Withers v. 475, 479
 Potter, Byne v. 4 to 28
 Powell v. Cleaver, 142

R

Radnor (Lady) v. Vandebendy,
 572 to 582
 Rees, Chancey v. 142
 Riddle, Gregson v. 268, 270, 5
 Ridgard, Bonney v. 167
 Roebuck v. Roebuck, 172
 Royal Circus, Case of, 617

S

Scholey, Barthelomon v. 142
 Smith v. Draper, 293
 Stanway, Bolt v. 252 to 257
 Swannock v. Lifford, 572 to 582
 Syderfin, Attorney General v. 43

T

Taylor, Attorney General v. 424
 Thomas, Burt v. 321, 2, 3

V

Vandebendy, Lady Radnor v. 572 to 582
 Vaughan v. Lloyd, 489
 Vernon, Acherley v. 108
 Vivian, Byne v. 4 to 28

W

Ward, Bainton v. 503 to 507
 Westley v. Clarke, 195, 8
 Whorwood, Attorney General v. 496
 Williamson, Mould v. 211, n.
 Withers v. Pinchard, 475, 479
 Wyatt, Hawes v. 358, 373, 4

Y

Yeall, Browne v. 50

STATUTES CITED IN VOLUME SEVEN.

HENRY VIII.		GEORGE III.
21. c. 13. Farm Leases } to Clergymen }	PAGE 547 to 557	17. c. 26. Annuities . . .	PAGE 4 to 28
CHARLES II.		33. c. 66. Prize . . .	594
12 c. 24. Guardian . . .	353 to 381	38. c. 87. Limited Ad-
29 c. 3. Frauds and Perjuries }	342 to 347	ministration, the Executor	460 to 469
Estates pur autre vie }	356 to 381 431 to 453	being abroad
GEORGE II.		40. c. 56. Money to be
14. c. 20. Estate pur autre vie }	431 to 453	laid out in land to be settled	114

LORD ELDON, Lord Chancellor.

SIR WILLIAM GRANT, Knt., Master of the Rolls.

HON. SPENCER PERCEVAL, Attorney General.

SIR THOMAS MANNERS SUTTON, Knt., Solicitor General.

CASES IN CHANCERY, ETC.

EASTER TERM.

[42 Geo. III. 1802.]

WALCOT v. WALKER.

[1802, MAY 6.]

THE Court will not act either by giving an injunction or an account, even upon a submission in the answer, upon a publication of such a nature that an action could not be maintained.

Injunction against an invasion of copyright, depending upon the effect of an agreement, refused till recovery in an action, (a) [p. I.]

THE bill prayed an injunction to restrain the Defendants, who were booksellers, from publishing two editions of the Plaintiff's works; upon a dispute as to the construction of the agreement between the parties.

The Defendants by their answer admitted, that they had published in one of these editions some of the Plaintiff's works, which they were not authorized to publish. As to that edition, therefore, they submitted.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Pemberton, in support of the motion for the Injunction; Mr. Richards and Mr. Johnson, for the Defendants.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON]. If the doctrine of Lord Chief Justice Eyre (1) is right, and I think it is, that publications may be of such a nature, that the author can maintain no action at law, it is not the business of this Court, even upon the submission in the answer, to decree either an injunction or an account of the profits of works of such a nature, that the author can maintain no action at law for the invasion of that, which he calls his property, but which the policy of the law will not permit him to consider his property. It is no answer, that the Defendants are as criminal. It is the duty of the Court to know, whether an action at law would lie; for, if not, the Court ought not to give an account of the unhallowed profits of libellous publications. At present I am in total ignorance of the nature of this work, and whether the Plaintiff can have a property in it or not (a). As to one of these editions, it is not possible to grant the injunction, until the right of the Plaintiff has been tried in an action. The facts may alter the effect of the agreement at law; and that must be looked to as to the right in equity. It is not immaterial also, that they have been permitted to publish in their trade for six years together without an action (b). But, even as to the other edition, before I uphold any injunction, I will see these publications, and determine upon the nature of them; whether there is question enough to send to law as to the property in those copies; for, if not, I will not act upon the submission in the answer. If upon inspection the work appears innocent, I will act upon that submission; if criminal, I will not act at all; and, if doubtful, I will send that question to law.

(a) In respect to the necessity for an action to try the title, see 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 935; Mawman v. Tegg, 2 Russ. 385; Eden, Injunct. (2d Am. ed.) 331, 332, 333, 334; Universities of Oxford & Cambridge v. Richardson, ante, 6 V. 689, and notes.

(1) Dr. Priestley's Case, see 2 Mer. 473.

Therefore let the injunction be dissolved as to the octavo edition; with liberty to apply for an injunction, in case the Plaintiff succeeds in an action. As to the duodecimo edition, dissolve the injunction, unless in a week they bring the books into Court (1).

As to the grounds upon which, and upon which alone, a Court of Equity will interfere in cases of literary piracy, see, ante, note 1 to Cary v. Faden, 5 V. 24.

(a) In note to 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 936, it is said by the eminent author, that prima facie the copyright confers title: and the onus is on the other side to show clearly, that notwithstanding the copyright, there is an intrinsic defect in the title. See also Laurence v. Smith, Jacob, 472.

A Court of Equity, in cases of this kind, does not affect to act as a censor morum, or to punish or restrain injuries to society generally. It merely withholds its aid from those, who clearly have no title to protection, or to assert a property in things, which the law will not, upon motives of the highest concern, permit to be deemed capable of founding a just title to property. See Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Meriv. 435; Laurence v. Smith, Jacob, 471; Cooper, Eq. Pl. 157; 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.) 149, 150; Eden on Injunct. (2d Am. ed.) 329, 330; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 937; 2 Kent, (5th ed.) 381; Fores v. Jones, 4 Esp. N. P. 97.

(b) This is no justification for the infringement of a copyright, yet it will be sufficient ground to induce a Court of Equity not to interfere, till it has been established at law. Eden on Injunct. (2d Am. ed.) 333, 334; Platt v. Button, post, 19 V. 447.

(1) Southey v. Sherwood, 2 Mer. 435; Murray v. Dugdale, in Chan. 1823. In Hogg v. Kirby, post, vol. viii. 215, see 226, the Lord Chancellor felt considerable difficulty in granting an injunction; the title of the work containing a false assertion, calculated to impose upon the public.

BROMLEY v. HOLLAND. (1)

[1802, MARCH 15, 16, 17; MAY 7.—ANTE, VOL. V. 610.]

UPON the plaintiff's appeal from the decree at the Rolls the decree was reversed; and an account was directed of the consideration paid by the original grantee of the annuity, with interest at 5*l.* per cent, and of the payments of the annuity to the grantee, or any persons claiming under him by assignment or otherwise, to be applied in discharge of the interest and principal of the consideration; and if the consideration with interest shall appear to be fully repaid, or, if not, upon payment by the Plaintiff of what shall be remaining due from him (a), the securities to be delivered up, &c. with costs; the Lord Chancellor's opinion being in favor of the jurisdiction (b); that the principle of the relief is not redemption, but the invalidity of the grant; and that the assignee, unless, under special circumstances, is in the situation of the grantee.

Defect of parties: Defendant being liable to another suit (c), [p. 11.]

Courts of Law have no authority to order instruments void under the Annuity Act to be delivered up, farther than the Act expressly gives it, [p. 18.]

The ancient jurisdiction of this Court not destroyed by the assumed jurisdiction of Courts of Law, dispensing with proferit, and permitting averment of a consideration not in the deed (d), [p. 19.]

Annuity void under the Act; at law the balance of the consideration may be recovered, deducting the payments under the annuity (e), [p. 23.]

Annuity void under the Act, upon an account of the consideration and the pay-

(1) Coop. 9.

(a) Where an agreement is only constructively fraudulent, chancery will direct it to stand as security for the sum really due. Boyd v. Dunlap, 1 Johns. Ch. 482; Bernal v. Donegal, 1 Bligh, N. S. 594; S. C. 3 Dow, 133; Boynton v. Hubbard, 7 Mass. 120; Wharton v. May, ante, 5 V. 27; 1 Sugd. Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) p. 333, [463].

As to the terms on which usurious contracts are set aside, see Bromley v. Holland, ante, 5 V. 610, note; Scott v. Nesbit, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 641, 649, notes.

(b) Post, 22, note.

(c) As to the necessary parties in the case of an assignment of the rights in controversy, see Story, Eq. Pl. § 154, § 211; Burt v. Dennet, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 225; Moran v. Hays, 1 Johns. Ch. 339; Sells v. Hubbell, 2 Johns. Ch. 394; Field v. Maybee, 5 Paige, 539; Gibton v. Thompson, Hayes, Exch. 607; Balls v. Strutt, 1 Hare, 146; Corbin v. Emerson, 10 Leigh, 663; Campbell v. Dickens, 4 Young & Coll. 17.

All persons materially interested in the subject matter of the suit, must be made parties to a bill in Equity. Footman v. Pray, R. M. Charl. 291; Todd v. Sterrett, 6 J. J. Marsh. 432; Watkins v. Worthington, 2 Bland, 209; Worthington v. Lee, ib. 678; Mills v. Hoag, 7 Paige, 17; Lucas v. Bank of Darien, 2 Stew. 280; Caldwell v. Taggart, 4 Peters, 190.

There are, however, many exceptions and modifications of the rule. See the cases cited above. West v. Randall, 2 Mason, 181; Story, Eq. Pl. § 154.

(d) 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 81-85; Irving v. Planters' Bank, 1 Humph. 145; Shields v. Commonwealth, 4 Rand, 541.

In cases where Equity originally properly had jurisdiction, that jurisdiction is not lost, because Courts of Law now entertain jurisdiction over them. 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 64*i*; Varet v. New York Ins. Co. 7 Paige, 560. See also cases cited above; Ex parte Greenoay, ante, 6 V. 812; East Ind. Co. v. Boddam, post, 9 V. 468, 469; Toulmin v. Price, ante, 5 V. 238, 239, and notes.

(e) Chitty, Contracts, (6th Am. ed.) 625, 626; Davis v. Bryan, 6 Barn. & Cress. 651; S. C. 9 Dowl. & Ry. 726; Waters v. Mansell, 3 Taunt. 56; Couper v. Godmond, 9 Bingh. 748.

See for cases where money paid has been recovered back at law on failure of the consideration, Chitty, Contracts, (6th Am. ed.) 622, 623, et seq., and notes and cases cited.

ments under the annuity, if the balance is against the grantee, it has been decided in equity, (Byne v. Potter, ante, vol. v. 609,) that it cannot be recovered, [p. 25.]

Costs entirely in the sound discretion of the Court (a), [p. 28.]

Power of attorney revocable, and in ordinary cases would not found the jurisdiction for delivering up instruments; but when executed for valuable consideration this Court would not permit it to be revoked, [p. 28.]

THE Plaintiff appealed from the decree (1) pronounced at the Rolls.

The petition stated, as the first ground of complaint, that the decree admitted the several deeds and instruments, for securing the said annuity of 100*l.*, to be null and void; and therefore the petitioner ought to have the said deeds and instruments delivered up to him to be cancelled on payment of what, if any thing, should appear to be due from him in respect of the principal money advanced to him as the consideration of the said annuity, and of legal interest thereof from the time of such advance, after giving to the petitioner credit for the several payments made by him in respect of the said annuity since the granting thereof; whereas by the effect of the decree the Defendant, Arabella Holland, is to be repaid the whole principal money advanced by her for the purchase of the annuity, with legal interest thereon from the time of filing the bill; deducting only such payments as have been made by the petitioner on account of the annuity since the filing of the bill; so that the petitioner is to have no credit in the account for the payments made by him on account of the annuity previous to the filing of the bill.

Secondly, the petitioner stated, that he was aggrieved by the decree, as he was thereby directed to pay all the Defendants their costs of the suit.

[* 4] *The Solicitor General (2), Mr. Piggott, and Mr. Leach, in support of the Petition of Appeal. Upon the point of jurisdiction, a Court of Law has no authority to order the deeds to be delivered up, except in the four cases specified in the Act (3). The Plaintiff had no remedy any where but in this Court, the Court of King's Bench refusing to entertain his second application, either upon the former or any other ground. Another ground is, that Oakden is actually in the receipt of the rents and profits, to secure the other annuity to his brother; and the Defendant Holland chose to take her annuity under him. It is impossible, therefore, to

(a) 2 Barbour, Ch. Pr. 321, 322, b. 6, ch. 1.

But as a general principle, in this Court as well as in a Court of law, the prevailing party is prima facie entitled to costs. Saunders v. Frost, 5 Pick. 260; Harr. 354; White v. Foljambe, post, 11 V. 337; Hume v. Norton, 1 Hopk. 344; Clark v. Reed, 11 Pick. 446, 449; Bryant v. Russell, 23 Pick. 508.

If it shall appear that both parties are in fault, the Court will not give costs to either. Clark v. Reed, Saunders v. Frost, ubi supra. See farther 2 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.) 554, 555.

(1) See the Report, ante, vol. v. 610.

(2) The Hon. S. Perceval.

(3) Stat. 17 Geo. III. c. 26, s. 4; that statute is repealed by stat. 53, Geo. III. c. 141. See the note, ante, vol. ii. 36.

disentangle this property from the effect of that deed without the interposition of this Court ; and the case is therefore much stronger than Byne v. Vivian (1), and Byne v. Potter (2). There was no consideration for that deed, the only transaction between the Plaintiff and the assignee, except the forbearance of a demand, which could not be enforced at law. The assignee must be in the same situation as the original grantee. The ground of restoring the parties is, that the consideration has totally failed. The Court treats it as a loan, compelling repayment of the consideration with interest ; and then it is impossible not to give the other party credit for the payments made on the other side. In the cases of usury, the Court restoring the money calls back the excess of the usurious payments beyond the legal interest. Who is the particeps criminis here ? The enrolment was the duty of the grantee. The analogy between this case and Howson v. Hancock (3), an action to recover money paid upon an unlawful wager, fails. The same observation applies to the case of money paid upon an unstamped bill of exchange, also mentioned in the reasons alleged for this decree (4). The bill * is only evidence of the debt, which still remains in respect of the precedent consideration. The fraud is that of the debtor, the Plaintiff. It is necessary to take some other medium as the ground of setting aside the transaction in these cases ; considering it as a loan ; and allowing the whole to be recovered back ; which must proceed upon this, that the consideration has totally failed.

[* 5]

It is impossible, that this decree can stand upon the principle of redemption. The bill does not pray a redemption. There is no one instance, in which, if the deed has been declared void ab initio, the Court has done more than put the parties in the same situation as if it had never been executed. This decree, which must be considered as going upon the principle, that the instrument is wholly void, gives it validity up to the time of filing the bill ; which must have arisen from a confusion between a deed void and voidable, as by something affecting the conscience ; upon which this Court has a discretion. What ground is there for favor to this Defendant ? Not as an annuitant, or assignee of an annuity. The subsequent deed, a mere direction of the mode of payment, is no confirmation ; nor is a deed absolutely void capable of confirmation. The Plaintiff does not seek to call payments back ; but is content to take it, as it is, without account and without refunding. At all events the Defendant Holland ought not to have her costs.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Richards, Mr. Romilly and Mr. Cooper, for the Defendants, in support of the Decree.—As to the jurisdiction, though the Defendants do not appeal, yet it is an answer to the Plaintiff, complaining that he has not got enough, that he is entitled to

(1) Ante, vol. v. 604.

(2) Ante, vol. v. 609.

(3) 8 Term Rep. B. R. 575.

(4) Ante, vol. v. 618.

nothing. The case is open to the Defendants as to the whole, to the Plaintiff only as to what is complained of by his petition [* 6] (1). No instance can be found, except those referred to in this judgment, in which a Court of Equity has ever entertained such a jurisdiction, to deliver up instruments void at law. It was declined in Franco v. Bolton (2), a decision much stronger; the instrument being void only by something dehors. It was exercised with great reluctance by Lord Thurlow in the case of the promissory note, Ryan v. Mackmath (3), upon the principle, quia timet. Where there is a possibility of evidence being lost, so far it is rational. But this instrument is one, against which no evidence is wanted, and evidence is always in the power of the party, against whom an attempt may be made to enforce it. It cannot be enforced without a production of the memorial. Byne v. Vivian and Byne v. Potter are not warranted by any previous decision. Hart v. Lovelace (4) goes a step farther than the Court of King's Bench did in this case, namely, that even another Court cannot entertain jurisdiction, if it has been before a Court of competent jurisdiction. In Schumann v. Weatherhead (5) Lord Kenyon recognizes his opinion in Greathead v. Bromley. It must be supposed, the Court of King's Bench refused to act under the judgment upon good grounds, and that the application was improper.

Next, as to the terms, these payments are to be considered as payments of an annuity, which the grantor chooses to subsist, if he does not immediately state his objections to it. He chooses to let it continue at the risk of the grantee. Suppose it went on for forty years, so as infinitely to exceed the price, could he then bring back any thing so paid? By what action? The annuity is good, till set aside by him. If money has been voluntarily paid with- [* 7] out *any consideration, it cannot be got back again. Consider the consequence. The grantor will pay the annuity at the risk of the life dropping, till the purchase-money is repaid; then make the objection; and say, the grantee has received the purchase money. It is impossible to understand the principle, upon which the Courts of Law have gone upon this (6). This is not the case of a loan; as the case of usury is from its nature. The cases of fraud, extortion, &c. have no resemblance to this. Consider it then as the case of an assignee, and under particular circumstances: which make it very different in a Court of Equity. By the subsequent deed, the Plaintiff tells her, it is a good annuity, and he means to pay it. The assignee therefore at least, if not the original grantee, is entitled to these terms. This in effect is calling back these payments, which could not be got from the Defendants by

(1) 1 P. Will. 299.

(2) Ante, vol. iii. 368.

(3) 3 Bro. C. C. 15.

(4) 6 Term Rep. B. R. 471.

(5) 1 East, 537.

(6) See the note, ante, vol. v. 608.

action, if they are to be set against the money due to her in respect of the purchase of the annuity. The grantee lives up to his income under the impression, confirmed in this instance by the Plaintiff, that the annuity is good. Consider the consequence of not only setting aside the annuity, but of calling back payments spent under that confidence. The Court, if it has jurisdiction, will at least compel the Plaintiff to do equity. That is the principle, upon which the case of usury goes; though the transaction is void, as corrupt and against law. The Plaintiff has by repeated acts, the deed of 1795, and his abortive attempts in the Court of King's Bench, given credit to this transaction. The Plaintiff coming into equity for assistance, his own acts are very important as to the terms. It is impossible to reconcile the decrees in Byne v. Vivian and Byne v. Potter. Why did not the Court call back the money overpaid in the latter case as well as the former? This application is in nature of an action of assumpsit, to *recover back [*8] those payments. Money paid upon a respondentia bond, or the premium of a re-assurance, void under the Statutes (1), cannot be recovered back, though the instrument is a nullity: Andree v. Fletcher (2), Munt v. Stokes (3). The principle is, that those payments were made according to good conscience; though they would not be enforced. Money paid upon an illegal contract, executory, has been recovered back: Cotton v. Thurland (4); and the distinction is there taken between that case and this; in which the risk has been incurred, and in Lowry v. Bourdieu (5). This is not fraud or surprise, but a defect in a collateral matter, merely form. At first it appears a fair proposition, to put the parties in the same situation: but in substance it is obtaining this relief against an assignee without repaying any thing, or repaying only a very small part of the sum originally advanced, in one way of taking the account. Offering to pay every thing the Plaintiff means to pay nothing; insisting that the whole is satisfied. That distinguishes this from Byne v. Vivian; in which the party was, as in the case of usury, to be repaid the whole money advanced with interest. The deed is void, when the grantor chooses to insist upon the objection, and then only. The grantee could not say, it was void originally, and bring an action for the consideration. Lord Alvanley proceeded upon the ground, that, till the objection was insisted upon, the grant was good; considering it valid, as long as the Plaintiff chooses, it should be so. In Ex parte Maxwell (6), Lord Kenyon intimated a doubt, whether the analogy to the Statute of Limitations (7)

(1) Stat. 7, Geo. I. c. 21, s. 2; Stat. 19, Geo. II. c. 37; Stat. 21, Geo. III. c. 65, s. 29.

(2) 3 Term Rep. B. R. 266.

(3) 2 Term Rep. B. R. 561.

(4) 5 Term Rep. B. R. 405.

(5) Dougl. 451.

(6) 2 East, 85.

(7) Stat. 21, James I. c. 16, s. 3.

might not be a defence against an application to set aside an annuity.

[* 9] * In such a case as this the Decree is clearly right as to the costs.

The Solicitor General, [Hon. Spencer Perceval], in reply. As to the question of the jurisdiction being still open, I admit, it would be an answer to the complaint, that the Plaintiff has not sufficient relief, to show, that he is not entitled to any. Byne v. Vivian and the other case proceed upon this; that the existence of those instruments did to a certain degree affect the title, in the nature of a cloud upon it; which it was for the interest of the owner to have removed. In this case the party may reasonably apprehend, that if these securities are permitted to exist, they may be made available, not only at a subsequent period, but even now. The possible case of an action upon the suggestion, that the instrument is lost, occurs; the only answer to which is, that a bill to perpetuate testimony might be filed. That must be upon the principle, quia timet. The judgment is a subsisting security, which the Plaintiff cannot prevent from being carried into effect against him. That requires no suit. How is the execution under it to be resisted? How is the grantor to know the difference between the deed and the memorial? The registry need not to be made for several days.

With respect to the terms, certainly a great part of the argument in this decree applies equally to the grantee and the assignee. The principle of the relief is, that the whole transaction is void: and therefore the consideration has failed; which enables one party to maintain the equitable action for money had and received; and upon that principle the other has a right to set off these payments. They cannot be considered as voluntary payments. The payment of the consideration was equally voluntary. But in truth they are not so. This act certainly meant to give the same protection in this case, as the *Court upon other principles does in other cases of oppression, usury, &c. In the case, put by your Lordship, of an acceptance for the honor of the drawer of a bill not stamped, he pays that money for that friend, just as if he paid it without accepting the bill. As to the case of hardship, the objection not being taken, till by the annual payments the principal and interest are paid, having the benefit of the risk all the time, the law gives that opportunity: but it cannot be presumed, that the party is cognizant of his right. These are mistaken payments, not voluntary payments, upon the consideration of the validity of the transaction. So upon the supposition, that more has been paid than the principal and interest, the Plaintiff does not ask any thing in respect of that. He will be contented, if the instruments are delivered up; and if they waive the account, he does not desire it. He will consent to take it as at the time of the assignment to Mrs. Holland, considering her as the original grantee. But upon principle it would be very difficult to stop there; for, the suit against the assignee is the same as against the grantee. The assignee is the purchaser of all the rights attaching upon the original grantee. With respect to the question, whether the excess beyond the principal and interest might not be recovered back, why should it not? It is part of that, the consideration for which has failed. The cases, where the contract is illegal, both parties knowing it, are distinct; not like this case, upon a law made for the benefit of the Plaintiff; who is not to be considered particeps criminis; as he is in those cases; and cannot therefore set up the illegality of the contract: but the rule "potior est conditio defendantis" prevails. In the cases of insurance, if it fails on the ground, that the voyage never commenced, or a warranty of neutrality was not complied with, &c. the premium may be recovered back; which proves the distinction. Illegal contracts executory stand upon a very different ground. The party *coming, before the contract is executed, disaffirms it. As to the case Ex parte Maxwell, the application was after the death of the party; and the Court refused to listen to it upon good grounds; that the testimony for defence against the application was gone. The allusion to the Statute of Limitations upon that occasion, is a mere dictum in support of that decision. Lord Kenyon could not mean, that an annuity paid for six years is therefore not to be shaken. If the original transaction was void, there might be a new agreement: but it cannot be the subject of confirmation; and in this instance the supposed confirmation is nothing more than directing the mode of payment; and no more a confirmation than every payment made under this grant. The Plaintiff relies upon Byne v. Vivian and Byne v. Potter. As far as those cases agree, at least, the Court will extract the principle from them, as to the terms. At least as against Mrs. Holland the Plaintiff ought not to be called on to pay costs: rather he is entitled to the costs; as the expense is incurred by her fault.

May 7th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] observing, that upon looking into the instruments it appeared, that the term was assigned to Flashman, and so the Defendant Tyrrell had no estates in him, even apparently, which could call for him to be a party, and that Flashman was not before the Court, proceeded thus:

As to the objection upon the want of parties it was said, that though Tyrrel assigned to Flashman, yet if the term is void, Flashman has not the legal estate in him. True; but if this bill can be supported upon the cases I shall allude to, the color of title the deed furnishes, as throwing a cloud over the legal title, is one of the circumstances, that founds the jurisdiction; and it is difficult to *answer this; that as this annuity is good at law, [*12] the term would be a legal estate in Flashman, which would protect the present owner of the annuity; and if this Plaintiff should afterwards find it necessary, to clear his title, to file a bill against Flashman, it would be impossible to bring that suit to a hearing, without making Mrs. Holland a party; for her interest would be destroyed by any decree affecting his title; and then the decree in this suit would leave her liable to another suit, in respect of an interest purporting to be in him. She would not be delivered by this decree from another suit, and would be liable to be doubly vexed. Therefore, if the objection for want of parties was strongly pressed, I am not sure I could deliver the Plaintiff from it. Tyrrell and Holland answer together. The former had merely to state, that he had none of the securities in his hands; and had assigned to Flashman. He does state that fact; and thereby gives the Plaintiff notice, that it is not necessary to bring him to a hearing; that no relief can be had against him; that fact also suggesting, that it may be necessary to bring Flashman before the Court. Mrs. Holland by her answer states great ignorance of all the circumstances prior to her own purchase. Tyrrell states them as being acquainted with them. The objection with respect to him is, that he states them as being interested, instead of putting in an answer of three lines, leaving him to be examined as a witness, if thought proper. They state the applications to the Court of King's Bench; and this case certainly brings forward this Plaintiff, informed by that Court, that they could not, or would not, give him relief under the summary jurisdiction given by this act.

I see from the Report of this case, that Lord Alvanley intimated an opinion (1), that he should have been *justified in giving the account, not upon the foot of the assignment, but of the original consideration of 600*l.*; and I go along with him in that; for, if the Court has jurisdiction, for better and worse, the assignee must stand in the place of the assignor. The party however appears to have been contented to have the account upon the footing of her own advance, and not to have pressed her equity to the extent, in which Lord Alvanley thought it might be granted. The petition of appeal complains, that the decree ought to be upon a different principle; and that the account should be taken upon this footing; that the original consideration should be taken as the principal to be paid, when the Plaintiff comes into equity; not to redeem the annuity; for I cannot agree with Lord Alvanley, if that is the idea to be collected from the Report, that it is a suit to redeem; but it is calling for a decree upon equitable grounds, if there are any such, in a case in which the Court must state, that there never was a legally existing annuity to be redeemed; desiring therefore, that he shall be considered as owing to those, from whom he received it, the sum of 600*l.* and paying interest for that sum from the time it was advanced; that an account should be taken, giving him credit, as matter of just allowance, for all the sums of money he had paid as annuity payments; and that, if the balance of the account so taken should be in favor of Mrs. Holland, it should be paid to her; and that upon the repayment the securities should be delivered up, and an injunction be granted against those, which cannot be delivered up; and if the balance should be against her, the bill does not contend, that the Plaintiff can demand it in this suit. If the bill did contend, that she was to repay the balance due from her, it must be acknowledged there would be great difficulty in maintaining it; and that circumstance attaches considerable difficulty upon the question of equitable jurisdiction.

(1) Ante, vol. v. 619, 620.

It did not occur to me, upon reading the Report, that Lord Alvanley *collected from what passed before him (and indeed it was from the accident of looking into the particular instrument that I collected it) that Tyrrell had assigned the term. His Lordship considers throughout, that the legal estate, if any instrument passed it, was still in Tyrrell.

The first question is as to the jurisdiction. If the Court has jurisdiction, the second question is, upon what terms this relief is to be granted to the present Plaintiff.

Previously to the act this transaction among these parties would have been a perfectly legal, valid transaction. That act, it seems admitted in the argument, has in this case produced this very singular state of circumstances; that it was admitted upon all hands, and it is impossible to deny, that this grant was originally good for nothing; and yet two applications to a Court having jurisdiction were unsuccessful. Upon the first of them relief was refused; which might very well be; for if the attention of the Court was not called to the circumstances forming the objection, or if it was called to them, and those circumstances were not matters within the contents of the deed, but matters of fact out of the deed, not sufficiently evidenced, or not by credible evidence, in such a case the Court could not exercise the jurisdiction. The second application was made upon a ground, which would have brought distinctly before the Court, according to the decisions upon this Act, that within the contents and four corners of the deed there was an objection, namely, that there was no memorial of the clause of redemption; upon which the Court has frequently acted; and the Court held, that if one application had not succeeded, whether upon the same or different grounds, they would never entertain another application. It would ill become me to state any observation upon the wisdom, with which the Court so exercised their jurisdiction. But this difficulty occurs in this case; here is an instrument admitted to be null and void to all intents and purposes; and notwithstanding that the Court enforces the effect of it, whenever admitting a proceeding under the judgment, part of its own record; and this unseemly incongruity appears, that if a question arose in any other Court upon the rights of the parties under these instruments, every other Court must say, the grantee has no right; and if the question was made, perhaps even upon the right to retain the money under the judgment, another Court, and perhaps that Court, would be under considerable difficulty to state that the money was legally obtained, which had been obtained under a judgment, which this act pronounces null and void to all intents and purposes. Lord Alvanley thought, and I concur in that opinion, that, if this Court, independent of that objection, has jurisdiction, and is to give the relief, as it is contended it ought to be given in one way or the other, it was impossible, that the circumstances of this case with reference to the applications to the Court of King's Bench should destroy the relief, if it existed ; and if the prayer of the bill can be maintained either according to the Plaintiff's principle or Lord Alvanley's, the want of success in those applications will not prevent the relief. Therefore I lay out of the case those applications, and also the circumstance, that Lord Thurlow in one of the cases (1) mentioned in the argument sent the point to the Court of Common Pleas, to be determined on a motion to set aside the warrant of attorney ; 1st, on the ground, that I should think it disrespectful to the Court of King's Bench to send it a third time ; and, 2dly, that it is not necessarily part of my duty to send the parties to law upon a point, on which I have no [ 16] * doubt (a) ; for both as to the original consideration much might be said to draw into question the validity of the assignment ; and the objection from the want of the clause of redemption in the memorial is now determined upon this act ; and I do not like to disturb the determinations. These securities therefore are void at law ; and in no shape ought to have execution at law.

[*15]

The next consideration, if the securities are void at law, is, whether this Court has equitable jurisdiction to order these void securities to be delivered up. If that was res integra, my mind would be considerably affected by the very able argument addressed to the Court by Mr. Mansfield in Byne v. Vivian. But I am to consider the question not merely with reference to the principle, upon which I should have been called on to decide that question, if it had been originally before me, but regard being had to this fact, not immaterial ; that the question appears (2) to have been three times decided by Lord Rosslyn ; and the authority of the two first of those decisions is to this extent adopted by Lord Alvanley ; that after those two decisions he would not repel the claim of equitable jurisdiction, but would adopt that idea. The question therefore comes before me with this sort of weight upon that side of the argument, contending for the jurisdiction, that it has been four times so decided, and three times in cases, from which there is no appeal. If the case was to be decided unprejudiced by these circumstances, it would be necessary first to see, what is the object of the act, what is the policy of it ; in what relation the parties stand with respect to those principles, upon which the Court in other cases has considered one party to the transaction as a party, whose interests are to be surrounded by the provident provision of the policy of the law.

(1) Davidson v. Lord Foley, 3 Bro. C. C. 598; 2 Hen. Black. 12.

(a) As to the right of the parties to a trial of any issue of fact by a jury, see Bishop v. Chichester, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 163, note (a); Marsden v. Brackett, 9 N. Hamp. 336; Charles River Bridge v. Warren Bridge, 7 Pick. 367, 369; Jervis v. White, post, 413, note.

(2) See the references in the former Report of this case, ante, vol. v. 610.

* In the preamble of this act the legislature declares the [* 17] practice of raising money in this way pernicious ; and it is impossible to read the enacting part without observing, that the mischief it describes is not to the public interests, but attaching upon individuals meant to be protected by the Act. The effect of the secrecy of these transactions in promoting the practice is observed ; and the means of preventing that secrecy are stated. I am not at liberty to examine, whether these provisions are wise or sufficient. The occasion does not call upon me to examine, how far they are clearly intelligible. But I am bound to hold upon the clearest principle, that the provision, which the Legislature has said shall obtain to prevent that secrecy, is one, that I must deem wise and necessary for the sake of the grantor, to prevent its being valid to any intent or purpose. I state it thus, because, when the argument takes the shape, as Mr. Mansfield put it very strongly both in those former cases and in this, that this is not a case of circumvention, imposition, furnishing any of the grounds of policy or attention to distress, I doubt, whether that argument is as clearly admissible as it was strongly put ; for when the Legislature says, it takes the case of persons buying annuities as persons to be protected, and points out the species of protection, the Court is obliged to look at them as not protected to the extent, if not protected by the means the Legislature has positively required to be applied to their protection. If, therefore, this was unprejudiced by decision, this case as to the claim of the individual is not to be decided upon the circumstances existing merely between these individuals ; but the party must have the benefit of those principles, upon which the Law has said, in every case, except those excepted, the individual, who the Act supposes would not deal, unless driven by hard circumstances, shall have that protection, which the Act requires. The decision must be not upon the honesty * of the particular case, but upon [* 18] the point, whether the individual dealing for an annuity has that protection, which the Law has said in every case such a person should have. If that is dispensed with on account of the morality of one case, pro tanto the law is repealed.

This Act (1) has specified certain cases, in which, by the exercise of a summary jurisdiction at law the instrument so rendered void to all intents and purposes may be delivered up. The Act was a very favorite Act, when it passed. I have often thought it as liable to objection upon this ground as any other : that it is not consistent with the policy of the Law or the Constitution, that this summary jurisdiction over property should be given in any case. I doubt, whether that is not the greatest mischief. Applications were very frequently made and granted at law in cases, in which the Court had no authority. It occurred first to Lord Chief Justice Eyre, when in the Court of Exchequer, that they had no such authority : and that practice was corrected. In cases, therefore, where the express letter of the Act does not give the Courts of Law authority to deliver up the instruments, it remains clear, that they never can be delivered up, unless this Court has jurisdiction to order it. That reduces the question to this, whether the Act of Parliament cutting up a transaction previously valid, and rendering it invalid to all intents and purposes, and providing itself the remedies parties are to have in consequence of it, this Court has inherent in its jurisdiction a right to do more by way of remedy to the party claiming relief, a right to give relief beyond what the Parliament has given. That would be a very grave question, if res integra; and I should have considerable doubt upon it: but the inclination of [* 19] my opinion would be, that this *Court would have that jurisdiction. In my experience in this Court there have been a great number of decisions upon notes of hand, bonds, &c.; and some degree of contradiction is to be found, not only in the argument at the Bar, but in what has fallen from the Bench, upon the authority of the Court to direct these instruments to be delivered up. If in Franco v. Bolton (1), Lord Rosslyn is supposed to have been of opinion, that, upon the ground merely, that by the alteration in the law of pleading an action cannot be maintained upon an instrument in consequence of the present doctrine, that you may by pleading show the consideration, this Court would not order the instrument to be delivered up, I have great hesitation in acceding to that. But by the Report that does not appear to have been the only ground; the discovery sought tending to bring imputations upon the moral character of the Plaintiff. I cannot however say the decision did not proceed in some degree upon the former ground; and in that extent I do not merely hesitate, but I really do not concur.

In the case of Hanington v. Du Chatel (2), where Lord Thurlow granted an injunction against a bond for the purchase of an office, taking notice of the alteration of the law of pleading he is made to intimate, that the jurisdiction of this Court might not be necessary, if the defence could be made at law. That I take to be a mistake; for I am quite sure, Lord Thurlow's opinion was, that Courts of Law, properly if you please, taking upon themselves to do that by new forms of pleading, which they had never before done, as dispensing with profert, or permitting the averment of a consideration not in the body of the deed, could not destroy the ancient jurisdiction of this Court in matters of that nature. That unquestionably * was his opinion (3). Unless it can be contended, that the jurisdiction is gone in the case of profert, why is it in this case? Clearly it is not gone in that; for the protection this Court gives in that case is most essential to the interests of justice. Here the party pledges his conscience by his oath, that the instrument is lost. The Plaintiff at law may himself put it in the fire, and may be wicked enough to procure evidence to support that, if he is wicked enough to destroy the instrument. After the judgment and execution it might be brought forward again, if it was only concealed ; and then the party, who had received the money, might be out of the jurisdiction. It is impossible therefore to say, the jurisdiction of this Court, protecting the subject so much farther than he can be protected at law, is destroyed ; and these cases of annuities particularly may afford an intimation, why it is necessary to support the jurisdiction of this Court. Suppose a man throws his annuity deed into the fire and gives evidence of the contents. The memorial would be strong evidence of the existence of the deed : but he might recover nothing, if the deed was produced, and differed from the memorial ; and if it was not produced, he might recover the whole (1). In this instance the clause of redemption is not in the memorial ; in which case the recovery would be against law, if the whole evidence appeared. This case contains a stronger ground for upholding the jurisdiction than perhaps existed in Franco v. Bolton : but it is enough to say, it is not possible to maintain, that the ancient jurisdiction is destroyed by the Courts of Law for the first time taking cognizance of that subject. So upon bills to have promissory notes delivered up in complicated cases, and as the evidence may be lost ; and so upon bills to have void policies of *insurance delivered up ; which in the cases in the Court [^{*21}] of Exchequer is always prayed, and which may be, though they are not usually, followed up to a decree, upon this principle ; that it is not unwholesome, that an instrument should be delivered up, upon which a demand may be vexatiously made as often as the purpose of vexation may urge the party to make it (2).

(1) Ante, vol. iii. 368.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 124.

(3) Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. C. C. 218.

Another circumstance is to be observed in this case, as it was discussed at the Rolls : that, whatever may be said upon the cases, to which I have alluded, and whatever difference of decision there may have been upon such cases, it seems to me, there is considerable difference between the case of a bill of exchange, upon which on the face of it there can be no demand, and an instrument, which upon the face of it purports to affect real property ; and that is to be applied in some measure to the case of the bill without a stamp, that has been noticed. In Byne v. Vivian and Byne v. Potter the late Attorney General lays particular stress upon the circumstance, that the instrument purports to affect real estate, and form a cloud upon the title. It is said in answer to the objection, that in this instance the jurisdiction of equity is as little wanting as in any ; for the demand must be made upon the production of the instrument ; and the memorial must be also produced, and if that is produced, the demand can never be finally supported. The answer to that is,

(1) Ante, vol. v. 238; vi. 812, 813, and the references in the notes.

(2) Post, 414. See the note.

first, that the demand may be as frequently made as vexation may dispose the party to make it: next, where the instrument purports to affect real estate, it is not just to consider it merely having regard to the question, whether the demand can be directly founded upon it; for an instrument, which apparently, though not really, (which must be shown by circumstance, dehors) creates an incumbrance, may by being produced defeat the ends of justice. * Suppose, this Plaintiff instead of a rectory was owner of a life estate in common lay property, and brought an ejectment: and this deed creating the term was produced by surprise, and, as in many instances that may suppose, was not met by the material evidence: a dishonest use might be made of it, to prevent a recovery according to the right. I do not go the length, that if it is clear, that no use can be made of the instrument, that is ground enough for the equitable jurisdiction to take it out of the possession of the party, who can make no use of it beneficial to himself: but if a use may be made of it prejudicial to another, I should have an inclination to support the jurisdiction, to transfer the possession of it from him, to whom it could be of no use, to him, to whom it might be useful, and in whose possession it would be prejudicial to no one. I do not say, this would not have left great doubt upon my mind: but it gives me an inclination of opinion, aiding to this conclusion, that after repeated decisions by Lord Rosslyn, adopted and applied by Lord Alvanley, considering himself bound to follow those decisions, it is too much for me to say, the Court has no jurisdiction, and to reverse all these decisions, where there is so much colorable ground to support them. It is more fit, they should meet their reversal elsewhere. The policy of this Act also is not to be disregarded in a question, whether the Court ought to take jurisdiction upon the point, whether the deed ought to be delivered up: the Court having in many instances jurisdiction to have deeds delivered up on grounds of policy in cases, where an Act of Parliament has not authorized Courts of Law to compel it (1) (a).

(1) Angell v. Hadden, 2 Mer. 164.

(a) The jurisdiction of Courts of Equity to order instruments to be delivered up, which are void and not merely voidable, seems now to be well established. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 698-700; Hamilton v. Cummings, 1 Johns. Ch. 520, 524, and the cases cited; Simpson v. Houlden, 3 Mylne & Craig, 104, 105; Piersall v. Elliott, 6 Peters, 95; Duncan v. Worrall, 10 Price, 31; Pettit v. Shephard, 5 Paige, 493; Torry v. Buck, 1 Green, Ch. 367; Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerger, 59; Thompson v. Graham, 1 Paige, 384; Leigh v. Everhart, 4 Monro, 380; Maice v. Gower, Mar. & Yerg. 383; M'Meekin v. Edmonds, 1 Hill, Ch. 295.

In Hamilton v. Cummings, 1 Johns. Ch. 522, 523, the learned Chancellor observes, that he is inclined to think, that the weight of authority and the reason of the thing are equally in favor of the jurisdiction, whether the instrument is, or is not, void at law, and whether it be void from matter appearing on its face, or from proof taken in the cause; and that the assumed distinctions are not well grounded. See also to the same effect Jones v. Perry, 10 Yerger, 59, and Mr. Eden's note to Ryan v. Mackmath, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 18, in note (a).

But it is said by Mr. Justice Story, in his work on Equity Jurisprudence, that Courts of Equity will not interpose their authority to order a cancellation or

Upon the next question, if it was res integra, I should entertain great doubt both upon the decisions of Lord Rosslyn and Lord Alvanley. I was always struck with the difficulty upon this; whether it is consistent with the conduct of a moral man to take his chance; paying the annuity as long as he thinks it beneficial; and when he * finds it so no longer, turning round, [*23] and saying he has done all a man looking attentively to his own interest can; and that he is acting legally; insisting in a Court of Justice, that what he has paid so long as annuity, he will not consider so, but as part of the consideration repaid. Upon the maxim, “Quod dubitas ne feceris,” I never could have made such a demand. But deciding upon civil rights I have nothing to do with the morality. The grantee is left for a number of years in this situation. If he dies at the end of the first year, and as long as it is in his favor, the grantor will make no complaint; and will think it just to avail himself of it. When the lapse of time turns the advantage the other way, he then represents, that there is no annuity; and though the payments were made for many years as annuity, he will then treat them as consideration money (1). I remember, when the idea, that it could be so considered, had not been adopted at law; for though Lord Rosslyn in Byne v. Vivian says, there are several cases, no such case can be found; and Lord Kenyon’s original decisions (2) took the other turn, upon the sound principle, that a payment voluntarily made is not to be recovered back. But I must decide this upon the weight of authority, as to be applied at this day; and the Courts of Law now unquestionably hold, that the consideration may be recovered back: and have been in the habit of allowing payments made as annuity to be deducted (3). The party can therefore recover only the balance of a fair account; considering the sums paid as annuity, as paid in part discharge of the consideration. This is decided at law; and it is purely a legal question. There is no equity in it. But it is also decided in equity in Byne v. Vivian, Byne v. Potter, and the case (4) as to the insurance: in all which Lord Rosslyn was of opinion, that this was the rule of equity; first, thinking it should be so; secondly, that it was necessary, if that was the rule at law. Lord Alvanley also seems to be of that opinion; but taking the [*24] commencement of the account from a different period delivery up of instruments, where the illegality appears on the face of them, so that their nullity can admit of no doubt. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. 700 a. See also Gray v. Mathias, ante, 5 V. 286, and notes; Simpson v. Howden, 3 Mylne & Craig, 97, 102, 103, 108; Threlfall v. Lunt, 7 Sim. 627.

(1) Upon this ground costs refused in Duff v. Atkinson, post, vol. viii. 577.

(2) Beauchamp v. Borrel, Peake’s N. P. Cas. 109.

(3) Hicks v. Hicks, 3 East, 16. But it was there considered to be subject to the Statute of Limitations; if the Plaintiff by his replication had claimed the benefit of it. In Burdon v. Browning, 1 Taunt. 520, Sir James Mansfield, C. J., expresses considerable surprise at the decisions, that annuity payments were to be allowed as part of the consideration. See Holbrook v. Sharpey, post, vol. xix. 131.

(4) Ex parte Shaw, ante, vol. v. 620.

from that, to which the general rule of accounting would have referred ; and upon the consent of the parties, as it seems, he took that different date, from which the account was to begin. His Lordship's authority certainly is thus far prejudiced ; that he seems to have framed his decision upon some notion, in which, speaking with great deference, a deference peculiarly due to him, as a Judge, who never determined without the most anxious consideration, I cannot follow him. He determined upon a ground, which rather supposes the deed good than void ; for how can it be upon a principle of redemption, founded upon a clause of redemption in a deed invalid to all intents and purposes ?

The question then is, what relief ought to be given, if Mrs. Holland was the original grantee. Considering her so, if there is an original jurisdiction to order the instruments to be delivered up, and if I am to take the rule of accounting at law (and I think it a pure question of law), the rule is properly applied in Byne v. Vivian. There is a difficulty, I admit, as to what is to be done with any surplus in the hands of the grantee. If it is money paid without consideration, yet, if voluntarily paid, it cannot be recovered back. If that is so, it must be upon some principle arising out of the policy of the act. If there is no principle of that kind meeting it, it is a little difficult upon strict legal principles to say, what is the discriminating circumstance, giving the power of recovering in one case, and precluding it in the other. But that difficulty is met by decision ; for though the case has not occurred at law, it has in equity. In Byne v. Potter there was a surplus in the hands of the grantee ; and the Court did not meddle with it ; but proceeded upon the [* 25] declaration, that the * Defendant had received more than was due. I do not understand the legal principle : but that sort of decree was obtained in that case.

Then does the case of the assignee differ ? I am clearly of opinion, Lord Alvanley was right in thinking, the original consideration is the ground. But the principle is, that the assignee stands in the place of the grantee, if there is nothing to create a case of bad faith. As claiming the annuity the assignee is no more than a person having an equitable title in many of the securities, forming the remedies, as assignee of the bond, judgment, covenant : a mere equitable title. It is true, the legal estate is in the trustee for the benefit of the assignee : but that is only one remedy ; and all, the grantee can assign, is the right he has. If Mrs. Holland goes for execution of the judgment at law, it must be in the name of Greathead : so in this Court to have any proceeding directed upon the bond : so at law to have any proceeding upon the covenant. It is impossible to maintain, that there is any substantial difference between the grantee and the assignee. The case would be widely varied, if by a transaction contemporaneous with the assignment the grantor puts himself in a situation, in which the assignee might impute to him bad faith, that the grantee could not. Then the case of the assignee stands upon principles not applying to the grantee, and furnished by the subsequent conduct of the grantor. It is impossible in this case, that Mrs. Holland can impute bad faith at the time of the assignment. She may say, there were two unsuccessful applications to the Court of King's Bench. But the question of bad faith arises upon an instrument executed several months after the assignment. Put it another way. If the assignee is not to stand in the place of the grantee, what is the equity? It will not be said, the equity, by which the grantor is to be governed, is the consideration between the grantee * and the assignee at the assignment. That can- [* 26] not be; for a case may happen of an infirm habit, a life at the market price (1) not worth five years' purchase; who afterwards becomes a strong man; and could not get an annuity upon the same terms. That annuity might at the end of five years sell for a great deal more than it was originally granted for; and in fact these persons frequently give more for the assignment than for the grant. If previously to the assignment the grantor had an equity, is that to be disturbed by a transaction, to which he is no party? To put another case. Suppose, instead of being enjoyed many years, the annuity was sold within two years for 200*l.*; the grantee disliking his bargain: could the grantor have insisted upon taking the account, considering it as granted at 200*l.* only; or must he not have taken the account upon the original sum? Then must it not follow, that where the grantee gives less than he received, the account must be taken upon the same footing? Suppose a third application made to the Court of King's Bench with success: must not the account be taken as between the grantor and grantee? Standing in the place of the grantee she must admit the principle against as well as for her.

In the confirmation there is nothing, that bears upon this; for all the defects of the memorial were not known. The bargain of Mrs. Holland was made before the confirmation; and it is difficult to say, how a void instrument can be confirmed (a). A case of bad faith therefore does not arise by that transaction. I am clearly of opinion, it is impossible to give the account upon any principle afforded by the terms of a deed, void to all intents and purposes. I am also clearly of opinion, that this is not a * case of the re- [* 27] demption of an annuity, but a case, in which it is asserted, that there never was an annuity to be redeemed; and it is contended, that upon doing certain equities these instruments ought to be declared void; not giving a right to say, there was an annuity; but giving a color for such assertion. I cannot, giving judgment upon the jurisdiction at this day, and considering all, that has passed, say, the Court has no jurisdiction. If the Court has jurisdiction, with all deference and respect my clear opinion is, that the decision in this cause has mistaken the principle, upon which it is to be exercised in the mode of accounting. I put myself upon the fact of decision as to the mode of accounting at law, doubting the principle: but after those decisions the grantee coming for the consideration, the grantor may say, he shall allow the payments, since the transaction took place; and I am of opinion, it is reasonably clear, the assignee, if there is nothing more in the case than an assignment, stands precisely in the place of the grantee; and in many cases it is for the interest of the grantor to hold that doctrine.

(1) See the observations of the Lord Chancellor, as to the market price of annuities, ante, vol. vi. 274, in Gibson v. Jeyes, post, vol. viii. 136, 7; x. 219, Underhill v. Harwood.

(a) See Maples v. Wightman, 4 Conn. 376; Baylies v. Dinely, 3 Maule & Sel. 377.

As to the costs, it is not possible to avoid giving Tyrrell his costs, for he was brought here quite unnecessarily; and though he has joined in a long answer, with which he has nothing to do, he has not burthened the suit in point of expense. Mrs. Holland must have brought the same matter upon the record. With respect to the costs of the suit, in Byne v. Vivian Lord Rosslyn gave the Defendant his costs. In Byne v. Potter, where the annuity had been satisfied, he made the Defendant pay the costs. In the former case the bill was brought not for redemption of the annuity, but for relief, asserting, that no annuity ever existed. Upon redemption the costs are given: but I do not see, how the rule in that case is necessarily applied to a case, where the bill is not brought for redemption.

In the case of usury I do not know that the Defendant is [* 28] to have his costs, because he would in a case * of a fair mortgage. The costs in Byne v. Potter did not, I apprehend, turn upon the surplus in the Defendant's hands: but he had been the attorney of the parties; and I understand it turned upon some principle founded upon that. In this instance the party does not come for a redemption: therefore prima facie he is not within the rule, that he is to pay costs. As to his receiving them, first, I am reversing a judgment obtained very much in favor of the Defendant. I cannot say, attending to that circumstance, she had so little reason to oppose the relief in the extent, in which it was prayed, that the Plaintiff is to have the costs; and that circumstance alone would lead me to say, I would not give this relief with costs. But another ground is decisive; that, when such a transaction comes almost for the first time, and the Defendant can set up arguments with so much of difficulty and principle upon the right to exercise the jurisdiction, and the principles, upon which the Court ought to give the account, it is a great deal too much to give the costs, which are entirely in the sound discretion of the Court (1) against a Defendant, submitting her right upon such principles, as in the present instance. The relief therefore must be given without costs. Oakden must have his costs; and that is material with respect to the question of jurisdiction; for he is in receipt of the rents and profits, not by virtue of any assignment, but by virtue of a power of attorney, which is a revocable instrument; and in ordinary cases would not found the jurisdiction of this Court. But where it is executed for valuable consideration, this Court would not permit it to be revoked ; and he is in possession, to receive, not merely for Mrs. Holland, but for others, upon valuable consideration, to whose securities there is no objection. His right on behalf of the other annuitants will secure to him the receipt of the whole ; and this annuity not being valid, he must account for a part to the Plaintiff. The account therefore against him would secure the jurisdiction.

(1) Post, Vancouver v. Bliss, vol. xi. 458, and the note, 462; Beames on Costs, 61, 2.

* The decree declared, that the decree bearing date the [* 29] 4th of July 1800, be reversed ; and directed an account of the consideration or considerations paid by Samuel Greathead on the purchase of the annuity or annuities granted to him by the Plaintiff by the deed or deeds, bearing date the 16th May 1788, together with interest at 5 per cent. per annum upon the same ; and also an account of the payments made by the Plaintiff, or on his behalf, upon account of such annuity or annuities to the said Samuel Greathead, or to the order, or upon the account, of any person or persons claiming under him by assignment or otherwise, including the Defendant Arabella Holland ; and directed that such payments, as the same were made from time to time, be applied first in discharge of the interest, and then of the principal of such consideration or considerations ; and in case upon the taking of such account such consideration or considerations with interest shall appear to have been fully repaid, that all deeds granted for securing the said annuity or annuities, other than the deed of the 1st of June 1795, be delivered up to be cancelled (1); and that satisfaction be entered upon the record of the judgment ; and that the Defendant Richard Oakden is without costs to account with the Plaintiff for, and to pay to him, the surplus rents of the premises comprised in the deed of the 1st of June 1795, after satisfaction of the payments, other than those thereby directed to be made to the Defendant Arabella Holland : such surplus rents to be accounted for by the Defendant Richard Oakden from the time, from which it shall appear, such principal and interest, as aforesaid, was satisfied, as aforesaid, and from which it shall appear, that he shall have had notice of the Plaintiff's claim ; but not beyond the time of filing the bill ; and in case any thing, on taking such account as aforesaid, shall appear to be remaining due from the Plaintiff, then the * Plaintiff is to pay the [* 30] same to the Defendant Arabella Holland, as and when the Master shall appoint ; and upon such payments such deeds shall be delivered up, and such satisfaction be entered, and such payment be thenceforth made by the Defendant Richard Oakden, as hereinbefore mentioned ; and in case the Plaintiff shall make default in such payments, the bill is to be dismissed with costs, to be taxed, and paid to the Defendant Arabella Holland ; and in either case the Plaintiff is to pay the Defendants Tyrrell and Oakden their costs of the suit ; and until such accounts are taken, and, if any thing shall appear to be due thereon to the Defendant Arabella Holland, until such default of payment as aforesaid, all proceedings at law by the Defendant Arabella Holland, either in her own name or in the name of any other person or persons, under whom she claims, are to be stayed by injunction.

(1) Post, vol. x. 220.

SEE, ante, the notes to S. C. 5 V. 610.

WHITE v. DAMON.

[1800, Nov. 21. 1801, FEB. 19; JULY 24. 1802, MAY 7.]

BILL for specific performance of a purchase by auction dismissed by Lord Rosslyn with costs, merely as being a bad bargain from inadequacy of value. Upon a re-hearing Lord Eldon was of opinion, that was not a sufficient ground for refusing a specific performance of a purchase by auction without something more, as fraud or surprise, &c. (a) But the decree was not affected upon another ground; that, a material witness being incompetent, the bill was not supported by evidence.

Specific performance matter of discretion, not arbitrary, but judicial (b), [p. 35.]

ESTATES, situated at Gosport, in Hampshire, of which the Defendant Damon was seised in fee, were put up to sale by auction, at Gosport, in fifteen lots; all of which were sold except lot 3, consisting of a wharf and premises. For that lot there were no bidders. The deposits upon the other lots were paid to Smith, the auctioneer, amounting to 653*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* Damon afterwards borrow-

(a) 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 317, [440]; Butler v. Haskell, 4 Desaus. 651, 678.

See this subject thoroughly examined in Seymour v. Delancey, 6 Johns. Ch. 222, in which case, at page 229, Mr. Chancellor Kent confines the force of Lord Eldon's opinion in this case to sales at auction, and seems to doubt the propriety of his language as applied to other sales or agreements; and the Chancellor concludes, that inadequacy of price may of itself furnish sufficient ground to stay the application of the power of a Court of Equity to enforce a specific performance of a private contract to sell land, p. 231, 232, though the Court would not set aside a contract for that cause alone. Ib.; S. C. 3 Coven, 445; Clitherall v. Ogilvie, 1 Desaus. 250. See 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 769; Brashier v. Gratz, 6 Wheat. 528; Ellis v. Burdon, 1 Alab. (N. S.) 458, 459; Garnett v. Macon, 6 Call, 308; Sarter v. Gordon, 2 Hill, Ch. 126.

There is a very important distinction running through the cases between ordering a contract to be rescinded and decreeing specific performance. Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. 23, 24. See Twining v. Morrice, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 331, note (c).

See farther, as to the effect of inadequacy of consideration either in avoiding contracts or in preventing an enforcement of specific execution, Gwynne v. Heaton, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 1 et seq., and cases cited in the notes.

(b) Omerod v. Hardman, ante, 5 V. 722, note and cases cited to this point; 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.) 362; St. John v. Benedict, 6 Johns. Ch. 111; Seymour v. Delancey, 6 Johns. Ch. 222; Revell v. Hussey, 2 Ball & Bea. 288; Clitherall v. Ogilvie, 1 Desaus. 257; Osgood v. Franklin, 2 Johns. Ch. 23; S. C. 14 Johns. 527; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 742; Perkins v. Wright, 3 Harr. & M'Hen. 326; Simmons v. Hill, 4 Harr. & M'Hen. 258.

ed from Smith 1000*l.*; the balance at that time in Smith's hands on account of the deposits being 521*l.* 6*s.* 2*d.*; and as a security for the repayment it was agreed, that lot 3 should be conveyed to Smith, in trust to sell; and accordingly a conveyance, dated the 23d and 24th of November 1796, of the whole [*31] estate to Smith, was executed, upon trust to convey to the purchasers the lots sold; and, as to lot 3, upon trust to sell after the 11th of March next; and Damon covenanted to join in the sale: but it was declared, that was not to be considered necessary. On the 24th of November 1797, the money not being paid to Smith at the time limited, the premises comprised in lot 3 were sold by auction by Smith at Garraway's, and bought for 1120*l.* by White; who paid a deposit of 20*l.* per cent.

The bill was filed by White against Damon and Smith, for a specific performance of the contract.

The Defendant Damon by his answer submitted, that the sum of 1120*l.* being a grossly inadequate price for this estate, a specific performance ought not to be decreed. Upon the answer and the evidence it appeared that the rent of these premises was 260*l.* and the value 2200*l.*

In support of the bill Smith proved the circumstances, under which the sale took place; that it was a fair sale by auction; that he had given notice to the Defendant by letter of the intention to sell at Garraway's; to which no answer was received. The whole case, as to the circumstances under which the sale took place rested on his evidence.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Benyon, for the Plaintiff, insisted, that as there was nothing to impeach this sale, it must be established.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Cooke, for the Defendant.—This Court will not enforce a sale under such circumstances, and at only half the value; but will leave the parties to law. Though certainly there is not proof of actual fraud, yet the price being so *grossly inadequate, not five years' purchase, there is [*32] ground for suspicion; but whether it is from fraud, accident, or mere negligence, a Court of Equity ought not to compel execution of a contract so enormously to the advantage of one party. The proposition must be, that if the property is sold at any price, unless actual fraud appears, this Court is to enforce the agreement. The general rule of this Court is not to enforce a hard agreement. The distinction, as it was taken by Lord Chief Justice Eyre, is, that inadequacy of price is not of itself a sufficient ground for rescinding a contract: Griffith v. Spratley (1). The circumstance, that the sale was by auction, makes no difference. The foundation of the rule is, that the agreement is unreasonable; and upon this subject the Court has a discretionary jurisdiction. The sale was not with the consent of the Defendant. These premises ought not to have been sold at Garraway's. No instance can be produced, in which, where it was manifest, the property was sold at considerably less than the real value, this Court has enforced the contract and compelled a conveyance.

(1) In the Court of Exchequer, 2 Bro. C. C. 179, n.

Mr. Richards, in reply.

Supposing the price to be under the value, a great deal more is necessary to prevent this relief, as influence, &c. Without some ground of that sort there is no instance of impeaching a sale by auction. If this doctrine is applied to a sale by auction, the case will be new. The Defendant did not forbid the sale at Garraway's. He did not attend, or take any measures to prevent the property going at less than the value. He lay by, and suffered the Plaintiff to consider it as his own. There is not an instance of impeaching such a sale on the mere ground of under-value. The property is carried to a public market: each party has a right to bid. There are modes of preventing the property from going under its [*33] *value (1). The vendor may have his friends to bid.

It is held out, that the party may purchase with safety, if he shall be the highest bidder. The stipulation with the public is, that the highest bidder shall have it. Where is the Court to stop? No fraud is imputed: no sort of misrepresentation: no surprise; as in Twining v. Morrice (2); which case is supposed to have gone a great way: nothing but inequality of price. All the cases, such as Heathcote v. Paignon (3), where a contract upon a very small consideration has been impeached, have contained some other ingredient, as infirmity of mind, &c.

1801, Feb. 19th. Lord CHANCELLOR [LOUGHBOROUGH].—This bill is filed for a specific performance of an agreement for the sale of a freehold estate, described as Lot 3, consisting of a wharf and other premises at Gosport. The facts are very short. This lot was put up together with other lots, part of the same estate, at Gosport. There was no bidder for that lot. There were bidders for all the other lots. After the sale Smith, the auctioneer, advanced 1000*l.* to the vendor, with great security; for he had all the deposits; and the money was to be paid into his hands for all the other lots: so that, except the temporary accommodation, the vendor, whom Smith knew to be a distressed man, forced to sell, had no other benefit by that advance. The auctioneer however chose to take a better security than that, he would have had as auctioneer; and he chose to take as an additional security a conveyance of this lot, with a power to sell; and his receipt to be a discharge for the price. The manner, in which he proceeded, was, after having received a considerable part of the money upon the other lots, in 1797, [*34] *exactly a year, he puts up this wharf and premises, situated at Gosport, to sale at Garraway's, certainly not without the knowledge, but certainly without the consent, of the owner. The place of sale was not very proper; and the time was very rapid.

(1) See Conolly v. Parsons, ante, vol. iii. 625, n.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 326.

(3) 2 Bro. C. C. 167.

The premises were bought for 1120*l.*; and the bill is filed by the purchaser. It appears in proof, and very distinctly, that the value of the premises is above 2000*l.*; and that they are in a condition to be let upon a lease for 200*l.* a-year. I have nothing to do with this case in a Court of Equity. I do not hold, that the Court is bound in all cases to carry an agreement into execution; but may leave the parties to an action. But the Plaintiff has got all he had a title to expect. He has a covenant from Damon to join in the sale. I shall leave him to his action of covenant. If he does not bring his action of covenant within a certain time, the bill must be dismissed with costs.

The Counsel for the Defendant pressing for an immediate dismissal, the bill was dismissed, with costs as against Damon, and without costs as against Smith.

1801, July 24th. A Petition of re-hearing was presented by the Plaintiff; and the cause being re-argued before Lord Eldon, Chancellor, stood over several times: His Lordship expressing great doubt as to the principle of the Decree; and also, whether Smith's evidence could be admitted.

1802, May 7th. Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I do not think it possible to touch the Decree, that has been made in this cause. If the case had stood before me as upon the transactions of the auction, and the value * of the property, as it was taken, till the difficulty arose as to Smith's evidence, I should have hesitated, before I should have decided, that the difference of the value would be a sufficient ground for dismissing the bill. It is a case of great consequence; and was much considered by Lord Rosslyn; and some points of view, in which it has struck me, seem to have escaped his Lordship's attention; or were not thought worthy of it. The Plaintiff is not affected with any thing beyond suspicion: the sale taking place at an auction, without any fraud, surprise or mistake; the estate being offered upon any price he would bid; and without more he became the purchaser. I am inclined to say, that a sale by auction, no fraud, surprise, &c. cannot be set aside for mere inadequacy of price (1). It will be very difficult to sustain sales by auction, if this Court will not specifically perform the agreement. I agree with Lord Rosslyn, that giving a specific performance is matter of discretion: but that is not an arbitrary, capricious discretion. It must be regulated upon grounds, that will make it judicial (2).

But upon looking through the bill, answer, and evidence, it appears, Smith has been examined; who under the circumstances

(1) In Ex parte Latham, a bankrupt petition, March the 28th, 1803, the Lord Chancellor expressed the same opinion; and referred to this case. See the note post, vol. viii. 137.

(2) See, ante, vol. v. 734, 849, and the notes.

clearly cannot be a witness; and he alone proves any one of the transactions, upon which the Plaintiff must proceed. Except his evidence there is no proof of the sale, of the biddings, of any of these circumstances: and the answer does not admit any one of them. It does not deny them. The deeds and the value are proved by other witnesses. Smith was not merely an auctioneer. He was the vendor himself; and I think, he might have filed a [*36] bill against the purchaser and his author *to have the whole contract made good. If his evidence cannot be received, and I am clearly of opinion it cannot, many of the material facts, upon the proof of which the Decree must proceed, are neither admitted, nor proved. The consequence is, the cause is brought to a hearing without evidence to maintain the bill.

1. UNDER ordinary circumstances, even a very considerable inadequacy of price will not vitiate a contract of sale; see, ante, note 5 to Mortlock v. Butler, 10 V. 292. Still it is possible for that inadequacy to be so gross as, of itself, plainly to demonstrate fraud; and, where the purchaser stands in any relation of confidence to the vendor, the adequacy of the consideration will be jealously scrutinized; see, ante, note 2 to Crowe v. Ballard, 1 V. 215.

2. With respect to the discretion which Courts of Equity exercise in lending, or refusing to lend, their aid to compel specific performance of contracts, see, ante, note 1 to Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 V. 326. And as to the employment of a bidder at an auction sale, on behalf of the vendor, see the note to Bramley v. Alt, 3 V. 620.

3. A witness who has a direct interest in the result of a suit or action, is, of course, incompetent; see, ante, note 1 to Craven v. Tickell, 1 V. 61; but the question of competency and of credit may stand on very different grounds, and the proper time for taking each of these distinct objections is also different; see, post, note 1 to Purcell v. M'Namara, 8 V. 324. A witness may have a contingent possibility of interest in the event of a suit, yet this consideration may be too remote to found an objection to his competency thereon, though it may deserve attention as affecting the credit due to his testimony. The distinction is well illustrated in the case of Bailey v. Wilson, decided by Lord Hardwicke, in Canc. Hil. T. 18 Geo. II. which case is, therefore, here extracted from Mr. Forrester's ms. "On a petition for a commission of review upon a sentence of the Court of Delegates here, confirming a will made in Ireland, which was contested for divers reasons, and, amongst others, the testator's sanity was disputed; an objection was taken to reading the evidence of a Mr. Magill, in favor of the will; as to which the case stood thus: The testator had given several specific legacies of a watch, plate, &c. to different persons, and appointed the defendant, Wilson, executor. It appeared in proof in the cause, that Wilson, immediately after the testator's death, sent for Magill, and for several of those to whom the specific legacies were given; that Magill, in Wilson's presence, took the specific articles so bequeathed, and gave them to the legatees, without being hindered from so doing by Wilson, though the latter did indeed say there was time enough, and it was then too early to do it; but Magill replied, the testator had desired it, and therefore he should see the articles distributed. The objection made to Magill's evidence by the plaintiff was, that by this act he had made himself executor de son tort, and was, therefore, interested in the event of the cause; because, if this was not a good will, the person to whom administration should be granted would have an action against him as a trespasser, and in trover could recover damages against him. To this it was answered by the defendant, that Magill was interested on both sides, for he was liable to have an action brought against him by Wilson, the executor. Lord Hardwicke said, 'The question is, whether the objection to Mr. Magill's evidence goes to his competency, or only to his credit. I am of opinion it goes only to his credit, not his competence. In order to determine the question, I shall consider this matter in two lights: first, how the point stands, supposing Mr. Magill to have acted as executor of his own wrong; and, secondly, as acting with the privity of the executor named in the will. As to the first, before probate of the will, he delivers part of the testator's goods to persons named legatees in the will. It is said that, if the will be not valid, he is liable to make satisfaction to the administrator for the conversion of these goods; to which it is answered, that he is liable either way, and that the possibility of an action against him by the executor, being weighed against the other, sets the matter at rest. There are many cases where, if a witness is liable to account either way, he shall be examined; which disposes of the objection to Magill's competence: and this objection, of a man's being liable to an action, differs from his being immediately interested. There has been some change in the doctrine on these points, there being cases in the old books, where a man's liability to an action went to his competence; but there is a great difference to be made between having an immediate interest and a possibility; as in the case of a tenant in tail with remainder over: in an action brought against the tenant in tail, the remainder-man cannot be a witness, though an heir at law might, in an action brought against his ancestor, as having nothing vested in him during such ancestor's life; but the remainder-man has a vested interest, which the law considers as part of the same fee, and therefore, the supporting the tenant in tail's interest is supporting his own. Now, these vested interests are very different from a possibility of action; for, suppose an action of trespass brought for a nuisance, and the question to be, whether the defendant worked upon the plaintiff's soil: the action may be brought against the principal alone, or the workmen may be joined as defendants with him; but, if they are not joined, they may be brought as witnesses, and yet they are liable to have an action of trespass brought against them, and their confession may be evidence against themselves. But the Court says, that may go to their credit, not to their competence, and they are admitted that the truth may better come out. A case of The King v. Bray, was before me, when C. J. of the King's Bench, which was upon an information relating to the borough of Tentagen, as to the nomination of elisors, whose duty it is to return a jury of freemen, by whom a new mayor is to be elected. Objections were taken to witnesses who were brought to prove the custom, as having been themselves actors in that for which, if it were a wrongful act, they were liable to be punished; and Baron Thompson, who tried the cause at the assizes, allowed the objection; but, upon a motion for a new trial, the whole Court of K. B. was of opinion, that the objection went only to credit, not to competence; and a new trial was granted. In the argument of the case, several others were put, particularly The King v. Clark, where, upon an information for a nuisance in the river Thames, a person who had received a particular injury and damage thereby, was produced as an evidence, and objected to because he might bring his action on the case, and recover damages, and so would swear under a bias; but the Court held, this went only to his credit, not to his competence. This being the general rule as to points of this nature, let us now consider the observation, that Magill is liable to an action either way. It is admitted this would be sufficient, if the damages to be recovered against him were equal in both cases. But it is said, if one is to be balanced against the other, the scales ought to be equal, which is not the case here; for the lawful executor can recover no damages without deducting what has been lawfully paid according to the will. I never knew any case of this kind, however, in which the Court entered into a nice consideration of the quantum of damages. There will always be a possible difference in the damages: perhaps no action may be brought, or the witness whose conduct is impeached may be favored by the party he supports; but still, where a witness is equally liable to an action by the plaintiff or defendant in the cause in which he offers his testimony, the Court will not go into a consideration on which side the greater damages might be recovered against him, in order to ground an objection to his competence. But how does it appear, in the present case, what was the quantum of the assets? what were the debts? or whether the legatees ought to have their legacies? How, then, can it be ascertained whether this witness is liable to more loss one way than another? It is, therefore, a good answer to say, there will be an equal ground of action against him, however the present question may be determined. There is a great difference between an exception to a witness, and a challenge to a juror: an exception to the credit of a juror goes to his competence, both being blended together; but witnesses may be admitted, though their credit be weak, that all possible light may be had.

"Secondly, if Magill be considered as acting with the privity of Wilson, this makes his evidence receivable here without dispute. Now, upon Magill's proposing to deliver the specific legacies, though Wilson said he thought it too early to deliver out effects, yet, when Magill replied, the testator had desired it, and he did accordingly deliver the articles in Wilson's presence, the latter does not say that he objected to it. Is not this sufficient to make it Wilson's own act? for an executor may, before probate, dispose of his testator's estate, and if the disposition be made by another with the privity of the executor, and not against his consent, that person is no more than his agent. Will it, therefore, be an objection to a witness, that the executor has employed him as his agent? Surely not; and yet in such case the man is liable if the will be set aside. But it never was thought, that, because a witness to a will has been employed in the management of the estate, and distribution of the effects, that should take away his competence: the consideration of actions which may possibly be brought against a witness hereafter, is too remote. I am, therefore, of opinion Mr. Magill's evidence should be read."

It should appear, that the will in question above was established. Subsequent proceedings, in what seems to be the same case, are reported in 5 Br. P. C. 388, (fol. edit.) The case of The King v. Bray, alluded to by Lord Hardwicke, and in which numerous other authorities are cited respecting the distinction between the credit and the competence of witnesses, is now published in Rep. Temp. Hardw. 358. And the rule intimated there, as well as in Walton v. Shelly, 1 T. R. 300, and in Bent v. Baker, 3 T. R. 32, that where there are no positive rules of law against it, it is better to receive the evidence of a witness, and to let any objections go rather to his credit than his competency, was adopted in the late case of Doddington v. Hudson, 1 Bingh. 258; and in Binns v. Teley, M'Clel. & Younge, 398, as well as in Morgan v. Pryor, 2 Barn. & Cress. 18. The rule according to which the testimony of a bankrupt is rejected, even in certain cases where the result of the suit could not in any way affect him, was considered an anomaly in the law of evidence, but one too inveterately established by authorities to be overturned, though not proper to be extended farther than the precedents have already gone.

MOGGRIDGE v. THACKWELL.

[1802, DEC. 14, 15, 16, 17; 1803, MAY 12.—ANTE, VOL. I. 464.]

UPON a re-hearing of that part of the decree which relates to the Charity, the decree was affirmed: the Lord Chancellor collecting the result of the authorities; that, where there is a general, indefinite, purpose, not fixing itself upon any object, the disposition is in the King by sign manual (a); but, where the execution is to be by a trustee, with general, or some, objects pointed out, there the Court will take the administration of the trust (b). The costs of all parties were given out of the fund as between attorney and client.

Formerly a portion of the residue of every man's estate was applied in charity by the Ordinary, [p. 69.]

If the general substantial intention of a will is charity, the failure of the particular mode shall not defeat it; but the law will substitute another mode (c), [p. 69.] The ordinary rule is for the Crown to give a lease to the party discovering an escheat, [p. 71.]

Words of recommendation not considered imperative, unless the objects and subjects are certain (d), [p. 85.]

THIS cause (1) had been brought on before Lord Rosslyn for further directions upon the Master's Report, approving a scheme for (a) See 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1190.

And as to the proper person to enforce the disposition of a charity in this country, see Wright v. Trustees of Methodist Epis. Ch. 1 Hoff. Ch. 202; Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. 107; 2 Kent, (5th ed.) 288, note (a); 4 ib. 508, note (b); King v. Woodhull, 3 Edw. 79.

(b) See 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1191.

(c) This doctrine of executing the general intent of a testator cy pres in case of charities has been fully examined in several cases in the United States with different degrees of approbation and adoption. The doctrine of the English Court of Chancery is much broader than any that has been inculcated in America. See Baptist Asso. v. Hart, 4 Wheat 1; S. C. 3 Peters App. 484; Inglis v. Trustees of Sailors' Snug Harbor, 3 Peters, 99; Gallego v. Atty. Genl. 3 Leigh, 450; Orphan Asyl. So. v. M'Carter, 9 Cowen, 437; Whitman v. Letz, 17 Serg. & R. 88; Dashiell v. Atty. Genl. 5 Har. & John. 392; Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. 107; Griffin v. Graham, 1 Hawkes, 96; Moore v. Moore, 4 Dana, 357; McIntyre Poor School v. Zanesville C. & M. Co. 9 Ohio, 203; Nye v. Bartlett, 4 Metcalf, 378; Burr v. Smith, 7 Vermt. 241.

The doctrine of execution cy pres does not prevail in North Carolina. M'Auley v. Wilson, 1 Bad. & Da. Eq. 276; Holland v. Peck, 2 Ired. Eq. 255.

As to the origin of the jurisdiction and powers of a Court of Equity upon this subject, see Baptist Asso. v. Hart, 3 Peters, 486-499; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1162; Burr v. Smith, 7 Vermt. 241; 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 508, in note; Atty. Genl. v. Bowyer, ante, 3 V. 714, note (e); Vidal v. Mayor of Philadelphia, 2 Howard, U. S.

For an ample and thorough discussion of this whole subject of charities, see 2 Story, Eq. Jur. ch. 32; 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 508, and notes; 2 ib. 285-288, notes. See also 1 Metcalf & Perkins's Dig. tit. Charities & Charitable Uses; Att. Gen. v. Bowyer, ante, 3 V. 714, note (e); Att. Gen. v. Andrew, ante, 3 V. 633, note (a); Potter v. Chapin, 6 Paige, 639; Dutch Church, &c. v. Mott, 7 Paige, 77; Milne v. Milne, 17 Louis. Ch. 46; Wright v. Trustees of Meth. Epis. Ch. 1 Hoff. Ch. 202; Att. Gen. v. Minskull, ante, 4 V. 11, note (a); Att. Gen. v. Boulbee, ante, 2 V. 380, note (a); White v. White, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 15, note (a), and cases cited; Moggridge v. Thackwell, 3 ib. 517, and notes; Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. 107.

(d) See Pierson v. Garnet, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 231, note (c); Wynne v. Hawkins, 1 ib. 179, and notes; Harland v. Trigg, ib. 144, note (a), and cases cited; Ford v. Fowler, 3 Beavan, 146; Stubbe v. Sargon, 2 Keen, 255; S. C. 3 My. & Craig, 507; Pope v. Pope, 10 Sim. 1; Brunson v. Hunter, 2 Hill, Ch. 490; Ram on Wills, ch. 15, § 24, p. 231-240; Bull v. Bull, 8 Conn. 47; Bull v. Vardy, ante, 1 V. 270, note (b).

(1) Reported, ante, vol. i. 464; 3 Bro. C. C. 517.

effectuating the purposes of the Charity under Lord Thurlow's decree. Upon that occasion Lord Rosslyn intimated, that it was fit, that Decree, as far as it respected the charitable disposition, should be re-heard. Under that intimation a Petition of re-hearing was presented by the next of kin; and upon that Petition the cause was re-heard by Lord Eldon.

Ann Cam by her will, dated the 16th of June, 1799, after giving directions concerning her funeral, desired Mr. Edward Lawrence, and any other friend her executors shall appoint, to attend her funeral; and for their trouble she gave to each of them so attending 10*l.* for mourning. She then gave to Mr. Thackwell and his heirs, certain estates; and reciting, that she was tenant in tail of the estates called Hill Netherton, and Laycells, and by suffering a recovery could make herself tenant in fee of them, but out of regard to her aunt Walker and her family she * chooses to let the estate tail continue, and the estates to go according to the present limitations, she gave some other estates in London to two persons and their heirs respectively; and all the rest of her real estates she gave to Mr. John Moggridge, of Bradford in the county of Wilts, and Mr. James Vaston, of Clapton, in the county of Middlesex, and their heirs, but chargeable with the payment of the several annuities following, for the respective lives of the several annuitants, payable half-yearly; viz. to Elen Pheasant, her late servant, 15*l.* per annum; and giving some other small annuities, she directed, that, if any of the annuitants shall die before the expiration of the first six months after her death, and shall have lived over one quarter, or shall die in any after six months after the completion of a quarter, then that their respective executors or administrators shall receive one quarter's annuity.

The testatrix then gave a great number of pecuniary legacies, to some of her next of kin and other persons; and among them gave 4000*l.* each to her cousins Joseph Walker, and the Reverend William Walker: and she gave 4000*l.* to William Pollock and Peter Triquet; in trust to lay it out in government or real securities, and to change the same, as they in their discretion shall think proper, and to pay the interest and dividends from time to time into the proper hands of her cousin Elizabeth Camilla Tudor; and her receipt alone to be a sufficient discharge to her said trustees; and she declared, that the said interest and dividends shall in no wise be subject to the debts, control or management, of her husband; and after her decease the testatrix ordered her said trustees to pay so much of the interest and dividends of the said 4000*l.* for maintenance and education, as they shall think proper, and to pay the principal and accumulated interest to the children; and if she should leave

[* 38] no child at her death, * or any issuing therefrom, the testatrix gave 1000*l.*, part of the said 4000*l.*, to Joseph Walker, and the remaining 3000*l.* to William Walker. Among other legacies she ordered her executors to pay into the proper hands of Mrs. Coley for her sole and separate use, 300*l.*; she gave to the parish of Battersea 50*l.*: to the parish of Dymocke 60*l.*; and to the parish of St. Peter, Cornhill, 30*l.*, to be distributed among the poor thereof according to the discretion of her executors; and she gave to the respective trustees, guardians, or managers, lawfully appointed, of the hospitals, infirmaries, and dispensaries, following, and to their respective executors and successors, the sums as follows: to the Asylum Hospital 500*l.*: to the Hospital for Lunatics in Herefordshire 200*l.*: to the Gloucester Infirmary 200*l.*: to the London Infirmary 200*l.*: to the Lying-in-Hospital of the City of London 200*l.*: to the Humane Society 200*l.*: to the General Dispensary for the relief of the poor in Aldersgate Street 100*l.* Then after some further legacies, and specifically disposing of all her plate, watches, &c. wearing apparel and furniture, she concluded thus:

"And I give all the rest and residue of my personal estate unto James Vaston, of Clapton, Middlesex, gentlemen, his executors and administrators; desiring him to dispose of the same in such charities as he shall think fit, recommending poor clergymen who have large families and good characters; and I appoint the said John Moggridge and Mr. Vaston, before mentioned, executors of this my will; and I desire Robert Woodford, of Taplow, Bucks, Esquire, and the aforesaid Mr. Richard Wicherley, to aid and assist my executors."

The testatrix in her fourth codicil thus expressed herself:

* "My will I shall order to be sent with this: but my [* 39] executors need not hurry themselves in any shape, but take their own time to do whatever must be done, and employ Mr. Lawrence or any other Mr. Vaston thinks more proper to do the writing part of the business. I hope it will be quite unnecessary for my executors to come into the country, unless it is their own choice."

The decree, as it was finally pronounced by Lord Thurlow, upon a motion to vary the minutes, declared, that the residue of the testatrix's personal estate passed by her will, and ought to go and be applied in charity, regard being had to poor clergymen with good characters, and large families, according to the recommendation in the will; and that the Master should approve of a scheme to effectuate the purposes of the said charity; with liberty for the parties to lay proposals before him for that purpose.

The residue of the personal estate amounted to 50,000*l.*

By the scheme submitted by the Plaintiff, the executor and the next of kin, and approved by the Master, it was proposed, that the Defendant Thomas Walker, first cousin and heir at law of the testatrix ex parte materna, might be allowed out of the residue of the testatrix's personal estate the sum of 5000*l.* under the particular circumstances of his case; and that small annuities should be granted to several other persons; who were either relations of the testatrix, or were in her life dependent on her bounty; that a school may be established at Dymocke, the residence of the testatrix and her family, for poor children of that parish; that 1000*l.* may be appropriated in aid of the Gloucester Infirmary; 1000*l.* in aid of an intended Lunatic Asylum at Gloucester ; that 6000*l.* 3 per cent. Bank Annuities may be transferred, and the dividends appropriated * to a charity instituted in aid of the distribution annually made for the relief of widows and orphans of clergymen in the diocese of Gloucester, to be applied for the relief of poor clergymen, who have large families and good characters, according to the rules of distribution of the said institution ; and lastly, that the residue and remainder of the said funds and of all the testatrix's personal estate shall be called "Mrs. Ann Cam's benefaction to poor clergymen ;" and shall be invested in the 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, in the name of the governors of the charity for the relief of poor widows and children of clergymen ; and that the interest and dividends shall be applied by the said governors in or towards the relief of poor clergymen with good characters and large families, according to the recommendation in the will.

The Report then stated the evidence in support of these proposals : as to Thomas Walker the affidavits stated, that he would have been entitled to the estates of Hill Netherton and Laycelles, of the value of 12,000*l.*, as heir of his mother, in case the testatrix had not barred the intail ; deducing his title, and stating the clause in her will as to that ; and that nevertheless long after making the will she suffered a recovery ; that at various times she assisted him ; and stating other circumstances, as evidence of her regard and intentions in his favor, particularly to leave him a sum of money in lieu of those estates shortly before she was seized with the illness, of which she died ; and that he was a proper object to partake of the charitable fund.

Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Stanley, and Mr. Whishaw, for some of the next of Kin ; Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Richards, Mr. Romilly, Mr. Burton, and

Mr. G. Wilson, for others of the next of kin, in support of [* 41] * the Petition of Rehearing.—This case stands very much independent of all the authorities, upon its own circumstances, and the terms of the residuary clause, and the whole frame of the will. This is not the simple case of a general indefinite trust for charity, without any object specified by the testatrix ; but a personal confidence confined to Vaston, that cannot be transferred to any other person ; and which the Court cannot possibly exercise. The question then is, whether in the event, that has happened, there is a lapse for the next of kin ; or whether it devolves to the Crown, as the general guardian of all charities. It is an admitted fact, that the testatrix knew of Vaston's death. The will contains a great number of charitable legacies, very accurately expressed. Every part of the will shows great care in the manner of expression. The word in the residuary clause is in the plural number "charities." Certainly no stress can be laid upon the word "recommended" alone : but though the rule is established, that, where the fund is certain, and the object certain, words of desire or of mere suggestion and intimation shall receive a monitory sense, and be held a trust ; yet undoubtedly this word in its natural sense is not monitory, but a term of option ; and where an intention of that sort appears it would be a preposterous construction to force upon it the legal sense. The context affords the clue ; and the expression, "as he shall think fit" decides, that an option was intended ; distinguishing this case from Wyne v. Hawkins (1), Sprange v. Bernard (2), Pushman v. Fil-litter (3), and Bland v. Bland, cited in all of them. Vaston might have given to any Charity, or among all the Charities in London, and in such proportions as he thought proper. He might have disposed of the fund by his will in that way ; and could not * have been compelled to execute in favor of any particular charity, till he thought fit ; for that would have been against this will. The will does not prescribe any particular instrument, by which, nor any particular period, at which, he is to execute. He had his whole life for that purpose ; and if so, it must be a mere recommendation, and not a trust. Some difference in this respect appears between Lord Thurlow's Judgment and his Decree. The Judgment seems to consider these words as monitory : the Decree considers them as words of option ; and that the Master is at liberty to receive any scheme, provided a charity for poor Clergymen forms a part of it. It is then a Decree for an indefinite charitable purpose ; of which there is no one instance.

It is clear, Lord Thurlow's opinion would have been different, if he had not considered himself bound down by authorities. If the Court is not absolutely bound, there is no reason to strain the construction in favor of such a disposition against the next of kin ; many of whom are as much objects of charity as that alluded to by this will. The property amounts to 50,000*l.* The Law of the Country condemns such a disposition of real estate ; and why should it prevail to such an extent as to personal property ? Lord Hardwicke considered one object of the Statute (4) to be to prevent persons, who would not be charitable in their lives, from disappointing their poor relations. Lord Northington, particularly in the Attorney General v. Tyndall (5), and other great men, have stigmatized such dispositions, as partaking more of vanity than a charitable purpose. The question upon this is, whether the gift fails on account of the death of the trustee ; or, whether the doctrine of cy pres takes place ; * and whether the Court sees its way sufficiently [*43] to effectuate what was the general intention. If the trust is to be executed in this Court, it must be upon that notion. That doctrine was certainly extended by the old cases to a great latitude ; and under the supposed general intention the thing most opposite to the particular intention, from which only the general intention was to be collected, was established. The Attorney Gen-

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 179.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 584.

(3) Ante, vol. iii. 7.

(4) Stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 36.

(5) Amb. 614.

eral v. Syderfin (1) was determined long before this sort of disposition was condemned even as to real estate, at a time, when [*44] *this Court was in the habit of deciding monstrous propositions in favor of charity. The ground of that case is, that the man had declared, he had executed an instrument giving to

(1) 1 Vern. 224. The Attorney General at the relation of the Governors of Christ's Hospital v. Robert Syderfin, Anne Syderfin, and others, Defendants. In CHANCERY, Reg. Lib. A. fo. 340, 11th February, 1683.

The information was to be relieved touching the sum of 1000*l.* given to charitable uses by the will of Thomas Syderfin; setting forth, that the said T. S. late of the Middle Temple, being in his life-time seised in fee simple of divers messuages, lands, and tenements, in the counties of Somerset and Surrey, and possessed of a considerable personal estate, made his will, dated the 17th of March, 1678; and thereby devised and charged all his said messuages and lands for the payment of such debts as the personal estate of him the said T. S. should fall short; and to pay 200*l.* per annum to his wife for her life; and thereby taking notice he had but one daughter living, made a provision for maintenance and a portion for her, to be paid at her age of twenty-one, and also for such other daughter or daughters as he might after have; and in case of no son, and his daughter or daughters should die, then he devised the premises in Somersetshire to the Defendant, his brother, upon trust to pay the Defendant Anne, his wife, 1000*l.*, if then living, and 1000*l.* more to charitable uses as he had directed: and of his said will made the Defendant Anne, executrix.

That the said testator shortly after died, seised and possessed, as aforesaid; and that the Defendant proved the will; and possessed herself of all the personal estate, sufficient to pay debts, and particularly the sum of 1000*l.* to charity, in case it ought to be charged upon the personal estate.

That the testator having no issue but his said daughter Anne, and she dying about the age of six years, before her portion became payable, the devise of the estate in Somersetshire did take effect to said Robert Syderfin, and the [*44] heirs male of his body, subject to the * said 1000*l.*; the same being of the yearly value of 500*l.*; which ought to be charged thereon, or at least upon the personal estate, and to be paid and applied, as the said testator did by or writing in his life-time declare; in case any such deed or writing were made, and produced; and in case no direction or appointment were made, then the said 1000*l.* and the produce thereof ought to be employed as His Majesty in this Court shall think fit to direct and appoint; and no advantage or benefit ought to be had by the said devisee of the lands or the executrix by the neglect or omission in not directing or limiting, to what particular charitable uses the said 1000*l.* should be paid and applied; it being clear, that it was his intention and design, that the same should be paid out of his estate and applied to charitable uses.

That the Defendants contriving to defeat the said charitable gift, do detain and conceal the said deed and writing, whereby the said charitable uses are limited and directed by the testator; and consequently the charity is in danger of being lost, without a discovery, whether such deed or instrument was made, whereby the particular charitable uses the said 1000*l.* was limited to might appear; and that in case no such do appear, then the said 1000*l.* ought to go to such charitable uses as this Court pursuant to His Majesty's gracious pleasure would direct: His Majesty having signified His gracious intentions, that the same should be paid to the relators, to be employed for the use of the mathematical boys on His Majesty's new Royal Foundation in Christ's Hospital, in such manner as His Majesty should think fit.

Whereto the Defendants by their answers insisted upon the insufficiency of the personal estate to pay the debts beside the funeral expenses and charges of proving the will; and that the real estate in Somersetshire was leased out for two or three lives, or for long terms of years determinable upon lives under small yearly rents, which if clear and free from leases and incumbrances might be worth 600*l.*

[*45] per annum; and for the Surrey lands the same were sold; and the money thereby raised was disbursed in paying the Defendant Anne, *her legacy of 1000*l.* And as touching any instrument in writing, whereby charity; which instrument was not to be found; and the fund was given by the King to Christ's Hospital. But there is a great difference in that case upon the circumstance, that the testator had declared his intention. Vaston may be compared to the paper in that instance; and to make the cases similar, the paper ought to have been destroyed; and the testator ought to have known that. * In Frier v. Peacock (1) the testator had declared, the fund was to go to some defined particular charity. So in all the cases, The Attorney General v. Hickman (2), White v. White (3), and Widmore v. Wood-roofe (4), the testator himself had pointed out some particular charity, to which his property was to be applied. Is it possible to collect from this will any intention for general charity? Is not the charity intended to be created by Vaston only? Though certainly he could not take the property beneficially, he was not in the situation of a common trustee: which requires some purpose declared and a fund.

Some late cases have gone a great way to weaken the old author-the said testator did direct the particular uses, persons, or places, the 1000*l.* for the charitable uses should be paid, the Defendant Robert Syderfin doth by answer set forth, that he hath diligently sought, but cannot find any; and if no such shall appear, he is advised the devise of the 1000*l.* is void; and submits the same to the judgment of the Court; but saith, that the present rents are not sufficient to pay the 200*l.* per annum devised to the other Defendant the executrix: whereto the said Plaintiff's Counsel insisted, that the bequest of this 1000*l.* to charitable uses is a trust on the estates; and where there is no direction, how the same should be applied, it is in the power of the King to appoint the same; and His Majesty having made such appointment, as aforesaid, it ought to be applied according to such appointment.

Whereupon his Lordship declared, that this legacy of 1000*l.* was a charity well devised; though there was no direction, how the same should be applied; and there being no direction yet found for the employing thereof, it ought to be employed, as His Majesty hath directed. But how and when the same shall be raised and paid being the question, the Plaintiff's Counsel proposed, that the said Defendant Robert might pay 100*l.* per annum for ten years in satisfaction of the 1000*l.*; and the Defendant Robert Syderfin, present in Court, consenting thereto, his Lordship doth order and decree, that the said 1000*l.* be paid to the said relators accordingly by 100*l.* a year, yearly payable on every Candlemas-day for ten years next, till the whole be paid to the relators, giving a sufficient receipt or discharge for the same under their common seal; the first payment to begin and be made on Candlemas-day next; and when and as often as the said 100*l.* per annum shall be paid unto the said relators, Sir Robert Lyard, kn^t &c. is to see the same put out at interest, till the whole 1000*l.* be paid, and to compute the charge of this; and when the 1000*l.* is to be paid into the said relator's hands, the said Master is to see the said money and all interest arising thereby (the said charge of this present being first deducted out of the said interest) laid out in lands, tenements, or rents, and settled on the said relators: whereby the proceeds thereof may be employed for the use of the said mathematical boys in His Majesty's new Royal Foundation in Christ's Hospital for ever; and on payment thereof the said Defendant Robert Syderfin is and shall be hereby from time to time protected and saved harmless and indemnified, and his said estate in the county of Somerset discharged of and from the same, in case any direction shall hereafter be found of the said Thomas Syderfin, directing and limiting, how the said 1000*l.* shall be paid.

(1) Finch, 245.

(2) 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 193.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 12.

(4) 1 Bro. C. C. 13, note; Amb. 639; High. part ii. 10.

ties ; and the late inclination of the Court has been not to dispose in general charity, where a particular one is pointed out. The late Master of the Rolls in The Attorney General v. Whitchurch (1) after great consideration of this subject adopted the opinion of Mr. Justice Buller in The Attorney General v. Goulding (2), according to The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Oxford (3) ; that, where there is a defined object, and it cannot take place, as, if it is void by the Statute (4), it is wholly void ; * and the fund goes to the next of kin ; and is not to be laid out in general charity, according to the preceding cases. Browne v. Yeall, the case upon Mr. Bradley's will, is not to be distinguished from this case. The disposition was held void for uncertainty ; and the property went to the next of kin, not in general charity according to the older cases. In The Attorney General v. Boulbee (5) Lord Alvanley in very clear and intelligible language states the effect of this doctrine (6) ; adopting all, that is rational, and rejecting the rest. It was also before the Court in The Attorney General v. Andrew (7). The case of Wheeler v. Sheer (8), though in a book of no great authority (9), appears by an examination of the record to be truly reported. It differs from The Attorney General v. Syderfin in this ; that the appointment was to be by a subsequent instrument : in the other case the party had appointed. Lord King, who decided The Attorney General v. Hickman, also decided this case. It sufficiently appeared, though there was no appointment, that the object was general charity ; and it cannot be distinguished in substance from this case. In the cases before Lord Thurlow, and in Baylis v. The Attorney General (10), and Cook v. Duckenfield (11), charity was the substance ; and the discretion of the trustee was merely the mode, secondary and subordinate to that general object, which was the essence of the gift. This case comes nearer to the class of cases upon powers ; such as Brown v. Higgs (12) ; upon which the rule is, that, though the Court will supply a defective execution, it will not for any purpose supply the non-execution. The leading authority upon that is the Duke of Marlborough v. Lord Godolphin (13).

[*48] *This testatrix might have intended a different disposition as to her general property from the particular charitable legacies. The inference is, that she had given specifically to

(1) Ante, vol. iii. 141.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 428.

(3) Stated (in Corbyn v. French), ante, vol. iv. 431, from the Register's Book.

(4) 9 Geo. II. c. 36.

(5) Ante, vol. ii. 380 ; iii. 220.

(6) Ante, vol. ii. 387.

(7) Ante, vol. iii. 633.

(8) Mos. 288, 301.

(9) Lord Eldon, Chancellor, has repeatedly said, there are many good cases in Moseley.

(10) 2 Atk. 239.

(11) 2 Atk. 562, 567.

(12) Ante, vol. iv. 798 ; v. 495.

(13) 2 Ves. 61.

all the charities, for which she had any respect. As to the residue no charity can take except by the act and under the authority of Vaston. Upon the whole will there is a personal confidence in him alone; and that power cannot be exercised by the Court, or delegated to any one else, without exceeding the will. Such a personal confidence may be committed upon a motive rational and intelligible; perhaps to a person distinguished by zeal for charity, for instance, Mr. Howard, or Mr. Hanway; proceeding evidently upon the character, peculiar views, skill and intelligence, of the individual. Is the intention executed cy pres by sending that to the Master's office? The appointment of a particular person may be itself the recommendation of a particular charity: for instance, if it was left to the discretion of the person, who instituted, and particularly patronized, the Humane or Philanthropic Society. The recommendation would have very different effects, as applied to different persons. Vaston, for instance, was a quaker. Can there be a doubt, that she meant him to follow the example of her own charity, and to attend particularly to the objects of her own bounty, her poor relations? There can be no doubt, it would have given her the utmost pain to see all this property given away in what this Court would consider objects of charity; leaving these relations, the objects of her bounty, without any thing. The words have a different meaning according to different feelings and dispositions. The only apprehension the testatrix felt was, that Vaston's persuasion might prevent him from attending to those, whom she intended to favor. If she had given the fund over, in case Vaston should not make a disposition, or if he should die in her life, to an object, to which it could not be applied, or if he had shown an intention to execute, though illegally, * it must have gone to the next of kin, not to any general charitable purpose. It is true, as Lord Thurlow says, the death of the trustee cannot affect the intention. That however is, where it is clear, what the trustee was to do: but where it is of so discretionary a nature, that his act is absolutely necessary to create the trust, his death puts an end to the disposition. It is impossible to suppose, any particular charity in the view of the testatrix in this event. There is great reason for inferring, that never having renewed this charitable bequest, or given it to any other purpose, she considered, that by the death of Vaston it failed; and either meant to revoke, or considered it gone, or never could fix upon another person, in whom she might repose the same power. It cannot be considered the dry case supposed by Lord Thurlow. Lord Rosslyn thought it impossible to execute this Report; observing, that it was making, not construing, a will. The danger of such a discretionary bequest with reference to the Statute (1) is a very material consideration. It has never been decided, that where an absolute discretion is given to a person to dispose in charity, he cannot lay out the fund in land. Why could not Vaston have established and endowed a school by act in his life? The decree certainly is new. It is an attempt to execute an indefinite, vague, intention: which is not expressed. To what extent poor clergymen are to be relieved is not defined. It is impossible for the Court to execute the intention. They may do something like it, and for the general purpose of charity: but they must make a will for the testatrix; and in so doing, they may go perfectly in opposition to her intention.

The next question is, if this fund is not the property of the next of kin, what is to become of it. If the disposition is in [*50] *the Master's Office, he will hold himself bound to give a great part to clergymen, to the exclusion of the relations; who will fare better under the Crown's disposition of this Charity. This cannot be considered a trust; for which the object and the property must be certain, and not liable to be disappointed; and it must be a trust at the death of the testatrix, or not at all. It must be considered a mere recommendation; and Vaston, having power to give to any Charity he thought proper, might have excluded poor clergymen. According to all the cases it must go to the Crown; and in that way there is no scheme: but the Attorney General suggests objects. It is surprising to consider, how far the Court has gone upon that. In De Costa v. De Pas (1) certainly the intention was very little followed. That was preceded by Baxter's Case (2) and the King v. Lady Portington (3), and followed by the Attorney General v. Herrick (4) and others; which have established, that, where the gift is to a charity, which may take place by law, but is uncertain in its objects, the Crown may appoint; and, the purpose being general and indefinite, this Court cannot act. The same rule holds, where it is indefinite, and where it is illegal; as a devise to a superstitious use. In the Attorney General v. Herrick Lord Bathurst, with reluctance, but upon full consideration of the cases, determined, that the disposition was in the Crown. The decision (5)

(1) Amb. 228; 2 Swanst. 487, n.

(2) 1 Vern. 248. The decree was reversed in the Attorney General v. Hughes, 2 Vern. 105. See the note, ante, vol. iv. 433, 434, to Corbyn v. French.

(3) 1 Salk. 162.

(4) Amb. 714.

(5) Browne v. Yeall. In CHANCERY, upon farther directions, July, 1791, Reg. Lib. A. 1790, folio 579.

Ralph Bradley by will, dated 27th December, 1788, gave as follows: "I give all such stocks, annuities, and monies, in the public funds as I shall be possessed of or entitled unto at the time of my decease, in my own right, to the said George Brown, Rowland Webster, and John Brewster; and I declare and direct that they shall stand and be possessed to and of the three per cent. Annuities, which may be purchased in pursuance thereof, and directions hereinbefore mentioned, upon the trusts hereinafter declared: that is to say, in trust by and out of the dividends and yearly income thereof to pay to the said Mary Stevens, the yearly sum of 50*l.* during her life, at the times and in the manner hereinbefore appointed for that purpose; and to the said Rebecca Fowle, 14*l.* during her life; and in trust by and out of the dividends and yearly income of the said stocks and annuities, and monies in the public funds, but subject and without prejudice to raising the said yearly sums of 50*l.* and 14*l.* to raise and levy so much money as the provision hereinbefore made for the payment of my debts upon Mr. Bradley's will contradicts those cases (1). It is much to be lamented, that there is no account in print or manuscript of what passed in that case. It has been said to be anomalous; and not a case of charity; but it is very difficult to sustain that opinion. There is a considerable number of institutions in this country for the purpose of * public [* 52] instruction; which are always considered eleemosynary; great bodies with large funds; as the society for propagating the Gospel; who are within Mr. Bradley's will. It is very difficult to consider, how the dissemination of Baxter's Call to the Unconverted and the Jewish case can be considered and acted upon as charities, and yet a purpose of instruction according to the established law of this country is not a charity. That case therefore seems to be a charity case, and new; and the effect of it is to restrain the latitude of former decisions upon this subject. A new decision upon a subject of this nature is not attended with the same inconvenience as upon the ordinary subjects of property. The effect is, not disturbing titles, but only requiring * testators to express their objects clearly. Considering the great amount [* 53] and legacies may happen to be deficient for that purpose, and to apply the omney to be raised for the supplying and making good of such deficiency; and upon trust in the same manner to raise and levy so much money as shall be deficient to pay and satisfy such pecuniary legacies, as I by any codicil or codicils under my hand shall give or appoint; whether the same shall be attested by any witness, or not: and to apply the money so to be raised for the answering that purpose accordingly; and in trust out of the dividends and yearly income of the said stocks, annuities, and monies in the public funds, and out of the stock and annuities to be purchased as hereinafter mentioned, but subject and without prejudice to the trusts aforesaid, to raise and apply the yearly sum of 500 l . for the term of twenty years, to commence and be computed from the end of three years next after my decease, and from that period of twenty years the yearly sum of 1000 l . until the 5th day of January, which will be in the year of our Lord 1860, to and for the purposes hereinafter expressed; and in trust to invest from time to time the * residue of the said dividends or yearly income of the [* 52] said stocks, annuities, and monies, to be from time to time purchased under the direction or in pursuance of this my will, in the purchase of stocks or annuities of the same nature; and I direct, that as well the said two yearly sums of 500 l . and 1000 l ., during the continuance thereof respectively, as the interest and yearly dividends to arise from and after the 5th day of July, 1860, as well from all the said stocks and annuities to be purchased or accumulated under the direction or in pursuance of this my will, as from such stocks, annuities and monies in the public funds, as I shall be possessed of in my own right at the time of my decease, shall, subject and without prejudice to the trusts aforesaid, be from time to time for ever applied in the purchasing of such books, as by a proper disposition of them under the following directions, may have a tendency to promote the interests of virtue and religion and the happiness of mankind; the same to be disposed of in Great Britain or in any other part of the British dominions: this charitable design to be executed by and under the direction or superintendence of such persons, and under such rules and regulations, as by any Decree or Order of the High Court of Chancery shall from time to time be directed in that behalf."

The bill prayed, that the charity intended by the said testator might be established, and directions given for carrying on the same. See post, The Attorney General v. Stepney, vol. x. 22; and as to Browne v. Yeall, 27, 534, 9; ix. 406.

(1) See also Townley v. Bedwell, ante, vol. vi. 194.

of personal property at this period, it may be competent to the Court upon principles of public policy to change its rule upon such a subject. If such a scheme as is approved by this Report, is not to be supported, Thomas Walker, though the particular object of the testatrix's bounty, must lose every thing. She had intended to give this estate first to his mother, and afterwards to him: but afterwards she thought, money would be more useful to him than land. She had a great regard for him; advanced money to him repeatedly: but she casually omitted to make a new will. He will have a strong claim, in case the disposition should be in the Crown. It is not easy to conceive, how the disposition of such a charity comes into this Court. If the charitable intention is sufficiently described for this Court to know the object, that may be the subject of a scheme to effectuate that particular intention. But upon such a charity as this the proposal of a scheme is the creation of a new charity, that never existed in the mind of the testatrix; a disposition perfectly arbitrary, by a mere direction to the Master to say, what is a proper mode of distributing 50,000*l.* in charity. That is proper for the Crown, the general guardian of charities. In The Attorney General v. Syderfin the natural supposition was, that the testator had destroyed the paper. Why was not that referred to the Master? In that respect there is no difference between the cases. It is a mistake to say, that a superstitious use is to be disposed of by the Crown. By the Statute of Ed. VI. (1) property given to a superstitious use is given to the Crown, not to be disposed of in charity. But that Statute applied only to superstitious uses then existing: those since created are merely void (2). In cases, that [*54] *are not considered here as superstitious uses, the King has the disposal, because the charity pointed out cannot be carried into effect; and then it is only a gift in general to charity. So in every case of a general gift to charity, without pointing to a particular one, the Crown has the right of disposition. The true distinction upon this point is, that, where the charity is sufficiently described, this Court will carry it into effect: but, where there is a mere general gift to charity without any description of objects, this Court does not create a charity: but the right is in the Crown. If therefore this is to be considered a charity, it falls to be disposed of by the Crown, by Sign Manual; and is not a subject of administration in this Court.

The Solicitor General, [Hon. Spencer Perceval], and Mr. Finch, for the Plaintiff, the Executor, in support of the Decree.—The principle, as it is pressed against the Charity, is carried to a pitch of extravagance as great as that, to which the Court formerly went in the opposite direction. There is a fashion in opinion as well as in other things: hence prejudices may arise; and the aversion to a particular absurdity may run into as great an absurdity. These dis-

(1) Stat. 1 Ed. VI. c. 14.

(2) See De Garcin v. Lawson, ante, vol. iv. 433, in a note to Corbyn v. French.

positions, at the expense of poor relations, "to endow a college or a cat," cannot be justified. They are destitute of all moral principle. But, where the testator satisfies the claims of relations, or has none, whom he knows, or, who have not forfeited the claim upon him, is there any thing unreasonable in selecting proper objects? It is at least doubtful, with reference to human happiness and misery, whether there are not many institutions, to which property may be applied as usefully as to enrich a spendthrift heir. If the principle is carried too far, it may have a very bad effect. If on account of the vanity, which may be discovered in the purpose, it is to fail, your Lordship will abridge many of the motives to the best * of these institutions. A Charity established during the [*55] life of the party is drawn from that fund, which would accumulate for the benefit of heirs and next of kin. If such an application of property is proscribed from the vanity of the motive, the lists of subscribers to the charities of this country will be very much diminished. There is a broad distinction between real and personal estate. The policy of the country as to property in the funds, if it is to be collected from the Acts of the Legislature, has been very different of late years, upon a great principle of convenience, in allowing people to lock up their funded property. The late measure of the redemption of the land-tax, proceeds upon that principle; and it may be carried farther.

All the argument upon this will depends upon this; whether Vaston is to be considered a trustee under it, and a trustee for charity; for it is conceded, that, if that is made out, his death makes no difference whatsoever in the validity of the bequest; whatever difference it may make in the manner of carrying it into effect. The legal interest in the residue unquestionably passed to him; and the intention was, that he should take in trust for charity. As to the effect of the word "recommend," there is no question, that the fund is certain; and The Attorney General v. Syderfin is an authority, that the objects are sufficiently certain; and that case is clearly recognized by all the succeeding cases, looking to that authority: the application of money to charity, being in principle, distinguished from that to any other object; for any other object becoming general and indefinite would be void for uncertainty. The indemnity ordered in that case shows, it did not go upon the supposition, that the writing was destroyed. It is not to be concluded, that it went upon any assumption; that it was not destroyed by the testator: but, leaving that in doubt, it was held, that in the mean time

* the money should be applied by the King. If it appeared, that the paper had been destroyed by the testator, the effect would be only, that by destroying it he intimated an alteration in his mind as to those specific objects: but, the phrase of the will not being altered, the general disposition to charity was left unaffected. If this testatrix is to be considered as knowing, that the trustee was dead, as upon the evidence she must be, the inference is, not that she meant the legacy for charitable purposes should be void, but that she still intended the general application to charity to survive him, and to be carried into effect in legal course; for, if she is supposed to know the effect of lapse, she may also be supposed to know, that her general disposition would be carried into effect notwithstanding his death.

The case of Wheeler v. Sheers does not apply: first, as Lord Thurlow observed (1) in White v. White, there being no actual declaration at the time of any positive disposition to charity: but it was to be future, by codicil. Secondly, the codicil afterwards executed recites that provision in the will, and directs the application to such uses and purposes as by any other codicil or codicils shall be directed; and in that codicil he omits the word "charitable." It certainly does not exclude his contemplating charity as one of the objects: but the omission of that word, as far as it goes, seems to have the effect of cancelling the operation of the will. The judgment appears to go upon both these considerations. That case, and Browne v. Yeall, are the only cases produced in favor of the next of kin. The latter does not appear to have received much attention, or to have been very strenuously argued. There is no note of what Lord Thurlow said. The object expressed was so absurd and impracticable, that it was impossible to execute it. One [* 57] * difficulty was as to the manner, in which the books were to be communicated. It is not very easily to be reconciled with other cases decided by Lord Thurlow. It seems to be contended, that this Court would not have controlled Vaston's conduct farther than to prevent him from applying the fund for his own benefit, and perhaps to lock up the money in the Court. That is against a case in Eq. Cas. Ab. (2); which shows, that a disposition to charity is a disposition sufficient for the Court to act upon. The Lord Chancellor there says, he would not take away the discretionary power. So here the Court would not control the discretion given to the individual; but would superintend his disposition, and prevent abuse. The same principle is found in Cook v. Duckenfield; which case also was referred to the Master to approve a scheme, the subject not being considered in the disposition of the Crown. With respect to the case put by your Lordship, of the death of the trustee, when just going to act, or, if he was not to be found, having gone abroad, the question is, whether he was a trustee; if he was, there would be no difficulty in any of these cases. The Attorney General v. Herrick also shows, that the uncertainty of a bequest for charity is no objection; and Lord Bathurst was inclined in favor of the heir; but found the authorities too strong. In that instance there was no scheme; nor in the Attorney General v. Syderfin, and the Attorney General v. Peacock (3). In the Attorney General v. Hickman (4), the persons, who were to make the disposition, were

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 15.

(2) Anon. 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 190, pl. 3.

(3) Cited Amb. 713.

(4) 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 93.

gone: but it was held, the Charity subsisted; and might be answered as fully by this Court. These authorities are not disputed: but distinctions are attempted; first, that the particular Charity is pointed out by the will. The answer is, that a general bequest to charity is in the contemplation of this Court a particular bequest.

The case of the Attorney General v. Doyley (1) has been found in the Register's Book; and is generally correct, the differences being merely verbal. The latter branch of that case cannot be distinguished in any part from this. It is also an [ 59] authority for a scheme upon this sort of general bequest, not a disposition by the Crown. One of the trustees had released: the other probably submitted to act, as the Court should direct. The disposition therefore fell upon the Court. The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Chester (2), is an authority to all these points. In Widmore v. Woodroofe (3) there was an end of the trustee's discretion, as much as if he was dead: yet the disposition was upheld by the Court. The Attorney General v. The

(1) 4 Vin. 485; 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 194.

Doyley v. Doyley, } 1st Dec. 1735.
Attorney General v. Doyley, } Reg. Lib. A.

Timothy Wilson by will, dated the 22d of March, 1714, gave all his real and personal estate to two trustees, &c. in trust, to pay the produce thereof to his niece Elizabeth Wilson, for her life; and after her death he gave the same to the sons and daughters of the said Elizabeth Wilson successively, with divers limitations; and in case there should be no issue, or they should all die under twenty-one then the said trustees were to dispose of his real and personal estate to such of his relations, of his mother's side, who were most deserving; and in such manner and proportions as they should think fit to such charitable use as they should think most proper and convenient.

The mother died without issue. A bill filed by some of the next of kin on the mother's side, praying an account, and to have their share of the estate; and a cross bill by the Attorney General to have the same applied to charitable uses as the Court should direct.

The decree of the Master of the Rolls, after directing the usual accounts and arrangement of the testator's assets, directs as follows: "And what shall appear to be the neat surplus of the monies arising from the real and personal estate of the testator, the produce thereof, the same is to be divided into moieties; whereof one moiety is to be distributed, share and share alike, amongst all the relations of the testator on the mother's side, who are within the degree of third cousins, and were born at the death of the said Elizabeth Wilson, and are now living; and as to the other moiety of the said estate, all parties are to be at liberty to propose schemes before the Master for distributing the same out and out in charity; and herein the several poor relations of the said testator, who shall not be partakers of the other moiety, are ceteris paribus to be preferred. The Master to state to the Court what would be the proper scheme, subject to farther directions."

Report as to one moiety, dated 13th July, 1737, whereby forty-two relations were to receive 56*l.* 14*s.* 1*l*-2*d.* each.

Upon farther directions, 26th July, 1737, Reg. Lib. A. fo. 545, it appears, that the Master certified by his Report, that he had out of the several schemes laid before him by consent of parties made up one entire scheme for the other moiety out and out in charity according to the terms of the scheme: namely, 400*l.* to eight poor relations of the testator; the like sum to the Westminster Infirmary; and other sums to other public charitable institutions, and among others to the parishes in the town of Guildford. See this case noticed, post, vol. x. 538; 3 Mer. 19.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 444.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 13, note; Amb. 636; High. part ii. 10.

Mayor, &c., of London (1) is not to be distinguished in principle from this. There was a total failure of objects: but it was considered as a general charitable bequest; and to be appointed de novo by a scheme. De Costa v. De Pas likewise bears upon this question very strongly. The principle established by all the authorities is, that a bequest to charity merely is sufficiently certain. A charity, as defined by Lord Camden, is a public institution for a public purpose. Whether the word is expressed in the singular or plural number is not material. The only effect of the word in this will being in the plural number is, that the testatrix did not mean one charity to absorb the whole. The argument from that is, [* 60] * that charitable donations to individuals are intended: but according to common language the singular number would better answer that interpretation. Those however, who are to support this charity, are not interested to contend against the construction, that the disposition is to be to individuals, to be received at once, out and out.

The only question of reasonable doubt is, whether the disposition is to be in this Court by a scheme or by the Crown at once without that form. Very little is to be found on this point; and it is difficult to ascertain precisely the ground of distinction. From all the early cases it is clear, that, where the bequest is indefinite and uncertain in its object, a general bequest for charity, it would be for the Crown to dispose of it: so, where it is clearly a disposition to charity, but to be carried into execution in a way the law will not allow, as in De Costa v. De Pas, there also the disposition is in the Crown; upon the principle, that, the distinct object failing, nothing remains but the general object of charity. The distinction seems to be, that, where the party has pointed out any particular object, defined in any degree, there it is not looked on as being in the disposition of the Crown; which might overlook the intention completely, and appoint arbitrarily. Therefore, where any particular object has been pointed out, the Court has considered it as for its own disposition; in order to secure, as far as possible, the attainment of that object. So, where the object is legal, but from circumstances it is impossible that it can be executed, there the Court takes it, with the same view: to carry it into effect upon some scheme as near as possible to that intended, as in the Attorney General v. The Mayor, &c. of London; not leaving it quite at large. The Court, where a trustee is appointed, will put themselves in the place of the trustee; and there is more reason for that from the nature of [* 61] * this charity. Your Lordship would put yourself in the place of a conscientious trustee; who, whatever construction is to be put on the word "recommend," as to which all the cases are referred to in Pierson v. Garnet (2), would not disregard the

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 171.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 38, 226; Finch's Prec. Ch. 201. The latter note, Mr. Finch observed, was corrected by Lord Kenyon.

recommendation. But the Crown would not be bound by it. The distinction is certainly faint: but it seems to be, that, where the object is clearly general and uncertain, the Crown is to have the disposition: where the object is pointed out, and is legal, but cannot take effect, the Court would apply it as near as can be (1). The cases for the disposition by the Crown are the Attorney General v. Syderfin, De Costa v. De Pas, Isaac v. Gompertz, and the Attorney General v. Herrick. Isaac v. Gompertz, a remnant of De Costa v. De Pas, was before Lord Thurlow, 17th July, 1786: who allowed every legacy, except an annuity given for the support and maintenance of the Jewish Synagogue in Magpie Alley. The Decree declares, it is not to accrue to the personal estate: but ought to be applied to some charitable use by the Crown; and recommended to the Attorney General to apply to the Crown for a Sign Manual. In the Attorney General v. Herrick it appears by the Register's Book that all directions, touching the application of the residue of the personal estate, and the produce of the sale of the real estate and the rents and profits, were reserved, until his Majesty's pleasure should be known, how it was his will the same should be disposed of (2).

* These are cases, in which the object was against the [* 62] policy of the law, or uncertain and general; not applicable therefore to this case. They are overbalanced by the cases in favor of a scheme: The Attorney General v. Oglander (3), Sonley v. The Clockmakers' Company (4). The Attorney General v. Doyley, Cook v. Duckenfield, Widmore v. Woodroofe. The Attorney General v. Clarke (5). The Attorney General v. Andrew (6) is certainly a very extraordinary case; that a plan for the particular benefit of the University of Cambridge should be applied to the University of Oxford, by a compromise between the next of kin and the Merchant Taylors' Company (7). Upon all these authorities this Decree ought to be affirmed.

Mr. Cox, for the Attorney General, contended against the next of kin; but, that the Decree was wrong in directing a scheme: this being a charity of that general nature, that the disposition fell to the Crown.

The question upon the first point is really, whether this a Trust or a Power. There is no intermediate case. Could Vaston, if called upon by the Attorney General, have refused to dispose of this in charity? Can it be supposed, that in the event this is undisposed

(1) Mr. Cox said, that distinction was taken in the Attorney General v. Mattheus, 2 Lev. 167; and the Lord Chancellor observed, that by a manuscript note it seemed to be the notion of Mr. Brown, a considerable practiser in this Court in Lord Hardwicke's time.

(2) Reg. Lib. A. 1772; fo. 239.

(3) 3 Bro. C. C. 166.

(4) 1 Bro. C. C. 81.

(5) Amb. 422.

(6) Ande, vol. iii. 633.

(7) Andrew v. The Merchant Taylors' Company, post, 223.

of? That is impossible; unless it can be said, that Vaston, if living, could have kept it for his own benefit. The Court acknowledges a disposition to charity as a substantive disposition in some mode or other against the next of kin. If the primary intent was the disposition by Vaston, that would have been better secured by giving the fund to him. If charity is the Cestui que trust, why is the death of the trustee to defeat that trust more than any other? If the testatrix had communicated her intention to Vaston, the case

[* 63] would be different; a case, not of discretion in him, but of a declared purpose, like the instance of the paper, which could not be found. In the case of Downing College (1), upon which a very elaborate argument was given by Lord Chief Justice Wilmot, a considerable part of that argument was upon this very question; how far the death of the trustee can disappoint the Cestui que trust. Lord Chief Justice Wilmot says, the legal estate follows the trust; that there is an essential difference between powers and trusts: if the trustees will not, or cannot act, the Constitution has provided a trustee: the King, as Parens Patriæ, has the superintending power over all Charities, abstracted from the Statute 43 Eliz. and antecedent to it, 2 P. Will. 119; and that paternal care and protection is delegated to this Court. Where no trustee is appointed, this Court assumes the office in the first instance. His Lordship also considers there, whether the primary object of execution by a particular person shall prevent the general object, and the question, whether if the trust is illegal, and void, or not fit to be executed by a Court of Equity, this Court would execute it, as far as the rules of law and equity will admit. He says, this Court has long made a distinction between superstitious uses, and mistaken charitable uses. Property destined to the former is given by Act of Parliament to the King, to do what he pleases with; and properly falls under the cognizance of a Court of Revenue. The reason of the distinction is, that in the latter case the donation is considered as proceeding from a general principle of piety in the testator; and this Court carries on that general intention. There is also the presumption, that this testatrix would have taken another

[* 64] *charity, if told, that could not be executed. What difference can particular charities make, except by limiting the Court or the Crown, as the trustee would have been limited? The Attorney General v. Hickman goes the whole length of this case. There was a discretion in the trustee, as to which non-conformist ministers; and it might have been as well said there, and in Widmore v. Woodrooffe, that some particular reliance was placed in the trustee, that he knew the intention better than any one else. In the Attorney General v. Doyley, the Court was not afraid of the difficulty from the bequest partly to Relations, and partly to Charity; and the uncertainty, how much was to go to charity, did not prevent it.

(1) The Attorney General v. Downing, Amb. 550, 571; The Attorney General v. Bouyer, ante, vol. iii. 714; v. 300; The Attorney General v. Vigor, post, viii. 256. The note cited on this occasion was that of Lord Chief Justice Wilmot, since published in his Reports, p. 1.

Upon the other point, the disposition is in the Crown, not in this Court. At one period something like a rule was established, that, when the gift is to charity generally, it belongs to the King to point out the particular charity, as to declare, what charity should take, as a branch of the prerogative; but, where the particular charity was pointed out, it devolved upon the Court. There is no case, in which that is much considered, except the Attorney General v. Matthews (1); in which it seems the direct point. In subsequent cases the disposition has been sometimes in one way, sometimes in the other; and it is impossible to reconcile them. Some of them depart from the rule: but the point was not raised, and brought fairly to decision in any one case. There is nothing to defeat the old rule once established, as it seems, upon the immediate consideration of that point. No one was ever much interested to consider it.

Mr. Lloyd, in reply.—None of the cases have such words as this will; importing, not a trust, but a personal confidence, that a charity created by this individual, and such charity only, should *take; and if there should not be any such, then it is to [*65] be considered as if the residuary legatee had died in the life of the testatrix. Your Lordship will not strain this will to make it conform to the old cases. If Lord Northington and other Judges had not stemmed the torrent, there would have been a vast number of charity cases of another kind. They received one check in The Attorney General v. Tyndall (2); by which Lord Hardwicke's decrees were overturned. In another instance they have received a great blow by restraining the doctrine, that the fund may be applied to a charity directly opposite to that specified by the testator: Corbyn v. French (3); and The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Oxford; which is accurately stated (4) in that case. Lord Alvanley expresses his opinion upon that point, that the Court had deviated from the former course. I do not admit, that, if Vaston had made an indiscreet appointment in favor of any charity, the Court could have controlled that; neither could the Court have compelled him during his whole life to appropriate it to any particular charity. If he had made an appointment in favor of Queen Anne's bounty, or any other, that would have been void within the statute of George II. (5), the Court could not possibly have executed it as a general charity. What ground is there for the assumption in favor of some general charity in the event of no appointment by Vaston? It may as well be conjectured, that, if that event had been pointed out to the testatrix, she would have said, in that case it should not go in charity. It is like every other case of lapse.

The Attorney General v. Syderfin is the foundation of all

(1) 2 Lev. 167.

(2) Amb. 614; Chapman v. Brown, ante, vol. vi. 404.

(3) Ante, vol. iv. 418.

(4) Ante, vol. iv. 431.

(5) 9 Geo. II. c. 36.

these cases; and when that is looked into, there never was a determination like it. A proceeding appears to have taken place, of which there is no idea now. It is said, the King being informed, that there was no such writing to be found, had declared his will and pleasure, that the money should be laid out for the benefit of the foundation in Christ's Hospital; and without any proof on either side that decree was made. That was a very extraordinary interference of the Crown antecedent to a decree. No such proceeding appears in any other instance. Was not the heir entitled to an issue, whether the paper was lost, or, whether the testator had done any act with respect to it? He put it in issue by insisting upon that: but the Court appears to have decreed without any evidence. The note at the bottom is most extraordinary. Suppose, the issue had been found in favor of the heir: could the Court possibly have decreed in favor of any particular charity? If it could have been made out, that such a paper had never existed, or, that it had been destroyed, the Court would not have made the decree. The case does not import the contrary; for there is an indemnity upon that. If no paper had existed, that would have brought it to Wheeler v. Sheer and Cook v. Duckenfield. The answer to all the cases is, that they are cases of clear trust, and the objects were pointed out, and no personal confidence was placed in any one individual in the execution of the charity. In The Attorney General v. Doyley how could the trust devolve upon the Court, the trustees being alive, and ready to act? In Wheeler v. Sheer, which case is in the Register's Book, it is quite clear the charity went a different way from the intention. Supposing the word "charitable" to be left out of the first codicil, the second codicil expressly revives the will. No specific object was pointed out: but certainly there was a general intention for charity, to be specified by a subsequent *codicil. The Attorney General v. Syderfin was determined upon this ground only; that the testator had declared, he had made an appointment: if not, it is to be presumed, the decision would have been the same as in Wheeler v. Sheer.

[*67] As to the second point, a scheme in these cases seems very absurd; and is in fact the Master's disposition. What Lord Hardwicke says in De Costa v. De Pas is unanswerable. Certainly that course as to the Sign Manual was not pursued in The Attorney General v. Syderfin. The Attorney General v. Herrick shows, that, where the charity is general, the King takes it, as Parens Patriæ, it is said: but where the objects are specifically pointed out there it is by a scheme; for the King has no authority to take it from those objects. The latter authorities have more reason than the former. The decree in The Attorney General v. Andrew is certainly extraordinary; for a scheme according to what was nearest the intention: the particular object being as precisely fixed as could be. That case is not yet decided (1); and it will be opened to the next of kin. It is therefore no authority for a scheme.

(1) See Andrew v. The Merchant Taylors' Company, post, 223.

May 12th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The late Lord Chancellor, I understand, intimated, that it was fit, this cause should be re-heard. Upon what ground that recommendation was made, or upon what view of the case his Lordship was disposed to think so, I have not been able to collect from the argument. Whether his opinion was, that the declaration of the decree, that the residue of the personal estate was to be applied in charity, was not warranted by the true construction of the will, construed upon the principles, upon which the Court has acted with regard to *charities, or, that if it was so warranted, the residue was [*68] not to be disposed of by such a distribution as would be contained in a scheme before the Master, but ought to be disposed of by the King, as Parens Patriæ, I have not been informed. That circumstance however makes it my duty to consider this case very anxiously ; and that is considerably increased by my conviction, that, if the decree is affirmed, it would be a considerable surprise upon the testatrix. But after the most anxious consideration I cannot feel myself in a situation, authorizing me to say, I am at liberty to depart from what appears to have been the established doctrine of this Court, as applied to those particular legatees, called charities.

This Will, I admit, struck me many years ago, and at present strikes me, as a will, that in the terms manifests as strong a purpose to place discretion in an individual as can be expressed by any terms: but, notwithstanding that, it seems to me, the cases have gone a length, upon principles wise or otherwise is not for me to determine, which has formed a precedent, that binds me in this Court; and, whatever the House of Lords may think proper to do upon a review of these cases, it is much fitter, if they are to be departed from, that they should be departed from by the authority in the last resort than by an individual Judge sitting here. The circumstance, to be found in Lord Thurlow's decree, giving the costs as between attorney and client, and the fact, that the re-hearing was produced by an intimation from the Court itself, leave me no difficulty in saying, the expense of the re-hearing ought to be paid in the same manner. The nature of the question, as well as the authority of the recommendation, makes it not unfit, that all parties should have their costs as between attorney and client out of this * fund. It is some consolation therefore to the [*69] Court, that this attempt will be no expense to them.

In what the doctrine originated, whether, as supposed by Lord Thurlow in White v. White (1), in the principles of the Civil Law, as applied to charities, or in the religious notions entertained formerly in this country, I know not: but we all know, there was a period, when in this country a portion of the residue of every man's estate was applied to charity: and the Ordinary thought himself obliged so to apply it; upon the ground, that there was a general principle of piety in the testator. When the Statute (2) compelled

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 12.

(2) 22 Char. II. c. 10.

a distribution, it is not impossible, that the same favor should have been extended to charity in the construction of wills, by their own force purporting to authorize such a distribution. I have no doubt, that cases much older than those I shall cite may be found; all of which appear to prove, that if the testator has manifested a general intention to give to charity, the failure of the particular mode, in which the charity is to be effectuated, shall not destroy the charity: but, if the substantial intention is charity, the law will substitute another mode of devoting the property to charitable purposes, though the formal intention as to the mode cannot be accomplished. One of the earliest cases, mentioned in The Attorney General v. Syderfin (1) is Frier v. Peacock (2). According to that case the generality of the gift made the effectuating it impracticable; and for that reason, the substance of the gift being to assist the poor, the Court substituted a practicable mode of assisting the poor; and reduced the number of legatees, whom that general term would embrace, to forty poor boys. That case is more fully stated in Levinz (3), under the name * of The Attorney General v. Matthews; where the decision is thus stated: "And this decree of the commissioners was now quashed by Lord Keeper Finch; because this being a general charity, and for the poor in general, the commissioners have nothing to do with it: but it is to be determined by the King himself in this Court upon an Information by the Attorney General in behalf of the King; which accordingly he directed to be brought. And now upon the Information the Lord Keeper said, this general charity belongs to the King himself to dispose, but yet to the poor; and therefore the disposal of 80*l.* per annum to Paul's was out of the trust, and void; and the distribution to the three parishes good, and to be confirmed. But as to the poor kindred of Frier, who prayed to be considered, no consideration, he said, could be had of them; for the disposition must be such as may endure for ever; and they cannot live poor for ever. But before he would dispose of the residue, he said, he would acquaint the King with the case, and the value of the estate; which appeared to be 400*l.* per annum at least, to have his directions, how the disposition of this general charity should be, and that to be confirmed by the decree of this Court. And afterwards the King directed, it should go to the maintenance of the mathematical scholars in Christ's Hospital, whom the King had lately appointed to be brought up there in order to be instructed in the art of navigation; which, ut audivi, was accordingly confirmed by the decree of this Court."

The authority of this case is strongly confirmed in The Attorney General v. Syderfin; and upon inquiry at Christ's Hospital I have been furnished with the original papers in that cause; which furnish an answer to the objection stated to the authority of that case. It appears from the papers, that previously to the decree the King's Sign Manual had been obtained ; and was brought into Court ; and the decree was made according to that ; and that, it is intimated at the Bar, was a proceeding not fit for a Court of Justice. If that observation could not be displaced otherwise, it would be displaced sufficiently for this purpose by this ; that, however the cause came into Court, the authority of it has been universally recognized ever since. But that observation sounds no objection to the propriety of the proceeding ; for the case was a devise, subject to a sum of 1000*l.* for such charitable uses as the devisor had by a paper directed. The person, to whom the estate was given so charged, had taken to the enjoyment of the estate under the will, as far as it was beneficial to himself ; and had, as is frequent in such cases, taken no notice of the fact, that there was a charge for the benefit of the charity. The Hospital found out, that there was such a will ; and if so, the money charged, as the law then stood, was clearly at the disposal of the King. It is perfectly familiar, that where an interest of such a kind is given to charity, or, where there is an escheat for want of heirs, and the fact is not communicated, it is usual to petition the King ; stating, that there is such an interest ; and praying some reward upon the ground of the discovery, if it can be made out. That is familiar practice, whether well or ill founded. It occurred in my experience, when Solicitor and Attorney General, in several instances as to escheat ; and the ordinary rule upon an escheat is for the Crown to give a lease, as good a lease as it can give, to the person making the discovery. This case originated in the discovery made by the Hospital of the charitable disposition ; and a petition was presented upon that ground. I have the petition, with the opinion of the Attorney General of that day upon it ; and in consequence of that he filed his Information. That produced the cause ; [ 72] which is very accurately reported in Vernon upon a comparison with the papers.

(1) 1 Vern. 224.

(2) Finch, 245.

(3) 2 Lev. 167.

The answer expressly insists upon that point, that if any writing was at any time made by the testator, it was afterwards revoked and cancelled ; and that the Court could have no authority to insist, either that it was in its own disposal, or that it was in the disposal of the Crown, without an inquiry upon the point, that that paper was revoked ; and that it was not unreasonable, that there should be some inquiry, a reason is given, that made the suggestion of revocation not improbable ; that subsequent to the making of this will he had charged several great sums of money upon his land ; and that the whole estate would scarce amount to answer all the charges thereon.

After the answer the case was again laid before the Attorney General for his opinion ; regard being had to the circumstances disclosed by the answer. His opinion is, that the executors ought to be made parties ; but that then, notwithstanding the circumstances in the answer, they may, when the executors are made parties, go to a hearing. The effect of the reasoning at the hearing was according to the Book, this: the Lord Keeper argues, that the charity exists, though the writing was not to be found; whereas the question was, whether the charity was not destroyed, because the writing was not to be found; and the idea of indemnity against the paper being found and expressing different charitable uses is kept up through the whole. How it was collected, that it was intended to be a permanent charity, it is very difficult to say; the writing not appearing.

There is a material difference between this case and [* 73] * Frier v. Peacock; for in that the will itself, devoting the property to charity, was producible.

It appears from the papers, that this Decree was carried into actual execution; the papers containing the evidence of payment of the money, a copy of the receipt, and a deduction of the costs of the suit, beginning with the first application, and including all the proceedings, which are very reasonable; not exceeding 34*l.* Whether the Decree proceeds upon good reasoning, or upon that, which fair reasoning might displace, it asserts, that where it is altogether uncertain and indefinite, it is in the disposal of the King.

With regard to the doctrine here laid down, there is a very strong declaration in Freeman (1):

"It was said, and not denied, that if a man deviseth a sum of money to such charitable uses as he shall direct by a codicil to be annexed to his will, or by a note in writing, and afterwards leaves no direction, neither by note, nor codicil, the Court of Chancery hath power to dispose of it to such charitable uses as the Court should think fit."

That dictum seems very much at variance with one way of interpreting Wheeler v. Sheer (2). It should seem, that The Attorney General v. Syderfin might have proceeded upon this principle; that the testator having once given to charitable uses, if it was not shown, that he had revoked that gift, his general purpose was charity, and should be enforced; though you could not show what was the use; a very strong proposition. It goes on thus:

[* 74] * "And so it was held in the case of Mr. Syderfin's will and the case of one Jones: but if the will points at any particular charity, as for maintenance of a school-master or poor widows, then the Court of Chancery ought not to direct it to any other purpose but such as is pointed at by the will."

I mark this; because it is not immaterial as to some of the late doctrine of the Court.

"As if a devise should be for such school as he should appoint, and appoints none, the Court may apply it for what school they please: but for no other purpose than a school; although it may be for what school the Court thinks fit."

If there is any authority in this case, it goes a length, that leads

(1) 2 Freem. 261.

(2) Mos. 288, 301.

one a little to doubt it; that if the disposition is for such general charitable use as the testator shall appoint, and he does not appoint, that is a gift in presenti, to operate at his death, to give to charity; reserving only to himself to particularize in futuro, by what mode that general charitable purpose shall be executed; and illustrating it by that case of such school as the testator shall appoint; that that will authorize the Court to say, he meant a school, though with that discretion; and that he meant only to reserve to himself the opportunity of selecting some school. That was going a great length.

In Clifford v. Francis (1) this doctrine is laid down; that when money is given to a charity, without expressing what charity, there the King is the disposer of the charity; and a bill ought to be preferred in the Attorney General's name. * I cite this [* 75] to show, that it contains a doctrine precisely the same as the Attorney General v. Syderfin, and the Attorney General v. Matthews. So those three cases seem to have established at the year 1679, that the doctrine of this Court was, that where the property was not vested in trustees, and the gift was to charity generally, not to be ascertained by the act of individuals referred to, the charity was to be disposed of, not by a scheme before the Master, but by the King, the disposer of such charities in his character of Parens Patria.

In the Attorney General v. Baxter (2), in 1684, it was alleged that the charity was against law (3); and therefore the right of applying this money was in the King. That doctrine is recognized in other cases; that if the gift denotes a charitable intention, but the object, to which the exercise of it is applied, is against the policy of the law, the Court would lay hold of the charitable intention; and execute it for the purpose of establishing some charity, agreeable to the law, in the room of that contrary to it. That is according to De Costa v. De Pas (4); which I shall mention from Lord Hardwicke's notes; where you will see the ground, upon which this Decree was reversed. If the particular ground, upon which it was reversed, had not occurred, this case would prove, that the intention being charity, his primary purpose would be held charitable; and they would not suppose, he would relinquish that, because the secondary purpose could not be answered; but would uphold the general primary purpose by giving that, which the testator had so given to dissenting ministers, to Chelsea College; and certainly in De Costa v. De Pas Lord Hardwicke followed that. This sort of decision * seems to have been followed in another case, in [* 76] 1679 (5), shortly mentioned in Vernon (6); in which case it is said, in case a legacy is given to a superstitious purpose, or a

(1) Freem. 330.

(2) 1 Vern. 248.

(3) See post, The Attorney General v. Fowler, vol. xv. 85; and the note, 88.

(4) Amb. 228.

(5) Attorney General v. Combe, 2 Ch. Ca. 18.

(6) Attorney General v. Guise, 2 Vern. 266.

mistaken religious purpose, the Court will not apply it to that ; but will act upon the supposed intention for charity ; and give it to a real religious purpose ; as where charity is intended, but a mistaken charity : thus 10*l.* a year for a weekly sermon upon Saturday, at St. Alban's ; the preacher to be chosen by the majority of the inhabitants. That they thought a mistaken charity, that it was quite wild, that the preacher should be chosen by the majority ; but still the purpose was charity ; and they directed the 10*l.* to be paid to a Catechist to preach weekly at St. Albans on Saturday, being named by the Bishop of the Diocese. The Attorney General v. Baxter is mentioned in Lord Hardwicke's note book thus :

" The case of Mr. Baxter upon Mayo's will : the Decree reversed ; not upon any thing contradicting the general principle reported to have been stated, but because really a legacy to sixty particular ejected ministers to be named by Baxter, and as if a legacy to those sixty individuals."

Lord Hardwicke therefore affirms the principle ; but asserts, that it was ill applied in the construction of that will. De Costa v. De Pas came on in 1754. The Report of that case is not very accurate ; attending to the law of the country with regard to superstitious uses. Lord Hardwicke says, " I held the donation in this case to be a charitable use ; and that it was unlawful and void ; that [ 77] the power of appointing and directing, to what charitable use it should be applied, was in the *Crown ; and I recommended to the Attorney General to apply to the King for his Sign Manual, to direct, to what charitable use it should be applied."

The ground therefore does not connect itself with that dictum in Ambler as to a superstitious use. Lord Hardwicke held it void ; but that it was given to a charitable use ; and being so given, though to one unlawful and void, the Crown had the right ; which must be upon this principle ; that the testator's intention of charity was the principal intention ; that he meant at all events some charity ; that his unlawful purpose was a mode of disappointing it ; and the mode therefore was out of the question ; and the intention should be carried into effect by another mode. These cases do not appear necessarily to trench upon some of the latter authorities in this Court ; which however I admit are not very reconcilable with some others ; particularly the Attorney General v. Bowyer ; and Lord Chief Justice Wilmot goes very fully into the doctrine in his advice to Lord Camden. But these cases do not necessarily trench upon the later authorities. I allude to the case of Wheatley Church (1), and some of the cases before Mr. Justice Buller and Lord Alvanley ; where the Cy Pres doctrine is said to have been formerly carried to a monstrous length, in later cases much restrained ; for in those cases the charity was given to a lawful, not an unlawful, use : but from circumstances it could not be applied ; and it was held, that being a charitable intention, and lawful, if you could not apply it to that, you should not to another lawful use, inferring a general intention of charity. I do not go through all the cases, viz. Baylis v. The Attorney General (1), or the case (2) where the gift * was to such Lying-in-Hospital as the executor should [* 78] appoint ; and in the former a blank, left for the name of the person, according to whose will the 200*l.* was given to Bread Street Ward, was not filled up ; and in the latter the executor to appoint the Lying-in-Hospital was not named ; or, where several particular charities are named ; and the distribution is given to a person, who dies before the testator ; for they are not applicable to a case, where it is given by the general term "charity." Those cases are decided upon principles, which both Lord Thurlow and Mr. Mansfield in the argument of White v. White state very fully to have gone upon this ; and, considering the principle, those decisions have not gone far in disappointing the next of kin ; only holding, that the testator having expressly said, he meant to give to Bread Street Ward, to some Lying-in-Hospital, or to some of the particular charities expressly named, the selection of the objects in some cases, in others the mode, being left to individuals, the testator had gone a length beyond the testators in cases of the former class ; not having left it to that person to say, what charity ; but having decided that himself ; leaving him only the selection of some objects by the determination of the mode, by which some individuals selected by him should take. In White v. White Mr. Mansfield says, that the obliteration of the name shall not defeat the intent, so as to prevent the money from going to some one or all the Lying-in-Hospitals : it is impossible it should go, as it was left ; but under all the cases the Court will stand in the executor's place ; and all the rules show great latitude and liberality of construction, &c. ; and Lord Chief Justice Wilmot doubts extremely, whether the Court ever should have gone the length it has : but says, the Court is now bound by precedent. Lord Thurlow in his judgment, says, it has been argued, that the Court has great extent of jurisdiction in making * legacies certain, which were before uncertain. [* 79]

(1) The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Oxford. See Corbyn v. French, ante, vol. iv. 418.

That observation is confined to these charitable legacies.

Then referring to the Attorney General v. Syderfin he does not take notice of the circumstance, that though there had been an appointment, it might have been revoked ; and the non-existence of it was prima facie evidence of that fact, that it was revoked. There was nothing more particular in the charity in White v. White, than that it was to be to some Lying-in-Hospital. The Attorney General v. Hickman (3) is referred to by Lord Thurlow ; which case is held very high authority by Lord Chief Justice Wilmot in The Attorney General v. Bowyer. I doubt very much, whether the decree in

(1) 2 Atk. 239.

(2) White v. White, 1 Bro. C. C. 12.

(3) 2 Eq. Ca. Ab, 193.

Wheeler v. Sheer (1) was made upon the principle stated by Lord Thurlow. If it was determined upon that ground, that referring to a future codicil the testator had not by his will determined, that he had as yet any charitable purpose, it is directly against some of the passages in Freeman, which I have stated. That doubt I express upon this ground; that there were two codicils; and in the latter the testator does not repeat, that he gave to such charitable uses, but for the uses, trusts, and purposes, generally. That latter codicil therefore seems in this respect something like a revocation of the will, as to the charitable purpose being dropt by the codicil, and the general use and purpose only mentioned; and that reduces the case precisely to what it would have been, if by the will only general uses, intents, and purposes, had been mentioned, and not charitable purposes. The Court does not go upon that ground, that Lord Thurlow intimates, that they would lay hold of the testator's reference to a future act, as showing, that his intention for charity was not even inchoate at the date of the will; and therefore determined in favor of the next of kin.

[* 80] * The Attorney General v. Hickman (2) is very strong; and forms the foundation of a great deal of what Lord Chief Justice Wilmot says. As that case is reported in Equity Cases Abridged, and The Attorney General v. Doyley (3), as there reported, are agreeable to the Register's Book. In the former it is given in a method the testator will not prescribe; but leaving it to another person, requiring him to take the advice of two other persons. I take it, this case goes a very considerable length, authorized by preceding determinations for charity, as particularly favored; for what any one was to take, what charity, and by what mode, all this is left totally uncertain by the testator; and he had taken no means to ascertain it, but what had altogether failed by the death of all those persons; and yet the Court said, they would intrust themselves with the discretion; which was left personally to others; upon the ground, that charity was the essence and substance; and the mode only a shadow. The distinction is very nice between the words used in that case, and a gift to such charities as A. B. and C. should appoint; if you do not hold, that in the latter instance the same doctrine applies: this being clear, that the generality of the term "charity," is no objection to a legacy to charity; and therefore there is no ground to say, though the discretion fails in the one case, it shall not in the other; and all the cases show, that charity in general is sufficient. By another account of this case from a manuscript note, this is represented as falling from Lord King:

"The substance of the charity remains, notwithstanding the death of the trustees before the testator; and though at law it is a lapsed legacy, yet in equity it is subsisting; and here is a sufficient certainty of the *testator's intention to revive it.

(1) Mo. 288, 301.

(2) 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 193.

(3) 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 194; 4 Vin. 485.

The intention therefore of the party is sufficiently manifested, that this charity should continue within 43 Eliz. c. 4." (a).

This case was followed by the Attorney General v. Doyley; in which the Court said, they would cut the difficulty by a sort of technical rule, that equality is equity; and they divided the subject into two moieties; giving one moiety to the relations, and the other to such charitable uses as the Court itself should appoint. These cases are pretty fully recognized in Lord Chief Justice Wilmot's judgment; which recognizes the doctrine of the Court; that it sees a general intention for charity in these cases (1). It is very difficult, I think, seeing that intention to build a Jewish Synagogue, to discover an intention to build a Foundling Hospital, rather than that the money should not be applied: but the Court has said so always.

He states De Costa v. De Pas; distinguishing that, as it was a charitable bequest in the intention of the testator (and I repeat, that I should not have discovered that), though of such a nature as not to be permitted; that it was not a superstitious use given to the Crown for its own use; which corrects that dictum in Ambler. Lord Chief Justice Wilmot follows the former cases. He does not say, what would become of the fund, if the purpose is legal, but it cannot be applied to that purpose: but he says, if the purpose is unlawful, these cases authorize the Court to say, it should be applied to some other charitable purpose; and then it devolves upon the Crown, as Parens Patriæ. I do not state the case of Wheatley Church, and some of Lord Alvanley's later cases, adopting that opinion of Lord Kenyon, that if there is a legal purpose, * which [* 82] from circumstances cannot be executed, this Court will not carry it into execution Cy pres by directing it to any other purpose. Mr. Justice Buller also held the same doctrine; and that applies to this sort of case; that, where it would be a good personal gift to persons in an hospital, &c. but cannot on account of the Statute of Mortmain or otherwise take place; if it cannot be applied in the mode directed, it must fail altogether. All the cases prove, that, where the substantial intention is charity, though the mode, by which it is to be executed, fails by accident or other circumstances, the Court will find some means of effectuating that general intention.

In this case it is not to be argued merely upon Vaston's death. I agree with Lord Thurlow, that makes no difference; for the question is, what the testatrix must be taken to have meant, if she had (a) The statute 43 Eliz. ch. 4, relating to charitable gifts and uses, forms, in principle and substance, a part of the law of Massachusetts. Going v. Emery, 16 Pick. 107; Bartlet v. King, 12 Mass. 537. See Burbank v. Whitney, 24 Pick. 146; Mye v. Bartlet, 4 Metcalf, 376; Sanderson v. White, 18 Pick. 328.

So of North Carolina and Kentucky. Griffin v. Graham, 1 Hawk. 96; Gass v. Wilhite, 2 Dana, 170.

This statute is not in force in Maryland, nor in Virginia. Dashiel v. Attorney General, 5 Harr. & J. 392; Gallego v. Attorney General, 3 Leigh, 450; Baptist Association v. Hart, 4 Wheat. 1; 3 Peters, 48.

(1) The Lord Chancellor read several passages from Lord Chief Justice Wilmot's argument: which has been since printed in his Reports.

died immediately after the will was executed ; and it is infinitely difficult to contend, that the Court can construe it otherwise, because he died in her life, than if he had outlived her. It is said, if he had, he would have had all his life to select the charities. I doubt that extremely. It is assuming the question. The Court at least would call upon him to act. The Attorney General v. Glegg (1) proves that. The question would arise exactly in the same way ; for if he had survived her, and had addressed himself to the execution of the trust, and had died suddenly, while about it, and before he had completed it, the mode would have failed precisely as by his death before her ; for unless the means, by which it is to be executed, were effectuated by his act, the circumstance of his dying before her can make no difference as to the question, whether the Court will supply other means. The question results upon the whole, did [*83] she intend he should be a trustee for charity ? * If these authorities are to stand, though I had for ten years a strong persuasion upon this will, that she meant, the objects should be selected by him only, I must check such conjectures by attention to the rules, upon which the court acts with regard to charities ; and I am reluctantly driven to say, there is no substantial difference between these words, in which she has bequeathed to Vaston, to dispose in such charities as he shall think proper ; and the words, in which it was expressed in the Attorney General v. Hickman. Those cases call upon me to say, the general intention of this testatrix, who seems to have been saturated and satiated with the idea of charity, and yet not to have had mind enough herself to determine upon the particular objects, was to devote her property to charity, and according to these precedents Vaston was only the means and instrument, by which that general intention was to be executed ; and therefore this Court will carry that general intention into effect.

The next question, by what means that is to be done, is a most difficult question ; for it being established, that, where money is given to charity generally and indefinitely, without trustees or objects selected, the King, as Parens Patriæ, is the constitutional trustee, it is very difficult to raise a solid distinction between an original gift absolutely indefinite and without qualification, and a case, in which by matter ex post facto, the gift stands before the Court in consequence of that accident, as if it had been originally given indefinitely, without any means for carrying it into execution prescribed. All I can say upon it is, I do not know, what doctrine could be laid down, that would not be met by some authority upon this point ; whether the proposition is, that the Crown is to dispose of it, or the Master by a scheme.

In Cook v. Duckenfield (2) it appears by the Register's [*84] * Book to have been executed by a scheme before the Master. There the means prescribed by the testator could not be followed ; and the Court took upon itself to execute it by a scheme before the Master: not as represented in the Report of the Attorney General v. Herrick, by Sign Manual. The Attorney General v. Herrick (1) was a case of an estate vested in trustees. They were to sell, receive the money, and apply it to some particular purposes, and then to charitable uses. In the natural construction you would say, they were to determine, what charitable uses, under the ordinary control of this Court. Cook v. Duckenfield is there referred to; and another case in 1743 is there stated as from Lord Hardwicke's notes; that there being no particular charity, his Majesty may dispose of the 400*l.* to such charity as he shall think fit. I cannot collect, what that case was: nor can I find the passage referred to in Lord Hardwicke's notes.

(1) 1 Atk. 356; Amb. 584.

(2) 2 Atk. 562, 567; Reg. Book, A. 1743, 283.

The case of De Costa v. De Pas is by no means given in the words of Lord Hardwicke's notes, as it there purports to be. The Attorney General v. Peacock is mentioned; which, I have no doubt from the date, was the case upon Frier's will. It was difficult to say there, the trustees were to determine, what poor people were to take: recollecting, what the law did upon uses so expressed, you cannot well call them trustees for the poor. The Lord Chancellor concluded that he would apply to his Majesty; as Lord Nottingham did in the case of the Attorney General v. Peacock. The difficulty upon this case is, that it seems a devise to trustees still existing; and that the meaning was, that the distribution should be by them, if they thought proper: but Lord Apsley thought otherwise; and that property was disposed of, as I have stated. In the other cases, where all the trustees are dead, in others, where some of them are dead, the * discretion being wholly or partly gone, or, [* 85] where the trustees surviving would not act, or where some would and others would not; yet the Court in a great number, if not in all, those instances, did by a scheme distribute the fund. The run therefore of the cases with the exception of the last, that have occurred, rather import, that, where originally a trust is created for the distribution of a charity, and the trust is not carried into execution, because it was originally a trust, and not in a strict sense a general, indefinite, gift to charity, general and undefined, or to the poor in general, the Court would execute it by a scheme; and in the case I put of Vaston's surviving the testatrix, and partly executing, and dying, before he had completed the execution, the question would come to this, whether the Court should supply the defect; or, on the other hand, whether the Court would carry on that, which it might have taken into its own hands, if a bill had been filed against Vaston; and he had begun to execute in consequence; and had not lived to finish it: the question there would have arisen, whether the Court should take it upon itself, as it would, controlling his discretion, if he had lived; and whether the Court might not have gone on itself to select the objects. Lord Thurlow seems to have thought, there was a ground for distinguishing it. There is a singular ex-the petition suggested as one ground, upon which the proof was rejected, that the Commissioners supposed, that sum was advanced by way of loan; or that the bankrupt was at the time in insolvent circumstances; and it was a fraud upon his creditors: the petition insisting on the contrary, that this advancement was intended as a gift to the petitioner by way of advancement in life; and the petitioner joined in a bond for securing part of the money, which was borrowed, and that bond is unpaid; and that the bankrupt was solvent at the time.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Cooke, for the Assignees, insisted, [* 89] that this was within the statute of James I. (1); * being a voluntary gift, not upon the marriage of a child; and mentioned Fryer v. Flood (2).

Mr. Johnson in support of the petition said, it would be very hard to consider such a gift as within the statute. In that way it would extend to any gift to a son at school or college, to pay his debts, &c.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The case of Fryer v. Flood came within the words “cause to be procured;” but this is a mere gift of money and not within the act, unless brought within it by some procurement, &c. (3).

Refer it back to the Commissioners; with a direction, if they disallow this claim, to state the ground specially.

The fifth section of the statute of 1 Jam. I. c. 15, upon the right construction of which the merits of the present petition turned, is now incorporated (but with some variations) into the statute of 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, of which it forms the 73d section. It is thereby enacted, that if any man, who subsequently becomes a bankrupt, and who was at the time insolvent, shall (except upon the marriage of some of his children, or for some valuable consideration) have conveyed, assigned, or transferred, to any of his children, or to any other person, any hereditaments, offices, fees, annuities, leases, goods, or chattels; or have delivered or made over any bills, bonds, notes, or other securities; or have transferred his debts to any other person, or into any other person's name; the commissioners shall have power to sell and dispose of the same, for the benefit of the creditors under the commissions. It will be observed, that neither the recent statute, nor the statute of James, contains the words “money,” in the enumeration of undue transfers. In consequence of this omission, Lord Eldon, in the principal case, thought a mere gift of money was not within the purview of the act; and to this opinion his lordship adhered in a much later case. Ex parte Smith, 1 Rose, 210. The same view of the question was taken by Lord Ellenborough, C. J. in Kensington v. Chantler, 2 Mau. & Sel. 38. This distinction has been intimated; where a man, who afterwards becomes a bankrupt, has advanced money to his son, in such a shape, or which has been applied to such purposes, that an existing lien in respect of that specific money so advanced, can be made out, there the bargain and sale under the commission will transfer that lien to the assignees; but where the money has been advanced and disposed of in such a way as to raise no lien, then it cannot be reclaimed by the assignees. Fryer v. Flood, 1 Brown, 161.

(1) Stat. 1 Jam. 1, c. 15, s. 5.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 160.

(3) Kensington v. Chantler, 2 Mau. & Sel. 36.

GIBSON v. BOTT.

[1802, MAY 18, 19.]

GENERAL residuary bequest, including a leasehold farm, with the stock, to be converted into money as soon as conveniently may be, upon trust to pay the interest, &c. for life, and as to the capital for the children. The stock being considerably increased between the death in April and the sale at Michaelmas, it was decreed, that the conversion was in a reasonable time; and the party entitled for life should have interest from the conversion (a); and as to premises, that from a defect of title could not be sold, that, being for the interest of all, that they should not be sold, a value should be set upon them, to carry interest at 4 per cent. from the death.

Distinction between an annuity and a legacy; the former commences from the death; and the first payment is due at the end of the year (b): a legacy generally does not begin to carry interest till the end of the year (c), [p. 96.]

In all cases of legacy interest only from the end of a year from the death; unless otherwise directed; the old rule, depending upon the fund, as productive or barren, being exploded, [p. 97.]

Whether a sum of money directed to be placed out to produce an annuity is to be considered as legacy or annuity with reference to the time of payment, quære (d), [p. 97.]

THOMAS DAWSON, by his will, dated the 7th of January 1799, after some legacies gave and bequeathed all the rest, residue and remain-

(a) See also Dimes v. Scott, 4 Russ. 195; Douglas v. Congreve, 1 Keen, 410; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 997, 998; Tripp v. Frazier, 4 Har. & John. 446.

Where the testator directed a sale with all convenient speed after his death, and directed the produce to be invested and the dividends to be paid to one for life, and the land remained unsold, Sir J. Leach, M. R. considered twelve months as a reasonable time within which the estates ought to have been sold and the produce invested, and that the tenant for life was entitled to the rents of the unsold estate from that time. Vickers v. Scott, 3 Mylne & K. 500.

Where the interest or income of the testator's residuary estate is bequeathed to a legatee for life, and no time is prescribed in the will for the commencement of such interest, or the enjoyment of the use or income of such residue, the legatee for life is entitled to the interest or income of the clear residue, as afterwards ascertained, to be computed from the death of the testator. Williamson v. Williamson, 6 Paige, 298. See Douglas v. Congreve, 1 Keen, 410; Chesnut v. Strong, 1 Hill, Ch. 123.

(b) See as to this, Mr. Hovenden's note (2), at the end of this case; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 996, 997; Barnes v. Rowley, ante, 3 V. 10, note (a).

The bequest of an annuity is payable annually, from the death of the testator, and the annuitant is entitled to interest on the arrears, if not paid when due. Stephenson v. Axon, 1 Bail. Eq. 274.

(c) Crickett v. Dolby, ante, 3 V. 10, and a full collection of cases in note (a); Swearingham v. Stull, 4 Har. & M'Hen. 38; Cogdell v. Cogdell, 3 Desaus. 387; Gillon v. Turnbull, 1 M'Cord, Ch. 148.

Where a legacy is given to a natural child, with directions to apply the interest for his maintenance, the interest is payable from the death of the testator. Dowling v. Tyrell, 2 Russ. & My. 343.

Interest was allowed from the death of the testator upon legacies payable at a future period to infant grand-nephews, upon the intention of the testator, that they should be maintained out of the property bequeathed to them. Leslie v. Leslie, Lloyd v. Goold, Temp. Sug. 1. See Birdsell v. Hewlett, 1 Paige, 32; Glen v. Fisher, 6 Johns. Ch. 33; Lupton v. Lupton, 2 Johns. Ch. 614.

(d) See 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 996-998; and note (a), above.

der, of his goods, chattels, moneys, securities for money in the public stocks or funds, or in private hands, notes, bonds, bills, leasehold and other estates, and all other his effects whatsoever and whereso-

[* 90] ever, that he should be possessed of, interested in, and entitled unto, at the time of his *decease, and not hereinbefore otherwise disposed of (subject nevertheless to the payment of such just debts as he might owe at his decease and the several legacies aforesaid) to his executors, their executors, &c.; upon trust that they shall and do, as soon as conveniently may be after his decease, make sale and absolutely dispose of and convert into ready money all such parts thereof as shall not consist of money or of moneys already invested by him in the public funds; and upon farther trust, that they shall place out and invest all such sum and sums of money as shall arise by such sale and conversion into money as aforesaid; and also all such parts of the said residue of his estate and effects as shall consist of ready money, or be hereafter got in and received, in the public funds, or upon real or Government securities, at interest, in his or their own name or names, as to his said executors or trustees shall seem meet; and he directed, that they should stand possessed of as well the moneys by him already invested, as aforesaid, as the moneys so to be invested, and the interest and dividends, and the funds and securities, wherein the same shall be so invested, upon trust as to one equal moiety of the said funds or securities, already, and also upon which such moneys, as aforesaid, shall be invested or placed out, and the interest, dividends, and proceeds, which shall arise, or become due and payable, for or in respect of the same, to pay, &c. the clear yearly interest, dividends, and proceeds, to his daughter Jenny Davies and her assigns for her life; and from and after her decease that they shall pay, apply, and dispose of, the said moiety of all the said stocks and securities, &c. for the use and benefit of all and every the child and children of Jenny Davies, who are or shall attain twenty-one, equally, if more than one.

[* 91] *The testator made a similar disposition of the other moiety of the funds in favor of his other daughter Lætitia Gibson and her children; and directed, that if his said daughters or either of them should die without leaving any child, who should attain twenty-one, the trustees should stand possessed of the said moiety or share of such of his said daughters as should so die in the said moneys, stocks, funds, securities, and premises, upon the same trusts, &c. for the benefit of his surviving daughter and her issue as were expressed concerning her original moiety in the said moneys, stocks, fund, securities, and premises aforesaid.

The testator died on the 14th of April, 1799. Part of his personal estate consisted of a considerable leasehold estate, of 450 acres, in Essex, held for a term of 39 years, at a rent of 315*l.* a-year: part of which, about 210 acres, were let by the testator at annual rents, amounting to 407*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*; and the remainder, about 240 acres, he held in hand. Upon that part of the farm, which he occupied, there was a considerable live stock. Edward Gibson, one of the executors, managed the farm from the death of the testator till Michaelmas following; when the whole farm was sold by the executors with all the live and dead stock and crops: and the money produced by the sale was invested in the funds. Between the testator's death and the sale a considerable profit was produced, not only in respect of the crops, but by the increase of calves, lambs, and pigs, and the improved state of the cattle, which at the death of the testator were in bad condition from the effect of the preceding winter. Some other leasehold estates, of which the testator was possessed, could not be sold on account of defects in the title. The clear residue was very considerable.

The bill was filed by Gibson and his wife for an account of the personal estate, as it stood at the death * of the testator; and praying that a value may be set on the farming-stock, cattle, growing crops, and leasehold estates, as they were on the 14th of April 1799; that the clear residue on that day may be ascertained; an account of the produce and profits arising from the farm, and the increase of cattle and rent of the leasehold estates, from that time till the sale; that the clear residue of the personal estate, as it stood at the death of the testator, may be invested in the 3 per cent. Bank Annuities, &c.; and that what shall appear to have arisen from the produce and profits of the said farm and increase of cattle and by the rents received from the 14th of April 1799 may be declared to belong, and be paid, to Jenny Davies and to the Plaintiff Edward Gibson, in right of his wife, in equal moieties; or that a compensation may be made for the delay of the sale. [* 92]

The other executors by their answer stated, that the sale was postponed to Michaelmas, as the most convenient time, and most for the benefit of the parties interested, with the concurrence of the Plaintiff.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Cooke, for the Plaintiffs.—The question is, whether the persons entitled for life are to receive the whole profit arisen between the period of the testator's death and the sale, which is considerable, though the delay was short, as so much interest or profit: or, if not entitled to the whole, what proportion they are to have; how much is to be considered increase of capital and how much interest. It cannot possibly be said, they are not entitled to any part. The will directs the sale to take place as soon as conveniently may be; and the daughters are to receive the whole interest, dividends, and proceeds. The sale could not take place the very day after the death. It cannot be argued, that the daughters are not to receive any profit, till the whole is invested in the funds, and dividends are received; for then the executors might delay the formation of that fund intended for maintenance. The most rational construction is, that the persons entitled for life should receive the whole of that increase as interest and profit; as they would, if the property consisted of debts, or any other subject yielding annual profit. If the amount of the profit produced makes a difference, it will create great uncertainty. The testator meant a provision for his two daughters, to commence at his death; are they to be without any provision so long as it is thought advantageous to defer the sale? Great part of this property he well knew was more productive, than if the value of it was laid out at interest. The person entitled for life is to have the produce of the thing given, whether arising as interest or in any other shape: whether, for instance, dividend or interest of a mortgage: whatever is the actual produce. Another view of the case, answering in some degree the objection, that a leasehold estate is an interest wearing out, is to take the produce of the farm, for the whole year, and deducting the expense, to ascertain the clear profit, and then consider it from the death as capital, and the subsequent profit as belonging to the tenant for life. That will answer the justice of the case. In Conolly v. Lord Howe (1) Lord Rosslyn gave the tenant for life the whole; though some part of the property consisted of long and short annuities.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Wooddeson, for the Defendants, the children: Mr. Richards, for the other Executors.—That cause is now before your Lordship for a re-hearing: and Lord Alvanley has expressed his opinion against that decree. There is no instance of such an account. It was agreed on all sides, that it [* 94] would be best to stay till * Michaelmas; and no objection was made: no desire expressed for an immediate sale. The sale was therefore as soon as conveniently could be. The testator could not mean the day after his death. By what rule or measure can the Plaintiffs have any thing? What time can be said to be reasonable for disposing of all articles of this nature? Such an account would be desired in every case. The rule in Maxwell v. Wettenhall (2) as to interest upon legacies has long prevailed; and was adopted by the Statute of Distributions (3). This must happen in every instance, as, where the subject is a trade: the goods will sell to most advantage in the spring: so in every instance of a gentleman or a farmer having land in his hands: yet no case can be found: nor is there any instance of special directions for this purpose.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—There must have been cases upon this subject; and I do not recollect any special directions. With respect to the live stock it is not all clear gain. The increase of the animals is contributed at the expense of the estate, upon which they live. A man would buy a sheep or a cow upon speculation of improvement in their condition, and by their producing lambs or calves, and the expense between April and Michaelmas. The difference to be taken would be, not between the price at April and at Michaelmas, but with reference to the profit made by keeping them for that

(1) See the decision of that cause upon the rehearing, Howe v. Earl Dartmouth, post, 137; Fearns v. Young, vol. ix. 549.

(2) 2 P. Will. 26.

(3) 22 & 23 Ch. II. c. 10.

period, and the sum, that would have been given in April by a man, who looked to that profit. The question is, whether the Court must not put upon the direction to sell as soon as conveniently can be, some practical construction, that five times in ten will do justice, and five times will not, or whether there may be found some practical rule in the circumstances of each * case, [* 95] that will do justice. As in Sitwell v. Bernard (1), I must cut the difficulty. In that case the estates were subject to incumbrances. One estate was covered by a mortgage, requiring a suit: to another no title could be made. If I had picked out particular parcels, and determined, how soon each might be sold as soon as conveniently could be, I must have applied a different rule to each parcel. So, as to the money: some was in the East Indies: some was due from persons, who would pay: some from persons, who would not. But I was obliged to take some rule; which, if it could be avoided, would, I admit, be wrong; and I took the end of a year after the death. So, in the common case of debts and legacies, the same rule is applied to cases, where the debts cannot be arranged for ten years, and where there are no debts, and the property is immediately tangible in the funds. If you contend, not for a general rule, but for some rule resulting out of the particular circumstances of this case, you must go this length; that, if the cows calved and the ewes lambed between the testator's death and his funeral, the persons entitled for life must have the whole; or inform me, how I am to take the proportion for the three days that they must be upon the farm. Has the Court ever adopted in the case of a testator having a leasehold estate in his own occupation the rule suggested, ascertaining the clear profit, and making a rest at the death? Every such case is an authority to the contrary. The point is, what is advantageous, not to the sole owner of the property, but to all persons interested; and as to that regard must be had to what in such cases is practicable. The course is an account, and the tenant for life to take the interest from the end of the year. In every case it is hard, that he should lose the interest for that year. According to this there must be a special direction * in every case, [* 96] where there is leasehold property; and he would have the whole property for that year. If leasehold estate is given eo nomine to A., remainder to B., it must be enjoyed as given: but, if it is to be converted with all convenient speed, those words never require it to be sold the very next day. Where those words occur as to legacies, interest is never given till the end of the year. The Court is obliged to take a general rule; as it is impossible to make the inquiry in every particular case. Suppose, the testator directed his executor to convert the property with all convenient speed, to pay certain legacies; and then gave the interest of the residue for life; remainder over: the legatees could make no complaint till the end of a year; and yet their claim would be paramount that of the first year after the testator's decease, was repeated by Lord Eldon, in Fearne v. Young, 9 Ves. 553, as his own opinion, and that of Baron Thompson; though, formerly, some of the masters in chancery thought differently. In the recent case of Houghton v. Franklyn, 1 Sim. & Stu. 392, Sir John Leach, V. C. declared, that as a will speaks at the death of a testator, it must be intended that the payment of an annual sum, given by it, is to commence from that period, unless there be some circumstances or expressions in the will to control that intention. And, of course, when the first payment of an annuity is directed to be made on the first quarter-day after the testator's death, that direction will be conclusive; and there will be no ground for contending, that, because the annuity is given out of a residue, the annuitant can make no claim until such residue is ascertained, or until the end of a year after the testator's death. Storer v. Prestage, 3 Mad. 168. It may be observed, that, although a person to whom a mere annuity is given by will is no more than a tenant for life of part of the capital, (Fearne v. Young, 9 Ves. 553), yet, where a certain sum is bequeathed, to be laid out in an annuity for the life of the legatee, the capital of the sum so bequeathed vests in the legatee, who may elect to take the money, without having it laid out in an annuity; see, ante, the note to Barnes v. Rowley, 3 V. 305.

(1) Ante, vol. vi. 520; Hudcheon v. Mannington, i. 366, and the note, 367.

3. Though a testator may have directed the parties whom he has named as executors in trust to sell, to complete the sale "at such time, and in such manner, as they shall think fit," these words of large discretion will be controlled by the Court of Chancery, which will hold the sale and conversion of the property to have been made at the time when it properly ought to have been made, with reference to the rights of the several claimants; see, ante, note 6 to Hutcheon v. Mannington, 1 V. 366. But where a testator has directed his executors to invest a certain sum in land upon trust, "as soon as they shall think proper;" or to raise and pay a legacy "as soon as they find it convenient;" although they may, of course, make such investment or payment immediately, yet, the Court having adopted a year as the general rule of convenience, the executors cannot be compelled to raise the money before the expiration of that period. Benson v. Maude, 6 Mad. 15; Elwin v. Elwin, 8 Ves. 554.

PIGOTT v. WALLER.

[ROLLS.—1802, MARCH 3, 4, 8; MAY 20.]

A CODICIL, with three witnesses, though relating only to personal estate, and expressing no intention as to re-publication of the will, is a re-publication; and therefore, the will containing a general devise, lands purchased in the interval pass (a).

Estates comprised in an equitable Recovery, the words being sufficiently comprehensive, notwithstanding an inference against the possession of the party and his intention to include them from acts done under a misconception of his title, [p. 99.]

ROBERT PIGOTT, being seised in fee among other real estates of two undivided third parts of the manor and advowson of Chester-

(a) A codicil duly executed will operate as a republication of the will to which it refers, whether the codicil be or be not annexed to the will, or be or be not expressly confirmatory of it; for every codicil is, in construction of law, part of a man's will, whether it be described in such codicil or not. 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 114, 115, 116, and cases cited in the notes; Utterton v. Robins, 1 Adol. & Ellis, 423; Miles v. Bayden, 3 Pick. 216; Brownell v. De Wolf, 3 Mason, 486; Haven v. Foster, 14 Pick. 543. See Richardson v. Richardson, C. W. D. Eq. 184.

ton, in the county of Huntingdon, and being also seized of other real estates at Chesterton, by his will, dated the 4th of December, 1724, and duly executed to pass real estate, after directing, that his personal estate, except such part as was particularly given, should be applied towards payment of his debts, legacies, &c. and giving the residue to his eldest son, as touching and concerning his real estate, gave and devised the same, as follows: all those his manors, messuages, lands, tenements, advowsons, tithes, and hereditaments, whatsoever, with their appurtenances, in the county of Salop, not

A codicil republishing a will, makes the will speak as from the date of the codicil for the purpose of passing after-purchased lands; but not for the purpose of reviving a legacy, revoked, deemed, or satisfied. Powys v. Mansfield, 3 Mylne & Craig, 359.

A codicil properly attested may be a republication of a will so as to give effect to a devise, otherwise void on account of the devisee being a witness to the original will. Moores v. White, 6 Johns. Ch. 375. See Ulerton v. Robins, 1 Adol. & El. 423.

A codicil referring inaccurately to a will may republish it. See Jansen v. Jansen, cited by Sir John Nicholl, in Rogers v. Pettis, 1 Addams, 38; St. Helens v. Lady Exeter, 3 Phillim. 461, in note to Fawcett v. Jones. A codicil will refer to the last in date of several wills, if no express date is mentioned. Crosbie v. MacDoual, 4 Ves. 615.

If, however, it appears on the face of the codicil, that it was not the intention of the testator to republish, the ordinary presumption arising from the existence of the codicil will be rebutted. Strathmore v. Bowes, 7 Term R. 482; S. C. Nom; Bowes v. Bowes, 2 Bos. & Pull. 500. See also Hughes v. Turner, 3 Mylne & Keen, 666; Smith v. Dearman, 3 Young & Jer. 278; Parker v. Biscoe, 8 Taunt. 699; Kendall v. Kendall, 5 Munf. 272.

Where a codicil, in its dispositive part, is applicable solely and expressly to the property previously devised by the will, it has not the effect of republishing the will, so as to carry after-purchased property, notwithstanding a more general intent indicated in its recital. Monypenny v. Bristow, 2 Russ. & My. 117. See Haven v. Foster, 14 Pick. 541.

For other cases of codicils republishing wills so as to pass estates acquired after the dates of the wills, see Hughes v. Turner, 3 Mylne & Keen, 666; Smith v. Dearman, 3 Young & Jer. 278; Bowes v. Bowes, 2 Bos. & Pull. 500.

To give a codicil the effect to republish a will so as to pass estates acquired between the date of the will and the date of the codicil, the words of the will must be of such a character, as, if used at the date of republication, would include the estate in controversy. If the language of the original will be such as, if used at the date of the republication, it would not include the after-purchased estate in its terms or description; or, if the act of republication be accompanied with other provisions, indicating that it was the intent of the testator to limit the operation of the will, as republished, to the same estate, which was given, and which would legally pass by the original will; then, notwithstanding such republication, the devise will not include the after-purchased estate, because although the power there exists to devise, yet the intent is wanting; and as both do not concur, the after-purchased estate does not pass. Haven v. Foster, 14 Pick. 541.

The republication of a will, to be effectual to pass lands acquired subsequent to the will, must be attended with all the legal formalities. Jackson v. Potter, 9 John. 312; Jackson v. Holloway, 7 Johns. 394.

See farther, upon this subject of implied republication of a will by the execution of a codicil, Dunlap v. Dunlap, 4 Deseus. 305, 321; Ram on Wills, ch. 17, p. 263-266; 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 113, et seq.; Powell v. Cleaver, 2 Bro. C. C. 513; Hill v. Chapman, ante, 1 V. 405; Guest v. Willasey, 2 Bingh. 429; S. C. 3 Bingh. 614; In the goods of Crosley, 2 Hagg. 80; Rogers v. Pettis, 1 Addams, 41; Williams v. Goodtitle, 10 Barn. & Cress. 895; 1 Roberts on Wills, 409, note; Barnes v. Crowe, ante, 1 V. 486, note (b); 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 510; Hulme v. Heygate, 1 Meriv. 285; Rowley v. Eylon, 2 Meriv. 126.

settled on his eldest son, and also all his manors, messuages, &c. in the county of Warwick, and also all his lands in Little Preston or elsewhere in the county of Northampton, and all his several manors and townships of Chesterton, Haddon, and other places mentioned, in the county of Huntingdon and Cambridge, and all his messuages, lands, tenements, rents, tithes, *advowsons, and hereditaments, whatsoever and wheresoever he had power to give and devise by that his will, he gave and devised the same to trustees and their heirs; and declared the trusts, first, in case his personal estate shall be deficient to pay his debts, legacies, &c. to raise such sums as shall be necessary to pay what shall not be paid twelve months after his decease; and that the rest, residue, and remainder, of his said real estate before given in trust, as aforesaid, shall be and remain in the trustees and their heirs for the benefit and advantage of his eldest son Robert Pigott for his life; and from and after his decease in trust for the first and every other son of the said Robert Pigott successively in tail male, remainder to the testator's right heirs for ever. He gave to his two daughters Frances and Honor the sum of 5000*l.* a-piece, to be paid at their respective ages of eighteen, or marriage.

The testator made the following codicil, also duly executed to pass real estate.

"Whereas in the year 1724 I made my last will; and did then give to my two daughters Frances and Honor 5000*l.* to each after my decease; and whereas Honor is married to John Harvey, Esquire, and I have given to her said husband 6000*l.* I do declare that to be her fortune, and that she is not to have any more than 100*l.* to buy her mourning. And whereas I left in my will 5000*l.* to my daughter Frances, I do give her 1000*l.* more. I do desire this to be observed as a codicil to my will. Dated at Chetwind, January 3d, 1733. I do also order, that my daughter Frances shall have 200*l.* paid her by my eldest son, when she is married, and 100*l.* at my decease."

[* 100] By indentures of lease and release, dated the *21st and 22d of February, 1736, the remaining third of the manor of Chesterton was conveyed to the testator and his heirs. The testator after that purchase made another codicil, also duly executed to pass real estate, as follows:

"A codicil made and published by me Robert Pigott, of Chetwind, in the county of Salop, Esquire, the 26th day of June, in the year of our Lord 1742, and to be annexed to my last will and testament, and made part thereof to all intents and purposes. Whereas I the said Robert Pigott have by my said will (amongst other things) given and devised to my daughter Frances Pigott, the sum of 5000*l.* and by a codicil, which was made some time since my will, and annexed thereto, I have also given and devised to my said daughter Frances, the farther sum of 1000*l.*, and I have since the execution of my said will and codicil provided for my said daughter Frances, and given or secured to her for her use and benefit considerably more than the legacies devised to her by my said will and codicil, therefore my will is, that the legacies of 5000*l.* and 1000*l.*, devised to my said daughter Frances by my said will and codicil, shall not be raised or paid to her; and I do by this my codicil make void all and every devise whatsoever by my said will and codicil given, devised and bequeathed, unto my said daughter Frances. And I do hereby order and declare, that my will is, that only the sum of 100*l.* shall be paid to my said daughter Frances by my executrix, instead of the sum of 5000*l.* and 1000*l.*, devised to her by my said will and codicil."

The testator died in February, 1746. Robert Pigott, the son, died upon the 9th of May, 1770, leaving Robert Pigott, his eldest son, William Pigott, his second son, and six other children.

By indentures of lease and release, dated the 15th and * 16th of June, 1770, Robert Pigott, the grandson, conveyed all those the manors or lordships, or reputed manors or lordships of Chesterton and Haddon, with the appurtenances in the said county of Huntingdon, and all manner of tithes to them or either of them belonging or appertaining, and also all other lands, tenements and hereditaments, in Chesterton aforesaid, or elsewhere in the county of Huntingdon, whereof the said Robert Pigott or any person or persons in trust for him, had any estate or freehold or inheritance in any manner however, to make a tenant to the Præcipe for suffering a recovery to the use of Robert Pigott in fee; which recovery was accordingly suffered in Trinity Term, 10 Geo. III.

By indentures, dated the 1st of January, 1772, reciting, that the premises, comprised in the indentures of February 1736, had descended to Robert Pigott, the son, in fee simple upon the death of his father, the testator, and that he had devised the same, Robert Pigott, the grandson, in order that the expenses of proving the will of his father in Chancery might be avoided, ratified and confirmed the will of his father; and released to the trustees in that will all the said premises so devised.

By indentures of lease and release, dated the 4th and 5th of March, 1772, the heir of the surviving trustee under the will of Robert Pigott, the grandfather, conveyed the legal estate to Robert Pigott, the grandson, his heirs and assigns.

By other indentures of lease and release, dated the 13th and 14th of March, 1772, reciting the indenture of release of the 1st of January, 1772, in consideration of 16,500*l.* the devisees in trust of Robert Pigott the son, conveyed to * Robert Pigott [* 102] the grandson, and his heirs, all the premises comprised in the indentures of February 1736.

By indentures, dated the 16th March, 1772, for securing 16,030*l.*, Robert Pigott, the grandson, demised to trustees for his sisters Honor Pigott, and Ann Pigott, two of the legatees, who had joined in the sale under the will of his father, the said manor of Chesterton and premises, comprising all the estates, which passed by the indentures of February 1736, except the third of the advowson of Chesterton, for 1000 years, subject to redemption.

By indentures, dated the 4th of September, 1779, Robert Pigott, in consideration of 50,500*l.*, conveyed among other estates all the premises comprised in the indentures of February 1736, in trust for William Waller, his heirs and assigns, subject to the mortgage.

Robert Pigott, the grandson, died on the 28th of June, 1794, without issue.

The bill was filed by William Pigott, the second grandson of the testator, claiming as equitable tenant in tail the premises comprised in the indentures of February 1736; upon the ground, that the second codicil amounted to a republication of the will, and that the recovery did not comprise, and was not intended to comprise, those premises; that the deed, creating the tenant to the Præcipe, did not in description comprise or extend to those premises; and, with reference to the general terms, that Robert Pigott was not then in possession of the said premises, nor could affect them by a recovery; nor had any such intention; and charging, that Robert Pigott, the father, mistakenly supposing, that the fee simple of the said [* 103] premises had upon the death of the testator become * vested in him, the eldest son and heir at law of the testator, devised them upon the trusts of his will; and immediately upon his death the trustees or the parties beneficially interested under the trusts of his will entered into possession or receipt of the rents of all the said demised premises; and continued in possession until March 1772; when the premises comprised in the indentures of February 1736, were sold and conveyed to Robert Pigott, the grandson.

The bill charged notice to Waller, the purchaser, of the equitable estate tail of Robert Pigott, the grandson; and the answer admitted notice of all the instruments. It was taken as a fact, that the codicil was not actually annexed to the will.

Mr. Romilly, Mr. Fonblanque, and Mr. Leach, for the Plaintiff.—The questions are; First, whether the second codicil had the effect of re-publishing the will, so as to pass the estate purchased in the interval: Secondly, if it did, whether those estates were comprised in the recovery.

It is very clear, none of the parties conceived, that the codicil had this effect. There are many cases upon this subject: but the law is perfectly settled by the last, Barnes v. Crowe (1); in which all the preceding cases are cited, and much discussed; and Lord Commissioner Eyre seems to consider it absolutely settled, that where a codicil attested by three witnesses refers to the will, it passes the whole, including lands purchased in the interval; exploding the doctrine of the necessity of actual annexation. The case of [* 104] Lady Strathmore v. Bowes (2) went * upon the particular circumstances; and therefore confirms the rule. That decision was affirmed in the House of Lords; Lord Thurlow however dissenting ; and holding it a re-publication even under those circumstances. The direction, that the codicil shall be part of the will, is equivalent to saying, they shall be one instrument, by bringing down the will to the date of the codicil, not the converse of that. This codicil adds the words "to all intents and purposes." The doctrine is not new. It is distinctly stated in Roll's Abridgment (1). The Statute of Frauds (2) merely prescribes solemnities, as to the form of execution ; not affecting the construction. The nature of a re-publication is only to express, that the instrument is the will at that time, and a devise of all the estate he has. With respect to the dictum of Lord Mansfield, in Heylin v. Heylin (3), noticed by Lawrence, J. in Lady Strathmore v. Bowes, and upon which stress has been laid in other cases, there was indication of a purpose to pass the estates in a particular place : but if it had not been confined to a particular place, but was general, then it would have done. These are exceptions founded upon the principle itself. According as the disposition by the will is limited or general, the effect of the codicil will be limited or general. Barnes v. Crowe proves a proposition much larger than is necessary for this case : viz. that the codicil is a re-publication, so as to embrace all the property acquired at the date of that codicil. The principle is very satisfactory : that it is manifest, the devisor at that day considers his will : and desires it should speak upon that day. This codicil contains express words of annexation ; upon which so much stress has been laid ; though that is now matter of surprise ; the declaration, that it is his codicil, being in effect the same * as a declaration, that it is to [* 105] be annexed to the will : a codicil being in its nature a part of the will. In the will a marked anxiety appears to dispose of all the estate he had.

(1) Ante, vol. i. 486; 4 Bro. C. C. 2; ante, Meggison v. Moore, vol. ii. 630; Crosbie v. Macdouall, iv. 610; post, De Balie v. Lord Fingal, xvi. 167; Hulme v. Heygate, 1 Mer. 285; Rowley v. Eyston, 2 Mer. 128.

(2) 7 Term Rep. B. R. 492.

Upon the second point this inconsistency arises from the defence. The party is supposed in 1770 to have suffered a recovery, and to have become seised in fee, of an estate, for which two years afterwards he gives 16,500*l.* as a purchase. Upon these instruments, notice of which is admitted, it appears, that he had not such an estate in this part of the premises as he could convey. It is necessary, that the person creating the tenant to the Præcipe should be in possession of the estate, whether legal or equitable : otherwise he cannot give it. This person was not in possession. It is also necessary, that he should intend to give it. It is not sufficient, that in the deed he uses general and comprehensive words, that would embrace even lands, of which he did not know that he was seised. There must be the intention ; which it is clear there was not in this instance ; having no conception of the time, that he had any title in these estates. The subsequent purchase amounts to demonstration, that he did not think he had suffered a recovery, and acquired the fee of them. He adopted the construction of his father by contracting for the purchase with the persons deriving under his father. There is a well drawn result of all the cases of recovery by Cestui que trust in tail by Mr. Cruise; showing, that he must be tenant in tail in possession: as equitable recoveries are to possess all the forms, as far as possible, of legal recoveries. However general the words, the question must be always as to the intention. If the exemplification of the recovery estopped the party without showing the intention, to what an extent would that go! It appears at first surprising, that the same [* 106] form of proceeding should be necessary to * destroy an equitable as a legal estate tail: the latter depending upon the recompense to be recovered over. The principle is however satisfactory. The party having the same quantity of interest ought to have the same disposing power for uniformity of judicial decision. If the equitable estate could be destroyed in any other way, the interest of the issue in tail would be less protected in equity than at law.

(1) 1 Rol. Ab. 618.

(2) Stat. 29 Ch. II. c. 3.

(3) Cowp. 130; see p. 132.

Mr. Richards, Mr. Sutton, and Mr. Harvey, for the Defendant Waller: Mr. Piggott, for other Defendants.—The Defendant Waller has the legal estate, purchased for valuable consideration. The bill is filed by a person claiming title in equity to take from such a purchaser the estate he has and the advantage the law undoubtedly gives him.

Upon the question of republication, none of the preceding cases establish the decision of the Lords Commissioners in Barnes v. Crowe. An heir is not to be disinherited by inference not necessary. He has a right to see, that the acts disinheriting him are unequivocal, clear, and decisive. The Cases prior to Barnes v. Crowe require a clear intention to republish, and for the purpose of passing the after-purchased estate. Before the Statute of Frauds a will might be republished by parol: Beckford v. Parnecot (1). The other Judges doubted Fenner's opinion, and determined upon the other ground. Instances are there put of the two sorts of republication, express and implied. All the Judges but one thought, that even annexation would not do; that the inference as to the intention could not be drawn from that circumstance alone. In Lytton v. Lady Falkland (2) the codicil, as in this instance, was directed to be annexed; [* 107] but * it was not in fact annexed; and that was considered one reason for holding it no republication. In Penphrase v. Lord Lansdown (3) a similar decision was made. In Acherley v. Vernon (4), upon which Barnes v. Crowe was determined, the codicil was clearly incorporated by internal evidence; the codicil making alterations in the will. They are really one and the same paper. In Com. Dig. (5) there is a passage, that a new publication for another

(1) Cro. Eliz. 492; 1 Rol. Ab. 618.

(2) 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 768.

(3) Lucas, 96; stated, ante, vol. i. 496, in Barnes v. Crowe; 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 768.

(4) Com. 381; 3 Bro. P. C. 107.

(5) See 3 Com. Dig. Devise; E. 4, 5.

purpose is not sufficient; as if a testator after a new purchase annexes a codicil for legacies, this is not sufficient to pass the land without words for such purpose; and though no authority is given, the passages in that work, for which no authorities are cited, have been always considered great authority. Hutton v. Simpson (1) is disapproved by Lord Camden in the Attorney General v. Downing (2), but without reason. In Cholmondeley v. Cholmondeley (3) the codicil had not the effect of passing the lands purchased after the date of the will. In Potter v. Potter (4) Sir J. Strange proceeded upon the ground, that the word "republished" was used; and also, that the codicil operated by additional charge upon the real estate. The reason was, that it affected the real estate he had. In Gibson v. Lord Montfort, and Gibson v. Rogers (5), Lord Hardwicke discusses the point; but there was no decision. In Jackson v. Hullock (6) there were no after-purchased lands; but the will was completely revoked at the date of the codicil. There is a great difference between a republication for the purpose of passing after-purchased lands and for republishing a will revoked. The testator spoke of his will as subsisting; *and though it was in point of law revoked, yet it was re- [*108] published by referring to it, acting upon it, and annexing a codicil to it. A codicil is to be taken as part of the will to all intents and purposes by inference of law. It is so considered by Sir Joseph Jekyl and Lord Hardwicke; and must be so considered in point of law. In the Attorney General v. Downing (7) the codicil has a strong expression; charging all his lands with two annual payments; yet, there being no evidence of an intention to republish the will, it was held by Lord Camden no republication; an heir at law not being to be disinherited by implication not necessary. There is therefore a series of authorities, very clear in the result, that unless an intention perfectly unequivocal to republish appears, the mere circumstance of a codicil with three witnesses will not have that effect. In Copping v. Fernyough (8) Lord Thurlow being pressed with these cases avoids determining the general point: declaring, that he purposely avoids it. It rests therefore upon Acherley v. Vernon and Barnes v. Crowe. The prior cases, though some suppose annexation necessary, and others do not, all suppose something necessary to bring the will down to the date of the codicil. The case of Barnes v. Crowe turns entirely upon Acherley v. Vernon; which does not support it. Upon exam-

(1) 2 Vern. 722; Sympson v. Hornsby, Pr. Ch. 439.

(2) Amb. 571.

(3) Cited 1 Ves. 489.

(4) 1 Ves. 437.

(5) 1 Ves. 485; Amb. 93.

(6) Amb. 487.

(7) That codicil, dated the 23d of December, 1727, gave to Mary Townsend for her life 200*l.* a year and all the furniture in her room and also 100*l.*: the one hundred pounds to be paid her within two months after the testator's decease. He also gave her daughter 500*l.* yearly during her life; and proceeded thus:

"And I do charge all my lands with the payment of these two annual payments," to Mary Townsend and her daughter.

(8) 2 Bro. C. C. 291.

ining the Minute of the House of Lords it appears, that case went upon the incorporation (1).

[* 109] * The codicil in this case was not annexed, though directed to be annexed. The testator then did not do what he intended to republish his will; if he had it in his contemplation to do so. When he made the first codicil, he had no purpose to republish the will. He had not then any after-purchased lands. The direction, that the codicil shall be annexed to his will, and made part thereof, is no more than the law would say without such direction. The sole purpose was to alter legacies. He might have conceived it right to revoke the bequest of the 6000*l.* with three witnesses: But suppose no reason can be assigned for that, is there a necessary inference to disinherit the heir? The land had been conveyed to him six years before; and was not in his contemplation. Either the instrument ought to be re-executed, or the codicil ought clearly to show the intention, according to all the cases previous to Acherley v. Vernon: or it ought to be so executed as to carry with it from the mode of execution such intention, either by being upon the same paper, or by being annexed to the will, so as to raise the supposition, that he had that paper in his hand. It is an extraordinary proposition, that an instrument executed for the mere purpose of altering or revoking the will as to a legacy, for instance, 5*l.* to a servant, should have the effect of giving the will a greater effect by passing after-purchased lands. There is no inconsistency, as supposed by Lord Commissioner Eyre, between stating the question to be, whether the intention was to pass by the codicil any thing more than would have passed by the will itself.

[* 110] Acherley v. Vernon and The Attorney General v. Downing; the former going upon the particular circumstances; not laying down a general rule, that a codicil with three witnesses shall republish the will for this purpose; and Barnes v. Crowe might have been well decided upon the circumstance, that it was all a continuation of one paper; it was impossible to publish one without publishing the other. The words of the codicil in Acherley v. Vernon, "I devise my real estate to them accordingly," were sufficient to carry the real estate independent of the will. The codicil in The Attorney General v. Downing, after giving two annuities of 500*l.* and 200*l.* proceeds thus: "And I do charge all my lands with the payment of these two annual payments" to Mrs. Townsend and her daughter. The codicil, so far from being necessarily a republication of the will, is a mere act of revocation; containing no mark of bounty; intending no addition to, but to take from, the will. What Lord Kenyon says in Lady Strathmore v. Bowes puts an end to all the doctrine, that the mere execution of the codicil will do;

(1) By the Minutes of the House of Lords, 4th of Feb. 1725, it appeared, that the Judges were of opinion upon the first question, that fee-farm rents would not pass, but profits of lands would; and upon the second, that the codicil was incorporated with the will; which, making it one, was a republication thereof. After debate the question was put, whether that part of the decree relating to the fee-farm and other rents be reversed. Resolved in the negative; and adjudged, that the appeal be dismissed and the decree affirmed.

Upon the second question, is it contended, that an actual entry by the tenant in tail is necessary to make a tenant to the Præcipe? In point of law he was tenant in tail in possession for that purpose from the moment the tenant for life died. There is no evidence that he was not in possession. He must therefore be taken to be equitable tenant in tail, the possession being in point of law with his trustee, and in equity with him, unless a disseisin can be shown. At the date of the deed for making the tenant to the Præcipe there was no adverse possession against him. It is impossible to show an equitable disseisin. The rents could not be received.

* They were not due. No one else received them. The [*111] tenant was tenant of the person entitled. The Court is therefore called upon to presume, that there was no possession. It cannot be said, the recovery is bad, and against a purchaser, because a year and a half afterwards a disseisin was permitted. Bull v. Wyatt (1). The argument is, that by a subsequent act, the purchase a year and a half afterwards, it appears, he was not in possession; but during the preceding year and a half the possession must be presumed with him: adverse possession not being shown. No sale was then in contemplation. That transaction a year and a half afterwards cannot destroy the effect of the recovery; which bars all latent intails, &c. It is impossible to say, the description does not include these very lands. That description is correct, if they were to be included, and inaccurate if they were not. Undoubtedly the intention was to defeat all the limitations, and convert his estate to a fee simple. The transaction of the purchase from the trustees may be accounted for. It might have been suggested that the codicil was not a re-publication. Then dealing with his sisters, proposing to give them 16,000*l.* in satisfaction of whatever they might be entitled to under the will, to prevent family litigation, he might naturally say, there was a doubt; that he had suffered a recovery, in case he should be tenant in tail; but he would not put it upon that question between him and his sisters; but would purchase from the trustees; and the next day he makes a provision for his sisters. It was a family transaction. As to the notice, the notice admitted is only knowledge of the deeds, not of the fact, upon which the Plaintiff relies, that there was no possession in Robert Piggott; unless those deeds prove that. Can the Defendant be affected with notice of * that fact merely by the transaction with [*112] the trustees two years afterwards? That is the only fact, the knowledge of which can affect his conscience. The words of the recovery comprising the premises, a purchaser or mortgagee is not to be called upon to show an intention to include them. Words more general and comprehensive could not be used; sweeping words to take in every thing omitted. After the recovery the Court would have ordered the trustees to convey to him.

This point involves most important consequences, if it can be contended, that a tenant in tail, not in actual possession, cannot suffer a recovery. It was not the old law, that a tenant in tail in equity must suffer an equitable recovery. Till the case of North v. Charnpernoon (1) he could deal with it as tenant in fee: Fletcher v. Tollet (2), and Radford v. Wilson (3), referred to in the note (4). The subject is also noticed (5) in Legate v. Sewell. It is not now however to be contended, that a recovery is not necessary, if the party is tenant in tail in equity. But such a tenant in tail, where there is no preceding estate of freehold, is entitled to suffer a recovery, whether he has actually entered, or received the rents, or is in the actual possession or not. There is a great difference between seisin and possession: Matheson v. Trot (6). Whoever takes by devise is in immediately upon the death of the devisor; and no entry is necessary. So a person taking in remainder after an estate for life is in immediately on the death of the tenant for life without actual entry. The possession of the tenant is that of the party entitled to the rents; who has a sufficient possession to sustain a recovery; unless there is a disseisin or intrusion. Nothing short of that can [* 113] prevent the freehold in * law from remaining in the party entitled to it. In Taylor v. Horde (7), in which case Lord Mansfield goes at large into the doctrine of disseisin, and which was brought on again in Cowper's Reports (8), and the judgment affirmed in the House of Lords, the recovery was held bad, though under actual possession recovered in ejectment: the right being in the person, who had the freehold in law. From that case and passages in Pigott (9) it is clear, that possession without the freehold will not do, and the freehold without the possession will do. Even if the trustees had taken the rents, that would not have been a disseisin; for a disseisin is a tortious act; and a man cannot be disseised with his own consent, except in those cases, in which he is at liberty to consider himself disseised for the purpose of bringing such action as best suits his purpose. Sir William Cordell's Case (10) is also strong to show, that though the possession is in others, the legal freehold is in the party entitled to it; who is seized notwithstanding the actual possession in others. The circumstance, that it is an equitable estate, increases the difficulty of supposing a disseisin. In equity mistake will not operate to the prejudice of the party. As Lord Hard-

(1) 2 Ch. Ca. 63, 78; 1 Vern. 13.

(2) Ante, vol. v. 3.

(3) 3 Atk. 815.

(4) Ante, vol. v. 13.

(5) 1 P. Will. 91.

(6) 1 Leon. 209.

(7) 1 Bur. 60.

(8) Doe v. Horde, Cowp. 689.

(9) Pig. Rec. 41.

(10) Cited 8 Co. 96, in Matthew Manning's Case.

wicke says in Lord Townshend v. Ash (1), the law allows fictions to support a right, but not to create a wrong. The rule is never to consider any interest after a vested remainder in tail. For the purpose of sale, partition, &c. the Court looks no farther than the first person entitled to an estate of inheritance. Challoner v. Murhall (2) bears much upon this. In Philips v. Brydges (3) the Court confirmed the act of equitable tenant in tail without regard to the trustee. There can be no distinction between a recovery upon an equitable and upon a legal estate with respect to the [ 114] recompense over in value. A common recovery is in truth now looked upon as nothing more than a mode of conveyance, which the law allows to tenant in tail (4). Is it consistent with that, that equity should now overturn that conveyance upon such grounds? Such an objection involves consequences the most extensive and dangerous to property and title.

A third consideration is, whether a person in such a situation has any right to call upon a Court of Equity for assistance; or whether there is any equity in the case: Challoner v. Murhall (5); Fletcher v. Tollet (6); and this assumes a very different complexion in the case of a purchaser. This Court will not assist such a Plaintiff to take from a purchaser an estate sold in the face of the remainderman in equity; who permitted the money to be paid; and who, if he had intimated a doubt about the title, would have been barred immediately by a recovery.

Mr. Romilly, in reply.—As to the third question, was it incumbent upon the remainder-man to tell his brother, he might cut off the in-tail? It is too much to say, a Court of Equity does not regard an interest standing after an estate tail. The Lord Chancellor's Act (7), and the construction, that has been made upon it (8), show the contrary: but at all events the prior estate-tail must be in existence.

The only serious questions are the other two. As to the republication all the authorities, except Lytton v. Lady Falkland and Hutton v. Simpson, which two cases * have been overruled, make out this proposition; that, where a codicil attested by three witnesses is expressed in terms, from which it appears, that by executing the codicil, the intention was to republish the will, it shall pass after-purchased estates, though the testator had them not in contemplation; and it is not necessary to show an intention in that codicil to pass them. The object of that codicil may be only to revoke a legacy. The words "to all intents and purposes,"

(1) 3 Atk. 336.

(2) Ante, vol. ii. 524.

(3) Ante, vol. iii. 120. See other cases of Equitable Recovery, in the note, 128.

(4) Willes, 453; 1 Wils. 73, Martin v. Strachan.

(5) Ante, vol. ii. 524.

(6) Ante, vol. v. 3.

(7) Stat. 40 Geo. III. c. 56.

(8) Ex parte Bennet, ante, vol. vi. 116. See the note, i. 512.

therefore are not immaterial. The case of Penphrase v. Lord Lansdown is also over-ruled by Acherley v. Vernon. The questions put to the Judges show the true ground of that case; and that it was not that, which is now supposed. It was taken in all the subsequent cases as the clear ground, that the codicil was a republication, and as such passed the after-purchased estates. Besides some after-purchased estates were expressly devised by that codicil; whence a fair argument arose, that he did not mean to pass the rest of that after-acquired property. Hutton v. Simpson is explicitly treated as of no authority, particularly in The Attorney General v. Downing. The passage in Comyns's Digest is a mere opinion against decisions: but even that passage does not support that, for which it is cited; for it supposes the qualification, that there are no words to show, he means a republication of his will. In Gibson v. Lord Montfort, though not a decision upon the question, Lord Hardwicke gives a clear opinion in favor of the republication; and Potter v. Potter is, as far as it goes, to the same effect. According to Jackson v. Hurlock the only consequence of republishing the will is to make it speak at that time. What difference in good sense can there be between the annexation of a codicil and a separate paper; unless indeed the annexation takes place before execution; and then there ought to be a declaration by the testator, to show, that it was previous. If there is any thing in subsequent annexation, [* 116] it depends merely upon *the intention; and then the expression of desire, that it shall be annexed, is precisely the same. Doe v. Davy (1) is not near so strong in favor of a republication; for by that codicil the devisor makes a disposition of real estate. It appears, therefore, that he had that real estate in contemplation. In this case there can be no purpose but to republish the will. What other meaning can the words "to all intents and purposes" have? His intention must be conceived thus: "I mean as completely not to die intestate as to any part of my property as I meant at the date of my will; in which I used the most comprehensive words; and I mean the same thing now; except in the respect, in which I now alter it."

As to the recovery, the argument is, that, before a person can suffer a recovery, he must have some kind of possession; not that he must have made an actual entry; and in this instance it appears by clear and satisfactory evidence, that at the time of the recovery he was not in possession. It is said, he had a right to the possession; and that is a seisin in law. But he did not know he had a right to the possession: nor is that admitted. He supposed, as his father supposed, that he had no such right. He takes a conveyance from the trustees of his father's will. The deed reciting the will, and that the estate passed by it, that is an admission, that the estate was properly devised, and that the devisees had taken possession under the will. In the absence of all other evidence that is a strong evidence, that he was not in possession. How do the authorities referred to bear upon the question? As to the passage in Pigott (1) there can be no doubt, that where the tenant for life surrenders to the remainder-man in tail, the possession of the former is that of the latter. As to Taylor v. Horde, it is agreed, a person not * having an estate of freehold cannot suffer a recovery, though in possession: but I deny, that the converse of that proposition follows. It is not likely, according to human nature, that he should mean to do an act of kindness, without a suggestion, that he thought he had the absolute title; and taking all the discredit of making a dry purchase. Such an inference is impossible. The words of the deed making the tenant to the Præcipe are general, taken from the will: but there was no intention of passing this estate by the recovery: nor was the party in possession.

May 20th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT.] —The first question, whether the land, of which the Plaintiff claims to be equitable remainder-man in tail, passed under the will of Robert Pigott, the grandfather, depends upon another question; whether that will was republished by the codicil of 1742. It is admitted, the estate did not pass by the will, as originally executed. That will has never been re-executed. The codicil executed since does not profess to pass this estate. If this question were entire, it would be difficult to maintain, that the estate was well devised, consistently with the rule, that the will operates upon such lands only as the devisor had at the time of the execution, and consistently with the Statute of Frauds; by which no land can be devised but by a will duly executed according to the provisions of that Statute. The conclusion in former times upon this subject was, that the land remained undevised. No doctrine was more settled than this was at one period. In Lytton v. Lady Falkland, in 1708, upon a codicil not much differing in substance from this, Lord Cowper, assisted by the Master of the Rolls and two of the Judges, held, that since the Statute of Frauds there can be no devise of lands by an implied republication; for the * paper, in which the devise is contained, ought to be re-executed in the presence of three witnesses. A similar question arose three years afterwards, in the 11th year of Queen Anne, in Lord Lansdown's Case; which contained a strong circumstance of constructive republication; the codicil containing several references to the will: but it was held by Lord Parker and the whole Court of King's Bench, that since the Statute there can be no republication by implication; but the will must be re-executed. In Hutton v. Simpson, or Simpson v. Hornsby, as it is called in Precedents in Chancery, the same doctrine is recognized. Then came Acherley v. Vernon, in which the doctrine of constructive republication was introduced for the first time, as far as I can find, since the Statute. A direct republication or re-execution is an unequivocal act, making the will operate precisely as if it was executed upon the day of the republication. But a reference to the will proves only, that the devisor recognizes the existence of the will; which the act of making a codicil necessarily implies; not, that he means to give it any new operation, or to do more by speaking of it than he had already done by executing it. Why his speaking of it should make the will speak, as it is said, is not very easily discernible, as a question of intention. It has not ceased to exist. Therefore if he speaks of it at all, he must speak of it as existing upon the last day as well as the first. But can that show, that he means it to exist in any other form or with any other effect than he originally gave it?

In Acherley v. Vernon the House of Lords did not determine, nor in subsequent cases were they understood to have determined, that every codicil duly executed would republish a will. Then it is a question of intention, upon the particular wording of the codicil.

Each case must depend upon its own peculiarities. I much [^{* 119}] question, * whether by substituting uncertainty for certainty the intention would be accomplished. It can hardly be stated, as a general rule, that by a codicil relating only to a trifling legacy, the devisor should be supposed to give his will any farther effect as to his real estate. Even when he says he ratifies and confirms his will, that means only, as it already stands, and the disposition already made. If it is said, there is any form of words, upon which in all cases a definite construction shall be put, you do not profess to inquire into the actual intention in the given case: but you set up a technical rule, that will as often frustrate, as execute, the intention. If we are to have a rule, the old rule appears to be the better; for that is consistent with the Statute. That decision does set aside the old rule; and to the authority of that decision the Court have found themselves bound, as I am, to submit.

From the decision of that case to that of Barnes v. Crowe, Courts of Equity have been much at a loss what precise line to adopt; holding the codicil sometimes a republication, sometimes not to have produced that effect. In Cholmondeley v. Cholmondeley (1), decided in 1733, it was held, that the codicil, though distinctly referring to the will, did not republish it. In Potter v. Potter (2) on the other hand, Sir John Strange held the codicil a republication; and could not have held otherwise consistently with Acherley v. Vernon. In Jackson v. Hurlock the codicil was held under the circumstances a republication. In The Attorney General v. Downing Lord Camden held the codicil not a republication; and he takes it to be a question of intention; and that there was no republication, because no intention to republish appeared in the codicil. It does [^{* 120}] not appear, that *Lord Hardwicke ever made a decision upon this point: but in Gibson v. Lord Montfort he discusses it. He seems evidently to have felt a degree of embarrassment from the situation, in which this question was left, and to have entertained a wish to extract from Acherley v. Vernon itself some distinct and precise rule; and though he did not decide, he strongly inclined to hold, that upon the principle of that case every codicil duly attested ought to be held a republication. The Lords Commissioners in Barnes v. Crowe appear to have determined that to be the rule established by that decision; and they adopted and acted upon that rule in that case. Their opinion seems to be, that the codicil was incorporated with the will. The general proposition (1), referred to by Lord Commissioner Eyre, is, that the execution of a codicil should in all cases be an implied republication. Lord Commissioner Eyre states the particular circumstances in that case, amounting to what he calls internal evidence of annexation: the first codicil, which was not duly executed, was begun upon the last sheet of the will; and the codicil duly attested was begun upon the last sheet of that codicil. But Lord Commissioner Eyre inclined to think, annexation could have no effect; and he abandons that ground for fear of intrenching upon the Statute by raising evidence out of circumstances in their nature parol; and takes the general ground as safer and better. Undoubtedly therefore that case was determined upon that general ground. It would be impossible without contradicting that case, which, as it lays down a general rule, I have no disposition to do, to determine in this case against the republication. Except that single circumstance, which Lord Commissioner Eyre afterwards expressly lays out of the question, the annexation, there is no substantial difference between that case and this.

(1) Cited 1 Ves. 489.

(2) 1 Ves. 437.

* That affords a certain rule; and if I depart from that, [* 121] it would only be to set every thing loose again; not to get back to, what I think better, the old rule; for then Acherley v. Vernon would be in the way. I am therefore disposed from the convenience of adhering to settled rules and deference to former decisions to hold this codicil a republication.

It follows, that, whatever might be the misapprehension of the parties as to their rights, it must be taken, that the estate in question passed to the trustees under the will of the grandfather; that his son had only an equitable life interest in them; and his will could not in any degree affect them. When he had a son born, an equitable estate tail vested in him in remainder; and, when his father died, an estate in possession. Then he had such an estate as could be the subject of equitable recovery; that is clearly an equitable estate tail. He did suffer a common recovery in words broad and general enough to comprehend the lands in controversy; which are included by name as well as by general description: and if the moment after he had sold them, it does not seem, that the Plaintiff could in any way impeach the title of the purchaser; for he would not, as far as now appears, have been in possession of any fact, out of which an objection could arise. But from a fact, that occurred afterwards, an inference is drawn, 1st, that at the time of the recovery the party, who suffered it, must have been out of possession (1); 2dly, that he could not intend to comprehend these lands; and therefore the recovery neither could, nor was meant to affect the estate claimed by the Plaintiff. The acts relied on for that purpose are these: Robert Pigott, the father, having devised that land to trustees, the son released to those trustees, in order to relieve them from the necessity of proving the will in Chancery; and [* 122] he afterwards * purchased that very estate from the trustees. These acts are said to show, that he was ignorant of his rights under the will; and could not intend to suffer a recovery of lands, to which he did not think he had any claim. On the contrary, it is said, the trustees would take possession of all the estates devised to them. It is highly probable, I admit, that he was ignorant of his right. He supposed, the estate descended. He did not know, the codicil was a republication of the will. But in contemplation of law, the right was in him as completely and absolutely, as if he was perfectly apprized of it. The legal consequence would be proposed without regard to his ignorance or knowledge. The trustees would be seised in trust for him; not for those, whom he might erroneously suppose entitled. The possession of the tenant would in the eye of the law be his possession, or that of his trustees; not of a stranger, who by mistake might be supposed to have the right. That belief would not acquire the possession to a stranger. He could acquire it only by the means to be used necessarily by the lawful owner, conusant of his right. What is proved to have been done between the time of the death and the recovery, that would clothe them with an adverse possession against the true owner? The possession and the right are presumed to go together, till the contrary is shown. I cannot hold the rightful owner out of possession, unless you show me some other person, having adversely obtained possession at that period. There is nothing even making that probable. The interval from the death was too short to admit the inference of the receipt of rent by the trustees; supposing, that receipt would make an adverse possession. The utmost extent is, that there is some doubt about the possession at that period; but it would be a complete inversion, because there is some doubt, to hold the possession to be out of him, in whom the right was, and in those, in whom it was not. What afterwards happened is quite [* 123] * immaterial; for the question is, whether at the moment of executing the deed to make the tenant to the Præcipe he was disabled from making an estate of freehold; if not, there was no incapacity to suffer a recovery.

Then with regard to the intention to include these lands, a recovery would be very precarious evidence, if any thing more was necessary to its validity, than the right to suffer it, and the fact of comprehending the estate. That fact is not disputed. It would be extremely dangerous to suffer it to be impeached by extrinsic evidence of the intention. But the evidence shows nothing contrary to the intention, that these lands should be included. It shows only, that he had no distinct and definite knowledge, that they were included; not knowing, that he could by including them make himself absolute owner. But he had the general intention to include all lands, of which he was tenant in tail: for the words express all the lands in Chesterton or elsewhere, whereof Robert Pigott, or any persons in trust for him, had any estate of freehold or inheritance in any manner however. His intention was to include all he might include, and he had the precaution to use words to effectuate that intention; and therefore to say, that notwithstanding that intention and that precaution nothing more than what he actually knew he was entitled to was comprised, would be to counteract the intention. He meant to convey according to his right; and I am desired to hold, that he meant to convey only according to his opinion.

(1) See post, Lord Grenville v. Blyth, vol. xvi. 224; where that circumstance was held not to affect the validity of an Equitable Recovery by tenant in tail of the equitable interest.

My opinion therefore is, that the recovery barred the estate tail. I must therefore hold, that the Plaintiff has no right; and must dismiss his bill; and under the circumstances I do [ 124] not know, how I can do otherwise than dismiss it with costs.

A few days afterwards the MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT], said, he had forgot to observe, that he did not conceive the decision in Lady Strathmore v. Bowes to be inconsistent with that of Barnes v. Crowe. It does not follow from the doctrine in the latter case, that if it distinctly appears upon the face of the codicil, that it was not the intention to republish the will, the codicil should be held a republication. In Lady Strathmore v. Bowes the Court held, that it appeared upon the face of the codicil, that it was not the intention to pass any other lands, than those, which were devised by the will. It would have been a contradiction therefore to make it pass after-purchased lands.

The Plaintiff appealed from this decree: but the appeal was not heard; the decree being affirmed under a compromise as to the costs.

1. A codicil duly executed, and attested by three witnesses, if such codicil clearly refer to, and adopt, a previous unattested will, amounting to a re-execution and republication of that will: and a devise of land by the unattested will, which, if it stood alone, would be inoperative as to real estate, will be made good by the codicil. De Bathe v. Lord Fingal, 16 Ves. 168. Whatever objections this doctrine of constructive republication may be open to, it is a point now clearly established, that, as a general rule, a codicil duly attested does amount to such republication. Hulme v. Heygate, 1 Meriv. 294. It is equally clear, that a republication of a will speaks as of the time of such republication; and, consequently, that lands purchased in the interval between the first making of the will and its republication, may pass under a general devise contained in the will: but, where the will contains a particular description of the lands thereby devised, no subsequent codicil can apply to lands purchased after the making of the will, unless by particular reference to those lands; for the particular description given in the will must defeat any more extended effect of the republication. Heylin v. Heylin, Cowp. 132. In all cases of this kind, the question is, whether the particular case does, or does not, come within the general rule: and it is well settled, that other circumstances, besides those of locality, in the description of the lands devised, are sufficient to control the effect and operation of a codicil: thus, for instance, a codicil confirming the beneficial interests given in the testator's lands by his will, but appointing new trustees, to whom he devised the legal estate in his "said lands," may, provided a special intent to that effect is shown, exclude the ordinary operation of a republication, and prevent lands purchased after the date of the will from passing by such devise. Bowes v. Bowes, as determined on appeal in Dom. Proc. 2 Bos. & Pull. 506. But, where no special intention on the part of the testator to the contrary appears, the effect of a codicil, per se, and independently of any intention, is to bring down the will to the date of the codicil, making the will speak as of that date. Goodlill v. Meredith, 2 Mau. & Sel. 14. And, though the codicil relate (as it did in the principal case) only to personality, yet, if it be executed so as to act upon real estate, that is, if it be attested by three witnesses, it republishes a previous devise of lands. Rogers v. Browning & Pittis, 1 Addams, 37.

2. It should be observed, that a republication, in general terms, whereby a man ratifies and confirms his last will, ratifies and confirms it with every codicil which has been added to it; and, when by any codicil the will has been in part revoked, the mere republication of the will does not set up again any gift which has been so revoked or redeemed. Crobie v. M'Douall, 4 Ves. 616; Monck v. Lord Monck, 1 Ball & Beat. 306; Izard v. Hurst, 2 Freem. 224; Drinkwater v. Falconer, 2 Ves. Sen. 626.

3. In equity, an estate which at the time has been contracted for by, though it has not been actually conveyed to, a testator, will pass under a general devise of his estates. Capel v. Girdler, 9 Ves. 510; Broome v. Monck, 10 Ves. 605. And it is a consequence necessarily arising out of the doctrine established by the authorities cited in the first note to this case, that any lands, for the purchase of which the testator has entered into a valid contract before he republishes his will, must, unless a special intent to the contrary be evinced, pass under his said will. Gibson v. Lord Montfort, 1 Ves. Sen. 494.

4. The question, whether the right of the tenant in tail of an equitable estate to suffer an equitable recovery can, in any case, be affected by an adverse possession, though adverted to in the principal case, did not call for any decision; as it did not appear there was any possession in any one except the person who suffered the recovery. Lord Grenville v. Blyth, 16 Ves. 230. In the case just cited, Sir William Grant intimated his opinion, however, that there was no analogy between legal and equitable recoveries, as to the effect of adverse possession; provided (which is a most material qualification of the general proposition) the party who suffers an equitable recovery has a sufficient quantum of equitable interest. In Grenville v. Blyth, the period of tortious possession was too short to afford any argument from it; and the ground on which the possession, though adverse in fact, was not considered to be so in equity, namely, by a constructive reference of such possession to the rightful title; proceeding upon a principle that can never apply to any case in which the question turns upon the statute of limitations, or the analogies thereto upon which Courts of Equity act. Maryis Cholmondeley v. Lord Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk. 148, 174. See, ante, the notes to Jones v. Turberfield, 2 V. 11; and the notes to Whichote v. Lawrence, 3 V. 740.

LONGMORE v. BROOM.

[1802, FEB. 8, 11; MAY 20.]

BEQUEST to executors, in trust, that they shall pay, &c. unto and amongst the testator's two brothers and his sister, or their children, in such shares, &c. and at such times, &c. as the trustees, or the major part, or the survivor, his executors, &c. shall think proper. All the children living at the death of the testator held entitled with the parents, per capita: the Court not having a discretion (a). Executors charged with interest upon balances in their hands (b), [p. 125.] Bequest to A. or B. void for uncertainty: if at the discretion of C. good, [p. 128.] The Court never alters or adds to a will without necessity (c), [p. 129.]

THOMAS LONGMORE by his will, dated the 21st of December, 1787, after directing, that his debts and funeral expenses should in the first place be discharged, subject thereto, gave and bequeathed all his personal estate of what nature or kind soever and wheresoever to his executors; upon trust, that they shall pay, apply, and dispose of, his said personal estate unto * and amongst his [* 125] two brothers Joseph and Benjamin Longmore, and his sister Hannah Longmore, or their children, in such shares and proportion and at such time or times as they, his trustees, or the major part, or the survivor of them, his executors or administrators, shall in their discretion think proper.

The testator died in December 1790. The executors not having made any disposition of the whole, but having made some payments to the testator's brothers and sister, the bill was filed by Benjamin Longmore, to have the accounts taken, and the residue divided, as the Court should direct.

By a decree, made on the 26th of February, 1798, the accounts were directed; and by another decree, made on the 11th of February, 1802, an inquiry was directed as to the balances in the hands of the executors from year to year, and what children the Plaintiff and the Defendants Joseph Longmore and Hannah Forster, formerly Longmore, had at the death of the testator; and if any were dead, who were their personal representatives.

(a) See Kemp v. Kemp, ante, 5 V. 849; Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.) 503, 563; Brown v. Higge, ante, 4 V. 708, note (a); Burrough v. Philcox, 5 My. & Craig, 73; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d. Am. ed.) 811, 812.

(b) As to interest in cases against executors, see Ram on Assets, p. 512, 513; Tev v. Earl of Winterston, ante, 1 V. 451, note (c), and cases cited; Brown v. Southouse, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 107, 108, and notes and cases cited; Newton v. Bennet, 1 ib. 359-362, and notes and cases cited; Caldwell v. Kinkead, 1 B. Monroe, 231; Thompson v. Sanders, 6 J. J. Marsh. 99; Clay v. Hart, 7 Dana, 17; Garniss v. Gardner, 1 Edw. 128; Kellet v. Rathbun, 4 Paige, 102; Dunscomb v. Dunscomb, 1 Johns. Ch. 510; Manning v. Manning, 1 Johns. Ch. 527; Schieffelin v. Stewart, 1 Johns. Ch. 620; Arnett v. Linney, Dev. Eq. 369; Clarkson v. De Peyster, 1 Hopk. 425; Brown v. Ricketts, 4 Johns. Ch. 305; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d. Am. ed.) 1309, 1310; Franklin v. Frith, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 433, and notes; Turner v. Turner, 1 Jac. & Walk. 39; Goodchild v. Fenton, 3 Younge & Jer. 481.

(c) Even by implication: Upton v. Lord Ferrers, ante, 5 V. 801, and note.

The Master by his report stated balances in the hands of the executors from the year 1791 to the end of 1797, increasing every year, and finally amounting to 458*l.* 2*s.* 1*d.* That sum was paid into the Bank by order.

The report stated upon the other subject of inquiry, that the Plaintiff had the following children living at the death of the testator: the Defendants Elizabeth Longmore, born in 1775, Thomas Longmore, born in 1779, and Samuel Longmore, born in 1782; all living at the date of the report. Mary Longmore, born [* 126] in 1784, * who died in 1798; Martha Longmore, born in 1787, who died in 1792; and Benjamin Longmore, born in 1789, who died in 1792.

Joseph Longmore had two children, the Defendant Elizabeth Ridgeway, and the Defendant Benjamin Longmore; the latter of whom went abroad about nine years ago; and had not since been heard of. Hannah Forster had no child living at the death of the testator.

Mr. Lloyd and Mr. W. Agar, for the Plaintiff.—The executors not having made a disposition, the Court will give the fund equally among the objects; and the children are not to take with their parents. Royle v. Hamilton (1) and Davenport v. Hanbury (2) come nearest to this case. The natural construction is, that the children can take only in the event of the parents being dead. There is no discretion in the executors.

Mr. Cooper, for a daughter of the Plaintiff by a former marriage. Mr. Benyon, for other children of the Plaintiff; and Mr. Fonblanche, for other Defendants.—The parents are not entitled exclusively: but the children take equally with them. The word "or" has been construed "and," in a variety of cases (3), where the intention required it. In Royle v. Hamilton there was no power over the property; and the question was, not upon a bequest to children, but whether grand children, could take under the word "issue." The argument for the Plaintiff adds to this will the condition, "if the parent is dead;" which is taking a great liberty with it. The answer may be given, "sic voluit sed non dixit." In the cases cited there was great ambiguity and uncertainty in the words. In [* 127] * this instance it is not necessary to convert the word "or," to "and;" for this is not an immediate bequest to them or their children, but a bequest by implication in default of appointment, if those words cannot be added. The power of the executors is unlimited in time. They had their whole lives for the execution of it. If the word "or" is to be construed "and," they might have made an unequal distribution, if fairly, and if in the exercise of a sound discretion there was reason for discrimination; though certainly they could not make an illusory appointment (4).

(1) Ante, vol. iv. 437.

(2) Ante, vol. iii. 257.

(3) Maberley v. Strode, ante, vol. iii. 450, and the references, 452.

(4) Ante, Kemp v. Kemp, vol. v. 849, and the references, 853; i. 310.

Mr. Richards, for the Executors.—The executors still claim the right to apply this fund according to the will; submitting to the Court the question, whether they can apply it to the children. These executors have a sort of parental discretion to apply this fund among the objects, as they shall think fit; which raises the distinction. It is their duty to make such an application, as it is to be supposed the testator, if living, would make; who probably had in contemplation a personal benefit to his grand-children also. Some payments unequal, have been made to the fathers of these children, and to the sister: and the executors had a right to do so before a suit instituted. Under this direction to pay and apply an appointment is not necessary.

Mr. Lloyd, in reply.—The true construction of this will is to exclude the children. The executors could not have their whole lives for the execution of this power; for upon that supposition it might have been delayed, till the objects were dead. They could not give to after-born children. If they had died without having made an appointment, the fund would have vested in the two *brothers and sister. It could not be divided among them [*128] and the children: for then the division must have been made per capita; but certainly the intention was, that each brother and sister should be the head of the family, and have the portion as such. The word “and” has been substituted for “or” in aid of the intention: but in this instance it is sought for the purpose of defeating it. The word “or” is inserted in this will technically. Royle v. Hamilton and the other case show the effect of a bequest to a person and his issue. It was urged there, as it is here, that they were pointed out in the room of the parent. It is not in the natural course, that the executors could have given to the children in exclusion of the parents.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT], when the cause was first heard, expressed the following opinion:

The inclination of my opinion is, that the children have an interest. This is not a direct bequest to the objects; but a bequest to the executors, with an authority to dispose among them. The cases are very different. In the former the Court must of necessity construe those words; for they bear no sense of themselves. You cannot execute that intention. You must either alter the word “or” to “and,” and say, the children are to take either-with or after their parents, or, letting the word “or” stand, suppose a contingency in contemplation; to the parent, if the parent is living; to the children, if the parent is not living. But in either case you must make some addition to the bequest: otherwise it would be void for uncertainty. A bequest to A. or B. is void: but a bequest to A. or B. at the discretion of C. is good; for he may divide it between them. That is the case of this will. I am not called upon to make any alteration in or addition to this will; which the Court *never does without [*129] necessity. A discretion is given to the executors. Could I have said, they were precluded from giving any thing to the children? I think not; and it would be a great deal to say that. The executors then having their discretion might say, to whom the fund should be given, the parents, or the children. But the Court has not that discretion; but has only to say, what class is to take; and then the distribution must be equal. In Brown v. Higgs (1), which is now before the Lord Chancellor upon the main point, the Court was of opinion, that if the disposition belonged to the Court, they must distribute equally among the children of the two persons. The trustee had a discretion; and might have excluded some: but this Court having once ascertained, that those were the objects of bounty, were obliged to divide it among all. So in this instance the Court must give the fund equally between the parents and the children: but the executors themselves were not so restrained. The fund vests at the time of the death; and after-born children would not take. Inquiries therefore are necessary, what children were living at the death of the testator.

May 20th.—Inquiries were accordingly directed; and the cause coming on for farther directions upon the Master's report, the MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT], made the decree according to the opinion expressed at the former hearing; giving the fund to the parents, and all the children living at the death of the testator, and the representatives of such as had since died, per capita; and charging the executors with interest upon the balances in their hands since 1793; no considerable balance appearing to have been in their hands before that period (2).

1. THE copulative "and" may be construed, in a will, as if the testator had used the disjunctive "or," and vice versa, provided such construction appear necessary to give effect to the testator's intention; see, ante, note 1 to Maberly v. Strode, 3 V. 450; and, post, note 3 to Crooke v. De Vandes, 9 V. 197; but, though a Court of Equity will, to a certain extent, qualify a testator's words by construction, in order to render the whole consistent; still, it is a sound general rule, that the words made use of by a testator are to be understood in their ordinary sense, if a different interpretation be not necessary to give effect to his whole will: see, ante, note 4 to Blake v. Bunbury, 1 V. 194.

2. A discretionary power as to the proportions in which a testator's bounty shall be distributed amongst his next of kin, may, of course, be given to his executors; but, if the execution of the trust devolve upon the Court, no such power of discretionary distribution, or selection, can be exercised. The statute of distributions affords the only rule of selection which the Court can adopt, in such cases; and, if the testator's bequest was to be divided, not amongst a family, but amongst certain named, or described, individuals, at the discretion of his trustees as to their respective shares, the Court, if called upon to act, must make an equal division amongst them all: see, ante, notes 4 and 5 to Brown v. Higgs, 4 V. 708.

3. As to the cases in which executors will be charged with interest, see, ante, notes 3 and 4 to Tew v. The Earl of Winterlow, 1 V. 451.

(1) Ante, vol. iv. 708; v. 495; post, viii. 561.

(2) Bruere v. Pemberton, post, vol. xii. 386.

ROBSON v. COLLINS.

[1802, MAY 21.]

DECREE for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, of which only one part, signed by the Plaintiff, was found in the possession of the Defendant, upon the circumstances; possession, drafts prepared and approved, and the execution deferred only till repairs completed. An extension of the term according to a variation of the agreement, also in writing, was refused on the ground of want of consideration.

Specific performance of a written agreement with a variation by writing; not with a variation by parol (a), [p. 133.]

THE bill stated, that in 1782 Joseph Collins, being tenant for a long term of years of a house in Holborn, entered into an agreement with John Maire to grant him a lease of the premises for thirty-one years from the 24th of June 1782, at the yearly rent of 40*l.*; which agreement was reduced into writing, and signed by Collins and Maire; and afterwards it was farther agreed between them, that the term should be extended to thirty-four years, six months, and sixty-nine days, from the 24th of June 1785, at the same rent, which latter agreement was also reduced into writing, and signed by them. The bill then stated, that in pursuance of the latter agreement a lease and counterpart were prepared by the attorney of Collins, and under his direction; but they were never executed; the execution having been deferred from time to time. Maire, who was the tenant previously to the date of the agreement, continued in possession under the agreement until his death, and afterwards Edward Maire, his representative, and after his death the Plaintiff, the representative of both of them, continued in possession; and paid the rent of 40*l.* Joseph Collins died in 1790, and Maire in 1795. In 1798 Ann Collins, the widow and administratrix with the will annexed of Joseph Collins, gave the Plaintiff notice to quit; upon which the bill was filed; praying a specific performance of the agreement, and an injunction.

The bill charged, that Maire in confidence of the agreement laid out 400*l.* in repairs and improvements; which he would not have done as mere tenant at will; and thereby greatly improved the value.

* The answer admitted, and set forth, the first agreement, [*131] to the effect stated in the bill; the tenant to put and keep the premises in repair; and stated, that the part in the Defendant's custody is signed by Maire only. The Defendant does not admit that any other agreement was entered into. The lease was prepared by an attorney, who had done business for Collins, but not by his directions, but by the directions of Maire; and Maire being unable to put the premises in repair, and the lease being for thirty-four years, six months, and sixty-nine days, Collins refused to execute; and he informed the Defendant, that it was agreed between him and Maire, that the lease should be put an end to; and that Maire should continue in possession during his life at the same rent and upon the same terms as he held the same at the time of making the said agreement; for Collins, upon his death-bed and the day before he died requested Defendant to let Maire have the said premises during his life upon the same terms he had held the same, after the said agreement was given up by him, he doing the repairs: Collins observing to Defendant, that Maire was an old man, and could not live long; and some time after the death of Collins Defendant found the part of the said agreement signed by Maire amongst some waste paper; and believes, that no part of the said agreement signed by Collins was found in the possession of Maire at his death. No application was made by Maire to Collins, after he refused to execute the lease, or to Defendant after the death of Collins, for a specific performance of the agreement, or to execute the said lease or any other lease of the premises; although Collins lived four years after he refused to execute the said lease; and Maire lived four years and upwards after Collins. The Defendant believes, the agreement is not a bona fide, fair agreement; on the contrary, Collins being much addicted to liquor, she has great reason to believe, [* 132] * that Maire availed himself of the opportunity of taking advantage of Collins's situation when he was so in liquor; as such premises were at the time of entering into the agreement of the annual value of 70*l.*; and the agreement was not for the usual lease of twenty-one years, at a rack rent. She denies, that Maire did in confidence lay out 400*l.*; but believes Maire did from time to time lay out several sums upon the premises; but denies, that the premises were put in substantial repair according to the terms of the agreement.

(a) 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 770-771; Rich v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 514, 519, and notes; 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 161, 162, [224]; Jordan v. Sawkins, ante, 1 V. 402, and note; S. C. 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 390, note (a); Woolam v. Hearn, post, 211, and notes.

A witness for the Plaintiff deposed, that the Defendant in a conversation with her said, she had offered Edward Maire 50*l.* if he would relinquish and give up possession of the premises and all right and interest in the same, as personal representative of John Maire.

Another witness stated, that he was nephew and clerk to Collins's solicitor, and prepared the draft according to the agreement; and afterwards altered it (according to the bill) by the direction of his uncle. The engrossments were sent to Collins, who approved them; but said, he would not execute, till Maire had completed some repairs he had undertaken to do; and afterwards informed the deponent's uncle, that Maire had completed the repairs; and he was fully satisfied therewith; and would the next time he came to town bring the engrossments for execution: but he died soon afterwards.

Mr. Alexander and Mr. Heald, for the Plaintiff, gave up the right under the second agreement alleged.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Stanley, for the Defendant.—The Court will not decree a specific performance of an agreement with a variation: Jordan v. Sawkins (1). The second contract alleged is neither proved nor admitted to have been executed: the answer stating, that there was not any other agreement. But the acts of the parties show, the agreement was waived. No application was made after the first refusal to execute.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The case of Jordan v. Sawkins has no reference to such a case as this: whatever the actual truth of it may be. It has never been held, that this Court cannot specifically perform an agreement with a variation. If legally agreed for, it is part of the agreement: if not legally agreed for, it is no variation. All the Court meant to say was, that an addition to a written agreement by parol would not vary the written agreement. But the Defendant insisting upon that admits, that the written agreement has force; and only insists, that you shall not add that, which is parol, to that, which is in writing. It is clear, Lord Thurlow in that case meant only to say, that you shall not come for the performance of a written agreement with a variation, which you say was made by parol; because therefore it was not effectually made; and therefore you must either take the written agreement, or have the bill dismissed. But that is not the case; for it does not rest merely in parol. It appears, that drafts were prepared, were altered according to the agreement, sent to the lessor engrossed, approved by him; and the execution was deferred only with reference to the repairs. But it does not appear, that those repairs were to be done as an extension of the agreement. Therefore notwithstanding those circumstances, as there was no consideration for the extension of the agreement, the Plaintiff is not entitled to the longer term. Then as to * the answer, admitting the agreement of the 10th of January, 1782, which is set forth, upon the terms it is probable, there was a counterpart of this instrument. It is an agreement upon the part of each; and not only the contents, but the execution shows that; the expression being "interchangeably." That it is not found among the papers is only a circumstance of evidence; and if it had been delivered up, the other part would not have been found, where it is. It is not improbable, that they might let it rest upon this short agreement without a lease, and in this Court the possession must be referred to this instrument. The other party is bound to make out, that the possession was changed by some subsequent fact. The evidence shows, a change in the terms of the possession was meditated: but how am I to infer, while the tenant's obligation to pay the rent still remains in their hands, that, because they would not grant the original term, they are not bound in equity. The hypothesis, that Maire should have the possession for his life, does not hold; the first and second administrator, who did not follow his trade of a druggist, continuing in possession. I do not consider, whether an action can be maintained, but am of opinion, that the mere non-execution of the lease is not of itself a circumstance affording a presumption, that the agreement was waived. As long as it exists, the equitable title exists; and the enjoyment must be under it accordingly.

The Plaintiff is therefore entitled to a lease for the remainder of the term of thirty-one years; and the Master must be directed to settle a lease.

See, ante, note 2 to Jordan v. Sawkins, 1 V. 402.

[* 135]

ELLIS, Ex parte.

[1802, MAY 22.]

ADJUDICATION of bankruptcy on Saturday too late for the Gazette. On Monday another solicitor, having notice, obtained a supersedeas under the General Order, 26th June, 1793: both the bankruptcy and the supersedeas appeared in the Gazette on Tuesday. The supersedeas was quashed; and a procedendo issued. Supersedeas of a country Commission of bankruptcy, under the General Order, 26th June, 1793, for want of notice of the adjudication, though from the distance impossible by course of post, [p. 137.]

A COMMISSION of Bankrupt issued on the first of May, against Benedict Paul Wagner. On Saturday the 15th of May the commission was opened; and Wagner was declared a bankrupt; but the commission was opened too late to admit of advertisement in the Gazette of that evening. On Monday another Solicitor applied for a writ of Supersedeas under Lord Rosslyn's order (1); and on Tuesday the bankruptcy and also notice that the commission had been superseded, appeared in the Gazette.

The petition prayed, that the writ of Supersedeas may be ordered to be quashed; and that a writ of Procedendo may issue. The affidavit of the Solicitor, who took out the commission, stated, that several of the creditors having expressed a wish, that the bankrupt's affairs might be settled by an assignment, the deponent endeavored to accomplish it: but on the day, on which the commission was opened, he was informed by the agent for a considerable creditor abroad, that he could not accept an assignment; upon which the deponent proceeded to open the commission. He immediately sent the adjudication to the Solicitor, who afterwards applied for the Supersedeas; and he has since informed the deponent, that after he knew the commission had been opened, and Wagner declared a bankrupt, he applied to George Paton; and told him, that, as the bankrupt had not appeared in the Gazette, Paton might apply for another commission; that he accordingly did so; and on Monday the Solicitor made the usual affidavit of his having searched the Gazettes; and that he did not find, that Wagner had been declared a bankrupt.

(1) 26th June, 1793; 2 Cooke's Bank. Law, 8th edit. by Mr. Roots, 264; ante, vol. ii. 190.

Mr. Cooke and Mr. Pemberton, in support of the petition, relied on the circumstances stated in the affidavit.

Mr. Hart, contra, insisted on the General Order; and that it was not satisfied by the adjudication, till published in the Gazette.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I consider this as a mere matter of practice. I do not like the practice of lying by, to see, whether a general assignment can be obtained. It may be very improper in many instances. But there is a positive order, giving fourteen days to proceed on the commission. In this instance the commissioners in fact adjudged this man a bankrupt. The creditor has a right to go on, unless some order of the Court stands in his way; and the question is, whether there is any order standing in his way. If there were doubts as to the petitioning creditor's debt, or an apprehension, that this was a friendly commission, or, of a hurried choice of assignees, those might be proper considerations. But it is not a correct use of those considerations to take out another commission, as if the former had not been proceeded on, if it appears, that it had been proceeded on. The party might quarrel with the commission; and petition against it: but upon none of those grounds can a Solicitor take out another commission, alleging, that the former was not proceeded on; if it was proceeded on within Lord Rosslyn's order. I cannot go the length of saying, the order is not satisfied till publication in the Gazette. Suppose the adjudication was on Wednesday: it cannot be published till Saturday. When this Solicitor applied at the office on Monday, if he had stated, that he had been informed, * the party was declared a bankrupt on Saturday, [* 137] though too late for the Gazette, till that fact was known, he would not have had a commission.

The second Commission therefore cannot stand; and the writ of Supersedeas must be quashed; and the writ of Procedendo must issue (1). —

SEE, ante, note 1 to Ex parte Leicester, 6 V. 429.

(1) Ante, Ex parte Leicester, Ex parte Layton, Ex parte Hardwicke, vol. vi. 429, 434; Ex parte Freeman, 1 Ves. & Bea. 34.

Ex parte Henderson, 2 Rose, 190; Coop. 227.

In a country Commission the bankruptcy was declared on the 28th day; but the distance was such, that by the course of the Post notice could not be given at the Bankrupt Office until the second day after the 28th: on which day a Supersedeas had issued previously.

The Lord Chancellor dismissed a petition to quash the Supersedeas; observing (according to Mr. Cooke's note) that there has been a practical excision of the Order conformable to what has been done in this case: namely, that, unless notice of the declaration of bankruptcy is sent to the office within the 14 or 28 days, the Supersedeas may issue; and it may issue at any hour, however early, of the second day after the twenty-eighth. The only exception is Ex parte Ellis: but there were particular circumstances, which must have influenced the judgment. The question of practice is reduced simply to this, whether the Supersedeas

HOWE v. EARL OF DARTMOUTH.
HOWE v. COUNTESS OF AYLESBURY.

[1802, MAY 22.]

GENERAL rule, that, where personal property is bequeathed for life with remainders over, and not specifically, it is to be converted into the 3 per cents. subject in the case of a real security to an inquiry, whether it will be for the benefit of all parties; and the tenant for life is entitled only upon that principle (a).

Bequest of personal estate not held specific merely from being combined with a devise of land, [p. 138.]

Every devise of land must of necessity be specific, whether in particular or general terms (b); otherwise as to personal property, [p. 147.]

To exempt the personal estate from the debts there must be declaration plain or manifest intention (c), [p. 149.]

The Court will protect an executor in doing what it would order (d), [p. 150.]

The Court in laying out money in the funds does not attend to the difference in the price of stock, [p. 151.]

WILLIAM Earl of Strafford, by his will, dated the 25th of October, 1774, gave to his wife Anne, Countess of Strafford, all his personal estate whatsoever (except the furniture of Wentworth Castle) for her life, subject to the following out-payments and legacies. He also left to her all his houses, gardens, parks, and woods, and all his landed estates for her life; and afterwards all his personal and landed estates to his eldest sister Lady Anne Conolly, for her life; and should not issue as of course, unless the Office is informed, that the Commissioners had declared the bankruptcy. There would be no end of giving in addition to the 28 days as much more time as the course of the Post would require; which must vary according to the distance.

The general words of the order "for want of prosecution" are here interpreted, as they are always understood in practice, an effectual prosecution to the declaration of bankruptcy; and are not satisfied by the qualification of the Commissioners, or any farther proceeding, short of that declaration.

(a) Post, 151, note; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 850, 851, 1000; Dimes v. Scott, 4 Russ. 195; Alcock v. Sloper, 2 Mylne & Keen, 699; Crawley v. Crawley, 7 Sim. 427; Mills v. Mills, ib. 501.

If the bequest to the tenant for life is specific, the legatee in remainder is not entitled to have the property so converted. Vincent v. Newcomb, 1 Younge, 599; Collins v. Collins, 2 Mylne & Keen, 703; Alcock v. Sloper, ubi supra; Bethune v. Kennedy, 1 Mylne & Craig, 114.

(b) 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 847, 848.

(c) Stevens v. Gregg, 10 Gill & John. 143; Tessier v. Wyse, 3 Bland, 28; Garnet v. Macon, 2 Brock, 185; S. C. 6 Call, 208; McCampbell v. McCampbell, 5 Litt. 97; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 571; Ancester v. Mayer, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 460, 467, note (a) and cases cited; Rogers v. Rogers, 1 Paige, 188; Hoye v. Breuer, 3 Gill & John. 153; 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 420, 421, 422; Lupton v. Lupton, 2 John. Ch. 614; McKay v. Green, 3 John. Ch. 56; Livingston v. Newkirk, 3 John. Ch. 312; Stroud v. Barnett, 3 Dana, 394; Scheomerhorn v. Barhydt, 9 Paige, 29, 49; Chase v. Lockerman, 11 Gill & John. 185; Kidney v. Coussmaker, ante, 1 V. 436, note (a); Seaver v. Lewis, 14 Mass. 83; Adams v. Brackett, 5 Metcalf, 280.

(d) 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1288, 1289; Franklin v. Frith, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 433, 434, and notes; Hutcheson v. Hammond, ib. 147.

then to the eldest son of George Byng, Esquire ; and afterwards to his second, third, or any later sons he may have by the testator's niece Mrs. Byng ; and then to the eldest son and other sons successively of the Earl of Buckingham by his niece Caroline : but all of them to be subject to the following out-payments and legacies. He left his wife the sum of 15,000*l.* to dispose of for ever as she pleases, and the value of 500*l.* in furniture in Wentworth Castle, of whatever sort she chooses ; else the whole furniture to be her's, if she meets with any difficulty in * this disposition. [*138] He gave several legacies and annuities ; and declared, he would have all his debts paid ; and gave all his servants a year's wages.

The testator died on the 10th of March, 1791. Anne, Countess of Strafford, died in his life, on the 9th of February 1785. Lady Anne Conolly filed a bill for an account of the personal estate, &c. By a decree, made at the Rolls on the 17th of May 1793, the usual accounts were directed ; and it was declared, that the Plaintiff would be entitled to the interest of the clear residue of the testator's personal estate during her life ; and an inquiry was directed, who were the next of kin of the testator at the time of his death.

The Master's Report, dated the 7th of March, 1796, stated the account of the personal estate ; part of which consisted of the following stocks and annuities, standing in the testator's name at his death :

4320*l.* Bank Stock.

9572*l.* per annum Long Annuities.

750*l.* per annum Short Annuities.

Under orders made in the cause the sums of 15,000*l.* and 4000*l.* had been paid in by the executors ; and laid out in 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities.

By a decretal order, made on the 7th of May, 1796, the balance of the personal estate in the hands of the executors, and of the interest, &c. was ordered to be paid into the Bank ; and that the executors should transfer the 4320*l.* Bank Stock, the 9572*l.* per annum Long Annuities, and 750*l.* per annum Short Annuities, to the Accountant General, in trust in the cause ; and that the said funds, when so transferred, should be sold * with his [*139] privity ; and that the money to arise by such sale should be laid out in the purchase of 3 per cent. annuities, in trust in the cause, subject to farther order ; and that the Master should appropriate a sufficient part of the said Bank Annuities, when purchased, to answer the growing payments of the several annuities ; and that as any of the annuitants should die, the funds appropriated respectively, should fall into the general residue ; with liberty to apply ; and it was ordered, that the interest of the residue of the said Bank Annuities after such appropriation, and also the interest and dividends of the said 4320*l.* Bank Stock, should be paid to the Plaintiff Lady Anne Conolly for her life ; and on her death any person or persons entitled thereto were to be at liberty to apply ; and after providing for the costs out of the balance of the personal estate, and for the arrears of the annuities out of the sum of 2067*l.* 6*s.* 1*d.* the balance of the interest and dividends received by the executors, and ordered to be paid into the Bank, it was ordered, that the remainder should be paid to Lady Anne Conolly ; and also, that 1846*l.* 9*s.* 7*d.* cash in the Bank, which had arisen from interest of the funds, in which part of the testator's personal estate had been invested, should be also paid to her ; and that the dividends of 24,619*l.* 4*s.* 10*d.* 3 per cent. Bank Annuities, in which the sums received by the executors from the personal estate had been invested, should from time to time be paid to her during her life ; and on her death any persons claiming to be entitled were to be at liberty to apply ; and it was ordered, that the executors should get in the outstanding personal estate ; and that so much thereof as should consist of interest, should be paid to Lady Anne Conolly ; and so much as consisted of principal, should be paid into the Bank, subject to farther order.

[* 140] *The Master's farther Report, dated the 10th of December, 1796, stated, that the Bank Stock and the Long and Short Annuities had been sold ; and the produce laid out in 3 per cent. annuities.

Upon the death of the Plaintiff Lady Anne Conolly the suit was revived by her executors ; and the cause coming on before Lord Alvanley, then Master of the Rolls, for farther directions on the subsequent Report, it was insisted on the part of Mr. Byng, that Lady Anne Conolly had received for interest and dividends, accrued on the Bank Stock, and the Long and Short Annuities, and the produce thereof laid out in Bank 3 per cent. Annuities, large sums more than she was entitled to, if those funds had been sold, as they ought to have been, immediately after the testator's decease, and the produce invested in a permanent fund, viz. the 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities. The Master of the Rolls directed inquiries with reference to that question between the executors of Lady Anne Conolly and Mr. Byng and the other parties interested in the residue of the personal estate ; with liberty to present a Petition to rehear the order of 1796, as to the payments thereby directed to be made to Lady Anne Conolly.

The rehearing was argued before Lord Rosslyn : but no judgment was given.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. W. Agar, Mr. Wingfield, Mr. Serjeant Palmer, Mr. Bell, and Mr. Richards, for different parties, in support of the Petition of Rehearing.—The tenant for life of such funds as Bank Annuities, carrying a higher interest, [* 141] and Long and Short Annuities, *wearing out rapidly, is not entitled to the enjoyment of them in specie ; but there is a standing rule of the Court for the benefit of all parties interested, that those funds shall be laid out in the more equal fund, the 3 per cents. No party ought to suffer by the circumstance, that what ought to have been done, and what the Court would have directed to be done, immediately on the testator's death, was not done. The state of this question is that the late Lord Chancellor went out of office without having delivered any opinion upon the point; and Lord Alvanley thought he could not decide against the order of the Lord Chancellor. Supposing his Lordship to have been of opinion, that there was something particular in this will, upon the distinction between the gift of a general residue for life, with remainder over, and a specific bequest of this sort of property; in which case it could not be sold, and the dividends follow of course from the death of the testator; even the rule, that takes place in general legacies, postponing the payment of interest to the end of a year from the death, not attaching upon it. But there is nothing specific in this will. This is a mere gift of the residue of the personal estate for life, subject to the payment of debts, legacies and annuities. Under every such will the Court has always sold this sort of property; if there was any wearing-out fund, not specifically given, or any fund, as to which the tenant for life had an advantage over those in remainder (1). This is to be found in every decree; and is so familiar, that no report of such a case is to be met with in print. Cranch v. Cranch (2), Powell v. Cleaver (3), and other cases, have been

(1) Gibson v. Bott, ante, 89.

(2) James Cranch by his will, dated the 22d of June, 1791, after several legacies to his children, gave the residue of his money, lands, tenements, goods, chattels, or estates, to his wife for life, and after her death to be equally divided among his children, who should be living; and appointed his wife executrix.

Decree for an account, such part as was already invested in government * securities was to be transferred to the Accountant General; and [* 142] the executrix admitting, that 4943L 13s. 9d. 5 per cent. Bank Annuities, was standing in her name, it was ordered, that the same should be transferred, &c.: and the dividends paid to her for life; with liberty to the Plaintiffs to apply at her decease.

* The Master's report, dated the 11th of July, 1797, stated, that the [* 143] personal estate consisted also of leasehold premises.

By an order, dated the 24th of July, 1797, it was among other things ordered, that the 5 per cent. Bank Annuities should be sold, and the money laid out in 3 per cent. Annuities; the interest to be paid to her for life; with liberty to the parties interested in the residue after her death to apply. An inquiry was directed, whether it was for the benefit of the person entitled to the clear residue of the personal estate to have the leasehold premises sold? and if it would be for their benefit, it was ordered, that they should be sold; and that the money should be laid out in the 3 per cents.; the dividends to be paid to her for life, with liberty to apply after her death.

(3) John Powell by his will, dated the 8th of August, 1775, devised all the manors and real estates to Cleaver and others for ninety-nine years, remainder to Arthur Roberts, and his first and other sons in tail; remainder to William Roberts, and his first and other sons in tail male; remainders over; and he directed his trustees, whom he also appointed his executors, to lay out the residue of his personal estate in the purchase of lands, to be settled to the same uses.

The bill was filed by the first tenant for life; and the usual decree was made. By an order, dated the 21st of January, 1788, 552L 3s. 9d. Long Annuities, and 3000L India Stock, standing in the testator's name at his decease, were directed to be sold, and the produce laid out in 3 per cent. Annuities: and as to 33,610L Bank 4 per cent. Annuities, and 28,897L Bank 5 per cent. Annuities, an inquiry was directed, whether the fund of the testator's estate would be in a better condiselected ; proving the invariable rule to sell Bank Stock, Long and Short Annuities, leases, &c., when the Court is informed by the record of the nature of the property. The consequence [* 143] is, the * residuary legatee is not entitled to any thing, till the debts and legacies are paid, and the residue ascertained. An objection has frequently been made by an annuitant, when the executor has desired to pay the fund into Court, that it would stop the interest. But an executor makes those payments at his peril. The Court has sometimes ordered the interest to be paid to the tenant for life : but that must be considered to have been without prejudice. In the instance of a Short Annuity the tenant for life would wear out the thing. Some certain rule must be established. The rights of the parties must be the same, as if the testator had converted the property immediately before his death. That or some other definite time must be fixed by the Court. It cannot depend upon the account, the acting of the executor, &c. The possibility of collusion between the tenant for life and the executor must be attended to. Suppose, the executor was himself tenant for life.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Trower, for the Executors of Lady Anne Conolly, in support of the decree.—The first question is, whether Lady Anne Conolly was entitled to the annual produce of [* 144] the personal estate * at the death of the testator : if not, the next consideration is, whether, the executors having paid it to her, and particularly the dividends of the Bank Stock, those payments ought to be called back.

The personal estate is given to her for life specifically. As this disposition is expressed, it is the same as if the testator had enumerated the particular articles, of which the personal estate consisted. He has not given his personal estate to his executors, in trust to sell, &c. and that what remains shall be given to those persons: but he has given the personal estate to them specifically ; as he has given the land. The Lord Chancellor considered, that there was nothing in the will, which made it necessary for the executor to convert this property into any other fund. For many purposes a bequest of all the personal estate is considered specific ; for instance, upon the question of exoneration, where there is a charge of debts. There is no doubt of the general rule : but this question does not depend upon it. In the case put by your Lordship, of a man having an annuity for the life of a A. and bequeathing his personal estate to A.

tion by selling the same, and investing the produce in 3 per cent. Annuities ; and the Master certifying, that it would, an order was made on the 21st of May, 1788, for the sale of those funds and investing the produce in the 3 per cents.

Elizabeth Hoadley by her will bequeathed the residue of her personal estate to Dr. Ashe for life, and after his decease to be divided among his children, to the sons at the age of twenty-one, to the daughters at that age or marriage.

An order was made, that 11,800*l.* Bank 5 per cent. Annuities should be sold, and the produce laid out in the 3 per cents.

Similar orders were made as to 5 per cent. Annuities, in Chancey v. Rees, Pepperin v. Lovewell, and Dagley v. Leake ; and in Griffiths v. Grieve, as to 4 per cent. Annuities ; and in Barthelomon v. Scholey, as to short Annuities.

for life, remainder to his son, there was a clear intention, that it should be sold. But suppose, he had expressly described the annuity: however absurd, it must be considered specific. If the only property was 40*l.* a-year, barely sufficient for a maintenance, and clearly intended for that purpose, upon this principle the rule must extend to that case. The rule is founded in convenience: but there is no fixed principle, that executors are bound of necessity to make the conversion at the testator's death or any given time afterwards. The executor ought not to change a permanent fund producing a larger interest to another producing a smaller, if such conversion is not required for the payment of debts. The habit is to do it, when the executor is called into this Court: not where he * is not called upon, and no question is raised. If he is [* 145] liable to question for not doing so, it must be upon the principle of Devastavit. The consequence will be, that there will be no possibility of executing a will without the direction of the Court, if, though not called upon by the remainder-man, he must do it at his own peril immediately. No given period has been ascertained, after which the remainder-man shall have a right to call upon him. The Court makes the conversion, but does not consider the executor as having done wrong in not having converted. No instance can be found, where it has come into Court several years after the death, and the executor has been charged. The period of the conversion in this instance at all events ought to be, not the time of the testator's death, but the year 1796, when the order was made; for it was competent to them to call upon the executor at a prior time.

The second question is of considerable novelty; as to what is to be done with the dividends received, particularly upon the Bank Stock. With reference to the Bank Stock, as distinguished from the annuities, no case has established, that the executor had done wrong by paying to the tenant for life the interest of some permanent fund, though producing more than if the property was vested in the 3 per cents.; and to make this party account for what she has received that proposition must be made out. This must have often occurred. A considerable part of the property might have been out upon securities at 5 per cent. If the tenant for life, to whom the interest was paid by the executor, died insolvent, would that be a Devastavit? No such decree was ever made. Upon that hypothesis it would be necessary for the executor immediately to call in all the Securities, Bank Stock, India Stock, Mortgages, &c. and to invest the whole in the 3 per cents.

* The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] desired the Counsel [* 146] in reply not to trouble himself upon the point, whether the bequest was specific, and to advert to the Bank Stock.

Mr. Mansfield, in reply.—In this respect there is no difference between the Bank Stock and the Annuities. The price is perfectly accidental; and is never considered. The Court says, 1st, Bank Stock is the stock of a trading company, not a Government fund, secured by the Legislature. The former also produces a high dividend, and is therefore more liable to fluctuation and uncertainty. For these reasons this Court never suffers those funds to remain; which is considered hazardous, and to a certain extent wasteful. The tenant for life cannot have any more right to advantage in the shape of that large dividend than of long and short annuities. The Court goes farther; ordering the conversion of 4 per cents. a Government fund; probably on the principle, that they are liable to be redeemed, and not so permanent a fund. With respect to refunding, these are trustees. Their conduct cannot affect the rights; and it happens, that there are dividends now due to Lady Anne Conolly in Court, which if the decision is against her, the executors have no objection to apply to the refunding, if it is to take place. If an executor had ignorantly and honestly made the payment, the Court would be unwilling to call upon him: but is there a doubt, that the person receiving the payments would be called on? In a few years more these Short Annuities will expire. Suppose, the whole property was in these circumstances. It does not very frequently happen, that any payment is made upon the residue before the interference of the Court; which prevents this accident. Several orders may however be found. In Holder v. Holder (1) an account was directed of all the excess, * that had been received of Short Annuities, beyond 4 per cent.

[* 147] Lord CHANCELLOR, [ELDON].—No question arises upon this will, except, whether this is a specific bequest of such personal estate as was the testator's at the time of his death. Lord Rosslyn is represented to have had considerable doubt, whether it was not specific; and if it is, I agree, not only Lady Anne Conolly up to the date of the decree, but afterwards, and Mr. Byng and the other persons in remainder, must take the specific produce of what is specifically given. But if it is so to be considered, the decree is not correct: considering the bequest specific to the date of that decree, and no longer. It is wrong therefore in any way.

Upon the question, whether this is specific, it must be either upon the words describing the personal estate, or upon the construction of those words, coupled with the devise of all his landed estates. With respect to the latter, every devise of land, whether in particular or general terms, must of necessity be specific from this circumstance; that a man can devise only what he has at the time of devising (2) (a). Upon that ground in a case at the Cockpit it was held, that a residuary devisee of land is as much a specific devisee as a particular devisee is. But it is quite different as to personal estate. The question must be, did he mean to dispose of what he had at the date of the will, or of that, which he should have at his death? If he meant the former, then every part of that identical personal estate, which is disposed of between the date of the will and the death, is a legacy adeemed: pro tanto it is gone. If the question is, whether those subjects, to be acquired between the date of his will and his death, should pass, I cannot say, he did mean that. If not, it can only be specific * thus; that the persons to take the personal estate he should have at his death in different interests should enjoy it as he left it. Not one word of this will goes to that. It is given as all his personal estate; and the mode, in which he says it is to be enjoyed, is to one for life, and to the others afterwards. Then the Court says, it is to be construed as to the perishable part, so that one shall take for life, and the others afterwards; and unless the testator directs the mode so that it is to continue, as it was, the Court understands, that it shall be put in such a state, that the others may enjoy it after the decease of the first; and the thing is quite equal; for it might consist of a vast number of particulars: for instance, a personal annuity, not to commence in enjoyment till the expiration of twenty years from the death of the testator, payable upon a contingency perhaps. If in this case it is equitable, that Long or Short Annuities should be sold, to give every one an equal chance, the Court acts equally in the other case; for those future interests are for the sake of the tenant for life to be converted into a present interest; being sold immediately, in order to yield an immediate interest to the tenant for life. As in the one case that, in which the tenant for life has too great an interest, is melted for the benefit of the rest, in the other that, of which, if it remained in specie, he might never receive any thing, is brought in; and he has immediately the interest of its present worth.

(1) In Chancery, May, 1789.

(2) ante, vol. ii. 427; post, viii. 305, x. 605.

(a) See upon this point 4 Kent (5th ed.) 510, 511 and note (d); Perry v. Phelps, ante, 1 V. 255, note (a) and cases cited; Brydges v. Duchess of Chandos, ante, 2 V. 417, note (d).

As to the annuities charged upon this estate, the tenant for life, if entitled to the whole, would be properly paying out of the aggregate property the annuities. But it would be great injustice to those in remainder, if these capital sums were paid out of that part of the bulk of the property, which does not consist of perishable interests; and were not to be thrown in proportion upon the perishable * part. The ordinary rule of apportioning requires, [* 149] that in some degree a provision should be made out of those, the Short Annuities, if they remain, and not out of the 3 per cents only.

The cases alluded to, where personal estate has been taken to be specifically given, do not apply. First, where a residuary legatee takes it as a specific gift, not subject to debts, the inference, that he is to take that personal estate, is not made in general cases upon the bequest of all the testator's personal estate, but upon the effect of that, connected with what arises out of other parts of the will, with regard to the intention to fix upon other funds charges, that would primarily fall upon that fund; and that must be made out, not by conjectures, but by declaration plain, or manifest intention (1).

(1) See ante, Gray v. Minnethorpe, vol. iii. 103; Hartley v. Hurle, v. 540, and other cases there referred to, and in the note, iii. 106; post, viii. 305.

That is the principle, upon which it is agreed these cases are to be construed; and the intention has never been considered manifest merely from a disposition of the personal estate in the same clause with land; which must be taken to be specifically given. But those cases do not go the length, that, if the enjoyment is portioned out in life interests, with remainders over, it is specific. I am clearly of opinion therefore, that this is not a case, in which the personal estate is in this sense specifically given, with a direction, that it shall remain specifically such as it was at the testator's death; and the purposes, for which it is given, are those, for which it is admitted there is a general rule, that these perishable funds are to be converted in such a way as to produce capital, bearing interest.

I was astonished, when that was doubted, from general recollection. I had considered the practice to be, that the first [* 150] * moment the observation of the Court was drawn to the fact, the Court would not permit property to be laid out or to remain upon such funds under a direction to lay it out in Government securities; but would immediately order it to be converted into that, which the Court deems for the execution of trusts a Government security. I pass over what has been said as to real securities, for there is a great difference between real securities, or Bank Stock, for instance, and Government securities. Bank Stock is as safe, I trust and believe, as any Government security: but it is not Government security; and therefore this Court does not lay out, or leave, the property in Bank Stock; and what the Court will decree it expects from trustees and executors. I will not state, what the Court would do, where executors had not made these conversions. That depends upon many circumstances. But I abide by Lord Kenyon's rule in the case of Mr. Champion, an executor, before which time it was doubted, whether an executor could lay out the property in the 3 per cents. Lord Kenyon, who was a repository of valuable knowledge, produced a dictum of Lord Northington, that the Court would protect an executor in doing what it would order him to do. The Court in this case would order him to do that. It is not so in the case of a mortgage. The Court would not permit a real security to be called in without an inquiry, whether it would be for the benefit of every person; and it is accident, that some part of the assets will produce more interest than a genuine trust security. In some instances there is little doubt, it may be not only for the benefit of the tenant for life, but for the substantial interest of the remainder-man that the property should not be shifted from a good real security.

The question then is, whether the Court will change the fund, not as between the remainder-man and the executor, but in a [* 151] * question between the tenant for life and the remainder-man (a); and the question with the executor cannot well arise, so as to be acted upon, till a failure by the tenant for life, or those, who represent him ; for the justice of the case, if the tenant for life had received so much, would be, that he should bring it back in case of the executor, who paid him. If the rule is, that the fund shall not remain, it is impossible to say, the date of the decree shall decide. I do not like to put it upon the possibility of collusion : but that is not to be totally neglected ; for it may happen, that the executor himself may be the tenant for life ; and then he has an interest in delay. Of necessity there must be great delay, before there can be a final decree in a cause of great property ; and it may be very much protracted, where there is an interest. However, I do not put it upon that. But, if the principle is, that the Court, when its observation is thrown upon it, will order the conversion, it ought to be considered to all practicable purposes as converted, when it could be first converted. That is the genuine inference from the other principle. If the Court has ever attended to the difficulties, often thrown before it, with regard to perishable property of other kinds, as leasehold estate (1), &c. it never has as to stock. You can learn the price, at which it might be converted on any day ; and the moment the Court was ordered by the Legislature to lay out its funds in stock, it necessarily held, that for this purpose stock must always be considered of the same value. It is for the benefit of the creditor, that it should be thrown into a lasting fund ; and it is equal to all the parties interested. As to Bank Stock, the Court has ordered 4 per cents. and 5 per cents. to be sold and converted into 3 per cents. upon this ground ; that, however likely or not, * that they may be redeemed, the Court looks at them as [* 152] a fund, that is not permanent, though it may remain for ever ; and considers, that from that quality there is an advantage to the present holder ; who gets more interest, because they are liable to be redeemed. I do not know, whether the reasoning is as just in practice as it is in theory. Property cannot be laid out by this Court in Bank Stock, in the execution of a trust to lay it out in Government securities ; for it is not a Government security. Converting that therefore the executors would have done what this Court would have ordered ; and that falls under the same consideration ; and the ad-

(a) See 1 Story Eq. Jur. § 604, and note; Foley v. Burnell, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 279, and notes; Covenhoven v. Shaler, 2 Paige, 122, 132; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 850, 851, 1000.

Formerly the remainder man could call on the tenant for life for security of the fund. That practice has, however, been overruled. Foley v. Burnell, ubi supra; Sutton v. Craddock, 1 Ired. Eq. 134.

The practice now is as in the text, to have the property sold and converted into cash by the executor, and the proceeds safely invested. 2 Kent (5th ed.) 354, and note; Evans v. Eglehart, 6 Gill & John. 171; De Peyster v. Clandining, 8 Paige, 295.

But it seems, that security may still be required, in a case of real danger, that the property may be wasted, secreted or removed. See Mortimer v. Moffat, 3 Hen. & Munf. 503; Gardner v. Harden, 2 McCord, Ch. 32; Smith v. Daniel, ib. 143; Merrit v. Johnson, 1 Yerger, 71; Henderson v. Vaulx, 10 Yerger, 30; Hudson v. Wadsworth, 8 Conn. 348; Langworthy v. Chadwick, 13 ib. 42. When it is shown that the property is in danger in the hands of the first taker, the Court may require security at any time during the term of his possession. Homer v. Shelton, 2 Metcalf, 194. See 2 Kent, (5th ed.) 353, 354.

(1) Gibson v. Bott, ante, 89; Fearns v. Young, post, vol. ix. 549.

vantage, if any, ought not to accrue to the tenant for life. The account therefore must go as to that as well as the long and short annuities, from the time, at which it would have been converted, if the observation of the Court had been drawn to the fact, that the executors were possessed of those funds.

This petition of rehearing is therefore well founded (1).

1. THAT every devise of land must, of necessity, be specific; and, therefore, that no man can dispose of lands to which he has no title at the time of making such will: see, ante, note 2 to Brydges v. The Duchess of Chandos, 2 V. 417.

2. The fact that a testator has charged his real estates with incumbrances to which his personal estate is primarily liable, is not, of itself, a discharge of the personal estate; the charge upon the real estate may have been intended to be only auxiliary, and not to be had recourse to unless the personal estate proved insufficient; see, ante, note to Kidney v. Cossmaker, 1 V. 436; and note 2 to Hamilton v. Worley, 2 V. 62.

3. An executor in trust, who has done, without an order, what the Court would have ordered him to do, will be protected. Fountaine v. Pellett, 1 V. 343.

4. That trust-money, which executors find placed out on good security, is not, as a universal rule, to be called in; see, ante, note 1 to Sitwell v. Bernard, 6 V. 520.

5. The funds in which the Court of Chancery generally directs investments to be made, are the 3 per cent. Bank annuities: Holland v. Hughes, 3 Meriv. 686; S. C. 16 Ves. 114; Ex parte Cathorpe, 1 Cox, 182; but, in order to provide a maintenance for a lunatic, his whole property, if requisite, may be ordered to be laid out in the purchase of a government annuity for the life of the lunatic: Ex parte Stonard, 18 Ves. 285; for the leading object to which the great officer who administers the jurisdiction in lunacy should look, is the comfort of the lunatic himself, without any regard to expectants after his death: see, ante, the notes to Ex parte Chunley, 1 V. 156.

6. As to the arrangement of the respective interests of the tenant for life, and the remainder-man, under a bequest of leasehold or perishable property, see Gibson v. Bott, 7 Ves. 95; and Fearns v. Young, 9 Ves. 552.

(1) Post, 193; Holland v. Hughes, vol. xvi. 111.

HILL v. SIMPSON.

[ROLLS.—1801, JUNE 15, 16; 1802, MAY 24.]

TRANSFER by an executor, a clear misapplication of assets, immediately after the death, to secure a debt of the executor and future advances, under circumstances of gross negligence, though not direct fraud, set aside by general legatees (a).

In many respects and for many purposes third persons may consider executors absolute owners (b), [p. 166.]
Power of disposition generally incident to an executor (c), [p. 166.]

JOHN SMITH by his will, dated the 18th of January, 1785, among other legacies, gave to Jane Pearson the sum of 200*l.* to be paid to her immediately, or as soon as possible on the death or marriage of his wife Elizabeth Smith; and he left Charles Rushworth 50*l.*, to be paid at the death of his said wife; and he appointed John Lush and his said wife Elizabeth Smith, executors. The testator died on the 23d of May, 1785; and his widow and Lush proved the will. Lush died on the 26th of January, 1796; and on his death Elizabeth * Smith possessed herself of all the personal estate of her late husband. [* 153]

Elizabeth Smith by her will, made in 1790, directed all her debts, funeral expenses, and the expenses of the executors, to be paid; and, subject thereto and to her late husband's will, she gave, devised, and bequeathed, all and every the moneys, real and personal estates, securities for money, goods, chattels, and all other her estate and effects, to her nephews Joseph Simpson, William Thorley, and Henry Wright, and to the survivors and survivor of them, their and his executors and administrators; upon trust to convey the freehold

(a) Pecuniary and residuary legatees may question the validity of a fraudulent disposition of assets by the executor. 1 Story Eq. Jur. § 424, and note.

It is only in cases of fraud and collusion, that the Court will follow assets in the hands of a purchaser. Field v. Schieffelin, 7 John. Ch. 155, 156; 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 1128; 1 ib. § 580; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 673, 674.

The mere knowledge of the purchaser that the property was assets, is not sufficient to make him responsible. Field v. Schieffelin, 7 John. Ch. 156.

But if a person takes assets, knowing them to be such in extinguishment of a private debt of the executor, he will not be allowed to retain against creditors and legatees. Field v. Schieffelin, 7 John. Ch. 157, 158; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 673, 674; Graff v. Castleton, 5 Rand. 195; Dodson v. Simpson, 2 ib. 294.

There is a decisive difference between taking assets for an antecedent debt and for money advanced at the time of the transfer. Petrie v. Clark, 11 Serg. & R. 388; Field v. Schieffelin, 7 John. Ch. 159, 160.

See farther as to fraudulent transfers of assets by executors and administrators, 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 1257, 1 ib. § 422-424; Ram on Assets, p. 486, 487, ch. 37, § 4; Dickenson v. Lockyer, ante, 4 V. 36, note (a).

As to an agent pledging goods of his principal for his own debt, see De Bouhoult v. Goldsmid, ante, 5 V. 211, note (a), and cases cited.

(b) See 1 Story Eq. Jur. § 579.

(c) Knight v. Yarborough, 4 Band. 566; M'Alister v. Montgomery, 3 Hayw. 94; Raymer v. Pearsall, 3 John. Ch. 578; Andrew v. Wrigley, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 125, 138 and note; 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 422, 579; Ram on Assets, ch. 37, § 2, p. 475, 476, 579, 580.

property, consisting of two messuages, to her two nephews John Simpson and James Simpson; with remainder over to Joseph Simpson; and after giving some legacies she appointed Joseph Simpson, Thorley, and Wright, her executors.

Elizabeth Smith died on the 5th of April 1797; leaving Joseph Simpson her heir at law; who alone proved her will; and possessed himself of her real and personal estates, and of part of the personal estate of John Smith. At her death there were standing in the name of John Smith in the books of the Bank of England 50*l.* 5 per cent. Navy Annuities: 275*l.* 4 per cent. Consolidated Annuities: 60*l.* Short Annuities and 550*l.* 3 per cent. Reduced Annuities; which funds Simpson transferred to Moffat and Co., his bankers, as a security for such sums as he then owed, or might afterwards owe them. In 1798 a commission of bankruptcy issued against him.

Thomas Hill married Jane Pearson; and they and Rushworth, who was then an infant, filed the bill against Simpson and Wright, Thorley being dead, and against the assignees and the bankers [^{* 154]} praying, that it may be * declared, that the funds transferred by Simpson to the bankers are liable to the legacies of the Plaintiffs, &c.

The Defendants Moffatt and Co. by their answer stated, that about February 1794 the Defendant Simpson opened an account with them as bankers; which continued till his bankruptcy; in the course of which he drew a great number of bills on them; and was always or for the most part in their debt on the balance of such account; for which they repeatedly pressed him; and frequently refused to accept and pay his bills, until he remitted money to discharge or lessen such balance; and informed him, they would not continue such account, unless he made remittances to answer his bills. On the 11th of May 1797, he was indebted to them 399*l.* 18*s.* 5*d.* besides other bills, which they had accepted for him, not then due; and he called upon them; and represented, that he was under the necessity of providing a very large sum of money immediately; and requested them to advance it; and to induce them to do so offered to transfer the funds mentioned in the bill as a security as well for the balance then due, as also what they should advance to him for his then occasions, and also all other sums, which they should at any time hereafter pay on his account; and these Defendants having at the earnest solicitation of Simpson agreed to advance the money, which he had then immediate occasion for, he on the 11th of May 1797 transferred to them 100*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Annuities, and the several sums of stock mentioned in the bill. The 100*l.* 3 per cents. were then standing in the names of Lush and Elizabeth Smith; and all the other funds in the name of John Smith; which the Defendants knew, by reason that at the request of Simpson they received the dividends under a power of attorney [^{* 155]} granted by Elizabeth Smith; which * they always placed to the credit of Simpson's account with them.

They denied, that they knew or suspected, that the funds were not at the time of the transfer the absolute property of Simpson as executor or devisee of Elizabeth Smith ; or that they were part of the personal estate of John Smith : on the contrary they believed, they were Simpson's own property ; and he represented to them, that he was absolutely entitled thereto, subject only to an annuity of 20*l.* to Elizabeth Smith's sister during her life, and to a few very small legacies ; that he had full right to dispose thereof ; and would have disposed but for the low price of the funds ; which he expected would rise. They also stated, that they did not know, any of the legacies of John Smith to the Plaintiffs or any other person were unpaid. The answer then set forth a letter from him to them, dated the 20th of April 1797 ; stating the death of Elizabeth Smith ; that she had left him the whole of her property, both real and personal, paying 20*l.* a-year to her sister for life, then seventy-six years old, and a few very small legacies ; that he intended to be in London by the 28th ; supposing her will must be proved in London, on account of the money in the funds ; and stating his intention to produce the will to them, before he should do any thing, as being well assured, they would advise him for the best to save expense.

The answer then stated, that in consequence of the said transfer, and upon the faith, credit, and validity thereof, the Defendants on the 13th of May 1797, paid bills and notes on account of Simpson to the amount of 673*l.* 1*s.* 6*d.* then outstanding ; which they believe was the sum or part of it, which he was anxious to provide for. On the 16th of February, 1798, he gave the Defendants the following authority in writing :—

*“ Messrs. Moffatt, Kensington, and Styan, London, [*156] 16th February 1798.—Gentlemen, having some time back transferred into the name of your partner Mr. John Pooley Kensington sundry sums of different stocks and annuities as a security for any advances or engagements, which you might at that time have come under, or might at any future time come under, for me, I hereby authorize you to sell or otherwise dispose of the same, whenever you may think proper, at my risk, and for my account ; and I will confirm and approve of the same ; and will, whenever required by you, execute a legal instrument to that effect.—Joseph Simpson.”

The answer farther stated, that upon the faith of the said transfer and security of the said funds the Defendants did after such transfer and on the credit thereof pay the bills of Simpson to a much greater amount, and suffered him to be in arrear to Defendants in a much larger balance than they had before done ; insomuch, that on the 21st of June, 1798, when Simpson became bankrupt, he was indebted to Defendants on the balance of accounts in 1435*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* They never had any other security ; except that Simpson and Elizabeth Smith executed a bond to them, dated the 22d of December, 1795, for securing any balance, which might be due from Simpson in account between him and them, and the bills, drafts, and notes, paid to them as his bankers ; and which, when received, they placed to the credit of his account with them.

The answer was replied to ; but the Plaintiffs did not go into evidence.

Mr. Cox and Mr. Fonblanche, for the Plaintiffs : Mr. Stanley, for Defendants, in the same interest.—This is a question of [* 157] dry law ; whether executors *can pledge the fund they hold in that right for their own debt. Upon the answer of the bankers there is a distinct admission of the situation of Simpson, before these funds came to him ; that they repeatedly dishonored his bills, until they got from him this security, evidently the only one he could give them : no real consideration passing. Can they then avail themselves of that, which was a clear misapplication of the assets ? It is now settled, particularly in the late case of Farr v. Newman (1), in which the subject was much discussed, that goods, which come to a man as executor, are for many purposes distinguished from his own. It was therefore determined in that case by three Judges against the opinion of Buller, Justice, that the goods of the testator cannot be taken in execution for the debt of the executor. The point was very fully considered by Lord Kenyon, whose experience in this Court made him competent to consider the cases on this subject decided in Equity ; which are very numerous. The decisions, that an executor may sell the assets, and the purchaser shall not be bound to see to the application of the money, may be laid out of the case. A direct application of the assets cannot be impeached : a power of sale being necessarily inherent in the character of executor, in that case it would be enormous to bind the purchaser. This is not a sale, but a transfer by way of pledge, as a security for an antecedent debt, contracted before these legacies were due, and also sums, for which they were then under acceptance, and such sums as they should advance. It has been also determined, that an executor may become the purchaser for his own use of the assets by discharging debts or legacies of equal amount. But in this instance it must be contended, that, though this executor has not made any such advance, yet as by possibility he might, therefore upon this transfer to them [* 158] *for a debt of his own, they are as much discharged from any obligation of inquiry into that fact, as if they were purchasers of these funds in the common course.

First, to consider the general proposition. In the case of a pledge the person taking the pledge is bound to see to the account ; in other words, he takes it subject to the chance : the transaction not having in itself a direct appearance of the administration of the assets. No purpose of justice can be answered by establishing a rule the other way to the extent of a pledge. The power of sale is sufficient for the purpose ; as much as general convenience requires ; without going the length of establishing, that a person, to whom the executor has pledged the assets, shall hold them discharged, on account of the possibility, that he may have made advances. Certainly that is not the natural way of dealing with assets; particularly, if the pledge is for a debt antecedent to any interest of his in the estate. It has been determined, that an agent or factor with power to sell cannot pledge for his own debt: Paterson v. Tash (1). Daubigny v. Duval (2). De Bouchout v. Goldsmid (3). What is the power of the executor beyond that of the agent? He is acting equally ex mandato. The only cases favorable to such a doctrine are Nugent v. Gifford (4), and Mead v. Lord Orrery (5). The former is a short report in Atkyns; and it may be doubted, whether the law was laid down so generally as is there represented. From Mead v. Lord Orrery Lord Hardwicke does not appear to have considered Nugent v. Gifford, which occurred shortly before as having decided the dry point so generally; but gave his *opinion much at length; and evidently relied on the [*159] many particular circumstances, the recital of the mortgage, the concurrence of the executors, &c.; plainly not satisfied, that it was a clear proposition, that the executor might dispose of the assets just as he thought fit. Even those cases make an exception of anything like fraud; and an application in a way, that cannot by possibility answer any of the purposes of the will, is prima facie evidence of fraud. There is reason to believe, that the point in Nugent v. Gifford was, whether the parties interested under the settlement had not that sort of specific lean, that controlled the general power of the executor.

But these two cases by no means stand unimpeached. In Bonney v. Ridgard (6) Sir Thomas Sewell gave the relief these Plaintiffs pray; and Lord Kenyon upon a rehearing finally decided upon the length of time; though from the importance of the points he gave his opinion upon them, and directly against Mead v. Lord Orrery; observing, that all the cases except that are to be distinguished; but not taking notice of Nugent v. Gifford. He admitted, that an executor may trust a person, whom the testator trusted (7); but said, if the transaction is for any improper purpose, it cannot stand. In addition to this very considerable authority the point was much considered by Lord Thurlow, in Scott v. Tyler; and though it was compromised as to that, it has always been understood, that Lord Thurlow's opinion was against the bankers (8). Andrew v. Wrig-

(1) 2 Str. 1178.

(2) 5 Term Rep. B. R. 606.

(3) Ante, vol. v. 211.

(4) 1 Atk. 463; cited 2 Ves. 269. Stated from the Register Book by the Master of the Rolls, 4 Bro. C. C. 136, in Andrew v. Wrigley.

(5) 3 Atk. 235.

(6) Stated 2 Bro. C. C. 438, in Scott v. Tyler; and more fully in Andrew v. Wrigley, 4 Bro. C. C. 125. Mr. Cox cited it from his own ms. note, since published, 1 Cox, 145.

(7) Ante, Routh v. Howell, vol. iii. 565.

(8) This appears to be correct by the Report since published from Lord Thurlow's written judgment, 2 Dick. 712.

ley (1) also, though the decision turned upon the length of time, shows, Lord Alvanley was more inclined to follow Bonney v. Ridgard than the cases before Lord Hardwicke.

The reversal of the decree in Humble v. Bill (2) in the House of Lords, and Crane v. Drake (3), were considered as having determined the law up to the time of Nugent v. Gifford. Elliot v. Merriman (4) is so full of specialties, and so completely depends upon the particular circumstances, that it cannot furnish a general rule. Can it be supposed, that the Court would in that case have resorted to the particular circumstances, if a general rule had been established in Nugent v. Gifford, only two years before? Lord Hardwicke's anxiety in the subsequent cases to select the special circumstances is perfectly inconsistent with the notion, that he had drawn any such general conclusion. In Tanner v. Ivie (5), his Lordship anxiously disclaims any such general principle; and puts it upon collusion.

Next, upon the particular circumstances of this case, can these Bankers in any way be considered as having taken these funds in the due administration of the assets? He first opened an account with them in 1794: they repeatedly dishonored his bills: they thought fit to rely only on his assertion, that he was entitled, subject only to a few small legacies: they take a transfer from the name of the original testator John Smith; to whose will the property is expressly made subject by the will of his widow; the transaction taking place immediately upon her death; the will submitted to them by him with a view to their advice. The circumstances exclude the only inference, that could avail them, that [* 161] he might have *been a creditor upon the assets by previous advances. Under such circumstances, approaching nearly to what Lord Hardwicke calls a contrivance for a Devastavit, notwithstanding the difference between executors and trustees, all the consequences, that would attach upon the latter, will attach upon the executor and the persons dealing with him.

Mr. Piggott and Mr. Trower, for the Defendants, the Bankers.— These Defendants have taken a transfer from the person having the legal right to make it. They are therefore legally entitled; and can be dispossessed only by some clear, distinct, equity. The utmost extent of the expressions of Lord Kenyon and Lord Alvanley is, that the Plaintiffs might have been relieved, if they had come in time. The cases, with some few exceptions, are cases of specific legatees; having an inchoate title; liable to be defeated only by debts. These Plaintiffs are mere pecuniary legatees, not having a charge on any specific fund. The death of the testator, under whom they claim, took place thirteen years before the bankruptcy,

(1) 4 Bro. C. C. 125.

(2) 2 Vern. 444; 1 Bro. P. C. 71.

(3) 2 Vern. 616.

(4) Barnard, Ch. Rep. 78; 2 Atk. 41.

(5) 2 Vern. 466.

that has produced this bill. It was perfectly competent to them to file a bill to have the fund secured. Upon the death of Mrs. Smith, in 1797, the estate was to be represented by another person; and still no bill was filed, nor upon the transfer, or the authority to sell, given in 1798: but upon the bankruptcy this attempt is made. Then, as the consideration, it is supposed, the advance could have no connection with the estate and the satisfaction of the demands upon it; that it was a desperate debt from this executor to the bankers. That is by no means the fair result of the answer. They paid the utmost value of this stock within two days after the transfer. It is true, they had supplied him with money; he * owed them about 300*l.; and they took it, to secure that [ 162] debt, and to cover future advances; and two days after they advance 600*l.*; and go on making payments, till the debt amounts to nearly 1500*l.*, far exceeding the whole value of this stock. How then can it be called a security for a desperate debt without any real consideration passing? In substance it is a sale for valuable consideration. The only occasion of his mentioning the will was to ask their advice upon the probate. It was not necessary for the bankers to see the will for the purpose they were then transacting: nor does the answer say, they did see it. Put the case of an executor expecting a rise of the funds in a week; and therefore refraining from a sale; and pledging the stock: has the person putting the money into his hands any means of knowing, how it is to be applied; whether he has advanced more; whether he wanted it for the purposes of the testator? How can he travel into that? Is it sufficient, that a third person some time afterwards says, he will show, it could not be wanted for the purposes of the testator; that all those purposes are satisfied? Upon such terms how can any one deal with safety as to property so circumstanced? Consider the consequences, if no person can take from an executor a transfer of property in the funds, now grown of such magnitude, without being subject to be thus called upon.

The case of a specific legatee is evidently distinct. The object of the executor is not to convert a specific legacy, but to convert all the other assets into money. It is admitted, that if land is devised subject to a particular charge, the purchaser must see to the application: not, if it is subjected to debts generally. The former instance has no analogy to this; the land being specifically charged by the testator. The final decision of Humble v. Bill, reversing * the decree of Sir Nathan Wright, for a great while was [* 163] not acknowledged as the Law of the Court; and was disapproved by Sir Joseph Jekyll, in Ewer v. Corbet (1), confirming Lord Hardwicke's opinion. From the great increase of personal property the inconvenience upon grounds of public policy of involving a purchaser in the accounts of the testator's estate must have been foreseen by those great men. But in Humble v. Bill there was not a general charge upon the personal or real estate, but exclusively upon that particular subject, a printing-office. That decision therefore is nothing more than that a prior mortgage must be preferred to a second. But all these cases are answered by Nugent v. Gifford and Mead v. Lord Orrery: those cases certainly excepting positive and actual fraud. The later cases do not impeach Lord Hardwicke's general doctrine; stating only, in Mead v. Lord Orrery it went too far; the pledge being for a debt, with which the testator's property had no connection. In Ewer v. Corbet any responsibility of the purchaser is utterly and unequivocally reprobated. In Farr v. Newman the goods of the testator were remaining in specie in the possession of the executor; a creditor of the testator pressing at the same time: two executions on the same day: the executor living in the testator's house; and using his furniture and goods; no third person intervening: no act done by him upon those goods, so in his possession. In Whale v. Booth (1), there cited, Lord Mansfield, who had assisted in all these cases before Lord Hardwicke, says, there is but one exception to the general rule, that an executor may dispose of the assets, and they cannot be followed; the case of collusion; which was the opinion of Lord Hardwicke and Sir Joseph Jekyll. In Elliot v. Merriman the bill was dismissed with [* 164] * costs in favor of the general power of an executor over the assets. In Farr v. Newman, Buller, Justice, certainly overruled by the rest of the Court, states the proposition up to this; that the property of the executor is absolute. He certainly has a property for paying the debts and legacies. The rule is founded in great good sense and policy. Trusts must be reposed; and those claiming under the testator must trust the person he has trusted. Is the purchaser to seek out the legatee in any part of the world? If the bankers had refused the transfer, he might have sold the stock, and brought them the money: saying, he should draw for it. Is this Court to decide upon such distinctions; and could such a system of jurisdiction be endured in a commercial country? The case must stand upon fraud.

Mr. Cox, in reply.—The proposition, upon which this case rests, is, that, where the executor pledges the property for a debt of his own, that is prima facie evidence of collusion. The meaning of fraud in these cases is, where the party dealing with the executor, not in the usual course of administration, does not make particular inquiries, whether he has a right to deal in that particular manner. Farr v. Newman contradicts the assertion, that the property of the executor is absolute. It is so only for the purpose of the distribution of the assets. For that purpose certainly his power is very large; but still confined to that. No laches can be imputed to the Plaintiffs. It is said, a bill might have been filed to secure these legacies: but is that to be expected from a legatee of 200*l.*: the assets also standing all this time in the name of the testator; and no attempt to dispose of them? The other Plaintiff was an infant; and his legacy was not payable till the death of Mrs. Smith. As to the consideration, none was paid for the purposes of the estate; and clearly the antecedent debt was part. * The subsequent [* 165] advances were upon bills drawn antecedently: the offer to transfer being the day of the testatrix's interment. It is impossible, that the money so advanced could be for the purpose of being applied in the administration. The inference is, that there was no consideration for the purposes of the estate. The circumstance of dealing by way of mortgage is enough to raise suspicion. No danger to the public can flow from this precedent. As far as the executor deals so, that it can by possibility be taken as a fair, direct course of administration, let it stand. The objection is confined to transactions, that cannot be a fair, direct, administration. The circumstances of suspicion throw the proof on the Defendants. The answer to the objection of difficulty is, that they ought to have desired to see discharges from the legatees before the transfer. It was natural to file the bill, when they heard of the insolvency, not, while they had a chance of being paid. It is decisive, that this could not be in the direct administration of the assets.

(1) 4 Term Rep. B. R. 625, note.

May 24th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [SIR WILLIAM GRANT]. —The question is whether the Plaintiffs, legatees, can follow the assets in the hands of third persons, to whom the executor has transferred them. There is no evidence in the cause, but the answer. I cannot therefore infer any thing against the Defendants, which they do not admit; for it was in the power of the Plaintiffs to procure an explicit admission or denial of every fact, within the knowledge of the Defendants. I cannot assume, that they ever saw Mrs. Smith's will; though Simpson says, he was to produce it to them; for they do not say, they ever did see it. Without doubt the Plaintiffs are entitled to a decree against the executor, now a bankrupt; and his assignees are parties.

* Several well known cases were referred to on both sides. [* 166] The Defendants rely upon Nugent v. Gifford, Mead v. Lord Orrery, and Whale v. Booth, as establishing the absolute right of the executor to bind the assets by any disposition; at least, where there is no actual fraud in the party taking under it. The other cases, Humble v. Bill, Crane v. Drake, Farr v. Newman, Bonney v. Ridgard, and Andrew v. Wrigley, are relied on by the Plaintiffs; as showing, that there are limits to that rule; which limits they contend are here transgressed. Though it is difficult to reconcile all the doctrine and dicta, that are to be found in the cases, the decisions do not appear to me to be inconsistent. It is true, that executors are in Equity mere trustees for the performance of the will; yet in many respects and for many purposes third persons are entitled to consider them absolute owners. The mere circumstance, that they are executors, will not vitiate any transaction with them; for the power of disposition is generally incident; being frequently necessary ; and a stranger shall not be put to examine, whether in the particular instance that power has been discreetly exercised. But from the proposition, that a third person is not bound to look to the trust in every respect and for every purpose, does it follow, that, dealing with the executor for the assets, he may equally look upon him as absolute owner, and wholly overlook his character as trustee ; when he knows, the executor is applying the assets to a purpose wholly foreign to his trust ? No decision necessarily leads to such a consequence.

In Nugent v. Gifford it appears from the Register's Book, as stated (1) in Andrew v. Wrigley, though not in the Report in Atkyns, that the testator died two years before the executor [* 167] and residuary legatee made the *assignment, that was impeached. At least therefore there was room to suppose, that the executor might in that period by advances on account of the trust have entitled himself to reimbursement out of the assets : but even so explained, the late Master of the Rolls would not go farther than to say, that case might be rightly determined ; and in Scott v. Tyler, Lord Thurlow said (2), it was difficult to reconcile it with Crane v. Drake. In Mead v. Lord Orrery Lord Hardwicke, instead of stating shortly and generally, that an executor has the absolute right to dispose, as he pleases, of the testator's property, enters into all the circumstances, to show, that in that case the assignment ought to stand ; that it was made several years after the testator's death ; that it was not the case of a sole executor disposing for his own benefit, but of three executors, two not interested, one a residuary legatee ; that, as he was one of the executors, and in his banking shop the money affairs were transacted, he might have been, as he was recited to be, the sole owner of the mortgage : he might be a creditor for that sum by advances made by him : or it might have been released and assigned to him by the other executors, as his share of the residuary estate. Under all those circumstances perhaps it would have been hard to have deprived the assignee of the benefit ; and yet Lord Kenyon in Bonney v. Ridgard, with an accurate note (3) of which I have been favored by Mr. Cox, declared his dissent from that case ; and declared, he should have given the opposite decision ; and yet there was nothing like express fraud ; and no motive for it, in order to obtain that assignment ; for Mead the younger was not indebted ; but was only to give security for what might come to him afterwards as receiver ; and he used the mortgage for that purpose. It was indifferent to them, [* 168] whether they had that or any *other security. But Lord Kenyon says, that, if there is either express or implied fraud, the purchaser is bound. In Whale v. Booth, though that case seems over-ruled by Farr v. Newman, stress was laid upon the circumstance, that the testator had been dead three years ; and

(1) 4 Bro. C. C. 135, 136.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 477.

(3) Since published, 1 Cox, 145.

Lord Mansfield says, "if the executors paid all demands, as in that time they might have done, the assets belong to them."

Those three cases for the Defendants are in some degree impeached in subsequent decisions. But, supposing they were not impeached, there is nothing in any of them excluding the possibility of the executor having acquired on the execution of the trust, a right to appropriate to himself the assets. But in this instance the assignment was made in less than a month after the death of Mrs. Smith. There is not therefore the least ground for the presumption of right acquired to the assets of Mr. or Mrs. Smith by payments made in that short interval on account of either estate. It is not pretended, it was to satisfy any claim on either estate; for the express purpose appears to have been to secure a debt of his own, which he already owed to the bankers, and other advances they were to make by taking up bills of his, then actually outstanding. They had distinct notice therefore, that the money was not to be applied to any demand upon either estate; but the assets were to be wholly applied to the private purpose of the executor. Allowing every case to remain undisturbed, does it follow from any, that an executor in the first month after the testator's death can apply the assets in payment of his own debt; and that a creditor is perfectly safe in so receiving and applying them, provided he abstains from looking at the will; which would show the existence of unsatisfied demands? I am for the moment keeping out of sight the representation made by Simpson; and supposing the question to * be, whether [* 169] an executor may thus deal and be dealt with; and it is clear, no rule of justice permits, or of convenience requires, that he should have this unbounded power. Though it may be dangerous at all to restrain the power of purchasing from him, what inconvenience can there be in holding, that the assets, known to be such, should not be applied in any case for the executor's debt, unless the creditor could be first satisfied of his right? It may be essential, that the executor should have the power to sell the assets: but it is not essential, that he should have the power to pay his own creditor; and it is not just, that one man's property should be applied to the payment of another man's debt.

But the question is, not, whether the rule is now to be made more strict, but whether general justice and convenience require it to be relaxed beyond all former precedent. I should hesitate to go so far as other cases have gone: but this would go much farther than any. If the second point in Scott v. Tyler had received the decision, which it was generally supposed would have been given (1), it would be an authority far beyond what these Plaintiffs want; for in that case the executrix had disposed of the River Lee Bonds four years after the death of the testator. The bankers swore, they knew nothing of the will; and they believed the bonds her own property, not that of the testator. If that case had been decided against the bankers, it would have furnished a stronger authority than is necessary for these Plaintiffs.

(1) It has since appeared, that, though that point ended in a compromise, Lord Thurlow had formed his judgment upon it against the bankers. See 2 Dick. 724.

Hitherto I have supposed the executor pretending on other authority than as executor; and that the other Defendants relied solely upon his authority in that character. But the truth is, [* 170] it was not upon his legal *authority as executor that they relied: but they proceeded, as they state, upon the faith of his representation; by which they were induced to believe, that the property he assigned to them was actually his own; as the testatrix had left him every thing, subject only to 20*l.* a year, and a few small legacies. This representation is partly true, partly false. He was her residuary legatee; and it is taken for granted on all sides, that she had a right to dispose of this property: but he was subject to something more than 20*l.* a year, and some trifling legacies, viz. the claims under her husband's will. This they would have seen, if they had looked at her will instead of taking his representation. They would have seen, that he had no right to assign the stock, till the claims under that will were satisfied; and that some of those claims were unsatisfied. Common prudence required, that they should look at the will, and not take the debtor's word as to his right under it. If they neglect that, and take the chance of his speaking the truth, they must incur the hazard of his falsehood. The rights of third persons must not be affected by their negligence. I do not impute to them direct fraud: but they acted rashly, incautiously, and without the common attention used in the ordinary course of business; the reference in the will of Mrs. Smith to the will of her husband making it the same, as if a legatee of her own was disappointed by this. It was gross negligence not to look at the will, under which alone a title could be given to them. It was not necessary to use any exertion to obtain information, but merely not to shut their eyes against the information, which without extraordinary neglect they could not avoid receiving. No transaction with executors can be rendered unsafe by holding, that assets transferred under such circumstances may be followed.

For the Defendants it is objected, that the Plaintiffs were guilty of laches in not taking steps to secure their legacies in the [* 171] *life of Mrs. Smith. But one was an infant, when the bill was filed; and his legacy was not payable till her death; and though the Plaintiff Hill might have filed a bill, it was not gross negligence not to do so for so small an object. There was no reason to think the fund was in danger; and upon inquiry she would have found stock sufficient left to answer her legacy. Upon the whole I am of opinion, these funds are liable to answer the Plaintiff's demands (1).

1. THAT, under many circumstances, third persons have a right to consider executors as having the absolute disposal, for their own use, of their testator's assets, and to deal with them as absolute owners, provided the transaction be tainted by no fraudulent concert; see, ante, the note to Dickenson v. Lockyer, 4 V. 36. But an execution under which the goods of a testator are, by permission of his executors, taken for a debt of their own, is not, at all events in equity, tantamount to a purchase by the creditors of the executors, or to an alienation of the goods made regularly by the executors. M'Leod v. Drummond, 17 Ves. 165-168. If, however, the creditors or legatees of the testator will lie by, and not assert their rights, it is reasonable for third persons to conclude that all the demands on the testator's estate are satisfied; and if that were the case, the property would be in the executors; and it would be very inconvenient that an execution should be overhauled, at the suit of a party to whose laches and neglect alone it was owing that the said execution was suffered to be completed. Farr v. Newman, 4 T. R. 645. In such a case, the lapse of time will be extremely material; and if, by the forbearance of a tardy claimant to make his demand in reasonable time, a third person has been induced to give credit to an executor, upon the faith that the chattels which have been allowed, for a great length of time, to remain in his hands, are his own property; should the creditor, who has been so led to advance his money, take out an execution for the debt against the executor, a Court of Equity will not restrain him, by injunction, from obtaining satisfaction by means of such execution: Ray v. Ray, Coop. 267.

(1) Pest, Taylor v. Hawkins, vol. viii. 209; M'Leod v. Drummond, xiv. 353; xvii. 152.

2. The decision of the principal case was highly eulogized by Lord Erskine, in Lowther v. Lowther, 13 Ves. 104.

SHAFTOE v. SHAFTOE.

[1802, MAY 8, 24.]

Writ of Ne exeat Regno issues in the case of alimony; but only for sums actually due and costs (a).

MR. LEACH, for the Plaintiff, moved for a writ of Ne exeat Regno.

By the affidavit of the Plaintiff in support of the motion it appeared, that the Plaintiff was suing the Defendant, her husband, in the Ecclesiastical Court for a divorce; and had obtained a sentence upon appeal to the Delegates, assigning a Proctor for the Defendant to appear absolutely, with costs; which were taxed at 276*l.* 11*s.* 1*d.*; and a Monition was served upon him for the costs. She was proceeding in the suit; but had not yet obtained alimony. The affidavit farther stated, that deponent hath been informed, and believes that to defeat her in such suit the Defendant threatens and intends that, as soon as he shall be excommunicated, which will be the next proceeding, he will make over his property to his son, and quit the kingdom; and has declared, the Plaintiff shall never have any thing he can deprive her of.

Mr. Leach, in support of the Motion.—This is not within the ordinary jurisdiction, upon equitable rights: but the case of a suit for this purpose, alimony, is the only exception. [ 172]

(a) See on this subject, Coglar v. Coglar, ante, 1 V. 94, 95, note (a); Russell v. Ashby, ante, 5 V. 96, note (a), 98, note (a); 2 Story Eq. Jur. § 1471—§ 1473; 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. b. 3, ch. 6, § 4, p. 632.

In Read v. Read (1) it does not appear, upon what ground the motion was refused: but it is to be collected from the argument, that the jurisdiction was properly to be exercised; or the wife would be without redress. In Sir Jerome Smithson's Case (2) the writ was granted. In another case (3) this is stated to be the only exception. In Roe buck v. Roebuck (4) a wife had obtained a sentence in a cause for adultery, establishing her innocence. Alimony was decreed to her in 1785. Afterwards she appealed; not conceiving the alimony sufficient. Pending that appeal she filed a bill for a writ of Ne exeat Regno: her husband threatening to leave the kingdom, to avoid paying the alimony already decreed and the increase; and the writ was marked for 600*l.* The only difference of that case is, that a certain sum was ascertained for alimony. That case does not appear to have been noticed in Coglar v. Coglar (5); where Lord Thurlow was struck with the difficulty, for what sum the writ should be marked.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—In the ordinary case the Court never marks the writ for more than is due. Certainly the case of alimony is stated as a case of exception: but it is wrong, that, before that decree is made, this Court is to take it for granted, that there will be a decree for alimony and separation, and to shut up the husband pending that suit for any sum it shall name, lest there should be such a decree. Suppose, the Plaintiff should miscarry in her suit, after this writ has issued; what recompense can be made to him? If the suit has effect, the difficulty is, for what [* 173] sum to mark the writ. The ground, that the * Plaintiff would be without remedy, will not do; for that would apply to a judgment at Law, where the man cannot be taken in execution.

The motion stood over; and in the interval the Lord CHANCELLOR was informed, that the Plaintiff had obtained a sentence in the Ecclesiastical Court for a gross sum.

May 24th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, upon consideration of the cases, the Plaintiff might take the writ of Ne exeat Regno for the sums actually due, namely, 776*l.* 1*s.* 1*d.* His Lordship added, that he was more influenced by authority than principle (6).

SEE, ante, also the note to Sedgwick v. Walkins, 1 V. 49, the note to Coglar v. Coglar, 1 V. 94, and the notes to De Carriere v. De Calonne, 4 V. 577, for a summary of the general doctrines established with respect to writs of ne exeat.

(1) 1 Ch. Cas. 115.

(2) 2 Vent. 345.

(3) Anon. 2 Atk. 210.

(4) This case was cited from the Register's Book, B. 1787, fo. 7. See Bea. Ne ex. Regno, 2d edit. p. 42, and the note, 40.

(5) Ante, vol. i. 94; see the notes, 95; and iv. 592.

(6) See the next case.

DAWSON v. DAWSON.

[1803, MARCH 9.]

Writ of Ne exeat Regno issues in the case of alimony; but only for sums actually due; namely, arrears and costs (a).
 Analogy between the writ of Ne exeat Regno and bail (b), [p. 174.]

MR. COOKE moved for a writ of Ne exeat Regno against the Defendant; against whom the Plaintiff had obtained a decree in the Ecclesiastical Court for alimony.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The writ in all these cases must be marked for the sum due. There is not any instance (1), and obviously there cannot be any, in which the writ has been marked for the value of the annuity given for alimony. If the Plaintiff was assignee of a bond, that would be due on the 1st of July, he could not have the writ on the 30th of June; for the money must be due (2). It was a strong thing to apply this writ to alimony: but it has been done. This writ however [ 174] never has been granted in this Court, except where the debt was due, and, if it was at Law, bail could be had (3). I recollect an instance of a bond due the 1st of January, and the creditor gave time to the 1st of July. He applied in the last week in June for the writ; and Lord Thurlow refused it. In a late instance (4) search was made; and no case could be found authorizing me to mark the writ for more than the sums actually due.

The sum of 48*l.* being due for arrears, and 88*l.* for costs, the writ was marked for those sums (5).

SEE the references given in the last preceding note.

(a) Shafroe v. Shafroe, ante, 171, and references in note (a).

(b) Russell v. Ashby, ante, 5 V. 98, note (a), and cases there cited.

(1) As to Roebuck v. Roebuck, mentioned in the preceding case, see Mr. Beames's Ne ex. Regno, 42; and the note, 40.

(2) Ante, vol. vi. 284.

(3) Russell v. Ashby, ante, vol. v. 96.

(4) Shafroe v. Shafroe, the preceding case.

(5) See Cock v. Rovic, ante, vol. vi. 283; and the notes, i. 95; iv. 592. Bea. Ne ex. Regno, 42, 3, and the note, 40.

MOODY v. MATTHEWS.

[1801, JULY 8; DEC. 2. 1802, MAY 25.]

GRANT of an annuity for life out of tithes leased for years, with covenant for further assurance. The lessee afterwards renewed the lease; married; and died. Her husband administered; and renewed with his own money. The annuity is a charge upon the renewed term, generally; and the grantee is not bound to contribute to the expense of renewal (a).

Husband may forfeit or dispose of his wife's chattel real during her life: if he does not, it survives to her: if he survives, it goes absolutely to him (b), [p. 183.]

Many obligations, which do not survive against the husband after coverture (c), [p. 183.]

By indentures, dated the 1st of January, 1774, Mary Price in consideration of 300*l.* sold to John Moody and his assigns for his natural life an annuity of 25*l.* out of and from all the tithes arising, renewing, &c. within the several townships, hamlets, fields, &c. in the parish of Llanfain Talliayarne, in the county of Denbigh, with all the glebe lands, oblations, &c. rents and profits, whatsoever, due to the Dean of St. Asaph within the said townships, &c. payable quarterly; with power of entry on default of payment for forty days; and Mary Price covenanted to pay the annuity; and that the said tithes and premises should be, remain and continue, subject to the payment of the said annuity for and during the life of [* 175] * Moody. She also executed a bond and warrant of attorney; and a memorial was duly registered.

The tithes, out of which this annuity was made payable, were held by Mary Price under a lease granted by the Dean of St. Asaph, dated the 10th of January, 1771, for twenty-one years. After the sale of the annuity she surrendered the lease; and procured a new lease of the tithes, dated the 10th of January, 1778, for the farther term of seven years; which by assignment, dated the 23d of February, 1778, she made a security by way of mortgage for 300*l.* borrowed from Thomas Ruddock. In November 1779, she married John Matthews; and on the 7th of November, 1780, she died. Her husband took out letters of administration; and in June 1781 he paid off Ruddock's mortgage. Matthews continued to pay the Plaintiff's annuity till the 25th of June, 1798; having surrendered; and taken a new lease in his own name for the farther term of seven years, dated the 10th of January, 1785 ; and having renewed afterwards in 1792 and 1799, for seven years each time, paying a fine.

(a) In reference to the rule of contribution for renewals, in case of different interests in an estate, see Nightingale v. Lawson, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 440-444, notes; Pickering v. Vowles, ib. 197-199, notes; White v. White, ante, 4 V. 24; S. C. 5 V. 554.

(b) See 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 134; Baily v. Duncan, 4 Monro, 260; Meriwether v. Booker, 5 Litt. 256; Clancy, Rights of Women, b. 1, ch. 1, p. 9, 10, (1st Am. ed.)

(c) It is a strict rule of law, which throws upon the husband during coverture, all the obligations of the wife; and by the same rule of law, he is discharged after the coverture ceases, by the death of the wife. 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 144; Phelon v. Houveal, 2 McCord, Ch. 430; Tubb v. Boyd, 4 Call, 453. See Witherspoon v. Dubose, 1 Bai. Eq. 166.

The bill was filed against Matthews ; praying an account of the personal estate of his wife, and of the arrears of the annuity ; that the Plaintiff may be put in possession of the tithes ; or that a receiver may be appointed ; and that the Plaintiff may be declared entitled to have the lease renewed from time to time out of the estate of Mary Matthews, for the better securing the annuity.

The Defendant by his answer stated, that at the time of his marriage he did not know of the existence of the annuity. He tendered the arrears to the 10th of January, 1799 ; when the interest of his late wife under her renewal would have expired ; and as to the remaining interest in the lease insisted, [ 176] that he was beneficially entitled ; having renewed with his own money.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Heald, for the Plaintiff compared this to the case of a mortgagee ; who might renew ; and add the expense to his principal and interest. They cited Luckin v. Rushman (1), and Kempton v. Packman (2) : a widow entitled to a leasehold estate, renewable for lives, renewed at her own cost. After her death the question arose between her representative, and the representative of her son, entitled to the reversion ; and it was decreed, that on payment of all the costs of the renewal by the representative of the son to the representative of the mother, the representative of the son was entitled to hold the renewed lease. They contended, that this holds in all cases, where the representative takes upon himself to renew.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Thomson, for the Defendant insisted, that all the cases alluded to are clear cases of Cestui que trust, coming against a trustee, who had enlarged the term ; upon which there can be no doubt ; but this is a most unnatural construction of a covenant for farther assurance ; that at least the Plaintiff must pay all the fines paid by the Defendant, with interest to be computed upon all those fines ; also what he has paid in respect of the mortgage, both principal and interest.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—Upon the principal question I have no difficulty in giving the decree. This is a grant of an annuity out of tithes. The grantor professes to make it for the life of the grantee. It is very clear therefore, that as long as she has any interest in these tithes, if only for five years, the Plaintiff is entitled during his life to a security upon that interest. It might have been a question upon the [ 177] covenant for farther assurance, whether she could have been compelled to renew : but having renewed, the annuity is a charge upon the tithes. Upon her death her husband took the tithes, not as administrator, but by survivorship : but still he took them in right of his wife. In that right he has the opportunity of renewing. He has all her rights and interest; but with distinct notice of the charge. It is just the same as if it was renewed by her; he acquiring all his right through her; and taking that interest from her with notice of the charge he is equitably affected. So far I am with the Plaintiff; for it is impossible by her act, putting in new names, to change the right of the annuitant. The Defendant had no idea of that; yet the annuitant had ceased to have a right in that lease; for that was gone. The equity goes much farther than as it is shaped by the Defendant; for if he cannot rid himself of the charge during the life of the wife, it will remain.

(1) Finch, 392.

(2) At the Rolls, 1790.

The next consideration arises upon his acting, not as administrator, but as proprietor; for such he is; having made the renewal with his own money; and I have a good deal of doubt, how that equity stands. If he had permitted the lease to expire in 1799, that would have been an injury to the annuitant. As to the grantor, she was absolutely bound to pay the annuity. Whenever therefore she renewed, she could not demand from the creditor any compensation for the expense of keeping on foot the security. But here a person renews, who was not bound to pay the annuity; who has no connection with the annuitant; and is only bound to pay the annuity as administrator of his wife, as far as she had assets. There is no other obligation upon him. It is deserving consideration, whether that does not make a difference in the obligation; [* 178] and though it is true, Mrs. Price would * have been under that obligation, whether in the case of a mere stranger, who, when the renewal is made, must give the party the benefit of it, that must be without any contribution. If any thing, it must be, not the whole, but a proportion only of the benefit derived from the renewal; that is, as 25*l.* is to the whole. I wish you therefore to consider that on both sides; whether you can find any thing to resolve that doubt, which at present occurs to me.

1801, Dec. 2d.—The cause was again spoken to.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Heald, for the Plaintiff.—This Equity attached down to 1799; and then the Defendant taking a renewal, it remains. This interest, though not strictly a tenant-right, is like it; and has a value in this Court. It is assets. The Defendant must therefore take the lease subject to the Equity, which belonged to it in the hands of his wife; in whose right he takes it. It cannot be compared to the case of a stranger, coming in at the end of the lease, or by a concurrent lease, without privity. If this doubt prevails, it will be impossible to make mortgages, and raise portions, upon this sort of property. Suppose a mortgage of such an interest, and then a sale: the vendee is a stranger, more than this husband: but if at the end of the lease he renews, he cannot possibly take it discharged from the mortgage. It will be said, he takes it knowing of the mortgage. This Defendant knew of this beyond all question; having paid it so long. He cannot be put in a better situation than a purchaser of the term. In the case of a term, charged with portions, would the Court permit the eldest son to suffer the term to run out? Suppose, he takes a renewal; would the Court say, the charge is good to the end of the term in the life of the tenant for life, but not as against the tenant in tail, having the absolute *interest? This annuity is beyond all question [*179] an incumbrance; and the property is bound by it as much as by a mortgage. Why should there be an end of the incumbrance, because the term would have ceased, if not renewed? At all events the husband cannot take the property in a better condition than the wife; and if the incumbrancer had called for a renewal, she could not have resisted it. The Court must have interfered, to prevent her from letting it run out; making the contract totally fruitless.

No case is to be found like this. Those, which are to be met with, are, where a person having a partial interest, an executor or mortgagee, shall not be permitted to renew, and take the benefit to himself. The distinction of those cases is, that the mortgagee, &c. has a partial interest in it; and as to the remainder is trustee for the old lessee or the creditors. Holt v. Holt (1) and Raw v. Chichester (2) establish, that, where there is a tenant-right, the Court will not permit the representative to renew for his own benefit. This Defendant had not any interest previously to his marriage. With respect to the objection, that the wife died without assets to renew, notwithstanding that circumstance, this purchaser for valuable consideration is entitled to relief; which cannot depend upon the circumstance, whether there are assets, or not. The only difference is, that in the one case there must have been a contribution, in the other not. Maxwell v. Ashe (3).

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Thomson, for the Defendant.—There are two questions; 1st, Whether the Defendant ought to be compelled to pay the annuity after the 10th *of January, 1799: [*_180] 2dly, which was the point, on which the Court felt a difficulty, whether, if the Annuity is to be paid, there ought not to be a contribution. This Defendant in respect of this lease stands as a purchaser; and the case of executors and trustees is wholly inapplicable. They cannot deal with the property for their own benefit; but must take as trustees. Persons having a limited interest are not to avail themselves of the situation, in which they are placed by the testator, having a tenant-right, to procure a much larger interest than the testator intended at the expense of those, to whom he intended that larger interest. The grant of the annuity is out of the tithes merely; not mentioning the lease. The point of notice is, whether he had notice, when he became the purchaser; not depending upon payment to this time in his own wrong. He stands, not only upon his marital right, but also as standing in the place of the mortgagee, paid off by him. He takes the lease in his own right as husband : and the Court cannot compel him to renew, because in another character, as administrator, he takes assets. The only cases to be found are those of tenant for life and remainder-man ; the principle of which is now well understood (1). The difficulty in those cases was to ascertain the proportion of the fine, before the interest was known ; which was generally by a reference to the Master. There has been no difficulty, where it has been exactly known, what interest the parties took in the lease ; as where the tenant for life renewed ; and himself out-lived the term : having had the whole benefit he must pay the whole fine. So, where the tenant for life dying before the commencement of the renewed term, the remainder-man has the whole benefit, the latter must pay the whole fine.

(1) 1 Ch. Cas. 190.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 198, n.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 444, n.

If during the term granted in 1778, the Plaintiff had [*181] been called upon to pay any part * of the expense of renewal, he would probably have refused ; saying, it would be for the benefit of the remainder-man, not of himself. But in the event, that has happened, it is clear, that if all these renewals had not been made, the Plaintiff could have had no benefit whatsoever. The justice of the case then is, if the Plaintiff desires to have the benefit, that out of the profits the fines and interest upon them should be paid ; as in the case of a mortgage ; for till then there is no clear fund. When that is discharged, the Plaintiff will be entitled to the arrears of his annuity. The first incumbrance upon the renewed lease, commencing on the expiration of the old term, is the fines and interest : the next the arrears of the annuity ; and then the Defendant is entitled to the interest in the renewed lease for his own benefit. That is the only decree, to which the Plaintiff is entitled. It may probably be necessary to renew again, before the incumbrances are discharged ; and in that case provision must be made, for that before the annuity. The Defendant insists, that by his marriage and the death of his wife he became entitled to this leasehold interest for his own benefit, subject to the charge created by the wife prior to the marriage, so far as the extent of her interest would make him subject to it ; which cannot be carried farther after her death than to charge her estate in the hands of her representative. Beyond that he acquired this interest in the estate for his own benefit. The annuitant might have compelled Mrs. Matthews to renew, or, it may be admitted, her representative to the extent of the assets ; but has not a right beyond that to call upon the husband.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—What he takes in right of his wife he takes in a manner as purchaser, but subject to the incumbrances ; though he had no notice at the time of his marriage. The [*182] Court would not have *compelled the executor to renew, if he had not assets ; but would have put the incumbrancer in a condition to renew, if he chose ; and to add the expense to his incumbrance. Since White v. White (1) the rule is, that the tenant for life pays only the interest. This is an incumbrance anterior to all the estates. There can be no distinction between this incumbrance and the mortgage. The dry question is, whether the husband takes the property in a different condition from that, in which it stood in his wife. Though this is not to be considered as the case of executor or administrator, those cases show the principle ; that a person taking in right of and through another shall take subject to the incumbrances. The instance of a person having a partial interest also applies strongly. Shall this Defendant, having taken a partial interest in right of his wife, enlarge that interest without making the property equally liable to the incumbrances ? Bearing the two characters of administrator to his wife, and surviving husband, in which character he renewed does not appear. The tenant-right makes a strong part of the case. It is not strictly a right ; but a fair expectation, of value ; and on which a price is always set : a preference given by the lessor. If the lessee had disposed of the lease by will, or conveyed it voluntarily, the person to whom it was bequeathed, or the assignee, would have been bound by the equity. Can the right of Survivorship amount to more ? If liable during the coverture, he was liable afterwards, taking by act of law. There can be no arrangement of contribution here. The Defendant thinking it worth his while to renew takes it subject to all the equity, with which it was clothed in the hands of his wife. As to the mortgage paid off by the Defendant, this annuity is an incumbrance prior to that mortgage.

(1) Ante, White v. White, vol. iv. 24.

MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The [183] result of my examination of this case is to entertain more doubt than I had, even upon the first question. The lease having been in fact renewed, I thought, upon some terms it must be liable to the Plaintiff : and that the difficulty would be how to arrange the terms. Upon the result of the case I have been brought a good deal to doubt as to the right of the Plaintiff at all ; for all the cases are cases of representatives, persons having no right but from that capacity, or their situation, as having limited interests. There may be very considerable distinctions between that case and this. The husband may forfeit or dispose of the interest during her life. If he does neither, it survives to the wife. If he survives, it goes absolutely to him. The question is, how he takes it ; and whether subject to all the equities. There are many obligations, which do not survive against the husband after the coverture. There is no case resembling this ; or, from which any principle can be deduced, having a strict analogy ; and I am not at all aided by the case of representatives.

1802, May 25th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS having stated

(1) Ante, vol. iv. 24 ; v. 554 ; post, ix. 554.

the case, and observed, that the covenants entered into on the grant of this annuity were in effect a covenant for farther assurance, proceeded thus :

The Defendant contends, that all he was bound to was to pay the annuity during the term, the lease had to run, when he acquired it in right of his wife ; insisting that he now holds it in his own right, discharged of the annuity : or that, if liable, at least the Plaintiff is bound to contribute to the expense of renewal. If she had continued unmarried, there can be no doubt, the annuity would [* 184] * be as much a charge upon the renewed, as upon the original, lease : indeed she would have been bound to keep up the lease on account of the annuity. The Plaintiff acquired an interest in the lease for his life : not in present existence a lease to last so long, but with a capacity to be extended by renewals ; and the charge would always attach upon each renewed lease : the grantor being bound to keep it up for his benefit. Her husband could derive no other interest in her right than she had. The lease and right of renewal could pass to him only in the same plight and condition as she held them ; and therefore subject to every equity, that would attach upon her. The husband taking by marital right is not esteemed a purchaser for valuable consideration. He stands precisely in the place of his wife. That is laid down in Fitzgerald v. Lord Fauconberg (1), by the Lord Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, and Lord Chief Baron Reynolds. Notice is therefore immaterial. The husband's obligation to renew is different from that of the wife. After the dissolution of the marriage he is not bound by her personal covenants : but when the lease is renewed, the equity attaches upon it ; for the renewed lease is considered in equity the same lease (a).

The Plaintiff is not bound to contribute to the fines of renewal. That would be to make him pay the consideration twice. The case of Maxwell v. Ashe, at the Rolls, 17th December, 1752, in a note (2) to Nightingale v. Lawson (3), which I have looked at in the Register's Book, is decisive. That case was this :

Joyce James gave to the Plaintiff, her niece, an annuity of 100*l., payable half-yearly without any deduction, for her life, out [ 185] of tithes, held for lives of the Bishop of * London. One life had dropped : the testatrix was herself another ; and Mrs. Ashe, the executrix and devisee subject to the annuity, was the third. After the death of the testatrix two new lives were added. Mrs. Ashe at first insisted, that she was not bound to pay the annuity, unless the annuitant would contribute to the expense of adding those two lives. Afterwards however she did not insist upon that claim. Mrs. Ashe died. At her death there was completely an end

(1) Fitzg. 207.

(a) See Pickering v. Vowles, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed.) 1844, 197-199, and notes ; Nightingale v. Lawson, ib. 440, 444, notes ; Mr. Hovenden's note (1), post, 186.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 444.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 440

of all the lives, that existed previously to the gift of the annuity. The children of Mrs. Ashe, to whom she devised, refused any longer to pay the annuity ; insisting, that there was an end of the lease : or at least, that they were not bound to pay, unless Mrs. Maxwell, the annuitant, would contribute to the expense of the former renewals. She filed her bill ; insisting, she was not bound to contribute ; that, on the contrary they were bound to fill up the lives, that had dropped, for her benefit. The Court declared, the annuity was a charge upon the renewed lease.

In that case, as in this, the lease in being at the time the annuity was created was wholly expired ; and it was there contended by the devisees, as it is here by the husband, that they had then a right, having renewed with their own money, to consider the lease as their own, and as discharged from the annuity ; which ought to continue only during the continuance of the original lives. There is no difference between the cases, except this, in favor of the present Plaintiff ; that he is a purchaser of this annuity for valuable consideration, and against a person, who, as I have observed, is not considered in the light of a purchaser for valuable consideration, but as a mere volunteer. In that case the question was between two volunteers ; and it was held there, that the annuity was not extinct by the extinction of the old lives ; and the annuitant was [ 186] not bound to contribute to the renewal.

Upon the authority of that case, and the principles I have before stated, declare, that the annuity claimed by the Plaintiff is a charge upon the renewed lease of these tithes : and that the arrears must be paid, and the annuity must continue to be paid, out of the profits of that lease.

1. As a general rule, a renewed lease will in Equity (and at law likewise to some intents, Collett v. Hooper, 13 Ves. 260) be considered as a graft upon the original lease, and subject to the same trusts, however short a time the original lease may have had to run after it came into the hands of the party who has obtained a renewal. James v. Dean, 11 Ves. 393; S. C. 15 Ves. 240; Mulvany v. Dillon, 1 Ball & Beat. 419. The principle upon which this rule is founded has been said to be, that whenever a mortgagee, trustee, or tenant for life, gets an advantage, either by being in possession, or behind the back of the mortgagor, cestui que trust, or remainder-man, he ought not to retain it for his own benefit, but hold it in trust. Nesbitt v. Tredennick, 1 Ball & Beat. 46. It seems quite clear, however, the principle is not confined to the instances just stated, but extends to those where, as in the principal case, a lease charged with an annuity falls into the hands of a volunteer, who renews the same. And the rule, that a renewed lease is always subject to the trusts and limitations of the old lease, will affect a purchaser of such renewed lease, who had notice, provided relief be sought against him without great laches. Parker v. Brooke, 9 Ves. 587; Senhouse v. Earle, Ambl. 288. Nor is any distinction to be made, as to this matter, between reversionary leases, which are not to commence till the regular expiration of the original lease, and renewed leases, which are to commence immediately, in consequence of a surrender of the old lease. Parker v. Brooke, ubi supra; Foster v. Marriott, Ambl. 668; Owen v. Williams, Ambl. 734. Indeed, with a possible exception in favor of a purchaser for valuable consideration, without notice, it seems to be a universal rule, that no one who is in possession of a lease, or a particular interest in a lease, which lease is affected with any sort of equity in behalf of third persons, can renew the same for his own use only ; but that such renewal must be considered as a graft upon the old stock. Pickering v. Vowles, 1 Brown, 198; Rushworth's case, 2 Freem. 12; Rave v. Chichester, Ambl. 719; Winslow v. Tighe, 2 Ball & Beat. 205; Featherstonehaugh v. Fenwick, 17 Ves. 311.

2. Still, where an old lease, and every trust affecting the same, is absolutely expired; when there is neither any remnant of the old lease, nor any tenant-right of renewal upon which a new lease could be considered as a graft; there could be no ground for prohibiting any one (even a person who had held a situation of trust or confidence with respect to the old lease) from treating for a new and independent lease, for his own exclusive benefit: there would, in such a case, be nothing upon which a fiduciary character could attach. Stokes v. Clarke, Colles. P. C. 193. And, during the continuance of a lease, any one, even a trustee of the leasehold interest, may purchase the reversion in fee on his own sole account: for, though it is obvious that, by such purchase, the cestui que trust of the existing lease will be deprived of his chance of a renewal, yet it has been held impossible to consider a purchase of the inheritance as a graft upon leasehold or life interests, however highly a Court of Equity might be disposed to disapprove the transaction. Randall v. Russell, 3 Meriv. 197; Hardman v. Johnson, 3 Meriv. 352; Norris v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 38.

3. In Winslow v. Tighe, 2 Ball & Beat. 206, and in Stubbs v. Roth, 2 Ball & Beat. 554, Lord Manners, Chancellor of Ireland, held, that annuitants, whose annuities were charged by will upon leasehold property, were bound to contribute to the renewal of fines, in proportion to their interest in the said property. But, in both these cases, the annuitants and the parties to whom the term on which the annuities were charged was bequeathed, appeared to have been equally the object of the testator's bounty: those decisions, therefore, are not inconsistent with Maxwell v. Ashe, (cited in the principal case) where a legatee, to whom an annuity was bequeathed payable without any deduction, was not held bound to contribute towards renewals; and still less do they class with the determination of the principal case itself, where the annuitant was not a legatee or volunteer, but a bona fide purchaser for a valuable consideration.

4. If a mortgage of an estate, held by lease for lives, be taken without a covenant on the part of the mortagor, that he will procure the lives to be filled up as they drop off, he cannot be compelled to do so: but the mortgagee may add the expense of renewals to the principal of the mortgage, and it will carry interest. A similar principle seems applicable to any other description of incumbrancers upon such property. Lacon v. Martins, 3 Atk. 4; Hamilton v. Denny, 1 Ball & Beat. 202.

5. As to the rule by which the rate of contribution towards renewal fines is now proportioned to the respective interests of the parties, see, ante, the note to White v. White, 4 V. 24.

CHAMBERS v. MINCHIN.

[1801, JAN. 28; 1802, MAY 26, 28.]

One executor and trustee charged under the circumstances with a loss occasioned by joining in the sale of stock; the other having received all the money and absconded (a).

General rule, that executors joining in a receipt are all chargeable: in the case of trustees only the person receiving the money. The reason of the distinction (b), [p. 198.]

The Lord Chancellor disapproved the relaxation in favor of executors of that rule, [p. 198.]

LUCY RUSSELL by her will gave and bequeathed to William Minchin and William Green the "sum of 2400 $\text{l}.$, in the 5 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities;" in trust in the first place to pay the interest and proceeds of one moiety unto and between her cousins Jane Snook and Elizabeth Clarke in equal proportions during their

(a) Where an executor by his negligence suffers his co-executor to receive and waste the estate, when he has the means of preventing it, by proper care, he is liable to the heirs and next of kin for the estate thus wasted. Clark v. Clark, 8 Paige, 153.

The true rule on this subject is, that where, by the act of one executor, any part of the estate comes to the hands of his co-executor, the former will be answerable for the latter in the same manner as for a stranger whom he had enabled to receive it. Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Hill, Ch. 293; Monell v. Monell, 5 John. Ch. 283; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1283, § 1284: Davis v. Spurting, 1 Russ. & My. 66; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 1293, 1294; Sterrel's Appeal, 2 Pennsylv. 419.

Two executors sold out stock, and the produce was received by one; the other was held responsible for its misapplication, but was entitled to an inquiry, whether any part had been applied in discharge of claims against the testator. Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beavan, 472.

If an executor be merely passive by not obstructing his co-executor from getting assets into his hands, in a case free from negligence or laches, the former is not responsible. Langford v. Gascoyne, 11 Ves. 335. See farther on this subject, Lenoir v. Winn, 4 Desaus. 65; Hovey v. Blakeman, ante, 4 V. 596, note (a) and the cases referred to; Sadler v. Hobbs, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 114-118, and cases in the notes; Scurfield v. Howes, 3 ib. 90-95, and notes; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1280-1284 α , and the learned discussion of the liability of trustees and executors, for the acts and receipts of their co-trustees and co-executors, in the notes; Bacon v. Bacon, ante, 5 V. 331, and notes; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1295, 1296-1304; Hanbury v. Kirkland, 3 Sim. 265.

One executor is not responsible for the separate acts of his co-executor. Evans v. Evans, 1 Desaus. 520; Knox v. Picket, 4 Desaus. 92; Sutherland v. Brush, 7 John. Ch. 22; Laurence v. Laurence, Litt. Sel. Ca. 123; Ochiltree v. Wright, 1 Dev. & Bat. 336; Mussey v. Curzon, 1 Cheves, Ch. 181; O'Neal v. Herbert, C. W. Dud. Eq. 30; Williams v. Mailand, 1 Ired. Eq. 93; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beavan, 472; Littlehales v. Gascoyne, 3 Bro. C. C. 74; Ronch v. Hubbard, Litt. Sel. Ca. 235; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1292, 1293.

(b) The joining in a receipt, though not absolutely necessary, is not conclusive against an executor, any more than against a trustee. The true inquiry in these cases is, whether the money received was under the control of both executors. The joining in a receipt is evidence of that control, though not conclusive. Ochiltree v. Wright, 1 Dev. & Bat. 341; M'Nair's Appeal, 4 Rawle, 157; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1301-1304.

But if two trustees, executors, or guardians, join in a receipt for money, it is presumptive evidence, that the money came equally into the possession or under the control of both; and there must be direct and positive proof to rebut the pre-joint lives ; and upon the death of either of them then to pay the whole interest of the said moiety to the survivor during her life ; and to pay the interest and proceeds of the other moiety " of the said sum of 2500*l.*" unto John Chambers, until such time as his daughters Ann, Jane, Elizabeth, and Lucy, Chambers respectively attain their ages of twenty-one years ; and from and after the decease of the survivor of them, the said Jane Snook and Elizabeth Clarke, the testatrix gave and bequeathed the interest of the said other moiety in like manner unto John Chambers, until his said daughters shall respectively attain their ages of twenty-one ; and when and as each of them shall attain such age, directed, that a proportionate part of the said " moiety of 2400*l.*" shall be transferred into the name of each of them on attaining such age respectively ; and upon the death of the survivor of them, the said Jane Snook and *Elizabeth Clarke (provided they shall have attained such age as aforesaid) then a proportionate part also of the other moiety to be in like manner transferred to each of them respectively on their attaining such age, as aforesaid ; and in case of the death of either of the daughters of John Chambers before the age of twenty-one, the testatrix directed, that the share of her or them so dying shall go to and be equally divided amongst the survivors on attaining their respective ages of twenty-one years, as aforesaid.

The testatrix then gave to John Chambers the sum of 50*l.* for mourning for himself and children, and several specific and pecuniary legacies ; and gave all the rest and residue of her goods, chattels, personal estate and effects, after payment of her debts, funeral and testamentary charges and expenses, to Mary Midford, Ann Rothwell, and Jane Snook and Elizabeth Clarke, and the survivors of them, in equal proportions, to be paid them separate and apart from their respective husbands. The testatrix then appointed Minchin and sumption. Monell v. Monell, 5 John. Ch. 283. See also Manahan v. Gibbons, 19 John. 427, 440; Sutherland v. Brush, 7 John. Ch. 22, 23; Walker v. Symonds, 3 Swanst. 64.

This is said by Mr. Justice Story to be perhaps the truest exposition of the principle, which ought to regulate every case of this sort, whether it be the case of executors, or of guardians, or of trustees. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1283.

Such positive proof to rebut the presumption would be, that the joining in the receipt was necessary or merely formal, and that the money was in fact all received by the co-executor. Ib. See also 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1302-1304.

But where a trustee or executor, by his own negligence or laches, suffers his co-trustee or co-executor to receive and waste the trust funds or assets, then such trustee or executor will be held personally responsible for the loss occasioned by such receipt and waste. Clark v. Clark, 8 Paige, 152; Edmonds v. Cranshaw, 14 Peters, 166; Williams v. Nixon, 2 Beavan, 472. See farther, 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1283, § 1284; Bone v. Cook, 1 M'Clel. 168; Munford v. Murray, 6 John. Ch. 16, and see note (a) above, and the learned suggestions in note (1) to Bulchen v. Scott, ante, 2 V. 679.

For the distinction between trustees and executors in respect to their liability for the acts of each other, and the reason for that distinction, see 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1280, § 1280a, and the notes; Mores v. Levi, 3 Young & Coll. 359, 367.

Green executors and trustees of her will ; directing, that they should be indemnified from all costs and charges in and about the execution of the said will ; and gave them the sum of 50*l.* each over and above the sum of 300*l.*, before given to Minchin.

The testatrix died in February, 1797. The bill was filed on the 12th of February, 1798, by John Chambers and his infant daughters ; praying, that the trusts of the will may be performed, so far as it concerns the Plaintiffs in respect of the legacy of 2400*l.* in 5 per cent. Bank Annuities ; that it may be declared, whether the testatrix meant, the sum of 2400*l.* in money should be laid out in the purchase of such 5 per cent. annuities ; or, that so much money should be laid out as would purchase the sum of 2400*l.* stock in * the 5 per cent. Annuties ; that directions may be given [* 188] accordingly ; and that the fund may be secured for the benefit of the infant Plaintiffs (1).

The testatrix at the date of her will and at her decease was not entitled to any stock except 156*l.* a-year Bank Long Annuities. The executors by their answer, filed the 5th of May, 1798, stated the negotiation, that took place previously to the filing of the bill, with reference to the question upon the legacy to the Plaintiffs. They admitted, that they had possessed of the personal estate more than sufficient for the debts and legacies ; and submitted, whether the legacy to the Plaintiffs is specific ; and whether they have any right to any part of the personal estate ; but believe, the testatrix intended to give the sum of 120*l.* a-year, part of the sum of 156*l.* a-year Bank Long Annuities, in trust for the purposes mentioned in the will ; and not, that the sum of 2400*l.* should be laid out in 5 per cent. Bank Annuities, or, that so much money should be laid out in such fund as would purchase the capital stock of 2400*l.* Green stated, that he prepared the will ; and that from the instructions of the testatrix he understood, she intended the interest only of so much of her money as was then invested in any of the public funds bearing interest at 5 per cent. : but for want of proper instructions he erroneously called the same 5 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, instead of Bank Long Annuities ; wherein her money was then invested ; and he also understood, the testatrix did not intend, that any part of the stock should be sold for the purpose of investing the produce in any other public stock ; but that so much as would pay the sum of 120*l.* a-year should remain in the names of the Defendants until the respective deceases of Jane Snook and Elizabeth Clarke, and after the decease of the survivor * should be transferred to the Plaintiffs upon attaining [* 189] twenty-one.

The Defendants farther stated, that they believe, that, in case a sufficient part of the personal estate shall be laid out in the purchase of 2400*l.* in the 5 per cent. Navy Annuities, the personal estate will be very little more than sufficient for the debts, legacies, and funeral expenses.

By the decree (1), made on the 7th of June, 1799, the accounts were directed against each of the executors; and it was declared, that the bequest of 2400*l.*, expressed in the will to be 5 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities was intended to be a legacy of 2400*l.* 5 per cent. Bank Annuities; and, in case there should be sufficient to pay the debts, funeral expenses, and legacies, and the costs of this suit, it was ordered, that the Defendants Minchin and Green should purchase out of the testatrix's estate 2400*l.* 5 per cent. Bank Annuities; and directions were given for transferring the fund, when purchased, to the Accountant General upon the trusts declared by the will.

The Master's Report stated the accounts; upon which some debts and legacies were still unpaid; and that the Defendants Minchin and Green had not purchased 2400*l.* Bank Annuities, as directed by the decree. The cause coming on for farther directions, it appeared, that the Long Annuities had been sold out; and that Minchin had absconded insolvent; upon which an inquiry was directed, under what circumstances Green executed the power of attorney to Minchin for sale of the Long Annuities. Upon that reference the Master stated the affidavit of Green, who was an attorney [*190] at Basingstoke, and acted in the affairs of the testatrix there, not to a *great extent, that Minchin, who resided in London, had the sole management and conduct of all the affairs of the testatrix, transacted in London; that in April 1799, Minchin sent to him a power of attorney to sell out the Long Annuities; that Green being fully impressed with the truth of a letter from Minchin, dated the 9th of February, 1798, and that it was necessary for him to execute the power of attorney for the purposes of the will, immediately signed it; and that he had no motive whatever for signing it than for the purpose of enabling Minchin to carry into execution the trusts of the will.

The Master also stated, that the only part of the letter relating to the execution of the power of attorney was these words: "I am conclusively of opinion, that it will be better for all parties to purchase into the 5 per cents. on the score of policy and prudence; and, when we meet, will assign my reasons for it."

This letter also stated, that Minchin had written to Chambers, that he should be apprised of their determination in ten days; that the 10th day expired that morning; and he (Minchin) had just received the label of a Subpæna: and supposed, one had reached Green.

The cause coming on for farther directions, the question was, whether the Defendant Green should be charged.

Mr. Piggott and Mr. Trower, for the Plaintiffs.—Upon the facts disclosed by the report Green is responsible; and if he is, though the stocks were low, when this fund was sold out, the rule is perfectly settled, that it must now be replaced; and he must also an-sver for the dividends since April 1799. The stock standing in the name of the testatrix could not by the course of the Bank be sold out without an authority from both the * trustees. [* 191] The motive assigned by Green for his conduct is the letter written by Minchin long before, viz. in February 1798: the date of the power of attorney being in April 1799. Clearly therefore that letter was not acted upon. The sale took place after their answer was put in; submitting to act, as the Court should direct: a cause in Court: a dispute upon the construction of the will; in consequence of which the Defendants state that they cannot act: Green also an attorney; who must have known what was proper to be done; that the fund ought to have been transferred to the Accountant General. The letter is stated shortly in the Report: but it gives notice to Green of the intention to file the bill, and that Minchin had actually received a subpæna. For what purpose was this sale? At the former hearing it was said, they were under the necessity of selling this fund; as it was a perishable fund. If that was the reason, why was it not done before?

The principle as to executors is, that both concur in the act, and the act is voluntary: Sadler v. Hobbs (1), Scurfield v. Howes (2). In that case the Master of the Rolls observes, that till Wesiley v. Clarke (3) there is no case, where an executor joining in a receipt has not been held liable. Any attempt to shake those decisions would be extremely dangerous. In this instance the act was not only unnecessary, but wanton. It was also deliberate. The recent decisions, Balchen v. Scott (4), Routh v. Howell (5), Hovey v. Blakeman (6), and Bacon v. Bacon (7), which will be relied on for the Defendant, have not a circumstance analogous. This Defendant acted under the trusts of the will; made various payments; and with the exception of the receipt of this fund acted equally with the other executor. [ 192]

Mr. Richards, Mr. Cox, and Mr. Thomson, for the Defendant Green.—It cannot be said, that this Defendant had any sinister view; and he did not receive any of the money, or interfere in this transaction. He living in the country, the other trustee living in town, managed the property; and procured from him the power of attorney, for a given purpose, to change the fund. Certainly his conduct was indiscreet in a great degree. The late cases are very much in his favor. It does not appear to be an established rule, that executors joining in a receipt shall be charged; for in Churchill v. Hobson (8), a distinction is made between creditors and legatees.

(1) 2 Bro. C. C. 114.

(2) 3 Bro. C. C. 91.

(3) 1 P. Will. 83, Mr. Cox's note; Pre. Ch. Mr. Finch's edit. 173.

(4) Ante, vol. ii. 678; see the note, 679.

(5) Ante, vol. iii. 565.

(6) Ante, vol. iv. 596.

(7) Ante, vol. v. 331.

(8) 1 P. Will. 241.

The late cases incline the other way very much. Lord Alvanley in Hovey v. Blakeman acceded to Westley v. Clarke. The principle established there, and approved by Lord Alvanley, is, that in no case shall a trustee or executor be charged with money, which does not actually come to his hands; if that fact can be clearly established. If that is left in doubt, the circumstance of joining in the receipt certainly makes a difference in the case of trustee and executor. In Sadler v. Hobbs it was the joint act of both: each trusting to the credit of the person, with whom the deposit was made. In Balchen v. Scott the executor received the property; and handed it over as executor; and that occasioned the loss. In Hovey v. Blakeman it was impossible to overcome the admission in the answer: but Lord Alvanley's mind throughout was very much in favor of an executor, who does not actually receive the money, and merely acts a formal part, though unnecessary. That case [* 193] may be stated as the result of all the cases: Lord * Alvanley having taken great pains to extract some principle from them. In Bacon v. Bacon the circumstances appeared by the affidavit of the Defendant. He placed confidence in the representations of Kirby. It was the duty of the executor to see, that the money was applied; if the doctrine, as now pressed, is right.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—That case is very rightly decided. It is the business of the executor to pay the debts, and to find out the creditors; for they need not demand but by an action. He could not go personally about the country. If he sends a trusty person, that is all, that can be expected; and there he made the best choice possible, the person trusted by the testator in his life and at his death, and for a purpose, in which he was answerable as executor. The fact in this instance is, that the fund was in the hand of the Court: no act necessary but to join in a transfer to the Accountant General. If the purpose was to change the fund, as the Court would order it to be changed, as from Long Annuities to 3 per cents. (1), and the executor in the country executes a power of attorney to the executor in town for that purpose, I admit, that is justifiable: being for a purpose belonging to the administration of assets; but not to change it to Bank Stock. It is one thing for an executor upon a communication by the other to accede to a purpose directly connected with the will; and another, where it arises out of the acts of parties out of the will. In Balchen v. Scott the executor determined not to act. What could he do then but hand it over to the other?

For the Defendant.—The motive in this case was as honest as that of Bacon. The executor in the country does this act [* 194] under an impression, * that a due use was to be made of it; believing, the other executor intended to change the fund; which he thought necessary; placing confidence in the person, in whom the testator placed confidence. Acting bona fide, but misconceiving the object, and never receiving a farthing, it would be too much for a Court of Conscience to charge him with the whole for an error of judgment. Scurfield v. Howes is only a revival of the old rule. The expression "unnecessarily" is used in that case in this sense; that the other executor might have done the act just as well without him. This act was not unnecessary in that sense: for this purpose it was necessary, that both should join.

(1) See Howe v. The Earl of Dartmouth, ante, 137.

Mr. Piggott, in reply.—The circumstances of the suit and the decree make this one of the strongest cases. The silence of the Defendant at the hearing of the cause was most culpable. As to the necessity of the act, the question is upon the necessity of any transfer: a consideration antecedent to that of the necessity of his joining. The purpose in Bacon v. Bacon was to discharge the debts of the testator; necessary acts in the administration of the testator's affairs: so, in the other cases, where the executor has been excused, the thing itself was proper to be done; and he concurred simply to enable the other to do that. What resemblance have they to this? No case is so destitute of apology. This transaction was a gross and unjustifiable breach of duty; for a professional man cannot be supposed so ignorant as to imagine a necessity for putting this fund in the 5 per cent. Bank Annuities, to answer this legacy, before the decree; the legatees not desiring it.

*Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I shall look through the [*195] cases; not from any doubt, how I ought to decide this; but being unwilling to risk any ground, that might militate against that, which is taken to be the present rule. In Sadler v. Hobbs Lord Thurlow took a great while to consider; and decided it, as his habit was, not upon circumstances, but upon a principle, that he hoped would stand; and not only upon the principles of this Court, but of law. His Lordship expressed a decided opinion against Westley v. Clarke; and not in that instance only; for he abided by Sadler v. Hobbs always afterwards, both in bankruptcy and upon other occasions. I am now called on to decide between that case and the opinion expressed by Lord Alvanley in Hovey v. Blakeman, setting up Lord Northington's rule again.

* May 28th. Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I am not able to satisfy myself, that the opinion I have formed upon this case is wrong. With regard to this legacy these executors are made trustees. It appears from the answer, to which and the report I shall confine myself, that previously to the filing of the bill the Plaintiff had been claiming, that this sum should be laid out in 5 per cent. Navy Annuities; that the executors resisted that claim; that the residuary legatees were thought to be interested in that resistance; that it was suggested, as convenient to all, and not much expense to those interested in the residue, that the 5 per cent. Navy Annuities should be bought; that a proposition for that purpose was about to be adopted; and while that was in agitation, the bill was filed. That fact is very material, with reference to the date of the letter, referred to in the report, three days only previous to the filing of the bill. Upon the admission in the answer charging themselves with the joint possession of assets sufficient to pay all the debts and legacies, a decree somewhat different might have been made ; and it might have been argued with considerable color, that the moment the construction was given to this bequest both the Defendants should have been forthwith ordered to pay this legacy among others ; and it was upon them to show by strong and pregnant evidence, either, that it was an improvident admission, or, that some circumstances had occurred since the answer, entitling them not to be considered as having possessed sufficient for all the legacies as well as the debts. In most of the affairs of the testatrix, connected as to local administration with this place, Minchin principally acted. Green acted in some of her affairs at Basingstoke, though not to a very great extent ; and he very rashly and most improvidently placed an unlimited confidence in Minchin as to the affairs here. Minchin was, not only his co-trustee, but also his town-attorney and agent in this cause ; and it is very clear, that, if a trustee trusts an attorney, he must abide by the effect of that confidence. There is no evidence as to circumstances attending the transmission of the power of attorney, but the simple fact, that it was sent and returned. Whether any thing of the purpose, for which it was sent, was communicated, is not disclosed. There is no manner of evidence, upon which it can be collected, that if their judgment, as stated in their answer, was wrong, any circumstances had occurred, leading to a bona fide correction of it ; or any transaction among those claiming under the will between the time of putting in the answer and the sale of the stock, upon which they could have conceived that a due administration of the trusts, as far as related to this property. Neither is there any evidence, that Green ever made any inquiry, what use was made by Minchin of the power of attorney ; what became of the annuities sold ; and whether they [* 197] were applied in *any manner to the trusts of the will.

I consider Green as attending the Court by Minchin, not as his co-trustee only, but as his Solicitor. The decree was made without any communication to the Court, that the fund had been sold : the Defendants according to the effect of their answer inducing the Court to believe, that it remained in the state, in which it was, when the answer was put in ; and contending upon the point, stated in the answer as to the intention. The decree takes up the consideration, whether there would be enough for the other legacies : not however upon the effect of the answer charging them jointly with any thing ; but directing an inquiry, what each had possessed ; and making a declaration, negativing altogether the proposition, made before the bill was filed, that 5 per cent. Navy Annuities were to be bought, and the idea, that Green had attributed as the intention. I cannot infer from the letter in February, 1798, that Green took the proposition contained in it to be a due execution of the purposes of the will, in opposition to his answer in May, representing it, not only as an undue execution of the will, but contrary to the intention, inconsistent with his duty to the tenants for life and the residuary legatees, and an extravagant claim, without a single ground for inferring upon any rational principle, that he had altered that solid opinion, expressed upon his oath.

It comes then to the naked case of co-executors, by an express bequest however attaching upon this property, co-trustees also; as indeed they would have been, even without such express bequest, in a certain sense; the joining of both being necessary to a transfer; and therefore, if they were mere executors, they would be to be considered with reference to the principles of trustees. I have looked into all the cases. Executors were by the old law contradistinguished from trustees thus far. It * was laid down [* 198] as a general rule, that, where executors joined in a receipt, both having the whole power over the fund, both were chargeable: where trustees joined, each not having the whole power, and the joining being necessary, only the person receiving the money was by the general rule chargeable. It is impossible to deny, that the rule as to executors has been pared down in some degree by some of the late authorities; and I will add, in a much greater degree by those authorities than by the precedents, to which they refer; for with regard to some of those cases, where executors were not charged for joining, it might be maintained, that if a sole executor had under the same circumstances put the money into the hands of the banker, or of a stranger, the sole executor would not have been chargeable; and then, if one executor puts the property into the hands of the other, who happens to be the banker, or in such a situation, that the act is not improvident, those authorities upon such circumstances cannot afford any fair distinction (1).

Lord Northington in Westley v. Clarke seems to entertain a doubt, whether that general rule could be fortified by precedents. I am much mistaken, if there are not many. It seems a strong act to dispute the existence of the general rule, when no man can look at the reports of Lord Hardwicke's time without seeing, that he considered that rule as well established as any; distinguishing between acting upon legal and moral necessity. The later cases seem to suppose, it has a tendency to discourage executors from acting; therefore depriving persons of the providence arising from the readiness, with which executors will take upon them the duty, if the rule is more relaxed. This case does not call on me to discuss, whether that is well founded: but in my opinion it is very ill founded; for a plain, general, rule, which once laid down is easily understood, and may be generally * known, is much more inviting [* 199] to executors than a rule referring every thing to the particular circumstances. A simpler rule never existed, than that, if the executor acts without necessity, he takes the power over the fund (a); and shall not say, he has not the power over it. It is a rule in favor of executors; enabling them to refuse to act, because it is not necessary; and therefore they will not involve themselves in the consequences. Take it the other way. Will executors be safe under the rule, requiring the particular circumstances to be inquired into? Let them read all the determinations by Lords Hardwicke, Northington, Thurlow, Kenyon, and Alvanley; and say, before which of those Judges they should wish their causes to be decided; for the executor would come under this peril; that he is to decide for himself, not upon a general rule, that he understands, but upon the effect of particular circumstances; upon the effect of which no two of those Judges in the particular cases before them agree.

(1) Post, vol. xi. 324, 5.

I intimate this; being of opinion, that it is never wise to shake a general rule; if it can possibly be avoided. But it is not necessary to go into the doctrine upon the general case; for I consider Green as a trustee; and it is fit to look at him in that character. In many cases there has been a legal necessity for their concurrence. But it is not enough to say, it is legally necessary: but their purpose must be made out to be connected with the due execution of the trust. Examine this case by that rule. Can it possibly be said under the circumstances stated by the report, that Green did more than leave it to Minchin to do what he pleased with the property? He must then stand or fall by the purpose, with reference to which Minchin acts upon it; which is, to deprive these infants of it. Did Green take common precaution? Did he endeavor to learn, what the purpose was? The purpose proposed in 1798 could only [* 200] be effected by arrangement. *It was not understood to be according to the intention. He swore in his answer, it would be contrary to the intention. No account is given, by what means he was persuaded to change the opinion he had formed; or, under what circumstances he was persuaded merely by a letter, requiring him to give absolute discretion to Minchin, to concur in that act, so as to think it consistent with any principle, that he acted with bona fides; enabling his co-trustee to execute a purpose connected with the due execution of the trust. But taking into the account, that he must be connected with Minchin, as attorney, as this is a civil demand, I must fix him with it.

Upon the whole, taking the most favorable case for the protection of executors and trustees, it does not throw a shield over a person acting as improvidently as this Defendant has acted; and if I cannot find such a principle, however I may lament the consequences in this case, I cannot give that protection.

SEE, ante, the notes to S. C. 4 V. 675.

(a) See Ochiltree v. Wright, 1 Dev. & Bat. 336; Massey v. Cureton, 1 Cheves, Ch. 181.

THE SITTINGS AFTER EASTER TERM.

[42 Geo. III. 1802.]

MOTT v. BUXTON.

[ROLLS.—1802, JUNE 2.]

The Court refused to order court rolls, &c. to be delivered by the steward appointed by the trustees to the steward of the testamentary guardian: there being no suggestion of improper conduct or advantage from the change. Where any act is to be done, as a conveyance to be made, the estate is a trust, not a use executed (a), [p. 201.]

A PETITION was presented, on behalf of an infant, entitled under a trust to convey to an estate in tail male; praying, that all Court rolls, books, &c. relating to the manors, &c. to which the petitioner is entitled, may be delivered by the steward appointed by the trustees to the steward of the testamentary guardian. There was no suggestion of improper conduct.

The petition stood for judgment.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—This petition does not pray, that these Court rolls, books, &c. may be brought into Court; but in effect calls upon the Court to determine, which of these persons is duly appointed. If it is true, as was contended, that the testamentary guardian has a right to appoint the steward, he might maintain an action for money had and received against the steward acting under an illegal and void appointment. The application ought rather to have been, that the trustees might appoint according to the nomination of the testamentary guardian. The legal estate is undoubtedly in the trustees; for this is a trust to convey; and whenever any act is to be done, it is a trust, and not a use executed (1). The Court certainly * would interfere [* 202] to prevent an undue exercise of their legal power, and if this were an appointment now to be made for the first time, it would be very fit to attend to the wishes of the testamentary guardian, or even of the cestui que trust himself; but when this appointment was made, it was altogether unobjectionable; and allowed on all sides. The question is, whether it shall be set aside without proof or suggestion even of improper conduct or of any advantage from the change. Under the circumstances there is no ground for the change; even if the Court could interfere.

The petition was dismissed. —

WITHOUT absolutely denying that an arbitrary and capricious power may be given to trustees, it is still very clear that, unless such power be expressly con-

(a) See 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 983, note.

(1) Fearne's Cont. Rem. 123, &c. 4th edit.

ferred, trustees must not exercise an arbitrary and capricious discretion. Mulgrave v. Mulgrave, 3 Mad. 493; S. C. 5 Mad. 472. The exercise of their legal power may necessarily, in many cases, call for the exercise of their discretion; and, if trustees honestly address themselves thereto, a Court of Equity will not control their judgment; the case would be otherwise if the trustees had acted mala fide (French v. Davidson, 3 Mad. 402); or from personal motives. Langton v. Olivant, Coop. 34. There can be very few instances in which the discretion of trustees will not be under the control of the Court; the exercise of this discretion will not be prevented, but care will be taken that it shall be duly exercised. Webb v. The Earl of Shaftesbury, 7 Ves. 487. The interference of the Court may be proper and necessary, even when a power has been given to trustees in words of seemingly very large discretion. Shore v. Walker, 19 Ves. 392. And, generally, where a testator has given property to trustees, to be distributed by them, but, although he may have used a term which appears to imply some discretionary power, he has laid down a certain rule, and designated the objects of his bounty, so that the discretion is to be exercised, and the judgment determined, upon matters of fact; such a judgment can be as well exercised and acted upon by a Court as by the trustees; and, if necessary, the case will be referred to a master. Gower v. Mainwaring, 1 Ves. Sen. 89. But, where the discretion of the trustees is to be exercised upon matter of opinion, as to which well-intentioned persons may differ, and where no particular guiding rule is laid down, there the Court cannot substitute the master for the trustees. Walker v. Walker, 5 Mad. 427. And it has been determined, that a power given to an executor in trust, at his discretion, to advance the capital of a legacy, gives the legatee no right to claim it absolutely: the will having confided the decision, as to the propriety of advancing the legacy, or only paying the annual proceeds thereof, to the sole discretion of the executor; it was held, that it would not be merely expounding, but making a will for the testator, if the Court were to order the capital to be advanced. Pink v. De Thassey, 2 Mad. 162.

WYNN v. MORGAN.

[ROLLS.—1802, JUNE 2.]

WHERE the time, at which the contract was to be executed, is not material, and there is no unreasonable delay (a), the vendor, though not having a good title at the time the contract was to be executed, nor when the bill was filed, but being able to make a title at the hearing (b), is entitled to a specific performance.

THIS bill was filed for the purpose of obtaining a specific performance of articles of agreement for the purchase of an estate in Carnarvonshire from the Plaintiff. The articles were dated the 3d of September, 1800; and signed by the Plaintiff and the Defendant; and expressed that in consideration of 2500*l.*, to be paid on or before the 1st of November next, and of 1150*l.*, to be paid on or be-

(a) See, upon the subject of the materiality of time and the effect of delay in completing a purchase, Marquis of Hertford v. Boore, Aston v. Boore, ante, 5 V. 719, and note (a); Omerod v. Hardman, ib. 722; Guest v. Homfray, ib. 818; Lloyd v. Collett, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 460–472, and notes; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 776; 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) [415], 302, et seq.

(b) In regard to the ability of the vendor to make a good title, the law is well settled according to the decision in the principal case. See Rose v. Calland, ante, 5 V. 189, note (a) and the cases cited. But the purchaser will not be compelled to take a doubtful title, ib.; Cooper v. Dowsse, ante, 1 V. 563, note (a); Omerod v. Hardman, ante, 722; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 777.

sore the 1st of January next to the Plaintiff, his heirs, executors, or administrators, being the purchase-money for the absolute purchase of the premises, the Plaintiff covenanted with the Defendant, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, that the Plaintiff or his heirs would on or before the 1st of November next make a good title to the mansion-house and lands ; and deliver an abstract of such title on or before the 1st of November ; and would before the 1st of January next by such good and sufficient conveyances and assurances as the Defendant, his heirs or assigns, or his or their * Counsel, should direct, cause to be well and sufficiently conveyed and assured unto and to the use of the Defendant, his heirs or assigns, or to such other person or persons as he or his heirs should appoint, the mansion-house and lands, &c. ; and the Defendant covenanted, that he would upon the 1st of November pay the sum of 2500*l.* to the Plaintiff, and 1150*l.* on the sealing and execution of such conveyance and assurances, being the consideration money agreed upon between the said parties for the absolute purchase of the fee-simple and inheritance of the premises ; and that the Defendant, his heirs or assigns, should be entitled to the rents from the 29th of November next.

In the attestation it was stated, that it was first agreed, that the said purchase-money should be paid in one entire sum on the 5th of February next, and not as before mentioned.

This purchase was not carried into effect : the Defendant objecting to the title, on the ground, that the Plaintiff could not convey the fee simple : his only interest being by purchase under a decree of the remainder of a term of 1000 years, created by the will of Mary Pugh ; upon trust by sale or mortgage to raise money for payment of debts and other charges. After the bill was filed, the Plaintiff procured an Act of Parliament in the last Session, vesting the fee simple and inheritance of the estates of Mary Pugh deceased in trustees, and their heirs, upon trusts to complete the sale of such parts as had been sold under the direction of the Court.

Mr. Richards, and Mr. Spranger, for the Plaintiff, admitted, that by the late cases (1) the time is *essential ; [*204] but observed, that no objection of that sort had been raised : the objection being taken upon the title ; and that objection being removed, the Plaintiff, though he had not a good title at the time the contract was entered into, or was to be performed, may compel an execution of the contract. They cited Langford v. Pitt (2), and Lord Stourton v. Meers (3).

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Stanley, for the Defendant.—The Court will not carry into execution an agreement, that is not reciprocal. The Defendant was ready with his money : but the Plaintiff had not a title, when he contracted to sell. A term of 1000 years is not

(1) Ante, Spurrier v. Hancock, Harrington v. Wheeler, vol. iv. 667, 686 ; the note, 691 ; Guest v. Homfray, v. 818.

(2) 2 P. Will. 629.

(3) Stated 2 P. Will. 630.

equal to the fee. In point of interest it is as good : but there is a variety of reasons for preferring to purchase the fee ; which was clearly the intention of the Defendant ; who in March expressly said, he would have nothing to do with it. The Plaintiff could not make a title without the aid of Parliament. This is not therefore like the usual objections, that a term is to be got in, &c. It was not clear, that Parliament would give that aid. The bill was filed without even suggesting, either, that the objection was not good, or, that it should be removed ; and the Act of Parliament was not obtained till two months afterwards. Can the Defendant then be compelled now to accept the title, consistently with the late authorities, holding the performance of contracts to greater strictness, and considering the time material ? Under the circumstances the Plaintiff is entitled to no favor ; and it would be very hard to hold the Defendant liable at any indefinite time.

Mr. Richards, in reply, was stopped by the Court.

[* 205] *The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].

—The Defendant does not allege, that the execution at the day was at all material to him, and there is nothing to show, it was considered so by him. But his objection is of a different sort ; that upon the day, on which the contract ought to have been carried into execution, no good title could be made by the Plaintiff. It is unnecessary to determine generally, whether a Plaintiff can at any distance of time come to this Court ; and say, he is now ready to make a title ; though he could not at the time the contract was entered into, and when it ought to have been carried into execution. But I am called upon to determine the converse of that, and to say, if the Plaintiff cannot make a completely good title at the time the contract ought to have been carried into execution, he never can come for an execution. That would contradict the whole current of authorities ; and would be in opposition to the uniform practice ; for it is in the experience of us all, that it has been absolutely necessary for the party insisting upon the contract to do something to enable himself to convey a completely good title ; and yet either the objection has never been taken, or it has never prevailed ; for there is not a single instance of its having prevailed, so nakedly stated. Yet there are numerous instances, in which it might have been made ; where acts were to be done. I am always supposing, that the day, on which the contract was to be carried into execution, is not material ; and that the party is obliged to rest upon the objection to the title. There has been no unreasonable delay here. As soon as it was known, that the Defendant meant to insist upon the objection, the Plaintiff immediately set about remedying it ; and he does remedy it in a short time by procuring an Act of Parliament ; and in three months was able to make a good title. Therefore, deciding against the Plaintiff, I should be under the necessity of saying, *if any flaw existing at the time the contract was to be carried into execution, can be pointed out, it cannot be enforced. That would be too strong. It is not necessary to infer from that, that at the distance of years the vendor may come, and say, he can now make a title, and ask a specific performance. Each case must depend upon its circumstances. All I say is, there are no circumstances in this case to prevent the Plaintiff from having a performance.

Mr. Richards applied for costs.

The Master of the Rolls, Sir William Grant.—There was a frequent reference to know, at what time the title could be made. At the institution of this suit a good title could not be made. Therefore I do not see, that I ought to give costs. Decree a specific performance, and a reference to the Master to settle the conveyance, if the parties differ (1).

1. It is an established rule (though one not to be extended farther than it has already gone), that a specific performance may be obtained, notwithstanding a good title was not clearly shown, or did not exist, when the contract was entered into, or when the reference to the master, or even his report, was made, if it appear that the objection to the title can be cleared within a moderate length of time; see, ante, note 6 to Cooper v. Denne, 1 V. 565: and, to the authorities cited in the same note, that a vendor who sells with a confused title must, at least, be at the expense of clearing it, add Vancouver v. Bliss, 11 Ves. 466, where it was held that, although the infliction of costs may, in some cases, be rather a hardship upon a vendor (who ought, however, before he entered into the contract, to have known the state of his title), yet a contrary rule might frequently be the greatest injustice to a purchaser, who had no means of knowing any thing on the subject, but from the inquiry before the master. Supposing both parties to have acted with equal fairness of intention, the costs of investigating a title which turned out to be bad, must (as it was decided in the case cited) be borne by the vendor who sought a specific performance, not by the vendee who successfully resisted it.

2. That time may be made of the essence of a contract, see note 2 to Eaton v. Lyon, 3 V. 690.

DOWNES v. THOMAS.

[1802, FEB. 17, 24; JUNE 4.]

DECREE for execution of a trust to pay debts against the trustees: the other Defendant not appearing, upon process to sequestration.

THE bill was filed by creditors of the Marquis of Donegall, claiming the benefit of a trust, created in 1794, against the Marquis and the trustees.

By indentures of lease and release a term of one thousand years was vested in trustees; upon trust by sale or mortgage of estates in Ireland, and by the rents, issues, and profits, until such sale or mortgage, to raise and pay the debts.

* The bill prayed, that the indentures may be established, and the trusts thereof carried into execution; and that the Defendants, the trustees, may be directed by sale or mortgage to raise and pay the Plaintiffs, and the other creditors, who shall come in and contribute to the expense of the suit, what shall be due to them for principal and interest, &c. The trustees by their answer submitted to act as the Court shall direct.

(1) A vendor is entitled to the opportunity of making out a better title before the Master. See ante, Jenkins v. Hales, vol. vi. 646. So far as evidence may be produced before the Master on the other side: Vancouver v. Bliss, post, xi. 458.

The Defendant, the Marquis of Donegall, did not appear. Process had issued against him, to a sequestration; and the cause was set down for the purpose of obtaining a decree against the trustees.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Hart, for the Plaintiffs insisted, that having done every thing in their power to compel the Marquis to appear, they were entitled to a decree against the trustees. They cited Phillips v. The Duke of Buckingham (1).

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Trower, for the Defendants, the trustees, resisted the decree.

MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—I should be glad to act under the authority of Phillips v. The Duke of Buckingham: but I doubt, upon principle, all the process taken together has not the effect of an appearance. It is only the remedy to compel appearance.

Feb. 24th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS said, he had satisfied himself: but as the point respected the practice of the Court, he wished to speak to the Lord Chancellor upon it.

[*208] *The MASTER OF THE ROLLS.—The Plaintiffs having used all means to bring all parties before the Court are entitled upon principle as well as precedent to a decree against the trustees. In Phillips v. The Duke of Buckingham the Court did exactly what I am now called upon to do.

The decree was made against the trustees according to the prayer of the bill.

1. THE fourth section of the statute of 45 Geo. III. c. 124, enacts, that in case any defendant, having privilege of Parliament, shall, upon a return of process of sequestration issued against him for not putting in an appearance to any bill of complaint instituted against him in a Court of Equity, a clerk in Court may be appointed to enter an appearance for such defendant; and such proceedings may be thereupon had in the cause as if the party had actually appeared. And, by the fifth and sixth sections of the said statute, it is enacted, that if a defendant to a suit in equity, who has appeared, or who has had an appearance entered for him according to the provisions of the before-cited fourth section, shall refuse or neglect to put in his answer in due time, the bill against him may be taken pro confesso. In the exposition of the fifth section of the said statute, it has been held (though the words of the act, as was observed by Lord Eldon, in Jones v. Davies, 17 Ves. 368, seem to restrict the operation of the said section to bills of discovery only) that the remedy given thereby was not intended to be confined to bills of discovery, but to extend to bills praying relief. Logan v. Grant, 1 Mad. 626; Cory v. Gerickens, 2 Mad. 45.

2. It should be observed that, by the bill now pending in Parliament, "For the Improvement of the Administration of Justice in Courts of Equity," it is proposed that, if any defendant shall be taken into custody under a writ of attachment, duly issued against him for contempt in not appearing to a bill; or, being in custody for any other cause, shall be charged with or detained under such writ, and the same shall appear by the return to such writ; if such defendant shall neglect to enter an appearance, then, after the expiration of fourteen days from the time when such writ of attachment was returnable, the Court shall, upon motion or petition on behalf of the plaintiff, notice of which shall not be required, and upon the production of the return to the writ, and of a certificate of the clerk in Court of the plaintiff that the appearance of such defendant has not been entered, order and appoint one of the sworn clerks of the Court to enter an appearance for such defendant; and thereupon such proceedings shall be had as if such defendant had actually appeared. As to the farther course to be pursued in order to have the bill taken pro confesso, see, ante, note 1 to The Attorney General v. Young, 3 V. 209.

(1) 1 Vern. 227; Parker v. Blackbourne, Pre. Ch. 99.

POWELL v. ROBINS. (1)

[* 209]

[ROLLS.—1801, Nov. 30; DEC. 7. 1802, JUNE 4.]

SIMPLE-CONTRACT debts not charged upon real estate by a will, first devising, that all his debts and funeral expenses might be satisfied and paid by his executors (a); all the real estate being specifically devised (b).

Assets marshalled: but no sale decreed until the infant devisee attains twenty-one (2) (c), [p. 209.]

Sale decreed, or a receiver; where evidently for the benefit of the infant heir to avoid the parol demurring (d), [p. 211, note.]

THE bill was filed by creditors. The specialty creditors had exhausted the personal estate; which appeared by the Master's report on a decree for an account. The simple-contract creditors insisted, that the testator's will charged the real estate with the payment of his debts; or, if not, that they had a right to stand in the place of the specialty creditors against the real estates specifically devised.

The testator John Davis being seised and possessed of real and personal estate made his will in writing duly attested, bearing date the 10th April, 1792; and first he devised, that all his just debts and funeral expenses might be satisfied and paid by his executors

(1) Ex relatione.

(a) See Kidney v. Couesmaker, Williams v. Couesmaker, ante, 1 V. 436, note (a); Ram on Assets, p. 64, 65; Keeling v. Brown, ante, 5 V. 359, and notes; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1246, § 1247; Willan v. Lancaster, 3 Russ. 108; 2 Powell on Devises, by Jarman, ch. 34, p. 654; Batson v. Lindgreen, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 94, note; Coombs v. Gibson, 1 ib. 273, note (1).

(b) See Ram on Assets, ch. 28, § 2, p. 334.

(2) See the note, post, 211.

(c) Parol demurrer is now abolished in England by stat. 1, Will. IV. c. 47, § 10; and by § 11 infants are enabled to convey their estates in certain cases, comprehending those, in which the parol would have demurred. 2 Macpherson, Infants, (Lond. ed. 1842), 411. As to the law on this subject before the passage of that act, see ib., and also p. 360, 361.

(d) See Harris v. Harris, 6 Gill & John. 111; Davis v. Dowling, 2 Keen, 245; Garland v. Loving, 1 Rand. 396; Coger v. Coger, 2 Dana, 270, in reference to circumstances under which Courts will decree a sale of the lands descended to infants.

therein named as soon after his decease as might be; and he gave to his wife, the Defendant Mary Davis, his leasehold cottage, &c. for the remainder of the term he had therein, in bar of dower, and he gave and bequeathed unto his only child, the Defendant Thomas Davis, an infant, all his water corn mill, with the appurtenances, and three cow commons on Morton Heath; to hold the said water corn mill, messuages and garden, with the three cow commons, unto the said Defendant Thomas Davis, his heirs and assigns, after age; and in case of the death of Thomas Davis under age then he gave the said mill, &c. unto the said Mary Davis, the Defendant, his wife, in case she should then be sole and unmarried, but not otherwise; and all the rest, residue and remainder of his real and personal estate he gave unto his brother-in-law, the Defendant William Robins, and his brother-in-law William Gibbs; in trust to sell and dispose of the same for the maintenance of his wife Mary Davis and his [* 210] only child Thomas Davis; and he * appointed William Robins and William Gibbs, executors.

Mr. Cooke for the simple-contract creditors cited Trott v. Vernon (1). Harris v. Ingledeew (2). Kidney v. Coussmaker (3). Knightley v. Knightley (4). Shallcross v. Finden (5). Williams v. Chitty (6). Keeling v. Brown (7), and Brydges v. Landen (8).

Mr. Lloyd (Amicus Curiae) mentioned Finch v. Hattersley (9), a manuscript case, upon a will beginning thus :

"I John Hattersley make my will in the following manner: First, I will that all my debts and funeral expenses to the amount of 20*l.*, be paid;" and he devised his real estate to his wife; whom he appointed his executrix. That was held a charge upon the real estate.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT] expressed considerable doubt, whether this amounted to a charge (10); being a mere direction to the executors to pay; and observing, that the late Master of the Rolls laid down some very broad propositions in Shallcross v. Finden, directed Brydges v. Landen to be examined in the Register's Book.

June 4th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The question is, whether the testator's debts are charged on his real estate. I take it to be a fact admitted, that the testator had no real estate but what is specifically devised to the son. It is contended, that by the words the testator has charged his real estates with the

(1) Pre. Ch. 430.

(2) 3 P. Will. 91.

(3) Ante, vol. i. 436, ii. 267. See the note, i. 447.

(4) Ante, vol. ii. 328.

(5) Ante, vol. iii. 738.

(6) Ante, vol. iii. 545.

(7) Ante, vol. v. 359.

(8) In Chancery, 26th January, 1786, 31st October, 1788. Cited ante, vol. iii. 550.

(9) In Chancery, before Lord Rosslyn, 1797.

(10) Sanderson v. Wharton, 8 Price, 680; Clifford v. Lewis, 6 Madd. 33.

payment of his debts. That the words used would not of themselves amount to a charge has been determined in two cases : namely, Brydges v. Landen and Williams v. Chitty. So in the case of Keeling v. Brown.

These cases certainly determine the present. Here the words are precisely the same as those used in those cases. They determine the present case, upon the supposition, that no real estate passed to the executors. Here I presume the whole real estate was given to the son. The case of Finch v Hattersley was furnished me by Mr. Lloyd. Mr. Lloyd says, that the devise in that case was held to be a charge upon the real estate. But there the wife, the executrix, was the devisee of the real estate : so that she had by that the means of paying the debts out of the real estate. Lord Alvanley in Keeling v. Brown puts the decision upon that. In this case the Defendant, the devisee, is an infant ; and therefore I cannot order the estate to be sold, until he comes of age (1). I can only declare, that the

(1) This privilege of an infant to have a day after coming of age to show cause against a decree, analogous to the parol demurring at law (a), derives its origin from a principle of justice, rather than favor, to the heir in chivalry, deprived during wardship of the profits ; and was subsequently without equal reason extended to the heir generally. In Plasket v. Beeby, 4 East, 485, the Court of King's Bench decided, that the parol does not demur in favor of a devisee ; and, although in that case the infant devisee was not, as in Powell v. Robins, also heir, Lord Hardwicke in Beaumont v. Thorpe, where that union of characters appears to have occurred, declared, that the parol never demurs, but where the estate comes to the heir by descent. See 2 Ch. Ca. 164 ; For. 156, 198 ; Chaplin v. Chaplin, 3 P. Will. 367 ; Uvedale v. Uvedale, 3 Atk. 117 ; Tuckfield v. Buller, Amb. 197 ; where the infant was remainder-man in tail, with remainder in fee (as appears in Mr. Deane's Manuscripts) to his father, the tenant for life. Sweet v. Partridge, 2 Dick. 696 ; 1 Cox, 433 ; Ante, vol. iii. 317 ; Spencer v. Boyes, iv. 270 ; post, Williamson v. Gordon, xix. 114 ; Lechmere v. Brasier, 2 Jac. & Walk. 287 ; Attorney General v. Hamilton, 1 Madd. 214 ; 3 Black. Com. 300 ; Fonb. Tr. Eq. vol. i. 81, vol. ii. 268, 9 ; 1 Woodd. 403, 4 ; Pr. Reg. 194. The principle being the infant's benefit, where the delay is not for his benefit, the Court will go as far as possible to get out of the rule ; as, where there is a trust to be performed ; for which there must be a sale ; Uvedale v. Uvedale : but it appears by Mr. Sanders's note, that the infant had a day to show cause. In Mould v. Williamson, Chan. 26th March, 1794, upon a question, whether the Court would decree a sale, which was evidently for the infant's benefit, or the parol should demur. Uvedale v. Uvedale, Nicholas v. Draper, Chan. before Lord Camden, Mich. 1768, and Lloyd v. Gwyn, before Lord Thurlow, were mentioned ; and the Attorney General (Lord Eldon) said, Lord Thurlow in two instances appointed a receiver, to avoid the parol demurring.

Lord LOUGHBOROUGH, C.—The privilege of the infant, wherever it comes forth in this Court, is always detrimental to him. Debts are running on, and eating up the estate ; which has frequently occasioned an Act of Parliament. In one instance, a case from the Norfolk Circuit, the Court of King's Bench dealt very shortly with the right of an infant, to whom lands had descended ; holding, that he might be charged with the covenant of his ancestor, as assignee of the ancestor ; and the way they proved him assignee was by his mother having received rent. I think, in this case I shall do right by decreeing the estate to be sold. Nicholas v. Draper was a very strong case : an estate descended, and a case of intestacy. The estate was charged with a considerable mortgage, and portions to the daughters, two of whom were infants and coheiresses, under the settlement : so that they stood as creditors next to the mortgage. The decree directed the usual accounts, an account of the personal estate, and of timber, proper to be simple-contract creditors are entitled to stand in the place of the specialty creditors ; with liberty to apply, when the infant comes of age, to have the estate sold to pay their debts. This proceeds upon the idea, that there is no real estate but what is specifically devised to the son.

(a) Harris v. Youmans, 1 Hoff. 178.

1. THAT a mere direction, given by a testator, for payment of his debts by his "executor," cannot operate as a charge upon real estates, specifically devised to a third person, however desirous a Court may be to lay hold of any words from which it is possible to infer a testator's intention to provide, effectually, for the discharge of all just demands against him, see, ante, note 1 to Kightly v. Kightly, 2 V. 328.

2. A decree cannot be made for the sale of the real estate of an intestate debtor (who was not within the scope of the bankrupt laws) during the infancy of his heir: Lechnere v. Brasier, 2 Jac. & Walk. 290; but, it seems, a receiver may be appointed, and the rents and profits brought into Court; Sweet v. Partridge, 2 Dick. 696; March v. Bennett, 1 Vern. 428.

3. In the principal case, the rule as to the parol demurring, was thought applicable to an infant devisee: but in Chaplin v. Chaplin, 3 P. Wm. 868, this privilege was held to be confined to the heir, claiming by descent; and even the heir, it was laid down, could not claim it in respect of lands held on a term for lives, which, though commonly called a descendible freehold, cannot, in strictness, be said to be taken by the heir by descent, but as special occupant.

4. And where a testator has devised his estate to his heir at law, but charged with the payment of legacies, the legatees will be entitled to have their legacies immediately raised. Whether the descent in such case is broken or not, a charge renders the estate equitable assets, at least for the purpose of answering such charge; see note 3 to Ellis v. Smith, 1 Ves. 11. But, though all creditors would thereby be let in, pari passu, yet, as the legacies in the case put, could not be raised until the testator's creditors were satisfied, the estate so charged would be out of the common rule as to the parol demurring, if a bill were brought by such creditors for the sale of the said estate during the infancy of the heir. Mould v. Williamson, 2 Cox, 336. Where, however, payment of claims of a lower nature does not render the previous discharge of all debts a necessary incident, Lord Talbot held, that there was no difference, with regard to the parol demurring, whether the assets are legal or equitable. His lordship decided, that where an estate had been conveyed by a party in his life-time upon a trust for sale of so much thereof as would be sufficient to pay his debts, and the incumbrances charged on it, and then in trust for his own right heirs, although this was a trust for payment of the incumbrances which then affected the same, yet, as to the residue of the estate, not necessary for the discharge of those incumbrances, if a creditor by bond, given subsequently to the execution of the conveyance in trust, brought a bill praying to have the estate sold, and the prior incumbrances paid off, and then that he might be paid out of the residue, the parol must of necessity demur, although the infant's counsel were desirous to waive that privilege, as being in that particular instance, disadvantageous to their client. Scarth v. Cotton, Ca. temp. Talb. 199.

5. In the case last cited, it will have been observed by the reader, the Court felled; and in case of a deficiency of the personal estate and the produce of the timber the real estate was with consent of the mortgagee decreed to be sold; and, after paying the debts in their order, the residue to be applied in paying simple-contract debts. Mr. Dickens's recollection is, that Lord Camden decreed it upon a clear conviction, that it was for the benefit of the infants.

The Solicitor General said, Lord Camden did the same thing in Allopp v. Rowley; and Mr. Dickens said, Lord Hardwicke also had done the same.

In this case it was afterwards arranged without a decree for sale: the trustee to stand as receiver, giving security: to be allowed for the charges paid; and to keep down the interest of the remaining charges out of the rents and profits. See the account of this case, 2 Cox, 386.

seems not to have doubted that, for the purposes of the trust expressed, a sale might have been directed, though the heir was an infant. The same doctrine was distinctly laid down by Lord Hardwicke in Uvedale v. Uvedale, 3 Atk. 118, and had been previously held by Lord Cowper, in Dawson v. Goddard, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 66. Of course, whenever lands are devised to be sold for the payment of debts, as nothing descends to the heir, an immediate sale may be directed, without giving him a day to show cause, though he be an infant: but, if he be decreed to join in the conveyance, he must have a day to show cause after he comes of age. Cooke v. Parsons, 2 Vern. 429.

6. As to the ground upon which assets are marshalled in a Court of Equity, see, ante, the note to Norman v. Morrell, 4 V. 769. The propriety of acting upon those grounds in the principal case, was recognized in Sanderson v. Wharton, 8 Price, 682, where it was observed, in substance, that whenever it may be necessary to throw the debts of a deceased person upon his real estate, the heir (either natus or factus) must be before the Court at the hearing.

house upon the same terms, upon which he held: but, when the defendant proposed to him to execute an assignment of the original lease, he objected, that it was always his maxim not to part with the original lease, but to hold it in his own possession for his security.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Wetherell, for the Plaintiff.—To the objection, that the Plaintiff cannot vary the written agreement, the answer is, that this is a case of fraud; upon which you must have recourse to parol evidence; otherwise it cannot be made out; and that takes it out of the Statute (1): Shirley v. Stratton (2). Young [* 214] * v. Clark (3). Buxton v. Lester (4). These are cases of Defendants resisting the performance on the ground of fraud: but the same principle must apply to the case of a Plaintiff complaining of fraud. The rule "Caveat emptor," does not apply in this instance. A person buying an estate has no right to ask the vendor, what he gave for it. But this is very different; amounting to a warranty. Though there is no case precisely similar, the result of all, which are collected by Mr. Fonblanque (5), is, that upon fraud or mistake parol evidence is admissible. There are several cases before Lord Thurlow, in which it is laid down, that a party may alter a term in the agreement in the case of fraud: Lord Irnham v. Child (6); where it was taken as clear, that, if the clause had been omitted by fraud, a redemption would have been permitted. So in Lord Portmore v. Morris (7), before Lord Kenyon. In Joynes v. Statham (8), and Walker v. Walker (9), Lord Hardwicke intimates an opinion, that the Plaintiff might have done so, if the parties had been reversed. Rich v. Jackson (10) was determined upon the ground, that it was not a case of fraud. If the bill had been filed against this Plaintiff, upon all the authorities she might have insisted upon this variation; for the Court would not assist a Plaintiff coming to enforce an agreement by his own fraud, not according to the true contract. There can be no principle, why a man may set up a fraud defensively, which he cannot offensively.

The Defendant must go the length of saying, that no proof [* 215] of fraud, however * clearly it may be made out, that the written agreement was not the actual agreement, will be adequate. Certainly a Plaintiff must make out a stronger case. The consequence of refusing this relief would be, that the person, who contrived the fraud, and who, if he filed a bill, would not be permitted to set it up, may secure the advantage by refusing to per-

(1) Stat. 29, ch. 2, c. 3.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 440.

(3) Pre. Ch. 538. See the references in the notes by Mr. Finch. Garrard v. Grindling, 2 Swanst. 244.

(4) 3 Atk. 383.

(5) 1 Fonb. 122.

(6) 1 Bro. C. C. 92.

(7) 2 Bro. C. C. 219.

(8) 3 Atk. 388.

(9) 2 Atk. 98.

(10) 4 Bro. C. C. 514, ante, vol. vi. 334, in a note to the Marquis Townshend v. Stangroom, where all these cases are fully discussed. See also the note, iii. 38, 9.

form the agreement ; driving the other to be the actor and to file a bill. In many of these cases the fraud has not been clear. This is beyond a doubt misrepresentation from first to last ; not only suppressio veri, but also suggestio falsi. How is it to be distinguished from a purchase of an estate, represented by the vendor at a certain number of acres, and turning out to be less ? There is a similar reference here to the rent. The Defendant's construction of his words is impossible.

Mr. Leach, for the Defendant.—The cases cited proceed upon a principle wide of the Statute of Frauds. The Plaintiff signed this agreement under the notion, that the rent specified was paid by the Plaintiff to his landlord. Assume that fact. She undertook it with full knowledge. This is not within the principle, upon which the Court permits a written agreement to be varied by parol. The meaning of that rule is, that the writing must differ from the intention of the party, when signing it. This Plaintiff intended, and knowing it bound herself, to pay 73*l.* 10*s.* per annum. She does not insist, that she signed the agreement by mistake : but she contends upon the suppression of the fact, not merely, that she is to be discharged from the written agreement, which might be done, if the case was made out, but beyond that to set up another agreement, existing only in parol. That is the distinction. If she meant only to pay a rent of 63*l.*, and the other by fraud inserted 73*l.*, the Court would correct it : but this is an attempt to repeal the Statute of Frauds. The * danger of admitting such evi- [^{* 216]}dence must be attended to ; persons supporting their own case ; and affecting to state the very words, that passed. By the alteration of a word the witness alters the whole conversation. But, admitting the evidence, it by no means supports their case. If the understanding was, that the Plaintiff was to stand in the same relation to the original landlord as the Defendant, how was it, that she was to pay 60*l.*, as a consideration for the lease ? He meant nothing more than what he states in his answer ; that she should have it upon terms of equal advantage. The supposed fraud consists in this ; that having expended money he must therefore have an increased rent.

Mr. Romilly, in reply.—With respect to the Statute, I cannot state any case exactly like this : but, where a party by a fraudulent representation of the facts has obtained a contract, it has been decided in many instances, that a case of fraud is always an exception out of the Statute (1). If the party undertakes to show, that by fraud he was induced to sign an agreement different from the actual agreement, he may read evidence to that. This extends to cases of every description, deeds executed with the most solemn forms. In Filmer v. Gott (2) evidence was admitted to prove a consideration in the deed different from that stated ; a pecuniary consideration :

(1) See the references in the note, ante, vol. iii. 38, to Pym v. Blackburn.

(2) 7 Bro. P. C. 70.

the deed expressing natural love and affection. That was followed by The King v. The Inhabitants of Scammonden (1), and various other cases. Lord Irnham v. Child, and Portmore v. Morris (2), are as strong cases as can be produced : being not only to vary the written agreement, but to have a specific performance of [*217] the *agreement, so varied. There can be no difference, whether the party producing the evidence is Plaintiff or Defendant : the question being as to the rule of evidence ; and a positive rule of evidence being equally applicable to both cases. In Doe v. Allen (3), a very strong case, upon a will, evidence was admitted ; upon this ground, that if you so rigidly adhere to the statute, it would be not a statute for the prevention, but for the protection and furtherance of fraud.

In this case the rent of 78*l.* 10*s.* was agreed on only because the Defendant said, he paid that rent to his landlord. The defendant, the only person, who knew the rent, refused to produce his lease. The sum inserted in the agreement has reference to something which is substantially the agreement. This is not, as represented, a party with knowledge consenting to pay this rent. She never agreed to pay more than he paid. Suppose a person, owner of the fee, and likewise occupier, contracts to sell the estate at so many years' purchase, telling the party with whom he contracts, that it is 100*l.* a year. Attending to the language of the Defendant, "terms," can mean nothing else than the rent. The Defendant's interpretation is totally impossible.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The doubt I have felt during the argument of this case, whether there is any instance of executing a written agreement with a variation introduced by parol, still remains ; and as it is an important question, I wish to consider it

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS.—This bill calls upon the Court for a specific execution of an agreement for a lease, at a rent of 60*l.* a year. There is no agreement in writing for a lease at that rent ; the agreement expressing a rent of 73*l.* 10*s.* The Plaintiff [* 218] contends however, *that she signed that agreement under a belief, that such was the rent payable by the Defendant : the real agreement being for a lease at the same rent he paid to his landlord. The Defendant in his answer admits, he might have said, she should have it upon the same terms, not meaning the same rent, but upon terms upon the whole equally advantageous ; insisting, that, as he had laid out a great deal of money, she would upon the whole have as good a bargain. She offers parol evidence to prove an express agreement, that she was to have it upon the same terms as he had it ; and to show, that nothing could be meant by that expression, but the same rent : nothing being in discussion between them, but the amount of the rent. He alleges a particular reason for not stating it; that he had not his own lease at hand. The question is, whether the evidence is admissible; for, though read, it has been read without prejudice. The Defendant controverts the effect of the evidence, supposing it can be received: but I own, my opinion is, that, if received, it will make out the Plaintiff's case; for, taking the whole together, there is hardly a doubt, that the impression meant to be conveyed was, that the rent should be the same; and, whatever he meant, that is the impression any person would have received from his language.

(1) 3 Term Rep. B. R. 474.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 219.

(3) 8 Term Rep. B. R. 147.

By the rule of law, independent of the statue, parol evidence cannot be received to contradict a written agreement. To admit it for the purpose of proving, that the written instrument does not contain the real agreement, would be the same as receiving it for every purpose. It was for the purpose of shutting out that inquiry that the rule of law was adopted. Though the written instrument does not contain the terms, *it must in contemplation of law be taken to contain the agreement; as furnishing better evidence than any parol can supply. [*219]

Thus stands the rule of Law. But when Equity is called upon to exercise its peculiar jurisdiction by decreeing a specific performance, the party to be charged is let in to show, that under the circumstances the Plaintiff is not entitled to have the agreement specifically performed: and there are many cases, in which parol evidence of such circumstances has been admitted; as in Buxton v. Lister; which is very like this case. There upon the face of the instrument a specific sum was to be given for the timber: but it was shown by parol, that the Defendants were induced to give that upon the representation, that it was valued by two timber merchants; which was not true. So here by the agreement upon the face of it she is to pay this rent: but by the evidence she was induced to do so, because she thought, from his representation, that it was the rent he paid. If this had been a bill brought by this Defendant for a specific performance, I should have been bound by the decisions to admit the parol evidence, and to refuse a specific performance. But this evidence is offered, not for the purpose of resisting, but of obtaining, a decree: first, to falsify the written agreement; and then to substitute in its place a parol agreement, to be executed by the Court. Thinking, as I do, that the Statute has been already too much broken in upon by supposed equitable exceptions, I shall not go farther in receiving and giving effect to parol evidence, than I am forced by precedent. There is no case, in which the Court has gone the length now desired. But two cases are produced, in which, it is said, there is an intimation from Lord Hardwicke to that effect. Upon that it might be sufficient to say, it was not decided. But it is evident from the manner, in which that great Judge qualifies his own doubts, that he thought it impossible to maintain such a proposition as the Plaintiff is driven to maintain. In Walker v. Walker it is to be observed, first, that the parol evidence was not offered for the purpose of contradicting any thing in the written agreement. It was admitted, that, as far as it went, it stated the true meaning. But it was contended by the Defendant, that there was another collateral agreement, which the Plaintiff ought to execute, before he could have the benefit of the written agreement. It was evidence too offered in defence, to resist a decree. Lord Hardwicke, after stating the ground, expresses himself thus :

"The Plaintiff for these reasons is not entitled to relief in this Court for supplying the defect of a legal conveyance : but it is rebutted by the Equity set up by the Defendant. I am not at all clear, whether, if the Defendant had brought his cross bill to have this agreement established, the Court would not have done it, upon considering this in the light of those cases, where one part of the agreement being performed by one side, it is but common justice it be carried into execution on the other ; and the Defendant would have had the benefit of it as an agreement."

So he states the special reason ; not being at all clear, that the Defendant would have been so entitled. There is nothing of admitting parol evidence to contradict a written agreement, and next to set up a parol agreement, to be executed by the Court.

The other case referred to is Joyes v. Statham, referred to for the opinion expressed by Lord Hardwicke :

"Suppose, the Defendant had been the Plaintiff; and [* 221] had brought the bill for a specific performance of *the agreement : I do not see but he might have been allowed the benefit of disclosing this to the Court."

But the reason is assigned :

"Because it was an agreement executory only ; and as in leases there are always covenants relating to taxes, the Master will inquire, what the agreement was as to taxes ; and therefore the proof offered here is not a variation ; but is explanatory only of what those taxes were. I am of opinion to allow the evidence of the omission in the lease to be read."

The parol evidence was received for the purpose of resisting performance of the agreement ; and received likewise, not to contradict it, but to show, that, as it stood, it did not fully express the meaning and intention of the parties ; there being another stipulation agreed upon ; but not introduced into the written instrument ; and even if that had been a bill by the Defendant to carry into execution the agreement, he would not have found it necessary to offer parol evidence to contradict any thing in it ; for he allowed it to contain the intention, as far as it went : but the provision, that the rent was to be clear of taxes, was omitted : and Lord Hardwicke from the particular nature of that stipulation expresses a doubt, whether if the Defendant had been Plaintiff, he might not have been permitted to give evidence : it being usual to leave that open ; intimating, that it would be merely explanatory as to the taxes.

But this is evidence to vary an agreement in a material part ; and having varied it to procure it to be executed in another form. There is nothing to show, that ought to be done; and my opinion being, that it ought not, I must dismiss the bill, but without costs.

* The Plaintiff then applied for a decree according to [* 222] the written agreement; with a covenant for quiet enjoyment; as he had not power to grant such a lease.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT] said, the bill was not for that purpose; expressly objecting to a lease at the rent of 73*l.* 10*s.*

The bill was dismissed without costs, and without prejudice to another bill for a lease, at the rent of 73*l.* 10*s.*

1. In what cases, and to what extent, parol evidence is admissible upon questions of specific performance, see, ante, the notes to The Marquis of Townsend v. Stangroom, 6 V. 328, with the farther references there given.

2. That a plaintiff, who has set up one agreement by his bill, cannot obtain (under that bill) execution of a different agreement, even though he should be able to establish such different agreement by proofs in the progress of the cause, see note 3 to Mortimer v. Orchard, 2 V. 243.

3. Equity will never compel a purchaser to complete a contract, as to which he has been misled by any kind of misrepresentation, whether wilful or not, on the part of the vendor. See note 2 to Caberley v. Williams, 1 V. 210; and to the authorities there cited, add Turner v. Harvey, Jacob's Rep. 178.

4. The course pursued in the principal case, of dismissing the bill without costs, was followed in the recent analogous case of Gerrard v. Grinling, 2 Swans. 250.

ANONYMOUS.

[1802, JUNE 18.]

ORDER to amend, not served or drawn up, does not prevent a motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution.

THE bill was filed to set aside an award.

Mr. Bell, for the Defendant moved to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution; stating, that a motion to amend had been made; but no order was served, or drawn up; and that if this is sufficient, no bill could be dismissed for want of prosecution; for an order to amend would constantly be obtained.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] concurred in that observation; and added, that an order not being served or drawn up goes for nothing.

The order to dismiss the bill was made (1).

WHERE an order has been pronounced, upon motion of course, but not served, an intermediate step, taken by the other party, may be good: Morris v. Owen, 1

(1) Morris v. Owen, 1 Ves. & Bea. 523. The order to dismiss for want of prosecution operates immediately, when pronounced: Lorimer v. Lorimer, 1 Jac. & Walk. 284.

Ves. & Bea. 523. But, though some orders of course operate from the time of service only, (see, ante, the note to Knox v. Symmonds, 1 V. 87,) yet an order to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution operates from the moment it is pronounced; and a replication filed after that time, though before the order is served, will not prevent the effect of the order. Lorimer v. Lorimer, 1 Jac. & Walk. 288. See the notes to the Anonymous case, 2 V. 287.

[* 223]

ANDREW v. THE MASTER AND WARDENS OF THE MERCHANT TAYLORS' COMPANY.

[ROLLS.—1802, JUNE 21.—SEE THE ATTORNEY GENERAL v. ANDREW, ANTE, VOL. III. 633.]

A COMPROMISE, applying part of the fund to an establishment at St. John's College, Oxford, with which the Merchant Taylor's Company are connected, and giving the rest to the next of kin, was, the Attorney General consenting, established by decree.

THE decree in the cause of The Attorney General v. Andrew (1), was affirmed on appeal by the House of Lords on the 20th of February, 1800.

By that decree the information as against Trinity Hall was dismissed ; and it was ordered, that the relators should be at liberty to lay proposals before the Master for carrying into execution the intended donation of the testator within the intent and meaning of the will.

The account having been taken, and the funds transferred to the Accountant General, and the costs paid, no farther proceeding was had under that decree. Afterwards the Master and Wardens of the Company of Merchant Taylors agreed to compromise the suit with Thomas Harrison Andrew, the residuary legatee and one of the executors of James Andrew ; who was the executor and residuary legatee of Lois Andrew, the surviving next of kin and residuary legatee and sole executrix of the testator ; upon the terms, that a part of the funds should be appropriated to the establishment and maintenance of certain scholarships or exhibitions for the study of the civil law in the College of St. John the Baptist, in the University of Oxford ; which College is connected by the terms of its foundation with The Company of Merchant Taylors ; they having a right of sending scholars from their School to that College ; who on admission become scholars, and succeed to fellowships of that College ; and the College acceding to that arrangement, articles were executed, dated the 6th of February, 1801 ; by which it was agreed, that 2610*l.* cash, with interest at 5 per cent.

[* 224] and 2666*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* *3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, part of the funds, should be appropriated for the purpose of establishing six scholarships in St. John's College, according to the agreement; and that Thomas Harrison Andrew should have all the rest of the funds.

The bill was filed by Thomas Harrison Andrew against The Merchant Taylors' Company, St. John's College, the Attorney General, the co-executor with the Plaintiff of James Andrew, and the heir at law, to have the articles carried into execution.

This cause was ordered to stand over till the decision upon the petition of rehearing of Moggridge v. Thackwell (1).

Mr. Alexander appeared for the Attorney General; and consented on his part to the decree prayed.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT] expressed a doubt, whether this could be done consistently with the decree, that has been made; whether this arrangement, carrying it from Cambridge to Oxford, is an execution Cy pres.

Mr. Romilly, for the Plaintiff, said, The Merchant Taylors' Company were desirous of waiving any proposal beyond this compromise, which carries into execution the intention as far as can be done; as this College is connected with the School; and no other College will accept it with this condition annexed.

Mr. Richards (Amicus Curia) observed, that in the case of Wheatley Church (2) Lord Kenyon was of opinion, * they were competent to agree among themselves as [* 225] to what should be applied.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS.—There is an appropriation in this case as much as in that. I wish the Attorney General's consent to appear. Then let the decree be made according to the prayer of the bill (3).

SEE, ante, the notes to S. C. 3 V. 633.

(1) Ante, 36.

(2) The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Oxford. Stated from the Register's Book, ante, vol. iv. 431, in Corbyn v. French.

(3) For the conclusion of the cases upon Dr. Andrew's will, see Andrew v. Trinity Hall, post, vol. ix. 525.

URQUHART v. KING.

[ROLLS.—1802, JUNE 21.]

EXECUTORS, though not having legacies, held trustees of the residue for the next of kin (a).

At law the appointment of an executor is a gift of every thing not disposed of (b), [p. 228.]

A legacy to an executor raises a presumption against his legal title to the residue; which he may rebut by evidence (c), [p. 229.]

JANE MORRIS made her will in the following manner:

"I Jane Morris," of Berrymead Lodge, &c. "intending to dispose of part of my personal estate do make my last will and testament respecting the same in manner following."

The testatrix then gave legacies to several relations of her deceased husband, residing in the American States, and, in the event of the death of any of the legatees in her life, to their respective issue; and then proceeded thus:

"And I direct the said several legacies to be paid to the several persons aforesaid in lawful money of Great Britain, at the expiration of six months next after my decease, and to be remitted them in full without any deduction then for any tax or duty, that may be payable in respect of the same legacies to Government, or any duty or expense, that may be payable or may attend the remittance thereof or the giving any release or acquittance to my executors for the same; and to that intent I give to my executors [* 226] hereinafter named * such a sum of money as may be necessary to pay and satisfy every tax, duty, and imposition, payable in respect of the same several legacies and the expense of taking and procuring proper releases and acquittances, and also all costs and charges, which they may incur, or be put unto in the execution of this my will; and I constitute and appoint the Honorable Rufus King, Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States of North America aforesaid, or such other person, who at the time of my death shall be Minister Plenipotentiary from the States of America to this Kingdom, and Francis Gregor of Trewarthenick in the county of Cornwall, Esq. executors of this my will."

By a codicil she gave other legacies specific and pecuniary; but made no disposition of the residue.

Upon the bill of the surviving brothers and sisters of the testatrix and nephews and nieces, the children of a deceased brother,

(a) The English decisions respecting the circumstances which will make an executor trustee for the next of kin, are for the most part inapplicable in America, where the surplus undisposed of by the testator is universally distributable among the next of kin. See Nesbitt v. Murray, Murray v. Nesbitt, ante, 5 V. 158, note (a); Bennet v. Bachelor, ante, 1 V. 68, note (a); Nourse v. Finch, ib. 344, note (a); 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1208; 3 Phil. Ev. (Cowen & Hill's notes, ed. 1839,) 1495, 1496; Hagthorp v. Hook, 1 Gill & John. 270.

(b) See note (a) above.

(c) 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1054, 1055.

claiming the residue as next of kin, the only question was, whether the executors were trustees of the residue for the Plaintiffs: the executors claiming it beneficially.

Mr. Romilly, for the Plaintiffs; Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Dowdeswell, for other next of Kin.—Upon this question, which is a mere question of evidence, the circumstance of a legacy to the executor (1), is only one circumstance, and a very slight one. It is impossible to say, the first case upon that is very satisfactory. Upon many other circumstances the Court has considered the executor a trustee; as, where the testator * has declared, he meant to [^{* 227}] give to another (2); Androven v. Poiblanc (3): so, where he left a blank (4); showing, he did not intend to give it to the executor as executor. That also has been thought material to show, the testator did not intend to die intestate as to any part of his property. In general a testator does not intend to die intestate as to any part. The object of this will is very material; showing, the testatrix did not intend to dispose of the residue. The choice of Mr. King or the Minister Plenipotentiary from the American States for the time being as one of her executors, shows, she meant him by virtue of his office only: many of the legatees also being resident in America: De Mazar v. Pybus (5). The direction as to the costs and charges of the executors was quite unnecessary, if she meant them to take all the residue beneficially. Dean v. Dalton (6).

Mr. Richards and Mr. Steele, for the Executors.—The executors are in point of law entitled. A testator cannot die intestate, as long as there is an executor. This case is perfectly new in its circumstances; not like a bequest to a person, who dies in the life of the testator. In that case it is clear, the testator intended to give it from the executor. So in the case of the blank the conclusion is, that he intended to give the residue to some one, not the executor; for his name the testator knew: but the other did not occur to him. Where the residue is given to the executor "in trust," that is an express declaration, excluding him. Dean v. Dalton is equivalent; the executors having legacies for their trouble. In De Mazar v. Pybus the appointment was of the partnership, not individually; * and they were also made guardians; and that [^{* 228}] very term makes them trustees. The direction for paying the stamp duty is merely increasing the legacy. As to the direction giving the executors their costs, nothing is given to them for their trouble in executing the will. It is not necessary to show bounty intended to the executors. The Plaintiffs must show the contrary. The executors claim by law. As to the beginning of the will, if it

(1) See ante, Nisbett v. Murray, vol. v. 149, and the references in the note, 158; Abbott v. Abbott, vi. 343; and the note, i. 362.

(2) Ante, Bennet v. Batchelor, vol. i. 63; Mordaunt v. Hussey, iv. 117.

(3) 3 Atk. 299.

(4) The Bishop of Cloyne v. Young, 2 Ves. 91.

(5) Ante, vol. iv. 644.

(6) 2 Bro. C. C. 684.

only appointed an executor, and no more, the whole property is disposed of. There was a time certainly, when the Court inclined against the executor, and in favor of the next of kin ; but in Bowker v. Hunter (1) the law was established in favor of the legal right. In this will there is nothing but surmise upon little circumstances. Giving the executors their expenses is only giving them what by law they had a right to retain ; and is merely a cautious act of kindness.

Mr. Richards, in reply, was stopped by the Court.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—It is true, at law the appointment of an executor is a gift of every thing not otherwise disposed of. But in equity it is always a question of intention, whether he is entitled beneficially or as trustee ; and the question always arises upon the sufficiency of the evidence, by which the intention is made out. I apprehend, the conclusion Courts have drawn from the circumstance of a legacy to the executor was perhaps originally a stretch, and not very conclusive evidence of an intention, that he should not take beneficially ; for undoubtedly there might be reasons for a legacy consistent with an intention, that the executor should take the whole. But they have reasoned [* 229] * it thus ; that it is giving him part and the whole. That I do not think quite conclusive : but it is now settled that it raises a presumption against him ; which he is allowed to rebut by evidence of the real intention, that he should take beneficially.

In this case the circumstances much more strongly indicate the real intention, that the executors should not take beneficially, than a legacy would have done. First, the declaration, that she intends to dispose of part of her personal estate, and that it is for that purpose only she makes a will. That amounts to a declaration, that she does not by appointing an executor mean to dispose of the whole ; though that appointment standing alone would legally have that effect. That declaration of itself might have been not very conclusive ; if the whole tenor of the will was not in perfect correspondence with it : but throughout the testatrix proceeds upon the assumption, that nothing is to go to any one but what she specifically disposes of ; for, directing the tax upon the legacy to be paid, she does not in the usual way direct the executors to pay it ; but thinks it necessary to give to her executors such a sum of money as may be necessary to pay all these charges and expenses, and makes no farther disposition. There she stops ; having disposed of every thing she means to dispose of. Therefore the conclusion of the will is consistent with what she sets out with. It is said, that may be from caution ; that the executors may in all events be safe. But it is evident, she did not think, such a precaution necessary : evidently supposing, a part of her personal property would be sufficient for all the purposes of her will. There is no motive for this special bequest to her executors, except that she supposed it necessary to separate from the residue every thing she meant the executors to have. That was nugatory, if she supposed her estate solvent, and that the executors * were to take the residue ; for it would be only taking out [* 230] of their own residue. The appointment of Mr. King, not in his individual capacity, as a friend, but in his capacity of minister from the American States, or of such other person, who at her death should be minister, is not material (1) ; aiding the other circumstances. It is evident therefore, she meant to confer an office only ; and the intention is much more clear than it would be from the single circumstance of a trifling legacy to each ; which, it is admitted, would be sufficient to exclude the executors. They are therefore mere trustees of the residue for the next of kin.

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 328.

1. As to the circumstances which may exclude an executor's claim to a beneficial interest in the residue of his testator's personal property not disposed of, see, ante, the notes to Bennet v. Bachelor, 1 V. 63, the notes to Nourse v. Finch, 1 V. 344, and note 4 to Moggridge v. Thackwell, 1 V. 464. That the nomination of an executor, on the ground of his holding a particular situation or employment, and not looking to the individual in his personal capacity, repels the prima facie presumption which, in ordinary cases, arises in favor of an executor, and converts him into a trustee of the residue, see De Mazar v. Pybus, 4 Ves. 648; Griffiths v. Hamilton, 12 Ves. 309.

2. The dictum, in the principal case, that trifling legacies to each of several executors would be sufficient to exclude them from all beneficial interest in the residue of their testator's estate, must be understood as applying only to cases in which the legacies to each were equal. See note 2 to Nisbett v. Murray, 5 Ves. 149.

MILES v. LINGHAM.

[1802, JUNE 14, 19, 23.]

RETURN to an attachment for want of appearance "Cepi Corpus" but from illness and infirmity she could not be removed : a Messenger ordered (a).

THE Defendant Rebecca Lingham was taken upon attachment for want of appearance, and still remained in custody. The sheriff's return upon the attachment was "Cepi Corpus;" but by reason of her weak state of health, extreme infirmity, and the peril of her life, he did not remove her.

Mr. William Agar, for the Plaintiff, moved for a Sequestration ; suggesting a doubt, whether the motion ought not to be first for a messenger ; and afterwards for a sequestration. He cited the Practical Register (2). Frederick v. David (3). Wilkinson v. Belcher (4). An anonymous case in Atkyns (5) ; in which, as well as

(1) See post, vol. xii. 309.

(a) 1 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 193.

(2) Page 48.

(3) 1 Vern. 344.

(4) 2 Bro. C. C. 181.

(5) 2 Atk. 507.

in Frederick v. David, the sheriff had parted with the body. Martin v. Kerridge (1). Anon. Mose. 301. Morrice v. The Bank of England (2); that there may be a sequestration; though the [* 231] * party is not in custody upon the attachment. In Frederick v. David the party was out of custody; having gone to Holland: yet as he once had been in custody, a messenger was sent. In extreme cases the clerk in Court has sometimes been ordered to enter an appearance.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON], after some consideration, ordered a Messenger.

A SEQUESTRATION may issue against a party who is in contempt, whether he be in custody or not. Sec, ante, note 1 to Hales v. Shafloe, 1 V. 86.

DANN v. SPURRIER.

[1802, JUNE 22.]

WHETHER a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one, years, is determinable at either of the intervening periods, at the option of both parties, or of the lessees only, nothing being expressed as to that, quare. (See the note, post, 236.) The relief in respect of expenditure under an erroneous opinion of title or an expectation of a larger interest, or that the enjoyment would not be disturbed, with the knowledge and permission of the other party, requires a case of bad faith clearly made out (a). In this instance it failed for want of evidence, [p. 231.]

By a memorandum, dated the 14th of October, 1791, it was expressed, that William Atkinson agreed to take on lease from John Spurrier a dwelling-house and premises in Old Broad Street, to hold for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one, years, at the yearly rent of 150*l.* payable half-yearly; including all taxes, to be paid by Spurrier; the term and rent to commence from Christmas next. The usual fixtures to be taken at a valuation, &c.

Atkinson took possession under this memorandum: but no lease was executed. In February 1797 Atkinson agreed to transfer to Richard Dann his interest under the agreement. In that month a

(1) 3 P. Will. 240.

(2) For. 217, see page 222.

(a) See this principle illustrated in 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 388, 389, 385; 2 ib. 799 a, 799 b, 1237; Storrs v. Barker, 6 John. Ch. 68, 169; Green v. Biddle, 8 Wheat. 1, 77, 78; Bright v. Boyd, 1 Story, C. C. R. 492, 493; Wendell v. Van Rensselaer, 1 John. Ch. 354; Brig Sarah Ann, 2 Sumner, 206; Gray v. Bartlett, 20 Pick. 193; Henderson v. Overton, 2 Yerger, 394; Tarrant v. Terry, 1 Bay, 239; Skinner v. Slouse, 4 Missouri, 93.

See the opinion of Mr. Chancellor Walworth, in Putnam v. Ritchie, 6 Paige, 390, 403, 404, 405, upon the question of the right of a bona fide purchaser to compensation for improvements made on an estate, which he afterwards loses through defect of title. See farther, on the same point, Bright v. Boyd, 1 Story, C. C. R. 494-496.

notice respecting a party wall having been served upon Atkinson, he sent it to Dann ; who inclosed it to Spurrier in a letter, dated the 17th of March ; stating, that he had taken the house from Atkinson ; and presumed, Spurrier had no objection to grant the lease to him ; as Atkinson had informed him, Spurrier had only signed an agreement with him ; but upon which subject, he (Dann) added, he would take an opportunity of seeing Spurrier ; as he found, he must be put to considerable expense, before he could make the house a comfortable residence. On the 20th Spurrier returned an * answer ; suggesting, that the notice shold not be sent to [* 232] him ; considering the house as belonging to Atkinson only ; and as to his (Spurrier's) consent to Atkinson's parting with the house to him (Dann) or any other gentleman, he could not decide, till an old account between him and Atkinson was settled ; adding, that, when Dann should have taken Atkinson's sentiments, he should be glad to hear from him.

No farther communication took place at that time ; and possession was delivered to Dann, in July, 1797 ; who sent to Spurrier a draft of a lease, extending the term to twenty-one years ; and then began to repair the premises ; and laid out near 400*l.* in repairs. Spurrier took no notice of that and other letters from Dann, inquiring, whether Spurrier had perused the lease, until the 4th of September following ; when Phipps, the partner of Spurrier, informed Dann, that he was directed by Spurrier to say, he would not grant any other lease than what Atkinson was entitled to under the agreement ; and that there was not two years unexpired. This produced a renewal of the correspondence ; in which Spurrier, upon the 8th of September stated, that he considered the agreement as liable to be terminated at either of the periods mentioned therein, at the option of either party ; and appealing to his candor as a professional man, whether it was not so in law, which according to the bill was the first intimation by Spurrier, that he considered the agreement as determinable, at the option of either party.

Under these circumstances the bill was filed by Dann and Atkinson ; praying a specific performance of the agreement ; and that the Defendant may be compelled to execute a lease for twenty-one years, pursuant to the agreement, containing a power on the part of the tenant * to determine the lease, but without such [*233] power on the part of the Defendant, and an injunction against proceeding in an ejectment ; which he had brought up at the expiration of the first seven years ; or if the Court should be of opinion, that the Defendant had a right to proceed in the ejectment, that he may be decreed to pay the Plaintiff the money he had expended in substantial improvements : the bill charging, that the Defendant looked on, while the money was laid out, &c.

The Defendant by his answer insisted on his right to determine the lease ; and stated, that he knew nothing of the repairs till August ; and on the 4th of September he directed his partner Phipps to give notice to the Plaintiff, to prevent his incurring farther expense.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Stanley, for the Plaintiff.—The first question is upon the construction of this agreement; whether the lease is to be determinable at the will of the lessee only, or of both. Though this question has not been determined, the opinion of Lord Kenyon has been in one case strongly declared, that upon such a lease, not expressing, by whom it is to be determined, it is at the will of either: Goodright v. Richardson (1). Certainly that question was not before the Court. Upon principle it ought to be at the will of the lessee only; and Lord Rosslyn was clearly of that opinion in this case. Words are to be taken most strongly against the grantor, or in case of a lease the lessor: The Bishop of Bath's Case (2). The object of the lessor in granting a long term is to induce the tenant to improve: otherwise his object is to grant a short term. The Plaintiff's construction therefore is probably nearer the intention; for such an object must be frustrated by the other.

[* 234] To * the tenant it is even more disadvantageous from the uncertainty.

The second question is upon the conduct of the Defendant. From the correspondence upon the communication of the notice as to the party-wall the Plaintiff must have understood, he was to have a longer term than a year and nine months. The Defendant stands by; permitting the Plaintiff to lay out his money; and during that time gives no notice of his intention. Where a person suffers another to lay out money upon his property, under a supposition, that he has a right, he will be bound by the facts, as he permits them to be understood. The East India Company v. Vincent (3). Stiles v. Couper (4). Jackson v. Cator (5). This Defendant does not positively deny, that he knew, the Plaintiff was laying out his money.

Mr. Richards, for the Defendant, was stopped by the Court.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—Upon the first question, as to the construction of this agreement, after the opinion of Lord Kenyon one way and that of Lord Rosslyn the other, I shall put that point in a way for the consideration of a Court of Law.

Upon the second question, whatever may be the conscience upon it, the Plaintiff has not used that degree of circumspection and caution, that the Court can act upon the latter part of the prayer of this bill, consistently with the reasonable security of the affairs of mankind. The Plaintiff is a professional man. That must be taken into the account; and it is not pressing these cases, depending * upon conscience, too hard to suppose, the Defendant would give him credit for acting for himself, as he

(1) 3 Term Rep. B. R. 462.

(2) 6 Co. 34.

(3) 2 Atk. 83.

(4) 3 Atk. 692.

(5) Anle, vol. v. 688. Birmingham Canal Company v. Lloyd, post, vol. xviii. 515.

would for any other person. The fair import of the first letter is, that, meaning, if he became tenant, to be at a considerable expense, he will see the Defendant, before he embarks in that expense. After an immediate answer from the Defendant, refusing to accept him as tenant, until an old account between him and Atkinson should be settled, putting it upon the Plaintiff to settle that account, the Plaintiff chooses to take possession, and incur expenditure without seeing the Defendant, or any farther communication with him. A treaty having been proposed, before he should embark in any expense, and nothing farther having passed, the Defendant thinking, as he swears he thought, that he had a right to determine the lease, might think it a strong act to send him a lease with an extension of the term, without any communication or explanation, even as to the original term. The Defendant swears, that till August he knew nothing of these repairs; and that he desired his partner Phipps to give the Plaintiff notice, for the purpose of preventing his incurring farther expense, that there were not two years to come of the term. Phipps is not examined for the Plaintiff; as he might have been. It is upon the Plaintiff to prove, not merely to raise a probable conjecture, but to show upon highly probable grounds a case of bad faith and bad conscience against the Defendant. The Plaintiff fails in proving that. Phipps did not give the message, as directed: but the Defendant is not affected by bad conscience upon that; swearing, he gave that direction.

I fully subscribe to the doctrine of the cases, that have been cited; that this Court will not permit a man knowingly, though but passively, to encourage another to lay out money under an erroneous opinion of title; and *the circumstance of looking on is in many cases as strong as using terms of encouragement; a lessor knowing and permitting those acts, which the lessee would not have done, and the other must conceive he would not have done, but upon an expectation, that the lessor would not throw an objection in the way of his enjoyment. Still it must be put upon the party to prove that case by strong and cogent evidence; leaving no reasonable doubt, that he acted upon that sort of encouragement. I am not satisfied, that the Defendant up to the 4th of September knew of these repairs. His conscience is not affected by that knowledge, that is necessary to authorize the Court to apply the principle; and if not up to the 4th of September, there is no foundation for saying, he is affected afterwards; for the letter from Spurrier declaring his construction of the agreement, is dated on the 8th of September. Taking the repairs to be substantial and proved, the case fails in a material point; that, in order to give a person a larger interest in the property than he derives under the instrument making his title, it must be shown, that with the knowledge of the person, under whom he claims, he conceived, he had that larger interest; and was putting himself to a considerable expense, unreasonable, compared with the smaller interest; and which the other party observed, and must have supposed incurred under the idea, that he intended to give that larger interest, or to refrain from disturbing the other in the enjoyment. The Plaintiff has failed in that; and has relied on the Defendant. Upon that ground therefore this bill cannot be sustained.

[* 236]

Upon the other point a case was sent to law (1).

1. UPON the principle, that every doubtful grant is to be construed in favor of the grantee, it is settled, that, under a lease for 7, 14, or 21 years, the lessee only has the option of determining it at the end of the 7th or 14th year: see the determination of the principal case, on the trial at law, 3 Bos. & Pull. 399, approved and held final in Doe v. Dixon, 9 East, 15.

2. A tenant who has laid out money on the mere expectation of a renewal of his term, or of not being disturbed in his possession, cannot, by such expenditure, give the character of a right to his imprudent expectations: Pilling v. Armitage, 12 Ves. 85; Watson v. The Master of Hemsworth Hospital, 14 Ves. 333; Robertson v. St. John, 2 Br. 140; though, no doubt, if the owner fraudulently encourages the occupier of an estate to lay out his money in improvements thereon, the jurisdiction of a Court of Equity will attach to such a case: Kenney v. Browne, 2 Ridg. P. C. 518; Norway v. Rose, 19 Ves. 159; Matts v. Hawkins, 5 Taunt. 23. The tenant under such circumstances, may be entitled, not merely to compensation for improvements upon, but even to be protected in the possession of, the estate, for any term which he had encouragement to expect: Shine v. Gough, 1 Ball & Bea. 444; Medlicott v. O'Donnell, 1 Ball & Bea. 171; Hanning v. Ferrars, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 85; and the Court would feel disposed to presume every thing that was necessary to protect the tenant's possession: Hume v. Kent, 1 Ball & Bea. 561.

[* 237]

BRUMMELL v. M'PHERSON.

[1802, JUNE 29.]

An infant Plaintiff, a ward of the Court, having married, proceedings stayed, till the husband shall appear.

THE bill was filed on behalf of infants against executors; praying the usual account, &c. The infant daughter, having become a ward of the Court, married; and then her husband went abroad. The bill was revived.

Mr. Hollist, for the Defendants, moved, that the proceedings might be stayed.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] granted the motion; saying, he would permit no proceeding to be taken, till the husband appears; and that Lord Kenyon refused to permit a proceeding on behalf of a Plaintiff, who had married a ward of the Court, and would not appear.

As to the general doctrine with respect to the course to be pursued when a contempt has been committed by marrying a ward of Court, see, ante, the note to Stevens v. Savage, 1 V. 154; and note 1 to Stackpole v. Beaumont, 3 V. 89.

(1) 3 Bos. & Pul. 442. It was determined, that the option was with the lessee only. The certificate of the Court of Common Pleas was, that the Defendant had not a right to determine the term of twenty-one years, thereby agreed to be granted at the expiration of the first seven years. Post, vol. xvii. 363.

KEMP v. PRYOR.

[1802, MARCH 19; JUNE 30.]

BILL alleging fraud as to quantity and quality of goods sold, not discovered till they were exported to America; that they were sold in consequence at a loss; and the Plaintiff being threatened with an action, paid the original price according to the contract, under a protest, that he would seek relief in equity; and praying an account and payment in respect of the loss, and a commission to America. Demurrer allowed.

A. receiving goods under circumstances, that would give him a right to return them, disaffirming the contract, if it would be against the interest of the other to return them, may sell them, considering himself as agent, and bring an action for the difference, [p. 247.]

The extension of the jurisdiction of Courts of Law in modern times to cases, that formerly were subjects of equitable jurisdiction exclusively, has not destroyed the jurisdiction of Courts of Equity (a), [p. 249.]

THE bill stated, that in 1799, the Plaintiff contracted to purchase from the Defendants a certain quantity of red and white lead and yellow ochre, according to sample, for the purpose of exportation to America; which was received by the Plaintiff in casks, and exported by the Plaintiff accordingly. When the articles were received by the agent of the Plaintiffs at New York, it appeared, that they were considerably short of the quantity, of very inferior quality, and grossly adulterated; and a great quantity of whiting was packed up as white lead. The agent sold the whole at a loss. The Defendants calling for payment, the Plaintiff remonstrated; upon which an action was brought: but the credit not having [ 238] expired, a nonsuit was entered. After the expiration of the time another action being threatened, the Plaintiff paid the money; at the same time by a protest in writing declaring his intention of endeavoring to get back the money by suit in equity or elsewhere.

The bill under these circumstances prayed an account of all and singular the casks and quantities of red lead, and other articles sold, and of the prices and money produced by the sales, and the charges attending the exportation and sale, and the amount of the loss sustained by the Plaintiff, in consequence of these transactions; a Commission to America, for the examination of witnesses; and that the Defendants may be decreed to pay and satisfy to the Plaintiff what shall appear due upon the account.

To this bill the Defendants put in a general Demurrer.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Pemberton, in support of the Demurrer.—If the Plaintiff paid this money in his own wrong, there is a remedy at law. His right of a discovery in aid of an action is not disputed; but this bill praying relief as well as discovery under these circumstances is novel ; and cannot be supported. The Plaintiff cannot be relieved in any Court. He ought to have filed a bill for an injunction, instead of paying the money, knowing the objection. It does not appear upon the bill, that he has commenced an action, or intends it.

(a) See to this point, 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 64*i*, § 80; Varet v. New York Ins. Co. 7 Paige, 560; Irving v. Planters' Bank, 1 Humph. 145; Shields v. Commonwealth, 4 Rand. 541; Bromley v. Holland, ante, 3, 19, 20; January v. January, 7 Monroe, 544; Hawley v. Cramer, 4 Cowen, 717; Watford v. Cameron, 2 Bibb, 435; M'Crea v. Purmort, 16 Wend. 460.

Mr. Romilly, Mr. Shuter, and Mr. Toller, in support of the Bill.—The only question is, whether upon the facts of this case, admitted, the Plaintiff is entitled to any assistance in equity. The payment was made under the threat of an action ; the Plaintiff not [*239] being in possession of any *evidence, by which he could defend himself. Supposing him entitled to relief at law, still this demurrer must be over-ruled ; for beyond discovery he is entitled to a Commission, which takes it out of the rule, that where the Plaintiff, though entitled to discovery, is not entitled to relief, a general demurrer lies (1). If no relief can be had at law, that will entitle him to relief here : not as a general proposition ; but under such circumstances ; a gross fraud, from which he could not defend himself at law, merely because he was not then in possession of evidence. Suppose a demand insisted upon, which had been paid, and a receipt given, and the receipt being supposed to be lost, judgment is recovered in an action ; and afterwards the Defendant discovers the receipt : it is clear, there could be no relief at law : Mariott v. Hampton (2) ; but in such a case, a judgment recovered against conscience, in the face of his own act, it is impossible that Equity should not relieve. Lord Lonsdale v. Littledale (3) is in favor of the jurisdiction on the ground of fraud ; and Brooke v. Hewitt (4) shows, that a case under such circumstances should not be decided upon a demurrer without evidence.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—Are these Defendants to wait the return of a Commission from America ? If there is any remedy, it is at law. The prayer of a Commission is not adapted to the case of an action. All, that is sought, is equitable relief. The discovery is prayed merely as ancillary and necessary to that ; and a Commission, precisely upon the same ground ; the Plaintiff not suggesting, that he ever intends to bring an action. * When a person makes a feeble defence, or finds evidence afterwards, is that a case for equity to interfere ; granting relief in the nature of a new trial ? Such a jurisdiction, though hinted at in some old books, has been long abandoned. This is a new bill ; and in that shape it is in effect an action to recover money paid in his own wrong and damages.

Lord CHANCELLOR, [ELDON].—Upon the best consideration I can give this case I am of opinion, there is considerable risk of doing injustice, if I should allow this demurrer ; and there is ground enough

(1) See ante, Ryves v. Ryves, vol. iii. 343, and the cases cited page 347 ; and the note, ii. 461.

(2) 7 Term Rep. B. R. 269.

(3) Ante, vol. ii. 451.

(4) Ante, vol. iii. 253.

to think, it may be possible, that, when this cause comes to a hearing, a Court of Equity may give relief, even without sending it to Law. The bill does not state either an action brought or an intention to bring an action: but there is so much doubt, whether the answer and evidence might not produce a case for equitable relief, that it would be too bold to decide upon a demurrer. I take it, these articles were capable of being re-imported; as there is no charge to the contrary. The correspondent or consignee receiving them, perhaps without any communication of the representation as to the quantity and quality, of which the party misrepresenting could not complain, still receives them under circumstances, in which he must dispose of them for the best. This differs materially in circumstances from the case, where both live in this country; and the moment the article is found not to answer the description, it may be returned. But I doubt, whether it may not be held, and whether it has not been held by special juries before me, that, in such a case as this, of goods exported, and where the person receiving them abroad cannot return them, the vendee is authorized to sell them for the benefit of the vendor; and may hold him liable in an action for damages to the amount of the difference; giving him the *benefit of the sale in the foreign market. It is stated in [*241] this bill, that the sale was at a great loss, occasioned by re-sales, the observations of the customers, and the deficiency of the quantity. I do not go upon the last circumstance; as that is purely matter of Law. The vendee not having an accurate and precise account of the produce of the sales, much less clear evidence, enabling him to fix upon the vendor that equity, to which I have alluded, that was administered at Guildhall, (for it is an equity), but having only general information, the first action against him failed, the credit not having expired: but another action being threatened, while he was still in that condition that he could not have the benefit of these circumstances, as a Court of Law could not give him a Commission, he paid under this protest, declaring his intention to have the relief a Court of Equity could give him. If he had gone to trial, and could not have had a Commission, he would not have been in a better situation without coming to Equity for a Commission. But I am not prepared to say; that upon that ground it is so clear, this demurrer should be over-ruled. The Plaintiff should have come to Equity for that purpose, instead of doing, as he has done in this instance.

Another point, upon which it is not by any means clear, that this bill may not be maintained, is, that, if fraudulent conduct may either be confessed by the answer, or proved, I am not sure, a person taking the articles under these circumstances has not a right to say in Equity, he is entangled in so much of difficulty, as to the point of rescinding the contract by re-delivery, that the articles ought not to be considered sold for any other purpose than this; that he may have an issue, if necessary; or, that the quantum of damages may be settled by a Court of Equity; being incapable of being accurately settled but by an account of the sales, which the vendor made it necessary to have abroad, and of the produce. The bill therefore may be proper in seeking an inquiry into that. Upon that ground I do not feel bold enough to allow this demurrer; and am disposed, as Lord Rosslyn was, to hear the whole of the case, before I decide, that relief may not be given in the instance of so fraudulent a contract; considering the consequences, in which the particular circumstances of such a fraud necessarily involve the vendee. I go upon these particular circumstances; that where there is a contract of sale and delivery, and the goods might from the nature of the contract be re-delivered, if under the circumstances they cannot be re-delivered, an equity arises from this; that the party cannot protect himself at Law, as he cannot re-deliver; and he was led into that by the misrepresentation of the other. The vendee therefore has a right to the extent of his loss, the vendor to an account of the sales in the foreign market; and whether the most was made of them; which can only be made out by an account under the particular circumstances. He comes therefore for that account, or, under the prayer of general relief, for an issue; and that he may be paid the balance. Such a case may exist: and I am inclined to think, it does exist upon this bill.

Soon after the demurrer was over-ruled the Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] expressed doubts upon the point; and directed it to be re-argued. The additional arguments in support of the demurrer were to the following effect:

June 30th. It is not necessary to discuss, whether the Plaintiff might have recovered the money at law: but if a person pays voluntarily, without coercion of legal process, money, which perhaps, if he had defended himself, he might not have been obliged [* 243] to pay, a Court of Law *even would not assist him to recover back that money; and it would be very dangerous to permit that. But in Equity there is no precedent for such a bill. Suppose the payment not voluntary, but under process: that does not make the case equitable. Still it is legal. There was no trust, no fraud, for Equity to attach upon. This Court would give a discovery: but when that is obtained, they have an action for money had and received. The defence might have been made at Law beyond all doubt; and the question is, whether there is a concurrent jurisdiction. If an action were brought against him, he might have filed a bill for discovery: but he does not even wait for a second action. The commission, being only ancillary to the equitable relief, which cannot be obtained, does not take the case out of the rule, established by the modern decisions, that a general demurrer lies. The mere prayer for a commission does not change the nature of the demand; and bring it within the jurisdiction of this Court. The demand is as much at law as the case of a horse purchased; which turns out to be unsound. The fraud imputed is cognizable at law; and must be found by a jury. It is not a proper subject of inquiry before the Master. There may be contradictory evidence. If a house is not built according to contract, that question must be at law.

For the Plaintiff.—The mere circumstance, that the witnesses reside abroad, gives jurisdiction : even supposing the demand to be at law ; which however is not admitted. The foundation of this bill is the prevention of a total failure of justice. The principle, upon which depositions are read at law, is, that they are the depositions of witnesses examined in a cause, in which the same facts were at issue between the Plaintiff and Defendant in another cause ; and the witnesses are out of the jurisdiction, and cannot be produced. It would be * quite nugatory to pray, that [*244] the Plaintiff may have the benefit of the depositions at law. There is no instance of an order, that depositions shall be read at law. The Court has no authority to make such an order : but they are read only upon that ground ; and the whole principle of that proceeds upon the hypothesis, that the Court of Equity may go on to make the decree ; though frequently that is not desired ; as in many instances it is more convenient to go on at law. The prayer of this commission is not the same as a mere prayer of discovery. The Plaintiff certainly might have filed a bill for an injunction ; and now, independent of any relief at law, is clearly entitled to equitable relief ; as in every case of fraud. Gross fraud is admitted : and the evidence is out of the kingdom. The Plaintiff was under the necessity of selling the goods in America. The equity therefore is an account. The profit, that might have been made, cannot be brought forward at law. Suppose, the articles supplied had by mistake been of much greater value : an account would have been directed. It is a subject for this Court, and no other.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—The moment the demand was made a bill ought to have been filed for an injunction. All these special circumstances were known to the Plaintiff at that time. Upon whatever principle depositions are read at law, formerly it was usual to make an order, imperative upon the party, for that purpose. The mode was probably by an order upon the party to admit the fact proved ; which is now the effect of a commission issuing out of a Court of Law. Yet the depositions, when returned from abroad, are not evidence : but it is by way of terms upon granting a favor. It is clear, that, in order to read depositions at law, it is not necessary, that they should be taken in a suit, in which the bill prays relief ; which appears from bills to perpetuate testimony, or * to examine De bene esse. There was formerly considerable doubt, whether in the former instance it was necessary, that the Defendant should put in an answer. I take it, the depositions could not be read, unless the answer was delayed. The general principle is, that there should be something in issue : but it is enough, that one thing is averred, and denied, or not admitted. It would be very singular, if a bill merely praying a foreign commission should draw the subject here. There is no instance, in such a case, an action also depending, and therefore two suits for the same purpose, where an election was required. In practice therefore certainly that has not been considered matter of relief. Neither is there any instance of such a bill coming to a hearing. A mistake of the time or an opportunity missed cannot give the jurisdiction.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I still entertain considerable doubt upon this case. I felt much distress upon the point, as a point of pleading; upon which this Court is infinitely more loose than Courts of Law. I do not therefore think it improper in the first instance upon this sort of point, in which I apprehend I had fallen into error, to say it is not enough upon the argument of a demurrer to conjecture, that if the cause goes on, there may be some ground for a decree: but the Court is bound to say, that upon the facts, as stated in the bill, if proved or confessed at the hearing, a decree would be made.

This case embraces a great many considerable points; some of them more easy to argue than judicially to dispose of. The observation is fair, (I lay no farther stress upon it), that the articles in question, being sent to a foreign country, could not well be returned; also that it must be at a considerable expense of freight;

[*246] *as there would be an expense for carriage, if they were to be sent to another part of this island; and farther, that it might be more difficult at the time of the demand to prove the expense of freight than the other charge; and more difficult to ascertain, what was to be paid, by inquiry, commission, &c. Considering this case first without the fact of the protest, this bill, praying, not that this sum of money may be repaid, but an account of the produce, the charges, and the loss, which I rather think means the damage, not the expense the Plaintiff has sustained, combines demands of different natures; but may contain some demand, that upon the principles of this Court, too loosely applied to pleading, may be capable of being sustained. The goods were to be inclosed in casks; not like the instance of the sale of a horse; the party acting upon his own judgment solely. Put the case, not that without the knowledge of the Plaintiff the Defendants substituted whiting for a considerable quantity of white lead, but that they had taken out the whole; and delivered instead of the article contracted for one perfectly different; that it was exported to America; whence it could not be returned without very considerable inconvenience; furnishing therefore a question, that has very often occurred at law; whether a party having received articles from another, not according to his contract, is not justified in doing the best he can for the benefit of the vendor under the circumstances, in which he is placed by the vendor. Suppose the articles not worth the expense of the return: if he is at liberty to do the best for the vendor, it may turn out, that the sale in the market, to which, not his act, but that of the vendor without his consent, had sent the articles, may be the best for the vendor.

The first question would be, whether the vendee could insist, it was a sale to him; and he might, I think, insist upon taking to the article and paying the stipulated price; but that he would bring an action for damages by the breach of the contract, and the loss he had suffered from the sale of an article not according to the contract: or he might have said, the contract had never been executed; and if the declaration in an action by the vendor had contained only a count upon the contract, he could not have obtained a verdict upon the case now made by this Plaintiff. But if the vendor disaffirmed the contract, the money received by dealing with the article would have been money had and received for the use of the Plaintiff in the action; and under a count for that, if it could be joined with a count upon the special contract, the moment the contract was disaffirmed the Plaintiff in the action would have been at liberty to prove the substance of the account, raising a demand for money had and received. I have a strong conviction upon sound principles, confirmed by my short experience at Guildhall, that if a man under a contract to supply one article supplies another, under such circumstances, that the party, to whom it is supplied, must remain in utter ignorance of the change, until the goods are under circumstances, in which it would be against the interest of the other to return or reject them, instead of doing what is best for him, selling them immediately, a jury would have no hesitation in saying, he ought to be considered, if he pleased, not as a purchaser, but as placed by the vendor in a situation, in which acting prudently for him he was an agent. The consequence then is, that he would be liable to account for the money received, subject to freight and other charges; though, while the goods were in transitu, he had considered himself owner.

If that is the law, the questions are, first, whether this Plaintiff has so stated himself by this bill; secondly, whether, if he has, that will support the equity. It is almost impossible to say, he has so stated himself upon *this bill. The general aspect [*248] of it is rather that of a man, who made a contract of purchase; and determines to adhere to it, as such. He might have defeated the contract. He might have taken to the article for which he never contracted; submitting to pay upon the worth of it; and then in an action the value of the goods actually delivered only, not of those, which should have been delivered according to the contract, could have been recovered; and if paper had been floating in the world under such circumstances, the necessity of protection might have supported a bill in this Court. But if he had said, he would take to the goods, and leave them to the contract, he would have been entitled to maintain an action for non-delivery of the goods contracted for. The case therefore could not be delivered by any one action between the parties. Suppose it could; and an action was brought against him, as agent. Considered in that character, a bill might be filed against him for the specific produce. If he says, that as the goods delivered are not those contracted for, therefore he is to be considered their agent, that admits, that they might file a bill for an account of the articles actually supplied; making him where matters, though cognizable at law, are mixed up with a complex account, and discovery is necessary, equity will not confine the relief which it gives to discovery alone, but will take jurisdiction over, and finally determine, the whole question. See note 1 to Weymouth v. Bowyer, 1 V. 416. It is quite clear, also, that the extension of the jurisdiction of Courts of Law to subjects which formerly were held to belong exclusively to Courts of Equity, has not destroyed the equitable jurisdiction over such cases. See note 2 to Toulmin v. Price, 5 V. 235, and the farther references there given.

4. That, in all cases, a bill for an account may be filed by a principal against his agent, see the note to Weymouth v. Bowyer, before referred to.

IVESON v. HARRIS.

[1802, JUNE 1, 3.]

A PROCEEDING upon a bail bond in the Marshalsea Court, assigned according to the practice of that Court to one of the officers, is not a proceeding against a prohibition, restraining the original action, so as to incur a contempt.

Whether a prohibition issued from the Court of Chancery, without application in Court, upon an affidavit, stating merely, that the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction, not adding, that foreign plea was tendered, and refused, is regular, quare, [p. 252.]

But if it is irregular, any proceeding against it is a contempt. The party ought to apply to the Court to supersede it. The form of the affidavit to be altered in future, [p. 252.]

Injunction not binding upon a person not a party in the cause, [p. 256.]

The Court of Chancery always open; and therefore can issue a Prohibition in the Vacation, [p. 257.]

A MOTION was made for an attachment against the officers of the Marshalsea Court under these circumstances. An action had been brought in the Marshalsea Court by Joseph Iveson against Harris for a simple-contract debt of 20*l.*, arising out of a transaction concerning the sale of a public-house. In that action a bail-bond was given; which, being forfeited, was assigned to Edwards, an officer of the Court; and a writ of Capias was sued out against Harris and his two bail. Within two hours after the assignment of the bail-bond, and before any proceeding upon it, a writ of prohibition against proceeding in the cause of Iveson v. Harris was served upon the officer of the Marshalsea Court: of which notice was given to the Attorney. The writ was issued by the curitor, without any application in Court, upon an affidavit, that the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction. At that time, in the vacation, the other Courts were not sitting.

[*252] *Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Johnson, in support of the Motion.—There can be no doubt, that these persons are guilty of a contempt. It will be objected, that the prohibition is irregular; having issued before plea in the Marshalsea Court, that the cause arose out of the jurisdiction; and certainly the common rule is in favor of that objection; unless it appears upon the face of the declaration to be out of the jurisdiction. But the course of the Cursitor's Office has been immediately to issue a prohibition to restrain that Court in particular from proceeding: the Cursitor making out the writ upon the affidavit, without any application to this Court. It is at least not clear, that the prohibition was irregular. There is a great variety of Dicta, that it shall not issue till foreign plea tendered, and refused. The most recent case is in Peere Williams (1); and the ground there stated is, not, that foreign plea was not pleaded before the application, but that the party had imparled generally; and could not then plead a foreign plea. It would increase the expense to prevent the application till foreign plea tendered and refused. This must be considered a proceeding upon the original action; which was determined upon great consideration by the Court of Exchequer in Bolt v. Stanway (2). In this way they have the fruit of their first proceeding.

But, supposing this prohibition to have issued irregularly, the contempt in proceeding, while it was depending, is not the less. The Plaintiff below ought to have applied here, instead of proceeding in breach of it. Injunctions have been obtained in this Court and the Court of Exchequer very improperly; in some instances by direct perjury: but it was never supposed, the party might proceed, while the injunction existed. The *constant course [*253] is to apply to the Court; and great mischief would follow from permitting persons so to speculate.

The Attorney General [Hon. Spencer Perceval] and Mr. Richards, contra.—Upon the affidavits these parties have not proceeded against this prohibition; which is against farther proceeding in a certain action, Iveson v. Harris. This proceeding is in the name of Edwards against Harris and his bail. How could the Judge know, they were proceeding in the original action. This writ ought to issue upon an application to the Court on affidavit. It is admitted, that in the other Courts an application is necessary; and that there must have been a foreign plea tendered; and affidavit of the truth of it: Sparks v. Wood (3). The case in the Court of Exchequer is a solitary case, and new. The practice of the Exchequer formerly, where an injunction was obtained, that did not apply to the bail, was to apply to have the injunction enlarged: but it was never before held, that you could apply, as for a breach of an injunction by the act of a person, who was not a party. There is no pretence for this application against the officers of the Court. They have done nothing, nor had the means subsequent to the service of the writ.

Mr. Mansfield, in reply.—This practice has long prevailed: but the strong ground is, that here is a prohibition; and they ought to apply to have it discharged. The act of your Lordship's officer is your Lordship's act. Can it be decided in the Court below, whether that is proper? This is the action of Iveson; though this proceeding is in the name of Edwards; to whom the bail-bond was assigned:

(1) Anon. 1 P. Will. 476.

(2) 2 Anst. 556, 569.

(3) 6 Mod. 146.

the practice being to assign it, not to the Plaintiff, as in the Court of King's Bench, but to the Officer of the Court. But it is the Plaintiff's action : the officer lending his name. Unless this is held part of the original proceeding, a prohibition is ineffectual.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—If this case was to be decided upon the point with respect to the affidavit, notwithstanding this authority in Peere Williams it would be necessary to look to subsequent cases. I cannot conceive, that such a practice should have obtained, as I believe has obtained ; that upon an affidavit, stating no more than that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction, and adding, that it did arise in another jurisdiction, a prohibition should issue without the sanction of the Chancellor ; and I believe, it has been said in later cases, that such an affidavit is sufficient. I confess, I think, what is stated in Peere Williams proceeds more upon the reason of the thing than the contrary practice ; for if the affidavit states no more, the prohibition may be granted when upon the record of the inferior Court the objection to the jurisdiction may have been waived by the Defendant himself : that is, he may have pleaded so that it is incompetent to him to stay the proceedings afterwards. If he has pleaded to the jurisdiction, he can plead nothing inconsistent with it ; and therefore must not have done any thing to give the Court jurisdiction. If the practice of this Court, founded upon the orders of the Chancellor, has been, that a prohibition should issue upon such an affidavit, it is to be considered, whether that practice shall continue ; or be corrected according to this case in Peere Williams. But, whether right or wrong, it is clear, this Court can hardly hear an inferior Court discuss with it for any purpose but to have the proceeding superseded, the question, whether it issued improvidently. That is a question for the consideration of the Court, out of which the writ [* 255] issued, not of the *Court, to which it is addressed. It is of the last consequence not to suffer a breath of doubt to hang upon this point ; that an inferior Court is not to disobey any of the writs issuing out of this Court upon their notion, that the writ issued improvidently. Therefore though this writ might have improvidently issued, I should without doubt have held a proceeding in breach of it a contempt.

The next point is, what has this writ prohibited ? The fact prohibited is proceeding in actions upon contracts, covenants, or trespasses, done without their bailiwick or power, and therefore such contracts, &c. in a proceeding, in which Harris is called upon to answer Iveson. Is this that proceeding, in which those parties can stand as such upon any pleading, that can be put upon the record of that Court ? This is not a case, in which Harris is to answer Iveson upon any contract between them. It is not upon the same sort of contract. The one is upon a debt by simple-contract : the other upon a specialty debt. It is said, a prohibition is ineffectual, unless this is held part of the original proceeding. I do not think so ; for if the party can put such a plea upon the record as will give the Court jurisdiction, I do not see, why he may not by doing the act or forbearing give them jurisdiction. If the declaration does not state any thing taking away their jurisdiction, of which they must take notice, it is the duty of the Defendant to appear, and give information to the Court, that their jurisdiction does not attach upon him; and if that is his duty, they have a jurisdiction to call upon him to give a security to perform that duty; and they call upon him and two persons to enter into a bond, by which a contract arises, in addition to the contract, which is the cause of the first action, that if he does not according to that duty appear and answer, the obligee shall have a cause of action arising from his *default [*256] in not doing what he agreed to do; a perfectly different action.

Another difficulty arises upon another consideration. How am I to make out, unless upon the case in the Court of Exchequer, which certainly seems contrary to what were the familiar notions of this Court, that a prohibition, not permitting one suit upon one contract, to go on between those two parties, is a prohibition not permitting another suit upon another contract of a different nature, between other parties; several of them not being parties to the original contract? It is said, if this is permitted, they have the fruit of the first proceeding; and that is true; but, not as the fruit of the first proceeding, but as the consequence of an engagement, which the party to the first proceeding entered into, that he would do an act, which he has not thought proper to do. The cause of action therefore is quite new: for instance, if time had elapsed, the same plea of six years could not be pleaded. As it was the right, as well as the duty, of the Defendant to appear, and state, that the Court had no jurisdiction, the question is, whether he may not waive that by a new and distinct contract, giving a new and distinct cause of action. Notwithstanding the case in the Court of Exchequer I am of opinion, the prohibition to the original Plaintiff is not a prohibition to the obligee in the bond. He must be a party; and is not guilty; the writ not ordering him to do, or to forbear from doing, any thing. Upon this part of the case therefore it is very clear, the proceeding upon this bond is not a contempt. I do not see my way to follow the principle of that authority in the Court of Exchequer in the application of it to the case; and I have no conception, that it is competent to this Court to hold a man bound by an injunction, who is not a party in the cause for the purpose of the cause (1).

The old *practice was, that he must be brought into Court, [*257] so as, according to the ancient laws and usages of the country, to be made a subject of the writ. The jurisdiction in lunacy is quite distinct.

Mr. Romilly (Amicus Curiae) said, upon his motion a writ had been quashed by Lord Rosslyn; who held, that the practice was still according to the case in Peere Williams.

(1) Dawson v. Princeps, Gadd v. Worrall, 2 Anstr. 521, 555. In 1 Dick. 68, there is this very short note: "Attorney General v. Duke of Lancaster: Injunction to stay a tenant in possession, not a party, from committing waste."

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] remarked the distinction, that the writ of prohibition may be had in the Court of Chancery in the vacation: that Court being always open (1).

July 3d. The LORD CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—There was a case, upon the 27th of March, 1776: a prohibition; and the affidavit did not state the fact, whether the Defendant had pleaded; but stated merely, that the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction. It turned out afterwards, that there was a plea of the general issue in the Marshalsea Court; and the writ was discharged with costs. There was another case, in December 1776, and another in 1787, in which the same rule was laid down. Those are therefore authorities in support of the case before Lord Rosslyn. According to practice in the Cursitor's Office that affidavit was considered sufficient. But I think it right, that another form should be followed in future; and will make an order for that purpose. I doubt, whether the decision in Bolt v. Stanway is right. I find, the Court has adhered very closely to the principle, that you cannot have an injunction except against a party to the suit. Upon a review of all the cases I think, the practice of granting an injunction against a creditor, who is not a party, is wrong. The Court has no right to grant an injunction against a person, whom they have not brought, or attempted to bring, before the Court by Subpoena; and in the ordinary case of an injunction after a decree, in the absence of a creditor, no one appearing for him as Counsel, which * might make a difference, I should hesitate very much to proceed against him for breach of the injunction. In this case I am clearly of opinion, the writ of prohibition did not extend to the second action (4).

[* 258] 1. In Green v. Rutherford, 1 Ves. Sen. 471, Lord Hardwicke observed, that no appearance, answer, or pleading, will give jurisdiction to a limited Court, as to subjects not properly within its cognizance; and that, if there was a want of juris-

(1) Ante, vol. vi. 771.

(2) Brown v. Irvin. March 27th, 1776.

A writ of prohibition discharged with costs, upon the ground, that it appeared by affidavit that the cause of action in the Mayor's Court did not arise within the jurisdiction of that Court, and that the Defendant pleaded the general issue non assumpit, and not to the jurisdiction of the Court, and thereby submitted to it. In this case the Defendant did not appear upon the motion, and the prohibition was obtained after verdict.

King v. Jewell. December 18th, 1776.

Writ discharged without costs, because the Defendant had not pleaded to the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's Court of London. The motion was opposed, and the prohibition was obtained after verdict.

Creese v. Irvin. February 12th, 1787.

Writ discharged upon the ground, that the Defendant had not pleaded, that the cause of action did not arise within the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's Court of London, and that part only of the money sued for by the Plaintiff was advanced within the jurisdiction of that Court. This motion was opposed, and the prohibition after verdict.

diction over the cause, it may be called in question at any time, even after sentence; and a prohibition may be applied for even against the party's own suit. In the Anonymous case, 1 Vern. 301, this distinction, however, is taken: a prohibition cannot issue at the suit of a party who has pleaded to issue, or imparled generally; though, in behalf of the crown, a prohibition lies in any stage of the proceedings, if an inferior Court meddles with matters out of its jurisdiction. The Anonymous case, 1 P. Wms. 477, intimates that a party by imparling generally admits the jurisdiction, and he cannot afterwards plead a foreign plea. There may appear to be some discrepancy in these dicta; but, with a little restriction of their generality, they may all consistently stand together: where an inferior Court, or a Court of limited jurisdiction, or one whose proceedings are not guided by the rules of our common statute law, has determined a matter of which such Court was competent to take cognisance, there, although the circumstances were such, that, if an application to a superior Court, or Court of general jurisdiction, had been made in the first instance, a prohibition might have been granted; yet, after a defendant has attended and pleaded in the inferior or limited Court, thereby putting the plaintiff to charges, a prohibition will not be granted, at his suit, after sentence: but, where a party has been drawn ad aliud examen, before a Court not competent to deal with the question, a prohibition may go at any time. Newman v. Moore, in Append. to 2 Freem. 298, (2d edit.) It concerns the Crown, and the privileges of the king's ordinary courts, that no Court of limited jurisdiction should take upon itself the determination of matters over which it has properly no cognisance; and for this reason, rather than with a view to relieve a party who has not been as prompt as he might have been, an application for a prohibition pro defectu jurisdictionis, is never too late, if the defect be apparent on the proceedings. Argyle v. Hunt, 1 Str. 188; Offley v. Whitehall, Bunc. 11. That a prohibition may be granted after sentence, for nullity of jurisdiction, is quite clear; for the sentence may be the only grievance. Shatto v. Friend, Salk. 548; Gardner v. Booth, Salk. 548. This (as was remarked in Green v. Rutherford, before cited) is the case as to almost all prohibitions granted every term: and the point would not have been dwelt upon, had not Lord Hardwicke's observation been criticised in a very respectable modern publication.

2. Where a prohibition is moved for after sentence, the suggestion of want of jurisdiction ought, it has been said, to be verified by affidavit; but this is not necessary where the defect appears on the face of the proceedings below, Dawson v. Wilkinson, Ca. temp. Hardw. 381; for the record answers, in the most satisfactory manner, the condition that a party who comes for a prohibition after sentence must clearly establish the want of jurisdiction which he alleges. Carslake v. Mapledoram, 2 T. R. 474. It seems, indeed, that, after sentence, nullity of jurisdiction cannot be alleged where it is not apparent on the face of the proceedings, Ladbroke v. Crickett, 2 T. R. 654; at least, where the objection is grounded on a collateral matter of fact, which, supposing it substantiated against the defendant below, would have established the jurisdiction; (Blackquiere v. Hawkins, 2 Dougl. 380;) for, in such cases, the superior Court is not to presume that the inferior, or limited, Court acted improperly: the fact relied on ought to have been pleaded in the inferior Court, in which case it would have appeared on the record; and then a prohibition might be issued at any time, if it were apparent that the whole proceeding was coram non judice, and a nullity; but, when a defendant below has lain by, and concealed from the Court below a collateral matter, suffering that Court to go on under an apparent jurisdiction, after a sentence against him there, it would be unreasonable to allow the defendant to suggest that collateral matter as a cause of prohibition. The suggestion must, at least, be verified by an affidavit; and we have just seen that it is extremely doubtful whether that would be sufficient. Buggin v. Bennett, 4 Burr. 2037, 2040; Godfrey v. Llewellyn, Salk. 549; Anonymous, Salk. 550.

3. In doubtful cases, Courts of common law sometimes order the party who applies for a prohibition to declare, in a qui-tam action, which is a fiction had recourse to in order to determine, with more solemnity and deliberation, the question of jurisdiction. For a precedent of such a declaration, see Croacher v. Collins, 1 Saund. 136, and, for the ground and rule of the proceedings, Serjeant Williams's notes thereto.

4. The Court of Great Sessions in Wales is an independent tribunal, and from remuneration for the present than his board, but expecting to be hereafter the owner, he made no demand till after the death of his father: who died under the persuasion, that there was no such demand upon him; making this disposition by his will; giving directions with reference to his different establishments; and giving to this son his trade at Enfield, and the good-will of the trade, and the opportunity of paying for the actual value of the effects, not the good-will, by instalments in three years, and these legacies; not giving him a share of the residue; which is given to the other children. The intention was to satisfy every demand his son had upon him (a); and he never conceived, his son stood in a relation to him as creditor; or could make any demand. This case is [* 261] * very different from that of a perfect stranger upon a question of implied Assumpsit: in such a case regard being had to the relation, though a son foris familiated, and to the expectation of being remunerated, which that relation gives; attending also to the circumstance, that the son lived in that employment one hundred and twenty-nine weeks; and never made any demand whatsoever.

Therefore decree for the Plaintiffs; but without costs; if the Defendant will settle with them immediately without farther trouble.

As to the doctrine, that a legacy, of equal or greater amount than a debt due from the testator to the legatee, is prima facie, to be considered as a satisfaction of the debt, but that parol evidence is admissible to repel this presumption, see, ante, note 2 to Barclay v. Wainwright, 3 V. 462; and the farther reference there given.

HALL, Ex parte.

[1802, JUNE 17; JULY 3.]

A PERSON having an interest under a contract with a lunatic, permitted to traverse. The Lord Chancellor inclined to quash the Inquisition: the commission not having been executed near the place of abode; and an order, that the lunatic should have due notice, having been disobeyed, [p. 261.]

THE prayer of this petition was, that an inquisition taken under a commission of lunacy may be quashed; or that the petitioner may be at liberty to traverse. The party had been found a lunatic since 1792. The petitioner, as having an interest in respect of a contract with the lunatic for two advowsons, impeached the execution of the commission; first, on the ground, that it was executed in London;

(a) As to the doctrine of satisfying a debt by a legacy, see the rule stated, and the exceptions given, and the cases cited in Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, ante, 3 V. 516, note (c).

A legacy given to a creditor, less than the amount of the debt found due from the testator, and expressed in the will as "being a token of friendship," cannot be presumed to be in satisfaction of a debt. Newell v. Keith, 11 Vermont, 214.

and not at Bath ; where the lunatic resided ; secondly, that notwithstanding the Lord Chancellor had ordered, that he should have due notice of the execution of the commission, only two days' notice was given ; and that was given to a person, who acted as his solicitor ; whom it was sworn he distrusted. The commission issued on the 7th of May ; and was executed on the 14th. The excuse alleged for deviating from the order was an apprehension, that the party would not attend.

Mr. Romilly, and Sir Thomas Turton, in support of the Petition.—Your Lordship's order not having been obeyed, this proceeding * ought not to be permitted to stand. Upon the [* 262] affidavits it is clear, this person was not a lunatic at the time the commission issued. But all, that is to be decided upon an application to traverse is, that the petitioner is interested. In Ex parte Morley, before Lord Rosslyn, the case was, that a glazier at Brentford had purchased Gunnersbury-House. His friends took out a commission. The person, with whom he contracted, applied for leave to traverse. Lord Rosslyn was of opinion upon the affidavits, that he was insane : but observed, that he had only to determine, whether the person applying had an interest. The result was, that he turned out to be insane.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Harvey, contra.—It is not clear, that there is a right to traverse. It seems as if the lunatic himself has the right : but as to a person interested in the property, the constant habit of coming to your Lordship for leave upon affidavits implies the contrary (1).

Mr. Romilly, in reply.—There can be no doubt, that a person, who has entered into a contract with the lunatic, may traverse. The Statute (2) directs, that any person aggrieved may. The commission is to be executed near the place of abode, and before a jury of the country where the party lives. The petitioner does not insist, as a matter of right, that the commission should be quashed ; but states that rather as Amicus Curiae. It is clear, due notice was not given to this person. He ought to have had notice sufficient to enable him to bring witnesses from Bath ; where he had lived the two last years.

* Lord CHANCELLOR, [ELDON].—There are two views, [* 263] in which this case is to be considered ; first as to the right of the petitioner to traverse. It strikes me as extraordinary to say, that a person, who had become the bona fide owner in Equity of two advowsons under contract, is not aggrieved by the finding, that the party, with whom he contracted, has been a lunatic ten years. If, however, decisions would exclude him, he would be entitled only to that regard, which the Court has been in the habit of giving in lunacy particularly. But the case, Ex parte Morley, proves, that a person under such a contract is a party aggrieved ;

(1) Ante, Ex parte Wragg, Ex parte Ferne, vol. v. 450, 832. See also, Ex parte Ward, vi. 579 ; and the note, v. 452.

(2) Stat. 2 Edw. VI. c. 8.

and I am of opinion upon that case, he has a right, and must be permitted, to traverse.

I have some doubt upon the other point, whether this commission ought not to be quashed. This person is found a lunatic not only at the date of the commission, but from 1792: a person, who at many periods since, and up to April last has been with the knowledge of all persons, who had either any interest in, or feeling about, the management of his affairs, doing all the acts the most sane man is intrusted to do. With regard to his occupations, amusements, mode of life, and every circumstance belonging to the question of sanity, he has for ten years been permitted to act at his own discretion, without any providence; and it is now avowed, that, so long as a particular topic (about a forged will) was not resorted to, for the purpose of inducing him to dissipate his fortune, his family permitted him to act without restraint. There certainly may be persons, proper objects of this Commission, and understood to be so for many years, to whose case either from true affection or mistaken tenderness the proper process may not have been applied. There may be persons, insane upon particular points, who, if those points [* 264] are not touched upon, not only act discreetly * in their own affairs, but even as trustees for others. I do not doubt the ~~fairness~~ of the motives: but it is of the last consequence, that the officer intrusted with this jurisdiction should be very careful, before he establishes the lunacy of a person ten years ago, who has for those ten years been permitted to act as if sane, and to deal with a great variety of persons; all of whom are entangled in the consequences.

I cannot permit any other person to judge of the propriety or impropriety of my order. I cannot delegate this authority to any one. The order, that the Jury shall be of the neighborhood, is usual; and is consequential upon the direction, that the commission shall be executed at the place of abode (1). I ordered due notice to be given under the circumstance, that this person had been trusted every where as a person, whose conduct did not call imperiously for restraint. It had not escaped me, that he might not attend. I thought, he would attend: but if not, that circumstance upon such a proceeding for his benefit would have induced me to let it go on. But, supposing my direction indiscreet, in the exercise of so important a discretion, in the case of a person treated as sane, and now represented to have been insane all this time, it is not right to permit any departure from my direction, not authorized by me. At present therefore I hesitate very much, whether this commission must not be quashed.

July 3d.—A few days afterwards the Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, under all the circumstances, after what had passed, it was not advisable to quash the inquisition. Leave was therefore given to the petitioner to traverse. The issue was, whether the party was a lunatic at the time of the inquisition, and at the date in 1792, and since.

(1) Ex parte Baker, post, vol. xix. 340; Coop. 205; Ex parte Smith, 1 Swanst. 4.

1. With respect to the right of traversing inquisitions taken under commissions of lunacy, see the note to Ex parte Wrag, 5 V. 450.

2. A Court of equity will not lend its interposition to set aside a contract, overruled by a subsequent inquisition under a commission of lunacy against one of the parties, but entered into by the other party without notice and with perfect fairness. The grounds for refusing equitable interference will be stronger, if the jurisdiction cannot be exercised so as completely to reinstate the party who has been honestly dealing with the lunatic; and the circumstance, that the persons interested in the management of the lunatic's affairs were aware, at the time, of the dealings which it is sought to set aside, but gave no intimation of the lunatic's malady, will, as in the principal case, be of weight. Neill v. Morley, 9 Ves. 480.

3. Greenwood's case, which is cited in 3 Brown, 444, and in 13 Ves. 89, as well as the case cited anonymously, by Lord Eldon, in 11 Ves. 10, are authorities, that a case of partial insanity may exist, which may possibly invalidate a will, that can be shown, or fairly presumed, to have been under its direct operation. Dew v. Clark, 1 Addams, 283.

SETON v. SLADE.
HUNTER v. SETON.

[1802, JULY 2, 3.]

SPECIFIC performance decreed: the abstract, though delivered very late, and under a notice, that the vendee would insist on his deposit, with interest, if the title should not be made out, and possession delivered, by the time of payment, having been received and kept without objection (a): and the vendee upon the construction and the circumstances not being entitled to insist on the time, as the essence of the contract (b).

An agreement, signed by one party only, good to charge him within the Statute of Frauds (c), [p. 265.]

A Defendant cannot get rid of a disclaimer without a strong case on affidavit, [p. 265.]

Time not regarded in this Court, as at law (d); for instance the case of redemption of a mortgage; which cannot be prevented even by special agreement (e), [p. 273.]

So upon a mortgage at 5 per cent. with condition for 4, if regularly paid, or at 4 per cent. to have 5, if not regularly paid: the 5 per cent. regarded in this Court only as a penalty to secure the 4, and relief given upon that principle, [p. 274.] So in the old cases upon relief against the penalty of a bond, before the jurisdiction at law (f), [p. 274.]

(a) See 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) [410] 298, 299, [423] [424] 306, 307; Pincke v. Curteis, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 329, and notes.

(b) See, on subject of the materiality of time and the effect of delay in the completion of a purchase, Marquis of Hertford v. Boore, ante, 5 V. 719, note (a); Omerod v. Hardsman, ib. 722; Guest v. Homfray, ib. 818; Lloyd v. Collett, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 469, 472, and notes; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 776, and notes; 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 302, [415] et seq.; Wynn v. Morgan, ante, 202; Harrington v. Wheeler, ante, 4 V. 686, note (a).

(c) The signing of the agreement by one party only is sufficient, provided he be the party sought to be charged. Penniman v. Hartshorn, 13 Mass. 92, per Parker, C. J.; Ballard v. Walker, 3 John. Cas. 60; Clason v. Bailey, 14 John. 487; Douglas v. Spears, 2 Nott & McCord, 207; Barstow v. Gray, 3 Greenl. 409; Merritt v. Clason, 12 John. 102; Flight v. Bolland, 4 Russ. 428; Palmer v. Scott, 1 Russ. & My. 381; Davis v. Shields, 26 Wendell, 341; Allen v. Bennett, 3 Taunt. 169; Rogel v. Merritt, 2 Caines Rep. 117; 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) [161] 114, 115; 2 Kent. (5th ed.) 510, 511; Anderson v. Harold, 10 Ohio, 399; McCrea v. Purnort, 16 Wendell, 460; Russell v. Nicoll, 3 Wendell, 112; Laythorape v. Bryant, 3 Scott, 250; Johnson v. Dodson, 2 Mees. & Welsb. 653; Tawney v. Croother, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 161, 318, and notes; Gale v. Nixon, 6 Cowen, 445; Cabot v. Haskins, 3 Pick. 83. For the writing is not the contract, but merely the evidence of it. 2 Stephens, N. P. 1985; 1 Evans's St. 236.

It is sufficient if the name of the party charged appear upon the agreement; it is immaterial in what part, if it be inserted in such a manner as to have the effect of authenticating the instrument. Johnson v. Dodeon, 2 Mees. & Welsb. 653; Probert v. Parker, 1 Russ. & My. 625; Selby v. Selby, 3 Meriv. 2; Clason v. Bailey; Penniman v. Hartshorn, ubi supra.

The signature may be with a lead pencil; and the mark of one unable to write, or even a printed name, under certain circumstances, is a sufficient signature. 2 Kent, (5th ed.) 511; Hubert v. Moreau, 12 Moore, 218; Baker v. Denning, 8 Ad. & El. 94; Hyde v. Johnson, 2 Bingh. N. C. 780.

(d) See note (b) above.

(e) See 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 89, and note (e); Lenon v. Napper, 2 Sch. & Lef. 684, 685; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1013, 1014, 1019; Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Jac. & Walk. 1-189, &c.

(f) See 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1301.

From the execution of the contract, the estate is in equity the property of the devisee, descendible and devisable, as such (a), [p. 274.]

THE Plaintiff in the first of these causes, being entitled to an estate, called Kilarough, in the county of Glamorgan, under a contract entered into in 1799, by the trustees of the Marquis De Choiseul, to convey to him and his heirs in consideration of 8500*l.*, employed Josiah Phipps to sell the estate by auction or private contract ; and the following memorandum in writing, dated the 12th of April, 1800, was signed by the Defendant Robert Slade, but not by the Plaintiff or any one on his behalf: "I Robert Slade of Doctors Commons in the city of London Esquire have this day purchased of Josiah Phipps the estate described in the within particular at and for the sum of 10,000*l.* including the timber and underwood growing thereon have paid a deposit of 1000*l.* do hereby undertake and agree to pay the remainder of the purchase-money and complete my purchase within two months from the date hereof the proprietor making a good title thereto at his own expense and executing a proper conveyance to be prepared at my expense And I do further agree to pay for the fixtures household furniture at a fair valuation and for the growing crops seeds fallows &c. in the same way according to the custom of the country and possession to be given upon the completion of the contract to which time all out-goings are to be cleared up and I am entitled to the rents and profits Upon failure of my complying with the terms and conditions before-mentioned the deposit-money shall be forfeited the proprietor shall be at full liberty to resell the estate and the deficiency if any there shall be by such second sale together with all charges attending the same shall be made good at my expense."

* The bill in the first cause prayed a specific performance of this agreement ; which was resisted under the following circumstances appearing by the answer and the evidence :

The Defendant the day after he signed the agreement wrote to Phipps, from Brightelmstone ; stating objections to the title, and that if the title should not be made out and possession delivered to him by the 12th of June, then next, he should insist upon having the deposit-money returned to him with interest. Phipps's letter in answer, dated the 19th of April, stated the Plaintiff's answer, as given verbally by his Solicitor, thus : " Mr Seton desired I would inform you, that he accedes to your request respecting the interest as a matter of course." The Defendant about the beginning of May informed Phipps, he had sold out stock for the purpose of being ready with his purchase-money ; and expressed his surprise,

(a) 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) ch. 4, § 1, subsec. 15, et seq.; Livington v. Newkirk, 3 John. Ch. 316; M'Kinnon v. Thompson, 3 John. Ch. 307, 310; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 790, 793.

So a purchaser may sell or charge the estate, before the conveyance is executed ; 1 Sugden, Vend. and Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 204, [278] ; but a person claiming under him must submit to perform the agreement in toto, or he cannot be relieved. Ib. See Barton v. Rushton, 4 Desaus. 373.

that no abstract had been delivered. He afterwards pressed Phipps for the abstract ; and proposed, that Phipps should copy and send in his name to the Plaintiff a note written by the Defendant, expressing, that finding no progress made in the delivery of the title, he called to remind Phipps, that in the event of its not being completed at the expiration of the two months he expects in compliance with the promise the Plaintiff made in answer to his letter from Brighelmstone to have his deposit money returned with interest : and requesting authority to fulfil the engagement on the Plaintiff's part. Phipps declined writing that letter. On Saturday the 7th of June the abstract was left at the Defendant's Solicitor's, with a note ; stating, that the Plaintiff had only a title under an agreement ; but all necessary parties were ready to convey ; and making a proposal for that purpose. On Monday the 9th the Plaintiff's So-[* 267] licitor called there, to say, that he would not * vouch for the authenticity of the abstract ; as it was not prepared by him, but by the Solicitors, for the trustees of the Marquis De Choiseul. Nothing farther passed till the 13th of June ; on which day the Defendant wrote to Phipps ; demanding his deposit with interest ; and stating his reasons ; that the two months, within which the Plaintiff agreed to complete the contract, were expired ; and the Defendant's Solicitors had not received an abstract till within these few days ; and, so far from showing a right in the Plaintiff to convey, it states merely a contract for purchase by him without noticing a suit in Chancery against the trustees of the Marquis and Marchioness De Choiseul, previous to the contract for purchase by the Plaintiff, which renders it impossible for the Plaintiff to carry into effect his agreement with the Defendant within the time limited.

The Defendant afterwards recovered his deposit with interest in an action. Several objections were taken to the abstract ; the principal of which (mentioned in the Defendant's letter of the 13th of April) were the suit instituted by the Marquis De Choiseul, and his creditors, to remove his trustees and for an account of their conduct ; and a prior contract with a person, named Darby ; who gave notice of his claim. He was made a Defendant ; and put in an answer amounting on the whole to a disclaimer. Afterwards, being examined as a witness, by his depositions he renewed his claim. The Lord Chancellor held, that he could not get rid of the disclaimer upon the record without a strong case upon affidavit ; and therefore he was a good witness ; but the Defendant reading his depositions must admit, that he has no interest (1). The Defendant then declined reading his evidence.

The second cause was instituted upon a bill by the [*268] * trustees of the Marquis De Choiseul ; praying a specific performance of their contract with Seton.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Bell, for the Plaintiff Seton.—The question is, whether the vendor was bound to make out his title by a certain day; and farther, whether, if he could make a title at a subsequent time, that would not be sufficient in this Court. In all the decisions upon this point time has been considered a circumstance merely, not of the essence of the agreement. It is true, in modern cases parties have been discharged, where in former times they would have been bound: the late decisions having restrained the unlimited extent of the older cases. But they have never gone the length, that, if the agreement is not performed at the particular day, it shall be at an end. In the common case of relief against the penalty of a bond, prior to the Statue (1), could any declaration of the parties have prevented that? The result is, that the non-performance at the day is a circumstance to show abandonment, but only a circumstance. In Gregson v. Riddle (2) the agreement was for a particular day; with a proviso, that in case the title should not be approved in two months, the agreement was to be void, and of no effect. There was an outstanding legal estate, which could not be got in by that time. A bill was filed for that purpose to have the legal estate conveyed. The Defendant resisting, a reference was directed, to see, whether a good title could be made; Lord Loughborough expressing an opinion, that the terms of the agreement were complied with. The report was in favor of the title. The cause coming on before Lord Thurlow, the performance was still resisted. Lord Thurlow said, it had been often * attempted [*269] to get rid of agreements upon this ground, but never with success. The utmost extent was to hold it evidence of a waiver of the agreement: but it never was held to make it void. Mr. Mansfield for the Defendant said, the intention was clearly to make it void; and that it would be necessary to insert a clause, that notwithstanding the decision of the Court of Chancery it should be void. Lord Thurlow said, such a clause might be inserted; and the parties would be just as forward, as they were then.

(1) See Mr. Newland's ed. of Harrison's Ch. Pr. 235.

That case is much stronger than this. Here there was no necessity for performance at the day.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Leach, for the Defendant Slade.—The general principle is, that in Equity, as at Law, the Plaintiff must show, that he has performed every thing incumbent on him. There is no instance of a decision, treating the time as immaterial, without circumstances amounting to a waiver; though the language of the Court has been more extensive. Upon the face of this agreement it is to be performed within two months; and there are no circumstances showing a waiver. Under this express engagement would this Court have restrained an action against the auctioneer for the deposit of 1000*l.*; or have prevented the vendor from setting up the estate again, if the vendee had made default? No authority goes to that extent; and it is to avoid this that the clause is introduced. Then the vendee has an equal right to hold the vendor to the time.

(1) Stat. 4 & 5 Ann. c. 16.

(2) In Chancery, before the Lords Commissioners, 12th June, 1783: before Lord Thurlow, 12th June, 1784. Cited by Mr. Romilly from his own note.

It is idle to say, the time is not material. If it is not adhered to, it may be ruin of the party, acting upon that, contracting debts, &c. A decision always referred to upon this subject is Gibson v. Patterson (1); the report of which is corrected in Lloyd

[* 270] v. * Collett (2), and Harrington v. Wheeler (3). Lloyd v. Collett is a direct decision for this Defendant; differing only in the circumstance, that no abstract was there delivered within the time. In all these cases, and Pincke v. Curteis (4), and Fordyce v. Ford (5), the language of the Court is, directly opposite to what it was formerly, that time is material. In Spurrier v. Hancock (6) the time was extended by the tacit consent of both parties. It is important, that this Defendant the very day after he signed the agreement expressly stated his title to insist upon the time; and Phipps in his answer assents to that.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—There have been several very hard cases under the description of the specific performance of agreements, upon the principle of compensation: that, for instance, where a person contracted for an estate in Essex, with the object of becoming a freeholder of that county; and it turned out to be in Kent: yet he was held to it (7). So in a case before Sir Thomas Sewell, upon an agreement for a leasehold house with a wharf, the object of the purchaser being to be a wharfinger, he was compelled to take the house without the wharf. So, where the object was to purchase an estate tithe-free; and he was compelled to take it subject to tithe (8). The value of the tithe is not a compensation. I incline much to think, notwithstanding what was said in Gregson v. Riddle, [* 271] that time may be made the essence of the contract: but I do not recollect a case, * where an abstract was delivered for the purpose of preparing a conveyance; at the delivery no objection made, that it was delivered too late; and between the delivery and the time for the execution of the conveyance, no objection stated either to the time of the delivery or the nature of the title. The abstract certainly was delivered very late: but it is upon the party to say, it was too late. If he receives the abstract without objection, does he not authorize the other to suppose, he is during the currency of the rest of the time preparing his conveyance, and the thing is to go on?

For the Defendant.—The delivery of the abstract was a mere mockery. It could not possibly be imagined, that it could be looked through in time. It was incumbent upon the vendor to have some

(1) 1 Atk. 12.

(2) 4 Bro. C. C. 469; ante, vol. iv. 689, n.

(3) Ante, vol. iv. 686; Wynn v. Morgan, ante, 202. See the note, vol. iv. 691.

(4) 4 Bro. C. C. 329.

(5) 4 Bro. C. C. 494.

(6) Ante, vol. iv. 667.

(7) Shirley v. Davis, in the Court of Exchequer: cited ante, vol. vi. 678, in Drewe v. Hanson.

(8) Lord Stanhope's Case, in Chancery, before Lord Thurlow; cited ante, vol. vi. 678, in Drewe v. Hanson. See the note.

communication with the vendee, to do away the effect of his letter. It would be a new decision, that the delivery of the abstract to the Solicitor, the vendee having declared absolutely, that he would not let it go beyond the time, shall amount to a new contract. No diligence could have enabled the vendor to perfect his title by the 12th of June, on account of the claim of Darby, and the suit in this Court.

Mr. Romilly, in reply.—This agreement is not the same as if the vendor had undertaken expressly to make out his title in two months. The Defendant's undertaking is conditional, to pay his purchase-money. There is no such principle, that time is essential here as well as at law, and that it is always dispensed with upon the conduct of the party. That would exclude Courts of Equity from a great part of their jurisdiction. The only ground for the redemption of a mortgage is, that the time is essential at Law, yet in Equity, as the real transaction is a loan of money, and the party may be put in as good a situation, it shall not be so considered. In those cases a dictum of Lord Thurlow has been frequently alluded to; * that, if a clause was inserted, excluding the [*272] jurisdiction of this Court, if the mortgagor should not redeem within a year, still the mortgagor would be entitled to redeem. There are no words in this agreement, showing the parties meant this time strictly. It was inserted merely because it is usual to fix a time. The vendor could not have re-sold at the end of two months, and charged the Defendant with the deficiency. The Defendant's letter shows, he did not understand the period of two months to be binding; desiring a fresh agreement for that purpose. Phipps's letter proves nothing. He was not agent for any such purpose; and the information was given to him only; and the answer is merely, that Seton acceded to his request as to the interest as a matter of course; as it certainly was; not, that, if the contract should not be performed within two months, there should be an end of it. The objection, that it was impossible, that the conveyance could be prepared in time, should have been made, when the abstract was delivered. But suppose the title perfect; that it had received the sanction of eminent conveyancers; that many estates had been sold under that abstract; and that the person, to whom it was sent, was already conversant with the title: in that case the conveyance might have been prepared in time. The Defendant held the vendor bound till the 12th of June.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—If it were necessary for the decision of this case to express myself with great accuracy upon the principle of the Court as to suits for specific performance, as far as objections are to be founded upon what the Court has done, and has forbore to do, in a great variety of cases, in which the objection has been taken, that the agreement was not carried into execution within the time stipulated upon the face of it, I should think it my duty to look through a great number of cases. But in the view I have of this case I incur no hazard of making a decree in its principle inconsistent with any authority, that can be stated.

To say, time is regarded in this Court, as at law, is quite impossible. The case mentioned of a mortgage is very strong: an express contract under hand and seal. At law the mortgagee is under no obligation to re-convey at that particular day; and yet this Court says, that, though the money is not paid at the time stipulated, if paid with interest at the time a re-conveyance is demanded, there shall be a re-conveyance: upon this ground; that the contract is in this Court considered a mere loan of money, secured by a pledge of the estate. But that is a doctrine, upon which this Court acts against what is the prima facie import of the terms of the agreement itself; which, does not import at law, that, once a mortgage, always a mortgage; but Equity says that; and the doctrine of this Court as to redemption does give countenance to that strong declaration of Lord Thurlow, that the agreement of the parties will not alter it; for I take it to be so in the case of a mortgage; that you shall not by special terms alter what this Court says are the special terms of that contract. Whether that is to be applied to the case of a purchase is a different consideration. I only say, time is not regarded here as at law. So in the instance of a mortgage with interest at 5 per cent. and a condition to take 4, if regularly paid; or at 4 per cent., with a condition for 5, if not regularly paid. At Law you might in that case recover the 5 per cent. for it is the legal interest. But this Court regards the 5 per cent. as a penalty for securing the 4; and time is no farther the essence, than that if it is not paid at the time, the party may be relieved from paying the 5 per cent. by paying the 4 per cent. and putting the other party in the same condition, as if the 4 per cent. had been paid: [* 274] that is, by paying him interest upon the * 4 per cent. as if it had been received at the time. So in this Court, before Courts of Law dealt with a bond, under a penalty, as they do now. Time was of the essence there: but this Court relieved against the penalty long before a Court of Law; and there are many other instances.

But there is another circumstance. The effect of a contract for purchase is very different at Law and in Equity. At Law the estate remains the estate of the vendor; and the money that of the vendee. It is not so here. The estate from the sealing of the contract is the real property of the vendee. It descends to his heirs. It is devisable by his will; and the question, whose it is, is not to be discussed merely between the vendor and vendee; but may be to be discussed between the representatives of the vendee. Therefore I do not take a full view of the subject upon the question of time, unless that is taken into consideration; and many very nice and difficult cases may be put, in which the question would be to be discussed between the representatives, founded upon the conduct between the vendor and vendee. It is obvious, that a due consideration of the value of the objections will embrace that consideration also.

The cases seem to have varied a good deal. The cases before Lord Thurlow proceed upon this; that in the nature of the thing there must be a degree of good faith between the parties, not to turn round the contract upon frivolous objections. As to the contract of the party the slightest objection is an answer at law. But the title to an estate requires so much clearing and inquiry, that unless substantial objections appear, not merely as to the time, but an alteration of circumstances affecting the value of the thing, or objections arising out of circumstances, not merely as to time, but the conduct of the parties during * the time, [* 275] unless the objection can be so sustained, many of the cases go the length of establishing, that the objection cannot be maintained: even the later cases; which have given great weight to the objection; particularly Harrington v. Wheeler (1), referring to older cases, particularly two in the House of Lords. The objection was not put merely upon the conduct in not making the title in time, but upon the circumstances, connected with the thing and the value of it.

But I need not address myself to the consideration of what is the precise principle with much industry; for no authority would support me in saying, that under the particular circumstances of this case the Defendant can resist a decree, if a good title can be made. This agreement is signed by the Defendant Slade only: but that makes him within the Statute (2) a party to be charged. I do not say, whether terms might or might not be introduced, that would make time expressly of the essence of the contract. It is enough to say, that, if this agreement has that effect, there never was an agreement, that would not; for upon that point the agreement is as loose as possible. There is no passage in it eo intuitu; not that sort of passage in Gregson v. Riddle. The clause as to liberty to resell, &c. is not considered of much importance in this Court: but in this instance it is a clause against the vendee, having no corresponding clause against the vendor. That clause expresses little more than would be the legal effect, if that was not inserted. But it is enough to say upon that, the objection relied upon in the argument, that the Plaintiff might have sold, after the two months were expired, admits of this answer; that it is assuming the whole question. If you make out, * that he would have been at liberty to resell, that does not make out, that he lets the other off. But under the circumstances he would not have been at liberty to resell. The evidence clearly imports, that the Defendant did not understand it to have bound them in that mutual respect, in which he seems in his letter to think it reasonable they should be bound. But I will construe it for the purpose of this case, as if it had mutually bound them; and that, if the title was not made out by the day, then the Defendant should be at liberty to say, he was off; for, if that clause had been in this agreement, he might have waived the benefit of it; and it must have been made out, that his conduct did not occasion the non-fulfilling the agreement. Take it, that there was the mutual clause. The moment after the sale the auctioneer was no longer the agent of the Plaintiff (a). He was his agent only to sell, not to deal with the terms, upon which a title was to be made. The Defendant must show, the auctioneer had acquired a character to bind the Plaintiff in that respect. There is no evidence of that: on the contrary the Defendant applies to the auctioneer as such agent; and he refuses to act as such; and refers him to the Plaintiff. But he applies again to the auctioneer; and never to the Plaintiff.

(1) Ante, vol. iv. 686. See, also, the Marquis of Hertford v. Boore, and Guest v. Homfray, v. 719, 618; and the note, iv. 691.

(2) Statute 29 Char. II. c. 3. See ante, Forster v. Hale, vol. iii. 696; and the note, 713.

One clause of this letter is very important; marking the knowledge of the title in the law-agent of the vendee; and that he was able in the first instance, the day after, to state the material objections; namely, the proceeding in Chancery and Darby's claim. That is distinct evidence, that the Defendant did not then understand, that he had entered into an agreement, by force of which he thought he had a right to say, the time of two months was absolutely of the essence of the contract. Whether that was misunderstanding, or not, that was his understanding. By the last words he seems desirous of having an agreement, which would for the first time give a mutuality as to time. But he does not choose [* 277] to give up the one, till * he gets the other; reserving to himself the power to deal with the first agreement, as he thinks fit; though he may not get the stipulation he wishes. If the Plaintiff acceded to that proposition, he would be bound. But what is the evidence, that he did? There is a good deal of reasoning in support of the argument, that Phipps's letter is, not merely a statement, that he would pay interest, but with regard to some circumstances that the contract was to be off: namely, the deposit money to be returned with interest, connected with the dissolution of the agreement; which might be either within or after the expiration of the two months: but, if the former, it ought to be shown to be clearly the effect of something, that passed subsequently, and was acceded to. The letter of Phipps in answer is no evidence of the facts stated in it. Does the Defendant conceive the matter as resting on that letter, and consider it as an undertaking to the extent he proposed; or as completely settling that mutuality he desired; giving him a right to insist upon the time as the essence of the contract? No: for afterwards he goes again to Phipps, not an agent to bind the Plaintiff for this purpose; and not being able to prove the date farther than that it was between the 13th of April and the 5th of June. This proves, that the Defendant by repeated inquiries, addressed to his solicitor, who knew a good deal of the title, was informed from time to time, that the abstract was not delivered. The proof is complete as to that. This is a complete waiver of any objection from the non-delivery of the abstract at the time the Defendant proposed, that Phipps should write that letter. Being told, Phipps would not write that letter, he does not write himself; or direct his solicitor to apply: but upon the 7th of June by his solicitors he receives the abstract: they knowing the history of the title and the estate; and stating the two grounds of objection the day after the contract took place. There was a note at the bottom of *the abstract; stating distinctly, that the Plaintiff had only a title under an agreement; but that all necessary parties were ready to convey; and making a proposal for that purpose; which might or might not be completed within the time. The abstract was delivered on the 7th of June. No objection was made to receiving it. It was kept, till the time expired, without objection. Ought not the objection to have been made on the 7th? The Plaintiff was bound till the 12th. He could not sell to another; and if the solicitor had returned the abstract upon the objection, the Plaintiff was at liberty to say, he had undertaken to remove all objections, or to tender a conveyance (a); and he might have proceeded to prepare a conveyance; which under the circumstances was to be prepared by the Defendant; and he might have tendered that conveyance: so as to have a right to an action, or to file a bill, as upon an agreement, which he had undertaken to make good within the time.

(a) Chitty, Cont. (6th Am. ed.) 213; Story, Agency, § 108, § 500; 1 Stephens, N. P. 505.

This case is not like Lloyd v. Collett (1); in which the Defendant immediately sent the abstract back; and would not look at it. What right had this Defendant to read the abstract, if it came too late? He had either an intention to execute the contract, or a hope, that he had time to get through the abstract, in order to carry it into execution: but the evidence in this respect is totally silent; and it is clear upon the objections stated in the solicitor's depositions, that at some period or other he had gone into the abstract.

As to the other circumstances, stated by the Defendant, his selling out stock, &c. there is no evidence whatsoever. As to his intention of making this place his residence, there is nothing in the contract, having the *least reference to that; and [*_279] upon an intention, not disclosed in the contract or afterwards, as essential, this Court has never been in the habit of acting.

Under the circumstances therefore, whether the time is or is not an objection, founded upon the authorities the Reports of this Court furnish, which I will not discuss, let the authorities upon that point turn the scale either for the Defendant or the Plaintiff, there is no authority, that has not some reference to the conduct of the party in the mean time; and upon the conduct this Defendant has no right under the circumstances to say, this contract was not performed within the two months. There must therefore be a decree for a specific performance; and as to all the rest a reference to the Master, to see, whether a good title can be made. Where the party has not been able to make his title before the decree, it is always a question very important as to the costs, but not, whether he shall take the title or not. According to old cases it was sufficient, if the title was made by the time of the Report (1) (a).

(a) See 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) [374] 272, et seq. A party who contracts to execute and deliver a deed, is bound to prepare the deed, if there be no stipulation that it shall be prepared by the intended grantee. Tinney v. Ashley, 15 Pick. 546; Chitty, Cont. (6th Am. ed.) 307. See Pincke v. Curteis, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 339, and notes.

(1) 4 Bro. C. C. 469; ante, vol. iv. 689, in the note.

1. The dictum in the principal case, that a party who is made defendant in a suit, but who has no interest in the result thereof, generally, or even as to the particular matter to which it is proposed to examine him, may be a good witness for the co-defendants, is founded on obvious principles of justice: for, if the rule were different, a plaintiff might, by the ingenious mechanism of his bill, shut out the most material evidence. Murray v. Shadowell, 2 Ves. & Bea. 405; Franklyn v. Colquhoun, 16 Ves. 219; Casey v. Beachill, Gilb. Eq. Rep. 98. But a plaintiff cannot read the evidence of one whom he has made a co-plaintiff, though such co-plaintiff be only a trustee, and has no beneficial interest in the subject in question; such a party should be made a defendant, and then, if he disclaimed all interest upon oath, he might be a good witness. Phillips v. The Duke of Buckinghamshire, 1 Vern. 230. A defendant may be allowed to examine a plaintiff, who is willing to consent to such examination: but there must be a saving of all just exceptions which the co-plaintiffs may offer. Walker v. Wingfield, 15 Ves. 179; Whately v. Smith, 2 Dick. 650; Armiter v. Stourton, Ambl. 394. Whether a defendant can obtain an order to examine a plaintiff who does not consent, may be questionable. Mayor and Aldermen of Colchester v. _____, 1 P. Wms. 596; Troughton v. Gelley, 1 Dick. 382. But the reporter of the last-cited case was too hasty in supposing it to be inconsistent with, and overruled by Heweton v. Tookey, 2 Dick. 800; in one of these instances the application was made by a defendant, in the other by a co-plaintiff, which distinction may sufficiently account for the different decisions made in the two cases respectively. The evidence of a defendant who disclaims, and is not brought to a hearing, cannot be read by the plaintiff in proof of his own right, to the prejudice of another defendant: Hill v. Adams, 2 Atk. 39. See, ante, note 5 to Jones v. Turberville, 2 V. 11.

2. With respect to the doctrine of compensation, where a contract has not been strictly performed, and the proper disinclination to extend that doctrine, which has been repeatedly expressed by Courts of Equity in modern times, see, ante, the notes to Drew v. Hanson, 6 V. 675, and the farther references there given.

3. That time may be made of the essence of a contract, see note 2 to Eaton v. Lyon, 3 V. 690; but where there has been laches on both sides, this may amount to a mutual waiver of objections on the ground of delay: see the note to The Marquis of Hertford v. Boore, 5 Ves. 719. Time, indeed, as was observed in the principal case, is not regarded in Courts of Equity precisely as it is in Courts of Law: in Equity it is, perhaps, rather considered as affording presumptive evidence, than as a positive bar to relief; but still, Courts of Equity are never disposed to countenance stale demands, and though not bound by statutes of limitations, generally act in analogy thereto: see the notes to Jones v. Turberville, 2 Ves. 11; and that the policy of the statute of limitations applies as strongly to a mortgaged estate as any other, see note 3 to Edsell v. Buchanan, 2 Ves. 83. But where the question is, not whether all title is gone by force of the statute of limitations, but (as the point is put in the principal case) whether a mortgagor shall be at liberty to redeem after the day agreed upon, there Equity says, relief may be given against the legal consequences of non-payment at the precise time appointed, and redemption allowed, on the ground that the whole object and original intention of the parties was to secure, by the mortgage, repayment, of the money: Radcliffe v. Warrington, 17 Ves. 332, 334. Nor, when a conveyance is executed as a security, will any words in the same instrument (inserted with a view of excluding redemption in case of failure to complete it by the time limited) bar a redemption; Jason v. Eyes, 2 Freem. 70; Newcombe v. Bonham, 2 Freem. 67; Howard v. Harris, 2 Freem. 87.

(1) See ante, Jenkins v. Miles, vol. vi. 646, and the note, 655.

(b) See Rose v. Calland, ante, 5 V. 189, note (a); Wynn v. Morgan, ante, 202, note (b).

4. Notwithstanding the report of the principal case represents Lord Eldon to have intimated, that, whether interest was reserved on a mortgage at five per cent. with a condition to take four per cent., if that was paid regularly, or whether the reservation of interest was at four per cent., with a condition for five per cent., if the payments were not regularly made, the very same equitable doctrine must be applied to one case as to the other; there does appear to be a distinction between them. Where the interest was reserved at four per cent., a subsequent condition for five per cent., if the payment was not regular, would plainly be in the nature of a penalty; but, where the reservation was at five per cent., an agreement, by a subsequent clause, to accept four per cent. if that was regularly offered, could hardly give the character of a penalty to the first stipulation. There seems to be a material difference between an original agreement, and a superadded condition, nomine penae: Anonymous Case, 2 Freem. 197, 2d edit.: where numerous authorities in confirmation of the distinction suggested are cited; and to that number may be added, Stanhope v. Manners, 2 Eden, 197, and Walmsley v. Booth, Barnard, 481.

5. If a purchase-contract be finally completed, the estate is considered, in equity, as having belonged to the purchaser from the date of the contract; whether the consequences of such relation back to the time of agreement, are advantageous or disadvantageous to himself (see note 2, to Paine v. Meller, 6 V. 349); and, a fortiori, his personal representatives can urge no valid objection to the doctrine, though it may impose on them the duty of paying for the estate, for the benefit of the heir or devisee: Broome v. Monck, 10 Ves. 605; Daniels v. Davison, 16 Ves. 253. But, where the contract could not have been enforced by, or against, the party who entered into the same, his heir cannot insist on having the estate, nor, of course, can the personal representatives be called upon to pay for it: the liability and the claims of the two classes of representatives, in respect of a contract, must be regulated by the rights and the liability of the party who made that contract, looking at the question as it stood at his death: Buckmaster v. Harrop, 7 Ves. 344; Broome v. Monck, 10 Ves. 607; Rose v. Cunymghame, 11 Ves. 555; Gaskarth v. Louther, 12 Ves. 113; Bubb's Case, 2 Freem. 39; Wall v. Bright, 1 Jac. & Walk. 502; Attorney General v. Day, 1 Ves. Sen. 220.

6. As to the importance, if not the absolute necessity, of the signature of both parties to a contract respecting real estate, see note 4, to Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 V. 326.

7. To obtain a residence within a certain time, may have been the reasonable object of a party who has entered into a purchase-contract; and, where such object appears on the face of the contract, it may have its weight upon a question of specific performance. Dyer v. Hargrave, 10 Ves. 508. Hall v. Smith, 14 Ves. 433. But motives of this kind cannot be taken into consideration by the court, unless they are expressed in the contract itself; the rule laid down as to that matter in the principal case, was again repeated and acted upon in Boehm v. Wood, 1 Jac. & Walk. 422.

8. That a specific performance will generally be decreed when the title can be cleared within a moderate length of time, but that the time required to make a good title may have a material influence in determining who is to bear the costs, see, ante, the note to Wynn v. Morgan, 7 V. 202, and the farther reference there given.

BROWN v. BIGG.

[ROLLS.—1801, DEC. 18; 1802, JULY 5, 6.]

THE produce of real estate, sold under a power in a Will, passed by a residuary clause with the personal estate (a); the object being a conversion out and out: but part remaining unsold was held a resulting trust for the heir at law (b). Under words importing a tenancy in common, though combined with words of survivorship, the interests vested at the death of the testator; and therefore vested in one of the residuary legatees, who died between the death of the testator and the death of the person entitled for life, [p. 280.]

JOHN BIGG by his will, dated the 19th of December, 1793, gave and devised unto his wife Ann Bigg all his freehold and copyhold estates, which he should die possessed of in the parish of [* 280] Glemsford in the county of * Suffolk, subject as therein mentioned; to have and enjoy said estates for and during the term of her natural life; with liberty to cut timber, as therein mentioned; and after the death of his wife he gave and devised said estates to his godson John Bigg, son of John Bigg, his late nephew, then deceased, by Sarah his wife, and to the heirs of his body lawfully begotten, or to the guardians of said John: should the wife of the testator die before said John Bigg should attain twenty-one years; and he declared, that should his said godson die, before he came to twenty-one years, or, before he should be legally married, and have no issue from a legal marriage, then he left such estates and the rents and profits thereof, that should have grown and arisen from the same, from the death of his said wife, to Benjamin Tweed Bigg, brother of said John Bigg, his godson, or in case of his death before twenty-one years or legal marriage without issue, then to his two sisters jointly, daughters of the testator's nephew John Bigg deceased, by his wife Sarah, and their heirs for ever; to be managed by their guardians, till they were of twenty-one years respectively, or should be legally married; and the testator, besides the said Glemsford estates, gave to his wife during her natural life the yearly interest or produce of all stock his property in the 3 per cent. joint Stock of Annuities and Reduced Annuities, or by what other names they are called or usually distinguished: provided, that if the said Ann should marry again, then she would be entitled to one moiety only

(a) Hereford v. Ravenhill, 1 Beavan, 481; Fletcher v. Ashburner, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 497, 503, note (a) and cases cited; Ackroyd v. Smithson, ib. 503, and notes; Marsh v. Wheeler, 2 Edw. 156; Procter v. Ferebee, 1 Ired. Eq. 143.

(b) To establish a conversion of land into money, the Will must direct a sale absolutely or out and out, for all purposes, not merely those of the devise; irrespective of contingencies and independent of discretion. Wright v. Trustees of Method. Epis. Church, 1 Hoff. 202; Clay v. Hart, 7 Dana, 11; Newby v. Skinner, 1 Dev. & Bat. 488; Peter v. Beverley, 10 Peters, 533; Gott v. Cook, 1 Paige, 522.

Where the discretion to sell is plainly for the purposes of the will, and they fail, there is no conversion. Ib. North v. Valk, C. W. Dud. Eq. 212; Bogert v. Hertell, 4 Hill, 492; Hawley v. James, 7 Paige, 213; S. C. 5 Paige, 318; 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 452, et seq.; Wood v. Cone, 1 Paige, 472; Ackroyd v. Smithson, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 503, and notes.

of the yearly interest or produce of said moneys or stocks : the other moiety thereof to go and be applied to and to the use of the testator's nephews and nieces after mentioned in manner and proportions as therein expressed. He then ordered and empowered his said wife, (in case she chose so to do), with the advice of William Roberts to sell all his Gransden estates (stating, that she will probably not choose to live there), with the crop * in [* 281] the ground or barns, and all stock, furniture, chattels, and effects, with all convenient speed ; and the money arising from such sale to be placed out on security ; the yearly interest of which, as well as the interest due to the said testator on notes, bonds, mortgages, or otherwise, (except what was in the public funds) he also gave and devised unto his said wife, under the like restrictions as before in case of a second marriage ; and the testator, after giving several legacies, and among them some specific articles of plate to John Bigg, did thereby after the decease of his said wife without issue by him leave the whole of his personal estate principal and interest of every kind both on public and private security before undisposed of to his several nephews and nieces after named : viz. Elizabeth Bigg, Bateman Bigg, Sophia Bigg, and the four children of his said nephew John Bigg, late of Glemsford in Suffolk, by Sarah, his wife ; to be divided amongst them and the survivors of them, share and share alike ; and he appointed his said wife Ann Bigg sole executrix.

The testator died on the 13th of February, 1795. His widow died on the 13th of July, 1798, without issue by him, and not having married again.

The bill was filed by the executors and legatees of the testator's widow Ann Bigg ; praying the necessary accounts of John Bigg's personal estate, debts, &c. ; and that the rights of the several persons entitled to his estate and effects now remaining unadministered may be ascertained, &c.

By the decree, made on the 22d of November, 1799, the necessary accounts and inquiries were directed. Upon the Master's Report, it appeared, that the whole of the copyhold estate, except a very small part, was * surrendered to the use of [* 282] the will ; and that some part of the Gransden estate remained unsold. John Bigg of Glemsford, the testator's nephew, who died on the 27th of March, 1793, had by Sarah his wife four children, John Bigg, Constantia Ann Bigg, Elizabeth Bigg, and Benjamin Tweed Bigg ; all living at the date of the will and the death of the testator, and now living. Elizabeth Bigg, daughter of Joseph Bigg and Constance his wife, one of the residuary legatees, survived the testator ; but died in the life of his widow on the 11th of March, 1796,

The questions were ; first, upon the claim of the heir at law John Bigg to that part of the Gransden estate, that was not sold, and also to the money produced by the sale, as not being disposed of after the death of the wife ; the other residuary legatees insisting, that the residue of the estate should be sold ; and the produce of the whole should go as the personal estate ; secondly, whether any interest vested in Elizabeth Bigg : the other residuary legatees claiming the whole ; as being the survivors at the death of the testator's widow.

Mr. Richards, and Mr. Bell, for the infant Heir at Law, John Bigg, also one of the residuary Legatees.—This estate is not directed to be turned into money out and out ; but is kept distinct from the personal estate : the object of the testator being to give his wife an opportunity of living there. If she had made that choice, or, if Roberts had disapproved the sale, it would have descended as real estate. An option is given, not only to her, but to another. But, even if a positive direction was given to turn this into money, still not being disposed of it belongs to the heir. In Saunders v. Kinsey Sir Charles Saunders created a trust of property to be laid out in land with the consent of Mrs. Saunders. The decree directed it to be laid out : but no consent had been *given.

[* 283] Upon a rehearing it was held, that in that respect the decree was wrong ; that it continued to be money ; and was to be applied as money, without being turned into land. The principle, upon which this is put in the celebrated argument of Lord Eldon in Ackroyd v. Smithson (1), which prevailed with Lord Thurlow, whose first opinion was strongly in favor of the next of kin, is, not only, that there must be an intention, that the heir shall not take : but that some other person, who is to take, must be pointed out. Even express words, merely taking from the heir, will not do. The law casting it upon him, though the devisor may give it to another person, he cannot control the law by taking it from the heir, and leaving it to be seized by way of occupancy : Collins v. Wakenman (2) and other cases there referred to. Robinson v. Taylor (3).

Upon the next question, there are only two periods, to which the word "Survivor" can apply : the death of the testator or the death of his wife without issue. The death of the testator is never taken as the period, except, where there is no other time, to which it can possibly apply. It may be contended, that there is no gift till the distribution ; as in Brograve v. Winder (4).

Mr. Grimwood and Mr. Rouppell, for the other surviving residuary Legatees.—This direction to sell the Grandsden estate is imperative ; and has the effect of converting it out and out. The words "empower" or "request" would have that effect. But upon the emphatical word "Order" there can be no doubt, the intention of the testator was not to give an option ; assigning his reasons [* 284] for giving the *positive direction for the conversion. The expression as to Roberts's advice does not import a condition. The word "empowered" imports only, that she was to have

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 503.

(2) Ante, vol. ii. 683.

(3) 2 Bro. C. C. 589, ante, vol. i. 44 ; see the notes, 45, 204.

(4) Ante, vol. ii. 684.

the necessary powers of making conveyances to purchasers, giving acquittances for the money, and doing all other necessary acts, to carry that order into effect. She has no option to sell a part only ; but is bound to sell the whole. The money arising from the sale is to be placed out on security ; the interest of which with the interest of other securities he disposes of ; plainly showing, that it is to be personal property ; and incorporating it with his other personal estate. Then the whole property so converted is disposed of. The authorities fortify this construction. Mallabar v. Mallabar (1). Dourr v. Motteaux (2). Fletcher v. Ashburner (3) ; and Ogle v. Cook (4), a very strong case. The distinction upon these authorities is, that, where the property is to be converted out and out, as it is expressed, it must be considered converted for all purposes ; but when the trust is to sell for particular purposes, if any of those purposes fail, the heir shall take what is lapsed : but then, as was determined in Hewitt v. Wright (5) particularly, he takes it as personal estate ; which shows, the conversion is complete.

Upon the other question they concurred with the heir at law, that the interests of the residue were not vested till the death of the widow.

Mr. Raynsford, for the residuary legatees, and the executor of Elizabeth Bigg ; who survived the testator ; but died in the life of his widow.

* This was a reversionary interest, vested at the death of [* 285] the testator ; and the enjoyment postponed only to give the widow the use of the fund for her life. Upon Monkhouse v. Holme (6), the Attorney General v. Crispin (7), and Devisme v. Mello (8), it would be clearly a vested interest, if the words of survivorship were not added ; but that must be taken to refer to the death of the testator : Roebrick v. Dean (9), Maberley v. Strode (10).

Upon the other question they concurred with the other residuary legatees against the heir.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—Upon the first point, an heir at law is not to be disinherited, either wholly or partially, but by direct words or clear intention. Whatever portion of the real estate is undisposed of belongs to the heir. Ackroyd v. Smithson was decided upon a great number of cases, particularly Digby v. Legard (11). The true question is, whether this is made personal estate at all events ; and, if so, whether it is disposed of in all events ; which is also necessary to defeat the title of the heir. It was not in all events to be

(1) For. 79.

(2) 1 Ves. 320.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 497.

(4) Stated 1 Bro. C. C. 501, 513; ante, vol. ii. 686.

(5) 1 Bro. C. C. 86.

(6) 1 Bro. C. C. 298.

(7) 1 Bro. C. C. 386. See the note, ante, vol. i. 408.

(8) 1 Bro. C. C. 537.

(9) Ante, vol. ii. 265; 4 Bro. C. C. 403.

(10) Ante, vol. iii. 450. In that case, and Russell v. Long, iv. 551, other cases on this subject are referred to. Newton v. Ayscough, post, vol. xix. 534.

(11) In Mr. Cox's note to Cruise v. Barley, 3 P. Will. 20.

personal estate: for if his wife had died in his life, it could not then have been sold. So, if she had not chosen to sell it; for certainly she has an option. In the event of a sale he has not given the produce after the death of his wife to any one. Then, whether in the shape of money or land, if it is part of the real estate undisposed of, it goes to the heir. In Ackroyd v. Smithson and the other cases the real estate was to be turned into money to answer the exigencies of *the will. In Mallabar v. Mallabar the subject was beyond all doubt the produce of the real estate; and the construction was, that by personal estate the testator meant the produce of his real estate, not as being made personal estate by the sale, but as being considered so by him. The principle collected in Lord Eldon's argument in Ackroyd v. Smithson and adopted by Lord Thurlow upon consideration of all the cases, is, that, whenever any portion of the real estate is left undisposed of, it must belong to the heir. This testator in the directions for laying out this money on security and as to the interest keeps the two funds distinct; and does not blend them. The single question is, whether by the whole of his personal estate he means the produce of the real estate; if not, it is undisposed of after the death of the widow; and then must go to the heir: the conversion alone without a disposition not being sufficient to defeat his right.

As to the other question, every case of this kind must depend upon its own circumstances. The testator was not providing for his nephews and nieces in all events, but upon a contingency, which might have deprived them of it for ever: namely, the event of the death of his wife, leaving issue by him. The time of distribution then is the time to look for the person to take; and that is the more convenient interpretation. This is not a provision for children.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT], during the argument observed, that the general leaning of the Court is against construing the words of survivorship to relate to the death of the testator; if any other period can be fixed upon: the testator generally supposing, the legatee will survive him (1). If he intended his wife to have the whole for life, the probable conclusion was, that he meant the time of division.

[* 287] *Upon the other question the Court observed, that the case of lapse could admit of no doubt.

July, 5th, 6th (2). The decree declared, that John Bigg, the heir at law of the testator, is entitled to so much of the Gransden estate as remains unsold; and that the money produced by the sale of such part as has been sold, is to be considered as part of the personal estate of the testator; and that the representatives of Elizabeth Bigg are entitled to her share of the residue of the testator's

(1) This opinion was retracted by the Master of the Rolls in his judgment. See post, vol. xiii. 375, Shergold v. Boone.

(2) The Reporter was absent, when the judgment in this cause was pronounced: but the decree is taken from the Register's Book.

personal estate ; and the trust of the funds was declared in seven shares accordingly.

1. As to the resulting trust which arises in favor of the heir at law, when any part of his executor's real estate (though directed to be converted into personalty) is not well disposed of, see, ante, notes 2, 3, 4, to Kidney v. Cousmaker, 1 V. 436.

2. Sir William Grant, in Shergold v. Boone, 13 Ves. 375, corrected the observation which fell from him in the principal case, as to the period to which survivorship is generally to be referred, when a testator has made no express declaration on that head. For the authorities relative to this matter, see note 3 to Hill v. Chapman, 1 V. 405 ; and note 2 to Perry v. Woods, 3 V. 204.

FENTON v. HUGHES.

[1802, JULY 7.]

BILL for discovery, in aid of an action: Demurrer by a mere witness allowed ; though the discovery would be more effectual than the examination at law, and notwithstanding a charge of interest in the Defendant; as to which he may be called by the Plaintiff, waiving the objection, and if called against him may be examined upon the voir dire.

To a bill for relief a mere witness cannot be a Defendant; except in the case of a secretary, &c. of a corporation (a), [p. 288.]

A party having called a witness cannot discredit him (b), [p. 290.]

The bill stated, that the Defendant Bate had formed a connection with Lancellot for the purpose of discounting bills, giving part money and part goods, and the purchase of annuities ; and Lancellot introduced Bate to the Plaintiff, as a person, who wanted to purchase goods ; proposing payment by bills. The bill then stated a transac-

(a) A mere witness ought not to be made a party to a bill, although the plaintiff may deem his answer more satisfactory than his examination. Story, Eq. Pl. § 234, § 519, and note : Newman v. Godfrey, 2 Bro. C. C. 332 ; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1499 ; Wigram, Discovery, (Am. ed.), p. 165, § 235 ; Hare, 65, 68, 73, 76.

Officers and members of a corporation may, however, be made parties to a bill so far as the bill seeks for discovery, though they have no individual interest in the suit, and no relief can be had against them. Wright v. Dame, 1 Metcalf, 237 ; Story, Eq. Pl. § 235 ; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1501 ; Glaston v. Copper Miners' Co., 11 Sim. 305 ; Cartwright v. Hateley, ante, 1 V. 293, note (1) ; Le Texier v. Margrave and Margravine of Ansprach, ante, 5 V. 322 ; Hare, 63.

(b) A party will not be allowed to produce general evidence to discredit his own witness. 1 Phil. Ev. (Cowen & Hill's ed. 1839), 308, 309 ; Stellingen v. Howell, 3 Halst. 310 ; Cowden v. Reynolds, 12 Serg. & R. 281 ; Sawrey v. Murrell, 2 Hayw. 397 ; Farrar v. Hamilton, 1 Tayl. 10, 14 ; McMahon v. Spangler, 4 Rand. 51 ; Ewer v. Ambrose, 3 B. & Cress. 746 ; Stockton v. Demuth, 7 Watts, 39 ; Smith v. Price, 8 Watts, 447 ; 1 Greenl. Ev. pt. 3, ch. 3, § 442, § 443.

But a party may produce testimony to disprove facts stated by a witness against the interest of the party calling him. 1 Phil. Ev. ubi supra ; 1 Greenl. Ev. pt. 3, c. 3, § 443. And it seems the party may show, that his witness has taken him by surprise. 1 Greenl. Ev. pt. 3, ch. 3, § 444 ; Wright v. Beckett, 1. Mood. & Rob. 414, 416 ; Rex v. Oldroyd, Russ. & Ry. Cr. Cas. 88, 90. He cannot, however, produce evidence to show, that his own witness has made contradictory statements. 1 Phil. Ev. ubi supra ; Queen v. State, 5 Harr. & John. 232. See farther on this point, tion of that nature, and a subsequent transaction ; in which Lancelot gave a bill for 500*l.* to the Plaintiff in consideration of bills, and notes, and cloth ; that an action was commenced by the other Defendant Mary Hughes, Qui tam, &c. to recover penalties from the Plaintiff for an unlawful and usurious contract ; charging, that the action was brought at the instance of the Defendant Bate, and circumstances showing intimacy between the Defendants in support of that. The prayer of the bill was for a discovery from the Defendants ; and that the Plaintiff may have the benefit of such [* 288] * discovery at the trial of the said action so commenced in the name of the Defendant Hughes ; and that the Defendants may be restrained from proceeding in the action so commenced in the name of the Defendant Hughes, and from commencing any other action against the Plaintiff touching the said matters.

The Defendant Bate demurred ; for cause, that the Plaintiff had not shown any right to call upon the Defendant in a Court of Equity for a discovery of the said matters ; and that it appears of the Plaintiff's own showing, that the Defendant Bate may be examined as a witness.

Mr. Owen, in support of the Demurrer.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. W. Agar, for the Plaintiff.

July 7th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This Demurrer must be allowed. The Demurrer is put in upon the principle, that Bate ought not to be a Defendant ; being a mere witness ; and it is admitted, that it is impossible to file a bill against a person, who is a mere witness, if the object of the bill is to have relief in equity (1). That is established by a great variety of authorities ; and the contradictory opinions of Lord Thurlow and Lord Kenyon upon the case of Cookson v. Ellison (2), both admit that principle, with the exception of one or two classes of cases. Lord Thurlow in that case supported the exceptions to the answer of a person, who was a mere witness, upon the ground, that having answered a part, he was bound to answer throughout. Lord Kenyon in a subsequent [* 289] case expressed a different opinion (3) : viz. that, if it appeared at any time, that he was a mere witness, having answered a part he had answered more than sufficient ; and should not be held to answer throughout. But the principle of both decisions is the same ; that to a bill for relief a mere witness should not be made a Defendant. The cases of secretaries and book-

Brown v. Bellows, 4 Pick. 194 ; Lawrence v. Barker, 5 Wendell, 301 ; Jackson v. Leek, 12 Wendell, 105 ; Crowell v. Kirk, 3 Dev. 355 ; Jackson v. Varick, 7 Cowen, 238 ; Perry v. Massey, 1 Bail. 32 ; Winslow v. Moseley, 2 Stewart, 137 ; 1 Stark. Ev. (5th Am. ed.), 185, 186 ; Rex v. Oldroyd, Russ. & R. Cr. Cas. 88 ; People v. Vane, 12 Wend. 78, 81.

(1) Ante, the note, vol. i. 293 ; Weymouth v. Bouyer, 416.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 252. See Jerrard v. Saunders, ante, vol. ii. 454, and the references.

(3) Newman v. Godfrey, 2 Bro. C. C. 332. See the notes, ante, vol. i. 293 ; ii. 458.

keepers to corporations proceed upon another ground, now sanctioned by practice, so that it is impossible to unsettle it. But the principle is very singular. It originated with Lord Talbot (1) who reasoned thus upon it ; that you cannot have a satisfactory answer from a corporation ; therefore you make the secretary a party ; and get from him the discovery you cannot be sure of having from them ; and it is added, that the answer of the secretary may enable you to get better information. The first of those principles is extremely questionable ; if it were now to be considered for the first time ; and, as to the latter, it is very singular to make a person a Defendant, in order to enable yourself to deal better and with more success with those, whom you have a right to put upon the record. But this practice has so universally obtained without objection, that it must be considered established.

There have been cases of agents to sell, auctioneers, &c. made Defendants without objection. Whether that arose originally from some interest in them, as holding deposits, that would frequently entitle the Plaintiff to relief against them, I do not know : but I cannot deny, that such persons have been made Defendants, where it would be very difficult to say, any relief was to be prayed against them at the hearing. But those cases are upon bills for relief. In Plummer v. May (2) the object of the bill seems to have been to set aside a will for fraud ; * and one of the sub-[* 290]scribing witnesses was made a Defendant. There was a charge, that he had an interest ; and from the last passage of the judgment you may collect, that it was not a mere charge of interest, but of such species of interest, that at the hearing there might have been a decree for an account against him. As to that case I only say, unless it was upon a bill for relief, I do not know how to understand it.

This is a mere bill for discovery ; stating the interest of Bate in the action brought by the Defendant Mary Hughes ; and seeking as against him those discoveries, to which I would for the present without prejudice suppose the Plaintiff entitled as against her, a discovery to enable him to defeat her action ; and then the question is, whether this sort of charge of interest in this bill, a mere bill for a discovery, and an injunction to stay trial till the discovery, makes Bate any thing but a witness. It was contended, 1st, that he is a mere witness : 2dly, that he may be called at law, so as to make it impossible, that he could do any harm or any good, viz. by first stating his interest, and so discrediting him before the examination. As to that, at the Old Bailey the Judges would not permit that to be done, even upon the examination in reply ; holding, that you give him credit by calling him ; and they would not permit you to breathe a suspicion against him, if you did not like his cross-examination. That, I was informed, had been settled upon conference by all the

(1) Wych v. Meal, 3 P. Will. 310.

(2) 1 Ves. 426.

Judges. I must therefore consider Bate, if he is a witness, as a witness having credit given him by those, who call him.

The question however is, whether he can be examined at Law for the Plaintiff in Equity with the same benefit, that would result from a discovery here. If he can, as no relief is to be given, it [* 291] would introduce a new class * of cases to permit a bill for discovery to be filed against a party so purely a witness. It is impossible, that he can be examined at Law against the Plaintiff, if the bill is true; for he may be examined upon the Voir dire; and then his interest will come out. It is impossible also for the Plaintiff at Law to prevent his being examined for the Defendant; for he may waive the objection of interest. This Defendant therefore may, with some exceptions, be examined at Law by parol as effectually as here by writing. The exceptions are these. First, I cannot satisfy myself, that a Subpoena duces tecum, is an operative for the production of books, papers, and writings, as a Subpoena upon a bill in this Court. Secondly, in such a transaction as this, of considerable importance, the fact of usury being to be made out by proof of the nature and quality of the cloth, showing, that the sale was colorable, inspection may be material. But then the point is, whether upon the distinctions arising out of such circumstances the rule not to make a mere witness a Defendant, especially upon a bill for discovery, has ever been shaken. I can find no such authority. This demurrer therefore must be allowed. I will not say, as it is not necessary to determine, whether a bill for relief might not be filed, upon the ground, that the examination at Law must be of necessity defective for bringing forward all, that conscience requires; and that what is withheld is withheld by a person having an interest in the question. But I cannot find an authority, that a person can be made a party to a bill for discovery merely, to aid the Plaintiff in Equity as Defendant at Law, upon the circumstance, that the production and inspection of goods may be better compelled here.

The Demurrer was allowed.

1. With respect to the general rules, that a mere witness is not to be made a party to a suit, and that a party who answers a bill at all must answer it throughout, as well as the exceptions to those rules which justice, in particular cases, requires, see, ante, the notes to Cartwright v. Hateley, 1 V. 292. From the rule, that a person who has no interest in the subject of suit, and is a mere witness, ought not to be a party, it follows, that where a bill makes no personal demand, but seeks a decree ad rem, the bankruptcy of a defendant will be a good plea, although such bankruptcy did not take place till after the bill was filed. Whitworth v. Davis, 1 Ves. & Beat. 550; Turner v. Robinson, 1 Sim. & Stu. 4.

2. Though the interest of a witness has not been shown on the voir dire, if it come out at any period of the trial, his evidence will be rejected, unless his cross-examination has been pursued after the objection was known. Moorhouse v. De Passou, 19 Ves. 434. See note 3 to White v. Damon, 7 V. 30.

FAUQUIER v. TYNTE.

[1802, JULY 7.]

THE Court refused to permit depositions in the French language to be delivered out for the purpose of being translated (a).

Though the Court orders an original Will to be delivered out for a special purpose, as to the jurisdiction, quære, [p. 292.]

A MOTION was made, that the depositions in this cause, taken in the French language, might be delivered out to a Notary Public, to be appointed by the Court, for the purpose of being translated.

Mr. Wyatt, in support of the motion, urged the necessity of the case. The depositions being so voluminous, that the Notary could not attend at the Office without giving up all his other business. He admitted, no authority could be found; but compared it to the case, where an order has been made for delivering out an original will.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I cannot order a record out of the possession of the officer of the Court. Though in the case of a will I have followed what my predecessors have done, I never could answer the question, what I could do to the officer, if he refused to obey the order (l). —

As to the only cases in which the Court of Chancery permits its own records to be delivered out, see, ante, the note to the Anonymous case, 1 V. 152. And, as to the questionable jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery to order the original of a will to be delivered out by the officer of an ecclesiastical Court, see the note to Hodson v. _____, 6 V. 135.

WALLIS v. THOMAS.

[1802, JULY 7.]

AN omission in a decree, if perfectly of course, supplied on motion. In this instance the common direction to examine all parties upon Interrogatories being omitted, an order was made, on motion, that the Master should be at liberty to examine, &c (b).

A MOTION was made, that the usual direction for the parties to be examined upon interrogatories, as the Master shall think fit, may be added to the decree, though passed and entered. No notice had been given of this motion.

(a) 1 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 377; 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. b. 1, ch. 10, p. 303, 304.

(1) See ante, Anon. vol. i. 152, and the note. Hodson v. _____, Ford v. _____, vi. 135, 802; Williams v. Foyer, Amb. 343; Lake v. Caugfield, 3 Bro. C. C. 263; Morse v. Roach, 1 Dick. 65; Pierce v. Walker, 2 Dick. 485.

(b) 2 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.), 15, 16; post, 293, note (a).

Mr. Hart, in support of the motion, said it had been done, where it was quite of course.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, where the amendment is that, which would have been put in of course, nothing more than what is necessary for the prosecution of the point of the decree and quite of course, there was no harm in it.

Mr. Cox (Amicus Curiae) said, it had been done by Lord Alvanley in Smith v. Draper, and by the present Master of the Rolls in another case.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] however said, notice must be given; and the motion having stood over for that purpose, his Lordship finally made an order, that the Master be at liberty to examine the parties upon Interrogatories, instead of varying the decree (1).

With respect to the impropriety, in general cases, of discharging, altering, or adding to a decretal order, on motion, see, ante, note 3 to Habergham v. Vincent, 1 V. 68; the note to the Anonymous case, ante, 1 V. 93; and note 2 to Perry v. Phelps, 1 V. 251.

PICKARD v. MATTHESON.

[1802, Nov. 13.]

An omission in a decree, if perfectly of course, supplied on motion; namely, in the usual decree upon a creditor's bill against executors the direction for an account of the personal estate (a).

A MOTION was made, that the usual direction to take an account of the personal estate may be inserted in the decree. The bill was filed by creditors against executors for an account; and the Defendants submitted to account in the usual way. The usual decree was made at the Rolls for an account of what was due to the Plaintiffs and all other creditors, &c. with a direction to compute interest upon such debts as carry interest, &c.; and it was ordered, that the Defendants should transfer to the Accountant General 1000*l.* Bank Annuities admitted to be standing in their names; and farther directions were reserved: the decree omitting the direction for an account of the personal estate.

Mr. Hart, in support of the motion said, that was a [*294] mere clerical error; * and the object of the motion was to save the expense of a rehearing.

(1) See the next case, and Eyles v. Ward, You v. Townshend, 1 Dick. 58, 59; post, Newhouse v. Milford, Lane v. Hobbs, vol. xii. 456, 8.

(a) See 2 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.) 486-488; 2 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 15, 16; 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. b. 1, ch. 12, p. 349, 350, 351; Tomlins v. Polk, 1 Russ. 475; Laurence v. Cowell, 4 John. Ch. 546; Murray v. Blachford, 2 Wend. 221; Clark v. Hall, 7 Paige, 382; Gardner v. Dewing, 2 Edw. 131; Bennett v. Winter, 2 John. Ch. 205; Perry v. Phelps, ante, 1 V. 251, and note (a).

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This is so purely of course, that upon that ground I may interfere. If there was a shadow of doubt, you ought to go to the Master of the Rolls who made the decree. But it is so very clear, that you may take the order (1).

See the references given in the note to the last preceding case.

SCAWEN v. BLUNT.

[ROLLS.—1802, JULY 9, 12.]

A. TENANT for life, in case she should so long continue unmarried; in case of her marriage to her in fee; in case of her decease unmarried, to her sister B. in fee.

A. and B. and the husband of B. joined in a sale by fine.

The purchase-money was laid out in the funds in the names of trustees without any declaration of trust or agreement as to the application: nor was any notice of this fund taken in the wills of B. and her husband. B. being the survivor, made a general disposition of all her personal estate in favor of A. A., though still unmarried, held absolutely entitled to the stock (a), [p. 294.]

Contingent interest devisable, &c., [p. 300.]

SAMUEL POWELL by his will, dated the 23d of November, 1778, devised to his wife Sarah Powell his messuage, farm, and lands, and all other his estate, at Lee in Surrey, with the appurtenances; to hold the same to her and her assigns for and during the term of her natural life; and from and immediately after her decease, he gave and devised the same premises to his great niece Louisa Scawen for and during the term of her natural life, in case she should so long continue unmarried: but in case of her marriage, then he gave and devised the said messuages, &c. to her, her heirs and assigns for ever: but in case of her decease unmarried, then upon her decease he gave and devised the same to her sister Mrs. Winifred Blunt, her heirs and assigns for ever.

The testator died soon after the execution of his will. Sarah Powell took possession; and continued in possession; till * her death; then Louisa Scawen took possession. In [*295] 1788 Louisa Scawen and Winifred Blunt came to an agreement to sell the estate; and accordingly by indentures of lease and release, dated the 1st of June, 1788, and a fine, Louisa Scawen, and Samuel Blunt, the husband of Winifred Blunt, and Winifred Blunt, conveyed the estate, and their several rights and interests therein, to John Arnold for the sum of 2100*l.* There was no covenant in the indentures respecting the application of the purchase-money, or any deed of trust made in relation to it, or any notice taken, or claim set up by Blunt or his wife.

(1) See the preceding case, and the references.

(a) See post, 300, notes.

Samuel Blunt died on the 1st of January, 1800, having by his will given to his wife Winifred 1000*l.*; and appointed Henry Blunt and Winifred Blunt his executor and executrix; but did not take notice of the Bank Annuities. Henry Blunt alone proved the will. Winifred Blunt claimed her legacy of 1000*l.* She never did any act with respect to the Bank Annuities: but she died on the 2d of February, 1800; having by her will, dated the 31st of January, 1800, bequeathed to Miss Scawen all her personal estate, money, and effects, of all kinds whatsoever, of which she should die possessed, and all money due to her, or, that should become due; and she appointed Henry Blunt her executor.

The bill was filed by Louisa Scawen, who was still unmarried, against Henry Blunt and the representative of the surviving trustee; stating these circumstances; and that upon the execution of the deeds Arnold paid the purchase-money 2100*l.* to Louisa Scawen; who immediately placed it in the hands of Martin York and William Birch, the trustees and agents for the management of her affairs; who shortly after repaid 100*l.*, part thereof, to Louisa [ 296] Scawen; and invested the remainder in the * purchase of 2649*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities in their names; and paid the dividends to the Plaintiff until the death of the survivor of them. The bill prayed, that the Plaintiff may be declared absolutely entitled to the Bank Annuities and a transfer.

The Defendant Blunt by his answer stated, that he did not know, whether the money was paid to or by the Plaintiff in the presence of Samuel Blunt and his wife, or either of them. He admitted, that Samuel Blunt did no act in respect of the premises or the consideration for the sale or the annuities, other than as above mentioned at the time of the sale; and he submitted, whether under the circumstances the interest in the annuities in the event of the Plaintiff's death, unmarried, passed under the will of Samuel Blunt, or under that of Winifred Blunt.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Heald, for the Plaintiff.—The Plaintiff claims this fund, even if she should not marry, either as having become her property by the acts of Mr. and Mrs. Blunt, or under the will of Mrs. Blunt, having survived her husband; who never reduced it into possession. These parties, aware of their rights, concurred in a sale; and permitted the purchase-money to be paid to this Plaintiff solely. They do not call for any declaration of trust. The circumstance, that Mr. Blunt allowed the money to be laid out in stock by the agents of the Plaintiff, without any interference by him, is inconsistent with an intention of reserving any right to himself. That is evidence of his allowing the Plaintiff to keep it as her own; and no person claiming under him can contradict that. His conduct precludes his representative from claiming this money. There is a material distinction between the cases of the husband receiving the money, and his permitting it to be paid to trustees. In the latter case he could not get it without making a provision for his wife. But in this instance there was no title to receive it. It was incumbent upon him then to obtain a declaration of trust, particularly upon property, that was subject to contingency. It is fair to presume, that he meant to abandon his rights.

Upon the other point, this personal fund, as it turned out to be, survived to Mrs. Blunt; having never been reduced into possession by her husband. The only difficulty arises from the nature of the subject, of which this fund is the produce, real estate, under these limitations. The husband could not have done any act to affect it after his death. It changed its nature; and became money due in respect of the estate of the wife. Then it is due to the husband as a chose in action, belonging to him in right of his wife; and then the rule of law applies. The effect is leaving the property still as if it had been originally money. The interest of the wife is not gone by the fine levied, without a declaration to that effect; as in the case, where a woman levied a fine for the purpose of granting a building lease; and the houses were burnt down. The husband may join his wife in an action; and if he does, and dies before execution, the wife alone may sue out a Scire Facias.

Mr. Kenrick, for the Defendant.—The only decree, that can be made at present, is for a transfer of the fund, with liberty to apply either upon the death or marriage of the Plaintiff. Whether this property passed under the will of Samuel Blunt, or that of his wife, as there is no admission of assets of either, no other decree can be made, till some account is taken, to ascertain, whether this money is wanted to pay debts. As to the abandonment suggested, the trustees were conusant of the rights of all the parties; and were friends of the family; which is evidence, that there was no intention of abandonment. *As to the claim under Mrs. Blunt, [*298] as the survivor, this is no chose in action. After the fine levied all the interest passed out of Mr. and Mrs. Blunt. There was a new consideration; and an implied promise arose to pay to the person, who in the course of events should be entitled. That implied promise could not arise to the married woman: Abbot v. Blofield (1), Rose v. Bowler (2), Doe v. Polgreen (3). Where a new consideration arises by law in respect of any property or earnings of the wife, it arises solely to the husband; an action for such money must be in the name of the husband alone; and if the wife is joined, it is a maijoinder; if the consideration is not wholly the wife's: Brashford v. Smith (4), Fountain v. Smith (5), Holmes v. Wood (6).

In this case the husband had a contingent interest in the estate; with which he parted; as his wife parted with the fee. He

-
- (1) Cro. Jam. 644.
(2) 1 Hen. Black. 108.
(3) 1 Hen. Black. 535.
(4) Cro. Jam. 77.
(5) 2 Sid. 128.
(6) Cited 2 Wils. 424.

might have brought an action solely in his own name for the consideration ; which arose solely to the husband ; and the wife had nothing to do with it. The wife parts with the land by fine ; the only act, by which she could part with it ; and the consideration in law belongs and arises to the husband. If, when privately examined, she does not stipulate, as she might, that the consideration should arise to her, it arises in law to her husband. If it stands as at Law, and there are no circumstances to distinguish it, it survives to the husband, and not to the wife. The Anonymous Case cited (1) in Llinaston v. Lloyd (2) is exactly this case ; that, where the husband and wife sell lands of the wife, and with the money purchase other lands, that is a jointure within the Statute, 11 Hen. VII. ; the money being a chattel vested in the husband ; of which [*299] he might dispose, as he pleased. *This fund therefore belongs to the executor of the husband, and did not pass by the will of Mrs. Blunt.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—The case last cited does not apply. If the money had been paid to the husband, it would have been chattels belonging to him in his own right. But he never actually or by implication received ; unless payment to the Plaintiff can be considered payment to him, as payment to his agent would have been ; a payment to his use. This case is new in the circumstances ; the money being the property of the wife ; and changing its quality by the act of the husband it still is money arising from her estate ; the property of the wife not reduced into possession, unless payment to the Plaintiff can be considered as payment to the husband ; as it cannot ; for to a certain extent she has beyond all doubt a right to receive it. It was paid to her agents by the purchaser, subject to the trusts belonging to it. The husband could not have brought an action. It was liable to her action only. He had some interest, but very remote ; which could not at all affect the right of the wife.

July 12. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS. [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—If it was necessary to decide this cause upon the question as to an implied gift or abandonment by Mr Blunt of whatever interest he might have had, some inquiry would be necessary as to the circumstances of the transaction. But it is not necessary for the Plaintiff to resort to that ground of claim. All the parties interested in the estate concurred in a sale ; but without any declaration or agreement as to the manner, in which the produce should be divided, employed, or secured. The consequence is, there resulted to all the same interest in the produce of the real estate, that they had in the [* 300] real estate * itself. The Plaintiff, if she had married, would have been entitled to the whole ; because in that event she would have had the fee simple of the estate. If she did not marry, she would be entitled to the interest for her life ; and upon her death without being married it would go to her sister Mrs. Blunt. All they have done is to convert the land into money ; leaving untouched the disposition by the will ; to which we must still resort to ascertain the interests of the parties. This brings it to the same point, as if he had originally given money in the same manner as he has given the land. Except by some special agreement no one could claim one shilling ; for the only present right is that of the Plaintiff ; and that only to the interest, not to any part of the money itself. Mr. Blunt could not have said, part of the money belonged to his wife, and consequently to him in her right. If there was any part of the price, which she could immediately have claimed, it would have immediately become his, and would have vested in him ; and whatever became of it, he might have claimed it, and have followed it as his own. But the utmost he or any of the parties could insist upon against each other was, that it should be laid out upon the trusts of the will. Now, being paid to trustees without any declaration or agreement, the implied or resulting trusts must be those of the will. Then it is in nature of a chose in action. The husband has done nothing to reduce it into possession. Therefore it survived to the wife (a) ; and though a contingent interest, it was devisable, &c. and passed by the will (1) (b). The Plaintiff therefore unites in herself every possible right to the money : but a transfer cannot be directed till some inquiry as to the debts, funeral expenses, &c. of Mrs. Blunt. Direct that inquiry ; and reserve farther directions (2).

(1) Palmer, 217.

(2) Palmer, 213.

1. The interest in stock in the government funds is a mere right: when such an interest belongs to a married woman, and her husband does not reduce it into his own possession, at his death it will survive to the wife: see, ante, note 3 to Kirby v. Potter, 4 V. 748. For the husband has only a temporary right to any choses en action belonging to his wife; such property may be so circumstanced as that the husband may make it his own, by reducing it into possession in his own life-time; or that he may release it, and thereby prevent his wife's claims by survivorship: but property of this kind may be so circumstanced (as it was in the principal case) that the husband could not, if he were so disposed, either release it or reduce it into his own possession; and, whenever the husband had it not in his power to alter the property in his life-time, or omitted to do so although he had the power, such choses en action will survive to the wife and her representatives :

(a) As to wife's right by survivorship to stock not reduced into possession by her husband. Ryland v. Smith, 1 Mylne & Cr. 53; Snowhill v. Snowhill, 1 Green, Ch. 30; Clancy, Rights of Women, (Am. ed.), 134, 135; 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 609, 610.

As to her right by survivorship to a legacy or distributive share in an estate, see Blount v. Bestland, ante, 5 V. 515, and notes to that case.

(1) Ante, Perry v. Phelps, vol. i. 251.

(b) 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 636. Legacies may be vested and of course transmissible, though contingent. Caldwell v. Kinkead, 1 B. Monroe, 231; Lister v. Bradley, 1 Hare, 10; Barnes v. Allen, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 181, 182, and notes. See Rose v. Sowerby, Taml. 376; Cudworth v. Hall, 3 Desaus. 256; O'Driscoll v. Koger, 2 Desaus. 295; Dawson v. Kille, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 123, note (a); Clapp v. Stoughton, 10 Pick. 463; Ferson v. Dodge, 23 Pick. 267.

(2) Blount v. Bestland, ante, vol. v. 515.

Burnett v. Kinaston, 2 Freem. 240, 2nd edit.; in the notes to which case other authorities are cited. See, also, the late case of Purdew v. Jackson, 1 Russ. 25.

2. As to the general rule, that interests in contingency are devisable, see note 4 to Perry v. Phelps, 1 V. 251.

[* 301]

DAY, Ex parte.

[1802, JULY 12, 13.]

BOND upon a loan of stock, to secure a re-transfer and the dividends in the mean time.

The obligor becoming a bankrupt after the day mentioned in the condition, proof was admitted for the amount of the dividends due before the bankruptcy, and the value of the stock at the date of the Commission, by analogy to the case of annuities, [p. 301.]

Arrears of annuity or any other debt insurable, [p. 302.]

JOSEPH DAY lent and transferred to John Elvy the sum of 500*l.* 5 per cent. Navy Annuities; and Elvy, in order to secure the replacing and re-transfer of the said annuities to Day by a bond, dated the 19th of April, 1798, became bound to Day in 1000*l.* conditioned, that if Elvy, his executors, &c. should on or before the 25th of March next, transfer to Day, his executors, &c. 500*l.* 5 per cent. Navy Annuities, and likewise should answer, pay, and make good, to Day, his executors, &c. all dividends, interest, and produce, which in the mean time should or might be paid, made, or received, on account of the sum so lent by Day; or which he, his executors, &c. could have received, or would have been entitled to, in case the stock had remained as his property, the obligation should be void.

The stock was not replaced in the life of Day, nor since his death. Elvy became a bankrupt. The executors of Day attempted to prove as a debt under the commission so much as was equivalent to, and would have replaced, said 500*l.* Navy Annuities at the date of the commission, together with so much as was due for dividends accrued thereon: but the assignees objecting to their proving any larger sum than was equivalent to the Navy Annuities on the day mentioned in the condition of the bond, the Commissioners only permitted a claim to be entered; upon which the petition was presented; praying, that the petitioners may be admitted to prove such sum as will be equivalent to the said 500*l.* Navy Annuities at the date of the commission, together with such sum as may remain due to the estate of Day for the dividends, which had accrued thereon.

Mr. Romilly, in support of the Petition—Mr. Cox, for the Assignees.

[* 302] July 13th. *The LORD CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I have been furnished with a case before the Lords Commissioners

Ashhurst and Wilson in 1792, Ex parte Leach; in which the order was to prove the value of the stock at the date of the order. That cannot be right; for that makes it depend upon the time, at which the party chooses to apply. The date of the day, on which the bond becomes forfeited, is not right; for then the value of the stock at that time must be estimated; and I do not see, how proof can be admitted for the dividends in the intermediate time; for it must be a debt carrying or not carrying interest; it cannot be a debt carrying dividend. The proof as to annuities secured by bond (1) affords the same principle. If there is a breach of the condition, and you take the value at that time, you cannot give proof of the arrears of the annuity as such: but there also it must be a debt carrying or not carrying interest at that day. If the time, at which the party chooses to apply, is taken, suppose, he does not apply, till dividends subsequent to the bankruptcy become payable, they could not be proved: for this reason; that the debt must be due at the time the Commission issues. This distinction was acknowledged in the older law as to annuities; for formerly a man might insure the growing payments of an annuity, but not the arrears; which were a debt: the former being subject to this contingency; that if the life failed, the annuity would be gone; to which the arrears, that had become a debt, were not liable. But since Edie v. Anderson, before Lord Kenyon, you may insure arrears of annuity or any other debt (2). Suppose an annuity, upon which there were no arrears: the annuity must be valued at the time of the Commission. It will be said, that is for the benefit of the annuitant, if the annuity is for life; and that is true in general; though the state of health may make a great difference.

* Upon the whole the best rule will be to permit the [*303] proof for such dividends as became due before the bankruptcy, as a debt, and the value of the stock at the day the Commission issued. This is liable to some objection, I admit; but in a less degree than any other rule; and it is more analogous to what the Court would have done before any statute respecting bonds with penalties at law. In those cases the party would have been relieved against the penalty by making good the condition: viz. by paying past dividends and replacing the stock. A Commission of bankruptcy is to some intents an execution. The penalty therefore is due at the time of the Commission; and against that there would be relief by replacing the stock, and repaying the former dividends. Without interfering with proceedings in the Court of King's Bench this rule must prevail in bankruptcy, to preserve the analogy to annuities (3).

1. WITH respect to the admission of annuity creditors to prove under a commission of bankrupt, taken out against the grantor of the annuities, see, ante, the

(1) By stat. 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 54, the value of any annuity may be proved. See, as to the principle of valuation, Ex parte Whitehead, post, vol. xix. 557; 1 Mer. 10, 127; 2 Rose, 258.

(2) Equitable interest insurable, post, vol. xvii. 253.

(3) Post, Ex parte King, Ex parte Mare, vol. viii. 334, 5; Ex parte Coming, grounds must depend on the special circumstances which may be apparent from the nature of the case itself, or be disclosed upon affidavit: Akers v. Chancey, 2 Brown, 273. But an affidavit that the party applying cannot safely go to trial at law, or meet a question in equity, without such a commission, will not be a sufficient reason for granting it; for this allegation would not show that defence could be obtained, or was even expected, from any disclosure which an examination under such commission was likely to produce. The affidavit should go on to specify reasonable grounds for the application; and, it seems, the affidavit will be defective unless it states the defendant's belief that the commission, if granted, will produce material evidence: Jessup v. Duport, Barnard, 193; Moody v. Steele, 2 Anstr. 386. See, also, Rex v. Le Chevalier D'Eon, 3 Burr. 1515. Possibly, however, the materiality of the evidence, to obtain which a commission is sought, would be taken for granted when the opposite party has not denied it: Cahill v. Shepherd, 12 Ves. 335. A distinction appears to have been intimated between pointing out the sources whence a party expects to derive information which he has shown to be material, and a specification of the names of those who will be able to give such evidence: Brown v. Murray, 4 Dowl. & Ryl. 832. And the Court of King's Bench have declared, that it is not usual, and certainly not requisite, to name the witnesses whom the party applying deems necessary, and proposes to examine: Buckingham v. Bankes, 4 Dowl. & Ryl. 832: though that appears to have been formerly required by the Court of Chancery: Anonymous case, 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 15. And it is by no means settled that it would now be dispensed with, notwithstanding the admitted force of the objections to insisting on such a condition: Mendizabel v. Machado, 2 Sim. & Stu. 487. Jeffries, C. decided, that an affidavit in support of an application for a commission to examine witnesses beyond sea, should mention the point to which they can materially depose: Anonymous case, 1 Vern. 334. And in Moody v. Steele, 2 Anstr. 386, it was said, the affidavit should show in what manner the testimony sought is material: but, mentioning the point to be examined to, generally, and even showing in what manner the evidence is material, are conditions very distinguishable from one that requires the affidavit to contain a statement of the evidence expected; if that is to be understood as tying the witnesses down to the matter stated, though more might be within their knowledge than the party applying for the commission was aware of, and thus, perhaps, shutting out the evidence most material to justice: Oldham v. Carleton, 4 Brown, 89. The case just cited, therefore, does not appear to be altogether irreconcilable, as to the argument upon which it proceeded, with Mendizabel v. Machado, 2 Sim. & Stu. 484, where it was determined, that an affidavit in support of a motion for commission to examine a witness abroad, should name the points to which it is proposed to examine him; the reported terms of the two decisions certainly cannot be reconciled, and, of course, the latest must guide the practice. Authority apart, there seems, indeed, abundant reason why the Court should be informed to what points the proposed examination is expected to be material, in order to determine whether any reasonable grounds are laid for the application. But it is by no means a necessary consequence that, because an affidavit must show a sufficient reason for the interference of the Court, therefore, when a commission is granted, the examination of the witnesses shall be confined to the points stated in the affidavit.

2. When an injunction bill prays a commission to examine witness resident out of the jurisdiction, it is not the practice of the Court of Chancery (unless there are special circumstances in the case) to order the party to pay into court any money which may be the subject of litigation: Cock v. Donovan, 3 Ves. & Bea. 76. In this respect, the practice of the Court of Exchequer is different: Ebden v. Prince, 8 Price, 292; as it also is in not granting a commission, where the plaintiff seeks any equitable relief, until the answer of the defendant comes in: Noble v. Garland, Coop. 224; S. C. 19 Ves. 376. Though, where no injunction is prayed, and the suit is for a discovery and commission merely (the plaintiff in equity being also plaintiff at law,) a commission will be granted by the Court of Exchequer to examine witnesses abroad before answer: Ibbetson v. Richardson, 1 McClel. 582. But, in cases where any equitable relief is sought, the Court of Exchequer is not in the habit of issuing a commission before issue joined; whilst the Court of Chancery says, if the defendant in equity be in contempt, his default shall not deprive the plaintiff of a commission: (King v. Allen, 4 Mad. 247;) or if the defendant, though not in contempt, has obtained the usual orders for time, the plaintiff shall not, by that indulgence, be prevented from examining witnesses abroad: (Cheminant v. De la Cour, 1 Mad. 211); but, as soon as the regular time for putting in an answer has expired, a commission may be applied for: Bowden v. Hodge, 2 Swanst. 263; and see, post, the note to Palmer v. Lord Aylesbury, 15 Ves. 176.

3. Courts of Equity are not, in general, disposed to lend their assistance to collect evidence for some future cause: Finch v. Finch, 2 Ves. Sen. 494. Bills to perpetuate testimony are not ordinarily entertained for the purpose of being used on a future occasion, unless where it seems absolutely necessary, to prevent a failure of justice, the subject not admitting immediate investigation: Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & Stu. 114. And a bill for a commission to examine witnesses abroad, in aid of a trial at law, where a present action is sustainable, may be demurred to if it do not aver that an action is pending: Angell v. Angell, 1 Sim. & Stu. 89, 91; though, of course, where a plaintiff appears to have a right, and alleges an intention to bring an action as soon as he obtains the discovery necessary to maintain it with effect, there can be no reason for refusing him the requisite previous discovery: Mayor of London v. Levy, 8 Ves. 404. This was the ground of the decision in Moodaly v. Morton, 2 Dick. 652; S. C. 1 Brown, 471.

4. Where a plaintiff in equity has filed a bill for a discovery, and also for a commission to examine witnesses abroad, in aid of a defence at law to an action for a libel, it does not necessarily follow that, because the defendant in equity cannot be compelled to give a discovery, therefore a commission cannot be granted: Thorpe v. Macaulay, 5 Mad. 230. For a man may bring a bill to perpetuate testimony, in many cases where he cannot bring a bill for relief: Earl of Suffolk v. Green, 1 Atk. 450; and a defendant who, on the record, has demurred to relief only, cannot, if that demurrer be over-ruled, put in a demurrer ore tenus to discovery, which he has not before made the subject of demurrer: Pitts v. Short, 17 Ves. 216: see, ante, the note to Renison v. Ashley, 2 Ves. 454. But a demurrer will be allowed to a bill for a discovery, and commissions to examine witnesses, in aid of the defence of two separate actions, for two separate libels; because the depositions taken under the commissions must be published and used at the trial of that one of the two actions which first takes place; and the premature publication of this testimony would be manifestly dangerous to truth and justice upon the trial of the second action: Shackell v. Macaulay, 2 Sim. & Stu. 36; Dew v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & Stu. 115.

HANSON v. GARDINER.

[1802, JULY 15.]

INJUNCTION obtained on affidavits against cutting, and pasturing cattle, in a wood; the Plaintiff praying the injunction as tenant in fee, or as lord of the manor inclosing under the statute: the Defendants denying the former title; and as to the latter claiming common of pasture and estovers; and stating, that after the inclosure sufficient common of pasture would not be left; the Plaintiff having before the bill filed been nonsuited in an action of trespass; and entered into an agreement with some of the tenants. The injunction dissolved upon the answer. Whether the original and new affidavits could be read in such a case, quære (a).

Lessee committed waste by opening a mine; and continued the work into other land of the lessor, not comprised in his lease. Injunction as to both (b), [p. 308.] Injunction in the case of trespass to prevent irreparable mischief (c), [p. 308.]

(a) It is said that no affidavits can be read for the purpose of contradicting the answer. 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. b. 3, ch. 5, p. 642. See farther, ib., p. 641; Isaac v. Humpage, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 463-465, and notes; Eden on Injunct. (2d Am. ed.), 136; Eastburn v. Kirk, 1 John. Ch. 444.

Where the answer denies the facts on which the complainant's equity rests, the injunction will be dissolved. Reid v. Gifford, 1 Hopk. 416; Gibson v. Tilton, 1 Bland. 355.

Not, however, unless the denial is positive. 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. b. 3, ch. 5, p. 640, 641; Ward v. Van Bokkelin, 1 Paige, 100; Wakeman v. Gillespy, 5 Paige, 112; Roberts v. Anderson, 2 John. Ch. 204; Hollister v. Barkley, 9 N. Hamp. 230.

The above rule as to dissolving the injunction on the coming in of the answer is not inflexible. The granting and continuing of injunctions rest very much on the sound discretion of the Court, to be governed by the nature of the case. Moore v. Hylton, Dev. Eq. 429; Bank of Monroe v. Schermerhorn, 1 Clark, 303; Tong v. Oliver, 1 Bland, 199; Williams v. Hall, ib., 195; Hollister v. Barkley, ubi supra.

The policy of preventing irreparable mischief has introduced an exception to the rule respecting reading affidavits in opposition to the answer, in cases of waste, or of mischief analogous to waste, but this exception does not extend to questions of title. 1 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.), 596; Morphett v. Jones, 19 Ves. 350; Peacock v. Peacock, 16 Ves. 49; Eastburn v. Kirk, 1 John. Ch. 444; Strathmore v. Bowes, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 89, 90, and notes.

But it is now quite settled and has long been settled, that affidavits may be read against the answer in cases of waste. Robinson v. Lord Byron, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 589, note (3). See also Isaac v. Humpage, ante, 1 V. 427, and note (a).

(b) Eden on Injunct. (2d Am. ed.) 231, 232, 233. In Mitchell v. Dors, ante, 6 Ves. 147, Lord Eldon granted a writ of injunction against a trespasser, on the authority of this case before Lord Thurlow. But in Smith v. Collyer, 8 Ves. 89, Lord Eldon refused an injunction where the title was disputed. In this last case Lord Eldon says, "there is no instance of an injunction in trespass, till the case before Lord Thurlow upon a mine, which, though a trespass, was very near waste. In that case there was no dispute whatever about the right." See also Norway v. Rowe, 19 Ves. 146; Attaquin v. Fish, 5 Metcalf, 148, 149; Livingston v. Livingston, 6 John. Ch. 500, 501.

(c) Eden on Injunct. (2d Am. ed.), 229, 232, 233; Ingraham v. Dunnell, 5 Metcalf, 124, 125; Attaquin v. Fish, 5 Metcalf, 148, 149.

An injunction will not be allowed in order to prevent the repetition of a trespass in entering and cutting down timber, on land of which the plaintiff is in possession as owner, where the plaintiff has an adequate remedy at law; though it seems an injunction may be granted in a case of trespass, under very special circumstances. Stevens v. Beekman, 1 John. Ch. 318.

As where the trespass has grown into a nuisance, or where the principle of Injunction in the case of trespass to prevent the multiplicity of suits (a), [p. 310.]

The Attorney General, [Hon. Spencer Perceval], and Sir Thomas Turton, for the Plaintiff, showed cause against dissolving the injunction upon the answer put in. The prayer of the bill was for an injunction against cutting down timber or wood in a wood or coppice, consisting of above 130 acres, within the manor of Bromley, and depasturing cattle therein. The injunction was granted by the Master of the Rolls upon affidavits. The Plaintiff represented himself as seised in fee of this wood and coppice; which were formerly inclosed; but that some time ago the inclosure was thrown down; and considerable damage done to him by the cattle of the commoners trespassing thereon. The Defendants contended, that the Plaintiff was not seised in fee. The Plaintiff farther insisted upon his right as Lord of the Manor under the Statute of Merton (1). The Defendants stated, that there are large patches of pasture within the wood; upon which they claimed as commoners a right of pasture; and that after this inclosure there would not be sufficient common of pasture. They also claimed common of estovers; and denied that the wood and coppice were ever inclosed. They stated various encroachments by the Plaintiff; that for some [ 306] time they acquiesced: but finding his encroachments increase, they at length resisted; which produced an action of trespass by the Plaintiff; which was tried at the Summer Assizes 1801; and the Plaintiff was nonsuited. He afterwards, having permitted the enjoyment for some time, gave notice that he would inclose under the Statute (2) of George II. The inclosure was ordered at the Sessions under an agreement with some of the commoners: but the Defendants appealed; and that order was quashed.

The Attorney General, [Hon. S. Perceval], and Sir Thomas Turton pressed to have the injunction continued to the hearing, and to have two issues directed; first, to try the right of the Defendants, as commoners; and secondly, whether, supposing the wood in-irreparable mischief or of multiplicity of suits among numerous claimants, is applicable. Ib.; Amelung v. Seekamp, 9 Gill & John. 468. See also upon this subject, Robinson v. Lord Byron, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 588, 589, notes (a) and (b), and cases cited; New York Printing Co. v. Fitch, 1 Paige, 97; Hart v. Mayor &c. of Albany, 3 Paige, 213; Livingston v. Livingston, 6 John. Ch. 497; Jerome v. Ross, 7 John. Ch. 315; Dwight v. Waters, 1 Bland, 576.

The practice of issuing injunctions in cases of trespass, on the principle of irreparable mischief, has now become extremely common. See Courthorpe v. Mappleiden, 10 Ves. 290; Crockford v. Alexander, 15 Ves. 138; Earl Cooper v. Baker, 17 Ves. 128; Grey v. Duke of Northumberland, ib., 281; De Salis v. Crossan, 1 Ba. & Be. 188; Whitechurch v. Holwoorthy, 19 Ves. 213; Norway v. Rowe, ib., 144, and the cases cited above.

But the powers of the Supreme Court of Massachusetts, to hear and determine in equity all suits and matters concerning waste, where there is not an adequate remedy at law, extend to cases of technical waste only, and not to those trespasses which Courts, that have full chancery powers, restrain by injunction. Attaquin v. Fish, 5 Metcalf, 140.

(a) See note (c) above.

(1) Stat. 20 Hen. III. c. 4.

(2) Stat. 29 Geo. II. c. 36.

closed, there would be sufficient common left for the tenants. They insisted, that the principle of the bill was not new : Arthington v. Fawkes (1). Weekes v. Slake (2). Shakspear v. Peppin (3). In the last of those cases Lord Kenyon read a manuscript note of Lord Chief Justice Willes ; laying down the broad proposition, that a man may inclose against common of pasture notwithstanding common of estovers.

They also insisted, that they were entitled to maintain the injunction, not only by the affidavits originally filed, but also by fresh affidavits ; citing Robinson v. Lord Byron (4), Isaac v. Humpage (5), and Gibbs v. Cole (6).

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Pemberton, for the Defendants.—This bill is new. Such an injunction has not been granted in [* 307] * modern times. The cases in Vernon, as there stated, are extravagant ; that the lord making a new inclosure, and at once shutting out the commoners, shall have an injunction immediately, before the right is established at law. There must have been some ground ; as multiplicity of suits, &c. The statute of Merton and the statute 29th Geo. II. both relate only to common of pasture. In Robinson v. Lord Byron either the Court was to interpose, or the mills were to be drowned : but except in cases of such extreme necessity affidavits are not to be admitted. So, in Strathmore v. Bowes (7) they were offered to show the nature and extent of the waste threatened. But affidavits cannot be read in such a case as this, to support the injunction against the answer. The case of Isaac v. Humpage stands upon a peculiar ground ; though certainly that was a very gross case.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This bill for an injunction is not like a bill between lord and tenant, praying the establishment of rights, and an injunction till, or at, the hearing, as auxiliary to the rights : this bill not stating the relation between the Plaintiff and the tenants ; but simply praying an injunction. The law as to injunctions has changed very much ; and lately they have been granted much more liberally than formerly they were. Formerly, when legal rights were set up to the extent, in which they are set up in this case, the Court were very tender in granting injunctions (8). I remember, when in a case of trespass, unless it grew to a nuisance, an injunction would have been refused ; and even in the case of waste, if by temporary acts, from time to time merely, the subject of [* 308] an action, and not bringing along with it irreparable * mis-

(1) 2 Vern. 356.

(2) 2 Vern. 301.

(3) 6 Term Rep. B. R. 741.

(4) 1 Bro. C. C. 588.

(5) 3 Bro. C. C. 463, ante, vol. i. 427.

(6) 3 P. Will. 254. See Mr. Cox's note.

(7) 2 Bro. C. C. 88 ; Mr. Cox's note, 3 P. Will. 255.

(8) See ante, Pillsworth v. Hepton, Davies v. Leo, vol. vi. 51, 784, and the note, 52.

chief (1), Lord Hardwicke thought, it was granted only as following the relief. Lord Thurlow had great difficulty as to trespass. I have a note of a remarkable case, in which the name of one of the parties was Flamang. There was a demise of close A. to a tenant for life; the lessor being landlord of an adjoining close B. The tenant dug a mine in the former close. That was waste from the privity. But when we asked an injunction against his digging in the other close, though a continuation of the working in the former close, Lord Thurlow hesitated much; but did at last grant the injunction: first from the irreparable ruin of the property, as a mine; secondly, as it was a species of trade; and thirdly, upon the principle of this Court enjoining in matter of trespass, where irreparable damage is the consequence (2).

This led to Robinson v. Lord Byron and the other cases; in which also this principle operated; that unless there was some jurisdiction to prevent it, there would be a great failure of justice in the country. The ground of that case was irreparable mischief; and irreparable mischief, that would have been done, before there could have been any trial at law as to the right claimed to let off the water. Isaac v. Humpage is a case upon its own particular circumstances (3); certainly not standing upon the notion of irreparable waste. Mr. Justice Buller put it upon fraud. It does not appear exactly, how he applied that to the case: but it certainly is not at all connected with what is here stated. If this is to be considered upon trespass alone, an injunction would not be granted, merely because asked for, without stating distinctly, that it was upon trespass alone. If it is not to be so considered, then it is a bill brought by the lord of the manor; * which must be taken to admit, either, that there are rights of common of pasture and estovers, or, that it may so turn out; insisting against those rights upon an inclosure made under the Statute of Merton or other authority. It is difficult to state, what he is to say as to common of estovers; this case stating, that he has a right to preclude them from ingress, &c.; denying therefore their right to estovers. After the cases cited from Vernon I am not disposed to say, the lord may not file a bill; stating, that he has approved under the statute; and left sufficient common of pasture; and by the operation of the statute the inclosure is become his exclusive soil, &c.; and to say, that a bill will not lie, to avoid multiplicity of suits, not in the nature of waste. But the material question is, what the prayer ought to be, whether merely for an injunction, or for the establishment of his exclusive right under the statute, and to have that right declared. I never heard, that a mere bill for an injunction would have the effect of a bill for establishing the right against all others; and then it stands upon a different principle. In those cases the Court would have done a very strong thing in restraining even common of pasture till the trial unless upon strong, probable, and pregnant evidence, that the commoners would not suffer in the mean time; and that the event would in all probability be, that there was sufficient common of pasture left. Of that there must have been evidence far beyond what there is here.

(1) See ante, vol. vi. 89, 701, 705, 706.

(2) Mitchell v. Dors, ante, vol. vi. 147, and the note.

(3) As to the authority of that case, see the note, ante, vol. i. 431.

As to the common of estovers, the affidavits hardly verify one fact. An injunction cannot be had upon the mere apprehension, that the Defendants mean to do a great deal of mischief by going into the wood and cutting down, when they deny the intention to cut, and that they mean to do more than according to their accustomed right. That principle has repeatedly been repudiated;

[*310] particularly by Lord Kenyon in Strathmore v. Bowes.

In that respect these affidavits, except as to one Defendant, are insufficient. With respect to the damage, where a common runs through a wood, it is well known, that the cattle pick up a great deal in the glades; and if damage is done thereby to the young wood, it is not injury; for it is the consequence of the right. The affidavits do not deny the right of common. They do not admit it. But the bill stating, that it was claimed, but never enjoyed, I should have thought those affidavits insufficient as to all the Defendants; and the only questions would have been, whether upon the ground of injunctions granted against trespass the injunction might be given against that Defendant, who has threatened to cut down all the woods and fences; and yet it would be doubtful even against him: the bill bringing forward a semblance of title to do many of the acts he said he would do.

The principle as to the multiplicity of suits is very clearly stated in Lord Teynham v. Herbert (1); that in these cases there would be no end of bringing actions of trespass; and so it might be frequently; for there might be very different rights of common, and very different justifications. One might have it for cattle levant and couchant; another for common without stint, &c. So is The Mayor of York v. Pilkington (2). Yet there is a great difference, when, instead of filing a bill in the first instance, and submitting to this Court to regulate the enjoyment in the mean time, he goes first to law; and, having failed there, comes here, not to establish his right at the hearing, but to prevent their enjoyment till the hearing. In [*311] this case, a justification upon a right to common of pasture and estovers, the Plaintiff permits himself to be nonsuited.

The negligence of the agent is too slender a ground for deciding against persons, who have till the trial been in the exercise of the right, that, the trial is to weigh nothing in support of it. It is a trial at Law. Suppose, this bill had been filed before an action, and I had granted an injunction upon the affidavits till the trial of an action directed by me; and there was a nonsuit: it would be extraordinary after that to apply for a continuation of the injunction : and the Court would have some reason to reproach itself for having restrained the exercise of the right in the mean time. I think myself authorized to take what passed at Law, as if an action had been directed by this Court. After that nonsuit the Plaintiff opens the place inclosed ; and admits their right by permitting the enjoyment. Then he makes an agreement for a compensation for shutting them out ; as far as it goes, an additional admission, at least not a denial of the right. His conduct therefore at and since the trial instead of affirming the allegations of the bill renders them improbable ; and it is no answer, that it proceeded from mistaken advice, or advice not followed up ; when there is so much evidence of right of common of pasture and estovers ; the bill too alleging that claim : no negative of the right, to be put in the balance against the nonsuit upon that very point permitted by the Plaintiff ; the answer of the Defendants ; no passage in any one of the affidavits, which I look at entirely without prejudice to the question, whether I ought to look at them, or not, containing any assertion of marks of ancient inclosures, and that the cattle did not pasture here, as far as they could, while it was uninclosed : the Defendants swearing to the enjoyment of the right of pasture ; and in this way ; that if the 130 acres are inclosed, they will not have sufficient common of pasture ; upon which there is no contradiction whatsoever.

(1) 2 Atk. 483.

(2) 1 Atk. 282.

* The injunction must be dissolved ; and if there is any [*312], hardship as to the intermediate enjoyment, it is better, that it should fall upon the Plaintiff than upon the Defendants.

1. THE old rule, that an injunction to stay waste, or acts in the nature of waste, could only be granted when the parties stood in the relation of landlord and tenant, and not where the party doing the act complained of was a mere stranger, has been relaxed ; and the relaxation stands upon sound principle ; for, in many cases, irremediable mischief might be done to the inheritance, if an injunction were refused : see, ante, note 3, to Mayor of London v. Bolt, 5 V. 129, and the note to Smith v. Collyer, 8 Ves. 819. And a lord of a manor may, in respect of his manorial rights, obtain an injunction against trespass, in the nature of waste, which goes to deprive him of part of the very substance of his inheritance : Earl Cowper v. Baker, 17 Ves. 128 ; for that is the ground upon which, in such cases, injunctions are granted, and affidavits allowed to be read in support of them : the defendant might possibly be able to pay for the mischief done, if it could ultimately be proved that his acts were tortious ; but, if any thing is about to be abstracted which cannot be restored in specie, no man ought to be liable to have that taken away which cannot be replaced, merely because he may possibly recover (what others may deem) an equivalent in money : Berkeley v. Brymer, 9 Ves. 356. But it has been held, that a motion in restraint of waste cannot be sustained, unless the party making the application sets forth and verifies an express and positive title in himself ; see, ante, the note to Price v. Williams, 1 V. 406. As to the cases in which affidavits may be read in support of an injunction to stay waste, and at what time such affidavits should be filed, see note 2, Isaac v. Humpage, 1 V. 427. The first note to that case shows, that it is itself of no weight as a general authority in questions of waste, not involving particular circumstances of fraud.

2. Neither vague apprehension of an intention to commit waste ; nor information given of such an intention by a third person, who merely states his belief, but not the grounds of his belief, will sustain an application for an injunction. The affidavits should go, not necessarily, indeed, to positive acts, but to explicit threats. The court never grants injunctions on the notion that they will do no harm to the defendant, if he does not intend to commit the act in question; but an injunction will not issue unless sufficient grounds are shown to call for it: Hanry v. M'Entire, 11 Ves. 54; Coffin v. Coffin, Jacob's Rep. 72.

3. In order to prevent multiplicity of actions, a bill in equity may be sustained by a lord of a manor, against the whole of the tenants of a manor, or by several of the tenants against the lord, for the determination of a general right and common duty: Chaffin v. Gauden, 2 Freem. 191; Powell v. Powis, 1 Younge & Jerv. 165: for, in such cases, this bill is in the nature of a bill of peace, which is unquestionably a proper bill: Filton v. Lord Macclesfield, 1 Vern. 283; Euelme Hospital v. The Town of Andover, 1 Vern. 267; Howe v. The Tenants of Broomsgrove, 1 Vern. 22.

KING, Ex parte.

[1802, JULY 6, 15, 19.]

A PERSON attending under a summons of Commissioners of Bankruptcy privileged from arrest.

Ordered, that the parties arresting, and who had lodged Detainers, having notice, should discharge him, [p. 312.]

The attorney having undertaken to indemnify the officers, and they having acted under that, guilty of a contempt; and ordered to pay all costs out of pocket, [p. 312.]

The Lord Chancellor also intimated, that a creditor attending to prove his debt, though not under a summons, is entitled to privilege (a), [p. 312.]

Party attending his own suit privileged from arrest, [p. 314.]

Bankrupt's privilege from arrest in attending the Commissioners, independent of the stat. 5 Geo. II., [p. 314.]

A MOTION was made, that John King may be discharged out of custody; and that the persons concerned in arresting him may be committed for their contempt.

The affidavits in support of the motion stated, that King was arrested in Guildhall; where he was attending the Commissioners under a Commission of Bankruptcy against Lathropp, for the purpose of proving a debt, and attending under a summons from the Commissioners. Upon application to the Commissioners for protection they refused to interfere, but gave notice to the officers, that they were proceeding at their peril. The affidavits also stated, that the officers said, they had an indemnity; that they did not care for being committed; and would execute the writ at all risks.

Several Detainers had been lodged against King by other creditors subsequent to the arrest.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Pemberton, in support of the motion mentioned Arding v. Flower (1) and Meekins v. Smith (2); where it

(a) Selby v. Hills, 8 Bingh. 166. See as to privilege from arrest, Snelling v. Watrous, 2 Paige, 314; Ex parte Hawkins, ante, 4 V. 691; Orchard's case, 5 Russ. 159; 1 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 389-391.

One attending Court as a witness, not having been summoned, is not privileged from arrest, although he has a writ of protection. M'Neil's case, 6 Mass. 264.

(1) 8 Term Rep. B. R. 534.

(2) 1 H. Black. 636.

was held, that a person attending the Court for any fair purpose having relation to a cause is protected.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Cooke, against the motion, cited Kinder v. Williams (1).

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—Lord Rosslyn's orders were, that the party shall forthwith discharge him; and that seems to be right. There is this difference. Where the application is to affect only the creditor arresting, the Court may order the Defendant to be discharged forthwith: but, where there are other detainers, the Court must hear those persons; in order to see, whether those detainers grow out of the original arrest. Accordingly Lord Rosslyn's order in the case from Bristol (2) was, that they do forthwith discharge him; and that is according to Lord Hardwicke's recommendation to discharge the man from the arrest; intimating, that if the party did not, the Court would order, that he should do so; and that is the prudent course; for, if the Chancellor has jurisdiction to order the discharge, and orders the discharge as the act of the party, there must be of course an end of all farther question between the party and the sheriff. The case of Kinder v. Williams does not decide any thing against this application: amounting only to this; that the case was not sufficiently laid before the Court to satisfy them, that the Commissioners of Bankrupt were a Court of Justice; upon which they state no opinion; and they refuse to interfere; the application not being made in the right place: the Court, to which the application was made, not being a Court, of which any contempt was committed. Lord Northington (3) goes a great way to intimate, that the Commissioners could themselves discharge; and it deserves great consideration, before it is said, the creditor shall not be protected; for if the law obliges a man, or gives him an opportunity, to demand his debt in bankruptcy, and prescribes the particular * mode of making that demand, and that mode [*314] requires his personal attendance before the Commissioners, the same protection is necessary as he would be entitled to in attending any suit of his own in a Court of Justice (4) (a).

(1) 4 Term Rep. B. R. 377.

(2) Ante, Ex parte Parker, vol. iii. 554; Ex parte Hawkins, iv. 691.

(3) Ex parte Stow, 13th November, 1762. Stated 2 Black. 1142.

(4) Ante, Bromley v. Holland, vol. v. 2; Moore v. Booth, iii. 350; see the note, 351; post, Ex parte Ledwich, viii. 598.

(a) Parties attending to their causes in Court are privileged, cuncto, morando, et redeundo, and will be discharged, if arrested. M'Neil's case, 6 Mass. 245, 264; S. C. 3 Mass. 286; Hurst's case, 4 Dall. 387; Harris v. Grantham, Coxe, 142; Bright v. Fisher, Peters, C. C. 41; Commonwealth v. Ronald, 4 Call, 97; Richards v. Goodson, 2 Virgin. Ca. 381; Clark v. Grant, 2 Wendell, 257; 1 Phil. Ev. (Cowen & Hill's ed. 1839), 4, 5.

A writ of protection is only prima facie evidence to an officer about to arrest a person, being no protection to one not entitled to it, and only useful as such evidence to one who is entitled to it. M'Neil's case, 3 Mass. 288; M'Neil's case, 6 Mass. 264.

It will not be given to a suitor or a witness to protect him from arrest, in any case, when, if arrested, he would not be entitled to his discharge without it. Brien v. Brien, 1 Hogan, 34.

But in this instance it is not necessary to consider that ; for this person attending in obedience to the summons, if a creditor, stood also in the character of a witness (1). In a case (2) before Lord Hardwicke, where an assignee removed, and ordered to account before the Commissioners, and to pay over the balance, was arrested attending the execution of that duty, Lord Hardwicke, thinking it absolutely necessary for the purposes of public justice, that he should attend the Commissioners, took it up with a very high hand, as a contempt of his authority ; and ordered an examination upon interrogatories ; intimating that the party must immediately discharge him. It is clear from Arding v. Flower, that, whatever was the opinion of the Court of King's Bench before, they then thought the bankrupt's privilege (3) not founded only upon the Act of Parliament (4) ; and I concur in that principle ; which would require protection for the bankrupt doing those duties ; and there are several cases showing that, without the authority of the Act. The question then is, whether the same principle, that would, independent of the Statute, protect the bankrupt, ought to protect the witness. In Ex parte Stow (5) Lord Northington entertains no doubt, that the [*315] authority created for the *assistance of the Court must have that power vested in them ; and that has been followed : so that there is the authority of Lords Hardwicke, Northington and Rosslyn. In this case there being several detainers by persons, who found King in custody, I shall follow the order of Lord Rosslyn in the case from Bristol ; that the creditors having an opportunity of being heard, and being heard, or neglecting that opportunity, should forthwith discharge the person out of custody. If the original arrest cannot stand, those detainers cannot stand (6). There is great good sense in that ; for the Court ought to take care that the Sheriff should not be left liable to an action ; and under such an order it is their act in obedience to the authority of the Court.

I shall therefore order, that the several parties, who shall appear to have been served with notice of this motion, do forthwith discharge King out of custody.

July 15th. The rest of the motion stood over, to give the officers an opportunity of answering the affidavits upon the circumstances of the arrest. They accordingly by affidavit denied, that they arrested King in Guildhall ; stating, that he had got some way from it ; and they supposed, his examination was finished ; that they were called upon suddenly for this purpose at Guildhall ; and the attorney said, he would indemnify them ; and they were not to mind any paper King might show as a protection.

(1) See ante, Ex parte Land, vol. vi. 781, and the note, 784.

(2) Ex parte Kerney, 1 Atk. 54.

(3) Ex parte Donlevy, the next case. Ante, Ex parte Parker, vol. iii. 554 ; Ex parte Hawkins, iv. 691.

(4) Stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 5.

(5) Stated 2 Black. 1142.

(6) See Ex parte Dumbell, post, vol. x. 328.

On behalf of the officers it was observed, that this was no pre-meditated contempt of the officers, but a mistake of the law; which is very doubtful, as appears by Kinder v. Williams; that as to the bankrupt himself or the assignees the Commissioners have a general jurisdiction: as to third persons only in particular cases: namely, where persons are supposed to have property of [*_316] the bankrupt in their possession; and that the Commissioners might not have had authority to summons King.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—An attorney desiring an officer to do an act at all hazards is guilty of a contempt, if that person is guilty of a contempt; and no officer shall say, he is indemnified, if he advisedly acts contumeliously to the authority of any Court. Officers must understand, that it is impossible for any person to indemnify them against a contempt (1). Let the attorney therefore make an affidavit.

July 19th.—An affidavit by the attorney was read; admitting, that he told the officer, he would indemnify them; but that he merely meant by that to assure the officer, that what he was to do was legal, and to prevent him from being intimidated.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The conduct of the attorney was rash: but he did not intend a contempt. An indemnity against the consequences of a contempt is very different from an indemnity against any thing of damage. I should pause long, before I should determine, that, if the creditor was attending merely to prove his debt, and not upon a summons, he should not be privileged; that being the only way, in which in the case of a bankruptcy he can sue. Upon the affidavits it does not appear, that the officers were aware, that they were acting in contempt of the Court; and the authority, under which they acted, is a considerable alleviation of their conduct. Though I have not the least doubt, that a person attending the Commissioners, particularly under a summons, has this protection, and I agree entirely with Lord Kenyon in Arding v. Flower, yet there has been doubt upon the subject; and the language * in the report of Kinder v. Williams is loose. Therefore, [*_317] letting it now be perfectly understood, that this must not happen again, I will not go farther than to order all the costs out of pocket to be paid by the attorney and the two officers.

SEE, ante, note 2 to Ex parte Hawkins, 4 V. 691, and the note to Ex parte Dixon, 8 V. 104.

(1) Ex parte Dixon, post, vol. viii. 104.

DONLEVY, Ex parte.

[1802, JULY 19, 21.]

A BANKRUPT's privilege from arrest extends to the end of the forty-second day. Ordered, that the Plaintiff in the action should discharge him; and the officer having acted without instructions was ordered to pay the costs.

Whether a deviation by a bankrupt, returning from examination, for the purpose of leaving his books at the house of the assignee, will deprive him of his privilege, quare a, [p. 317.]

THE prayer of this petition was, that the petitioner may be discharged out of custody. The petitioner, a bankrupt, left Guildhall after his examination on the forty-second day; and was arrested for debt, before he got home; living in Charles Street. According to his affidavit he went out of his way merely for the purpose of leaving his books at the house of his assignee in Bunhill Row.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Cooke, in support of the Petition.—The bankrupt is protected by the Statute (1) for the whole of the forty-second day. But he is also protected, being in his way home from Guildhall; where he was under examination before the Commissioners; and this is not such a deviation as will deprive him of his privilege. If his intent was to go home, a little deviation to the right or the left will not be attended to strictly: otherwise a question might arise, which was the nearest way. Lightfoot v. Cameron (2). In Hinckston's Case (3) the bankrupt attended his last examination at Chesterfield on the forty-second day. He lived at the distance of forty miles. He went from Chesterfield to Manchester, to get some information as to a debt; and was induced to stay at an inn at Manchester till past twelve at night; and immediately after [* 318] twelve was arrested. In that case * there was a fraudulent intent to induce him to stay. It shows however, that the privilege is considered to extend to the end of the forty-second; which is the true construction of the act.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I think, your construction of the act is right; that the bankrupt is privileged for the whole day (4);

(a) The exemption of a party from arrest while returning from Court is to be allowed with reasonable indulgence; but a deviation on return, to attend the funeral of a son, will work a forfeiture of the protection. Chaffee v. Jones, 19 Pick. 260, 267.

But a party returning from Court it seems is not bound to go the direct road; all necessary deviations are to be allowed; and the law is not so strict as to require the party to set out immediately after the trial is over. A little deviation or loitering would not forfeit his protection, provided he act in good faith, and the delay or deviation is not for the purpose of transacting private business. 19 Pick. 267; Selby v. Hills, 8 Bingh. 166; Smyth v. Banks, 4 Dall. 329; 1 Phil. Ev. (Cowen & Hill's ed. 1839), 4, 5.

(1) Stat. 5 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 5.

(2) 2 Black. 1113.

(3) In 1759, before Lord Northington; Green's Bank. Law, 441.

(4) Ex parte Davies, Buck, 80: so, where the Commissioners have enlarged the time, the protection continues through the whole period: Price's case, 3 Ves. & Bea. 23; Simpson's case, Buck, 424; 2 Wils. Ch. Rep. 127.

and that makes an end of any difficulty upon the other point. The order I shall make is, that the Plaintiff shall forthwith cause him to be discharged. The Plaintiff offering to make an affidavit, that he gave no instructions to the officer, let him make such affidavit as he may think proper ; and then I shall dispose of the costs. It was said in King's Case (1), that this mode of making the order shows a doubt in my mind, whether the party is entitled to be discharged. I have no such doubt ; and am satisfied Lord Kenyon was perfectly right in Arding v. Flower (2) : but where I can protect the Sheriff from the vexation of an action for an escape, though satisfied it would be ill founded, it is a much better way of administering justice upon these points than by ordering the officer at his peril to discharge the man.

The Plaintiff made an affidavit accordingly ; and upon the affidavit of the officer it appeared, that he had acted from mistake. The Lord Chancellor said, though it was a hard case, the party must have his costs from the officer. Having a right to be discharged, he must be discharged at the expense of those, who arrested him (3).

SEE the references given in the note to the last preceding case.

(1) The preceding case.

(2) 8 Term Rep. 534.

(3) Post, Sidgier v. Birch, vol. ix. 69; Ex parte Bync, 1 Ves. & Bea. 316; 1 Rose, 451; Lis's case, 2 Ves. & Bea. 373.

BAILEY v. EKINS.

[1802, JULY 16.]

A CHARGE for payment of debts makes equitable assets (a). Devise, charged with debts, to trustees and their heirs; in trust to receive and take the rents, issues, and profits; and thereout to support and educate the devisor's son till the age of twenty-one; and then to him. Not a use executed in the son before the age of twenty-one, [p. 322.]

A provision by Will effectual in law or in equity for payment of creditors is not within the Statute of fraudulent devises (b), [p. 323.]

WILLIAM GARRETT by his will, dated the 26th of February, 1779, directed, that all his just debts, funeral expenses and legacies, should be justly and truly paid and discharged; and he thereby charged and subjected all his real and personal estates with the payment of the same; and he thereby gave, devised, and bequeathed, all his messuages, farms, lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premises, therein described, and also all and singular his goods, chattels, and personal estate, of what nature or kind soever, unto John Ekins, Peter Morris Goddard, and Edward Salter, and to the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs, executors, and administrators, of such survivor; in trust to sell and dispose of the same and every part thereof, as soon as conveniently might be after his decease, to any person or persons whomsoever, for the best price or prices, that could be had or gotten for the same; and out of the money arising by sale thereof to pay and discharge his just debts, funeral expenses and legacies, and he gave and bequeathed all moneys, that should remain in his said trustees' hands, after they had paid his just debts, funeral expenses and legacies, as aforesaid, and also all other his real estates either in possession, reversion, remainder or expectancy, or otherwise however, not therein before disposed of, with their and every of (a) See Newton v. Bennet, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 135-140, and notes and cases cited; Balsen v. Lindegreen, 2 ib., 94, and cases cited in note (a); Kidney v. Coussmaker, ante, 1 V. 436, note (a); Benson v. Le Roy, 4 John. Ch. 651; Ram on Assets, ch. 27, p. 317, et seq.; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d. Am. ed.) 1197-1199; Barker v. May, 9 Barn. & Cr. 489.

But that a mere charge on a devised estate will not have the effect of exonerating descended estates as a devise for the payment of debts will do, see Davies v. Topp, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 524, and notes; Donne v. Lewis, 2 ib. 257, and notes; Balsen v. Lindegreen, ib. 94.

Upon the construction of a will it was held that a primary direction for the payment of debts did not render the real property of the testator equitable assets. Price v. North, 4 Younge & Coll. 509.

Equitable assets are such as can be reached only through equity, and they alone are subject to the rules of equitable distribution. Rutledge v. Hazlehurst, 1 M'Cord, Ch. 466. See Backhouse v. Patten, 5 Peters, 160; Moses v. Murgatroyd, 1 John. Ch. 119.

(b) It is otherwise, if the effect of the devise would be to take away from a creditor any fund unto which he had a right to resort, or if any fund would prove deficient by the mode prescribed. See in Manning v. Spooner, 3 Ves. 118, 119; and in Hughes v. Doublen, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 614, and notes; 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.) 596, 601; Lingard v. Earl of Derby, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 311, 312, notes (2) and (4).

their appurtenances, unto his said trustees and to the survivors and survivor of them, and the heirs, executors, and administrators, of such survivor; in trust to place the said moneys out at interest upon the best security or securities, that could be obtained for the same; and to receive and take such interest from time to time, as the same shall grow due, together with the rents, issues and profits, of the said * real estates; and thereout to support, main- [* 320] tain and educate, his son William Wither Pincke Garrett, in such manner as they in their discretion should think proper, until he should attain the age of twenty-one years; and when he should attain that age, then he gave, devised, and bequeathed, the said moneys so placed at interest and the said real estates unto William Wither Pincke Garrett, his executors, administrators, and assigns; and also he gave, devised, and bequeathed, unto his daughters Elizabeth Mary and Anne Garrett, the legacy or sum of 150*l.* a-piece, to be paid to them severally and respectively as they should attain the age of twenty-one years or be married; and in the mean time and until they, his said daughters, should have obtained that age or be married, he directed his executors hereinafter named to pay unto each of them so remaining under age and unmarried the sum of 60*l.* per annum for their support and maintenance; and he appointed John Ekins, Peter Morris Goddard and Edward Salter, guardians of his said children during their minority, and executors in trust of his said will.

The testator died in August 1779; leaving one son and four daughters. The bill was filed by creditors; who had obtained administration with the will annexed, and the real estates were sold under the decree, directing the fund to be applied in a course of administration; and the specialty creditors were paid 10*s.* in the pound. The cause came on for farther directions, and upon a petition by creditors by simple contract; praying, that the petitioners may be paid a like proportion of 10*s.* in the pound on their respective debts, equal with the other creditors out of the produce of the real estate.

* Mr. Richards and Mr. Trower, in support of the Pe- [* 321] tition.—This cause stood over for the purpose of inquiring, whether any modern case has decided, that a general charge upon an estate descended makes it equitable assets. It has always of late been so considered; but not actually decided, except in Burt v. Thomas (1). If in Plunket v. Penson (2) Lord Hardwicke considered the estate as equitable assets, as being charged, it would not have been necessary to make the distinction. Upon the Statute (3) of fraudulent devises this is equitable assets. The Court aiming at making equitable assets, the act has a view to that case; and really does not affect the interest of the person claiming under the charge. Before the Statute, though a devise would have disappointed the specialty creditor, it would not, if charged with specialty debts; and a devise in trust for payment of debts would have been equitable assets without doubt. Is not a charge a limitation, appointment, devise, or disposition, at least, in favor of creditors; and therefore out of the Statute? Then, as it was necessary for the creditor to come into this Court, the Court laid hold of the property; making it equitable assets. The great contest at first was upon a devise to the executor. Afterwards it was held, that, the descent being broken, the assets were equitable. Then the doubt arose as to a power to the executor; and it came to this conclusion at last; that, wherever the produce of the estate comes to the executor, it would be equitable assets. The principle of the doubt was, that in the one case the testator having converted the estate into personal property, all the consequences follow. But the moment the Court holds it equitable assets in the hands of the executors, it follows, that it is so in the hands of the heir; it is too late now to contend, [* 322] that the descent must be broken; * though certainly the old cases were so. In Burt v. Thomas it was decided upon argument, that a charge made the assets equitable. In Newton v. Bennet (1), though Lord Thurlow is represented as intimating, that the descent must be broken, that was not required in that case; and in Burt v. Thomas, in which case the question was much agitated, Mr Baron Thompson stated from his own note, that the report is inaccurate in that respect, and Lord Thurlow said no such thing, but considered a charge sufficient. Batson v. Lindegreen (2) was a mere charge. Though the heir takes by his better title, yet upon this question it makes a considerable difference as to the title. If there is a devise to the heir in trust to pay debts, he will be a trustee; though in one point of view he takes by descent. There can be no doubt, the intention is the same in the case of a charge as upon an express devise; which the Court would clearly consider a trust for all the creditors.

(1) In the Court of Exchequer.

(2) 2 Atk. 290.

(3) Statute 3 & 4 Will. & Mary, c. 14.

The Attorney General, for the specialty creditors contended, that by this will the descent was not broken; and that a charge has not the effect of making the assets equitable.

The Lord CHANCELLOR, [ELDON].—The question upon this will, if it turns upon the point, whether the descent was broken, would be, whether during the infancy of the heir the legal estate was in him; and if it was necessary to determine that, I am rather inclined to think, it was not; that the use was not executed in him; considering the words of the will. At the same time it turns upon great nicety. But I do not determine this upon the circumstances of the will; for Hargrave v. Tindal (3), and Burt v. Thomas, and Batson v. Lindegreen, as I charge my own memory with it, are all authorities, that a charge upon real estate does make it equitable assets. I also confirm upon my own

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 135.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 94.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 136, note.

memory what Baron Thompson is stated to have said in Burt v. Thomas; for I am confident, Lord Thurlow's opinion was, that a charge is a devise of the estate in substance and effect pro tanto, upon trust to pay the debts. The rule cannot be accurate, when it is stated, that the descent ought to be broken. It would be more accurate to state it thus; that it must appear upon the will, that the testator meant the descent to be broken. Suppose a devise to trustees, in trust to pay debts; and, all the trustees dying in the life of the testator, the estate descends upon the heir; would not that be equitable assets? By the failure of the devise the heir must have had it, as the trustee would, subject to the debts; and yet the descent is not broken, but intended to be broken. But, when it is said, the heir takes by his better title, still the question is, whether he takes, as he would, if that devise had not been made; taking all the circumstances of the devise together. A mere charge is no legal interest. It is not a devise to any one, but that declaration of intention, upon which a Court of Equity will fasten; and by virtue of which, they will draw out of the mass going to the heir or to others that quantum of interest, which will be sufficient for the debts; and then getting it into their hands, the only inquiry will be, whether the Statute interposes to make it fraudulent against specialty creditors. The uniform rule is, that a provision by will, effectual (1) in Law or in Equity for payment of creditors, is not fraudulent within the intent of the Statute.

Upon principle therefore, but, what is infinitely more satisfactory to me, upon authority, I am of opinion upon *this [*324] will, that, whether the descent is broken, or not, this is equitable assets; and that is a better way of deciding this case than applying to the will, to see, whether the descent is broken, or not; that the principle of my decision may be understood; and reviewed if wrong, but that will be at the risk of undoing what I considered very well settled (2),

In consequence of this judgment it was agreed, that the direction of the decree should be got rid of by a short petition of rehearing; all parties consenting. That petition was presented; and the decree varied accordingly.

THAT a charge for payment of debts will convert real estate into equitable assets, whether the estate be devised so as to break the descent or not, see, ante, note 3 to Ellis v. Smith, 1 V. 11. And that a limitation of lands for payment of the debt or debts, under the fourth section of the Statute of Fraudulent Devises, lets in simple contract creditors pari passu with creditors by specialty, see note 6 to Kidney v. Coussmaker, 1 V. 436.

(1) See Lingard v. The Earl of Derby, 1 Bro. C. C. 311; Hughes v. Doulben, 2 Bro. C. C. 614.

(2) Shephard v. Lutridge, post, vol. viii. 26. See the cases of implied charge, Kidney v. Coussmaker, ante, vol. i. 436, and the note, 447.

THE BISHOP OF HEREFORD v. ADAMS.
LADY TWYSDEN v. ADAMS.

[1802, JULY 16.]

BEQUEST in trust for the poor inhabitants of several parishes; to be applied at times and in proportions, and either in money, provision, physic, or clothes, as the trustees think fit. The fund being very considerable in proportion to the objects, the application was upon the principle of cy pres extended for the benefit of the same objects to purposes not expressly pointed out by the Will; as instruction and apprenticing of children; against the claim of the next of kin (a).

GEORGE JARVIS by his will dated, the 9th of January, 1790, gave to his daughter Lady Twysden an annuity of 200*l.* for her life, and to his grandsons Heneage and Thomas Twysden 1000*l.* a-piece, to be paid within three months after his decease. He gave to trustees 20,000*l.*: upon trust as soon as conveniently may be after his decease to place the same out upon Government or real securities; and out of the dividends and interest to allow any sum not exceeding 200*l.* per annum for the maintenance and education of his great grand-daughter Lady Mary Montgomery until her age of [* 325] *twenty-one; at which time he directed all the securities with the accumulation to be transferred to her for her absolute use and benefit; but if she should die, before she should have attained the age of twenty-one, he directed, that 10,000*l.*, part of the sum of 20,000*l.*, should be paid to his other great grand-daughter Lady Susannah Montgomery, when she should have attained the age of twenty-one; and that the remainder should fall into the residue of his personal estate.

The testator then, after some inconsiderable legacies, which he directed to be paid within two months after his decease, gave to the Bishop of Hereford for the time being, and other trustees, the sum of 30,000*l.*, to be paid out of his personal estate; upon trust, that they or the survivors, &c. shall, as soon as conveniently may be after his decease, place out the said sum of 30,000*l.* on Government securities, and from time to time sell the securities and place out the produce again, and so for ever hereafter, as often as there shall be occasion, and pay and apply the yearly dividends, interest, and yearly produce, of 11,000*l.*, part of the said securities, unto and amongst such number of the poor inhabitants of the parish of Stanton-upon-Wye, in the county of Hereford, at such times and in such proportions, and either in money, provisions, physic, or clothes, as his said trustees or the major part of them for the time being shall from time to time think fit, for the better support and maintenance of such poor inhabitants; and the dividends, &c. of 13,000*l.*, other part of the said securities, unto and amongst the poor inhabitants of the parish of Bredwardine, in the county of Hereford ; and the dividends, &c. of the remaining 6000*l.* unto and amongst the poor inhabitants of the parish of Letter in the said county, with similar directions for the application of those funds. All the rest, residue, and remainder, of his * property and effects after [* 326] payment of his debts, funeral expenses, and legacies, and subject to two annuities, he gave and bequeathed to the Bishop of Hereford and the other trustees, upon trust, that they or the survivors shall, as soon as conveniently may be after his decease, pay, distribute, and appropriate, the whole of such residue to the charitable purposes aforesaid, as they or the survivors of them should think fit or appoint : but he directed, that none of the said trust moneys be appropriated in erecting any public or other building whatever.

(a) See Attorney General v. Winchelsea, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 379, 380, and notes; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1178, § 1181, § 1182; Attorney General v. Tonna, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 103, et seq., and notes.

Upon the doctrine of cy pres, see Moggridge v. Thackwell, ante, 36, note (c), and cases cited.

By a codicil, dated the 13th of September, 1791, reciting, that he had by his will given the residue of his personal estate, upon trust to pay, distribute, and appropriate, the whole of such residue to the charitable purposes aforesaid, he declared his mind and will, that as the same should from time to time come in the hands of the trustees, the same should be put and placed out in the public funds with the other trust moneys given by his will ; and that the interest thereof only from time to time be applied to the charitable purposes in proportion to the other trust moneys given by his will to the poor inhabitants of the said three parishes therein named ; and in all other respects he confirmed his will. He afterwards made another codicil, also confirming the will.

The testator died in February 1793. The first bill was filed by the trustees to have the accounts taken, and the directions of the Court. The second bill was filed by Lady Twysden, the daughter of the testator, to have the bequests of the legacy of 30,000*l.* and of the residue declared void. By the decrees in those causes both the trustees and Lady Twysden were permitted to lay proposals before the Master for a scheme.

* Upon the Master's Report it appeared, that the funds [* 327] provided by the will for the support of the poor of these parishes consisted of 66,715*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.* Bank 3 per cent. Consols: 603*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* 5 per cent. Annuities: 4024*l.* 4*s.* 4*d.* Bank Stock; and 2201*l.* 6*s.* 3*d.* cash. The Report also stated, that in the parish of Bredwardine the number of poor inhabitants, who receive alms, amounts to 30 ; of the poor inhabitants, who do not receive alms, to 187 : the non-resident inhabitants having legal settlements were 66 ; and the poor rates about 185*l.* a year. In the parish of Staunton the poor inhabitants receiving alms were 17 : those not receiving alms, 262 : the non-resident parishioners, having legal settlements, 61 ; and the poor rates, 225*l.* In Letter there were no poor inhabitants receiving alms : those not receiving alms were 44 : the non-residents, having legal settlements, 9 : of whom eight receive alms ; and the poor rates amount to 85*l.* a year. The proposal of the trustees, calculating the income for the parish of Bredwardine at 1003*l.* per annum, was as follows :

	£	s.	d.
For Physic and Attendance to the Poor	50	0	0
Clothing, Bedding and Bed Clothes	330	0	0
Fuel	135	0	0
Food in the manner stated in the Report	281	6	0
Payments for Schooling	60	0	0
Payments to apprenticing poor Children	60	0	0
Proportion of the Salary of an Agent	25	0	0
Occasional Gratuities to Servants and Apprentices conducting themselves well	61	14	0

There was no medical man within the distance of nine miles.

- [* 328] * The proposals as to the other parishes were similar, in proportion to their difference of income.

Lady Twysden proposed, that the annual sum of 1156*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* should be apportioned among the poor of the three parishes for the purposes of the will ; as being amply sufficient ; and that the residue should be paid to her.

The Master approving the proposal of the Trustees, Lady Twysden excepted to the Report.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Romilly, and Mr. Pemberton, in support of the exception.—This Court will not establish so mistaken a charity ; which is in effect a premium to idleness. After all this specific provision there will be a large surplus : which the trustees cannot dispose of according to any intention of the testator ; and therefore they propose other objects : namely, rewards of virtue, and the instruction and apprenticing of children.

The Attorney General, [Hon. Spencer Perceval], Mr. Piggott, Mr. Richards, and Mr. Hart, for the report.—The purpose of this will must be executed by some such scheme as the Master has approved. The quantum of the property can make no difference ; if the law says, it ought to be distributed in charity by this Court. In the Attorney General v. The Mayor of Coventry (1), the increase of the fund was given to the charity. The Attorney General v. Green (2), the Attorney General v. Oglander (3), and the Attorney General v. The Earl of Winchelsea (4), are also in favor of the charity. Apprenticing comes within the meaning of the

- [* 329] word "money." There is * nothing to prevent trustees having the power of giving money to poor people from annexing to the gift an injunction to lay it out in a particular manner for the beneficial and truly charitable purpose intended by the

(1) 2 Vern. 397.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 492.

(3) 3 Bro. C. C. 166.

(4) 3 Bro. C. C. 373.

testator, instead of dissipating it. They have a control for the subsequent donation, though not directly.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The plan of Lady Twysden is liable to many of the objections capable of being made to the other; and as to giving the surplus to her, in the present state of the record it is impossible; for such purpose cannot be said to be part of the plan for distributing in charity according to the testator's will. Her claim must be on the ground, that the object aimed at is impracticable in fact, or, which is the same thing, in law; and, that, the property being undisposed of, she is entitled as next of kin. As to the plan of the trustees, I have nothing to do with arguments of policy. If the Legislature thinks proper to give the power of leaving property to charitable purposes recognized by the law as such, however prejudicial, the Court must administer it. If it is right to put bequests of personal property to charity under the same fettters as real estate, that is for the Legislature; and Courts of justice must act without regard to the impolicy of the law. It cannot be supposed, this testator was unacquainted with the state of these parishes: the will being made only three years before his death. If he had been asked as to the particular mode of executing his plan, he would probably have been under as much difficulty as the Court is. In two codicils he confirms the disposition made by the will. If this can practically be carried into effect in point of law, there is so little objection, that the Court is bound to give it effect. The testator certainly thought so. If that is founded in error, Lady Twysden would have more to do, to get at the *surplus, [*330] than to say, it could not be practically applied. She must contend, that the application to charity must be precisely, as it is given by this will: a point certainly not settled; and that could not be settled upon these exceptions. If her claim was grounded, not upon the impracticability, but upon the impolicy, of the object, there will be much more difficulty, before she gets rid of the Cy pres doctrine; upon many of the cases, particularly De Costa v. De Pas (1), which I lately had occasion to refer to (2); imputing to the testator a general intention of embalming his memory; as Lord Chief Justice Wilmot says. Upon either head therefore it is open to serious argument, whether she can take it.

The Master's Report by no means satisfies me, that no plan can be devised, that ought to be carried into execution. With a very small variation of phrase this report itself would give such a plan; and the doubt I have at last is, whether it is fit for the Court to do that in an indirect way, by sending it back to the Master, or to say, that by fair reasoning what the Master has now proposed is consistent with the intention of the testator, however shortly expressed in the will. As to the time and proportions he has altogether confided in his trustees, subject to the exercise of a sound discretion, to be exercised by this Court: not as to the manner; for that is prescribed by him. I construe it "poor inhabitants, not receiving alms." If the word "money" alone had been in the will, it could not be said, that you could give the money to the poor inhabitant, enabling him to purchase fuel, provisions, and clothes, and that it is misapplied, if the trustees procured those necessaries, and [*331] *with his consent paid for them. It would be strong to make that distinction. The words, "provision, physic, and clothes" might therefore have been left out of the will. I look upon them rather as designating to the trustees, how they were to apply the money, than as actually necessary. It is impossible for me to object to the medicines: the testator having expressly said, money laid out in physic would be a good application; and 50*l.* a-year is very little for so many poor families. As to fuel, if the report proposed to advance money for that purpose, that would be directly within the words; and the Court will not disapprove it, if the purposes of the plan are secured by the plan. There is no weight therefore in that objection to the plan, merely because it does not give the money for that purpose. Then clothes and provision are expressly within the will. As to the last sums in the report, I agree, the money is proposed to be disposed of in a more useful way than any other. The question is, whether in the fair sense of this will, if money is given to a school-master to teach a poor boy reading and writing, that is an abuse of the charity, or an advance of money within the intent and meaning of the will. It is very erroneous to say, that, which may tend to make it unnecessary to advance to that boy or his parents, money, provision, or clothes, in future, was advanced contrary to the will; the advance being made to the intent, that he should have that education, that would enable him to get his own bread, and maintain his parents. But Lady Twysden has no interest in that question; for if that would be wrong, it might be divided among the others; so as to disappoint her.

(1) Amb. 228.

(2) See Moggridge v. Thackwell, ante, 36; the great case upon the subject of charity.

Next as to apprenticing: Suppose, the master for a small fee covenants to maintain the boy: would it be contrary to the fair exposition of such a will to advance that money to that person, to relieve the trust from an application *from time to time according to the trust. If the money was given to the boy himself, and he was to pay it as an apprentice fee, that would be within the will; and the only alteration of the Report would be in that respect; and I will not send it back to the Master for that. The best plan perhaps would be to apply according to their own notions from time to time; laying their account of it annually before the Master: but I cannot lay trustees under those difficulties. Unless therefore Lady Twysden can lay before the Court a plan, under which she can contend for a distribution of the property as to part of it upon this principle, that the testator has not given it away, she is not very usefully for herself or the charity contending, whether a payment of money for the benefit of a poor person is within the strict letter of this will a payment to that poor person.

[*332] son, to relieve the trust from an application *from time to

Therefore it is best upon the whole to confirm the Report; declaring, that I do it, conceiving the plan therein contained to be agreeable to the true construction of the testator's will (1). All parties must have their costs as between attorney and client; including Lady Twysden's also. —

WHERE the whole of a fund, as it stood at the time, has been bequeathed for charitable purposes, the Court, though no direction may have been given by the testator for the application of a surplus, subsequently arising, will apply such surplus: see, ante, note 3 to The Attorney General v. The Haberdashers' Company, 1 V. 295. And, as to the extent to which the doctrine of cy pres is admitted, in cases of charitable bequests, see the note last cited, and also notes 5, 6, 7, to Moggridge v. Thackwell, 1 V. 464. Where a trust is interposed, the appropriation of funds given for general charitable purposes must be the subject of a scheme to be laid before the master; where a trust is not interposed, the disposition is in the crown. See note 9 to Moggridge v. Thackwell, ubi supra.

WARING v. WARD.

[1802, JULY 17.]

THE heir of a purchaser exonerated by his personal assets from a mortgage; the result of the transaction being a personal contract; and the personal assets therefore the primary fund (a).

No exoneration of the heir by the personal assets of a party, who never personally contracted: or not originally, but only as a farther security in a subsequent transaction, not intended to disturb the order of charge; as the transfer of a mortgage; or the purchase of an equity of redemption: even though the interest is raised, the excess follows the subject of the original contract (b), [p. 337.]

THE instruments and circumstances, upon which this cause was instituted, are stated in the former Report (2).

By the decree, made upon the 1st of December, 1800, the usual

(1) The Court will not vary the nature of a Charity, unless the particular object cannot be attained: Attorney General v. Whitley, post, vol. xi. 241.

(a) See S. C., 5 V. 670, and the notes; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d. Am. ed.) 1211; Ram on Assets, p. 360; McLearn v. McLellan, 10 Peters, 625; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1248, and note 1 at the end of that section. See also Berrington v. Evans, 3 Younge & Coll. 384, 392; Gibson v. McCormick, 10 Gill & John. 66.

If an estate descends subject to a mortgage, and the heir creates a new mortgage for securing the old debt, and also one contracted by himself, and fixes a new day of payment, he makes himself liable to both, notwithstanding he exempts, in the new security, his person and his property, except what is comprised in the new mortgage, from liability in respect of the debts. Lushington v. Sewell, 1 Simons, 435.

(b) See Tweedell v. Tweedell, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844) 101–108 and cases cited in the notes; Ram on Assets, ch. 29, § 1, p. 357, et seq.; Cumberland v. Codrington, 3 John ch. 229; Fonbl. Eq. b. 3 c. 2 § 1, note (b); 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 420, 421; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 574–576; 2 ib., § 1248; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d. Am. ed.) 1208, et seq.; Woods v. Huntingford, ante, 3 V. 128, note (a) and (b).

(2) Ante, vol. v. 670.

accounts of the personal estate, &c. of Richard Hill Waring were directed ; and it was ordered, that the personal estate should be applied in payment of the debts, other than the mortgage debt, &c. in a course of * administration. An account was directed of what was due upon the mortgage of 30,000*l.* It was declared, that the bequest of the residue of the personal estate to the testator's first wife, upon trust to discharge all his debts, for which at the time of his decease he should not have given real securities, &c. became lapsed at the death of his said wife in his life-time ; and in case the personal estate should be more than sufficient for payment of his debts, not secured by mortgage, the consideration, whether the Plaintiff is entitled to have the estate descended to him exonerated from the payment of such part of the money due upon mortgage of the said estate, as was due to Ruth Trevor upon the 27th and 28th of February, 1771, the date of the conveyance of the said estate by the testator to Sir Robert Cunliffe, subject to redemption on payment of 20,000*l.* and interest, and farther directions, were reserved.

The Master's Report stated the accounts of what was due upon the mortgages ; and that the personal estate was much more than sufficient for the debts not secured by mortgage. The cause came on for farther directions upon the question reserved by the decree.

Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Richards, and Mr. Romilly, for the Plaintiff.—The decree having determined the question as to the money borrowed by the testator from Sir Robert Cunliffe, the only remaining subject for consideration is as to the money due to the Trevors ; whether there is any distinction between the two sums. It will be contended, that this was a mere purchase of the equity of redemption. It is not so. This is a mortgage, not only of the estate in the original security, but also of another lot, purchased by the testator ; who having bought these estates paid 12,500*l.* to the Plaintiffs in the cause, being bond creditors and mortgagees ; and [* 334] having borrowed * 20,000*l.* from Sir Robert Cunliffe, that sum was paid into Court in that cause ; and 17,852*l.* 12*s.* 9*d.* was paid in discharge of Trevor's mortgage. The mortgage to Cunliffe was to all intents and purposes a new mortgage. The testator made the purchase as a mere stranger ; becoming personally liable ; and conveying to Cunliffe not only the estates subject to the original mortgage, but what was purchased. Then there can be no doubt this was a purchase, for which his personal estate became liable.

The case of Tweddell v. Tweddell (1) and various others of that class have decided, that a mere purchase of an equity of redemption without any communication with the mortgagee will not make the mortgage the personal debt of the purchaser : otherwise, if there is any thing farther, showing the intention. Woods v. Huntingford (2) resembles this case very much. There can be no doubt, an action might be brought upon the testator's covenant. It is clear, he meant to go farther than merely to take the equity of redemption; being perfectly a stranger; and making himself personally liable; and mortgaging also other lots, not at all involved. The stipulation was for a mortgage, not for an assignment. The loan was transacted with the testator alone. Then all the purchase-money being got into Court he gave his bond. There was no dealing with the Trevors; who were not at all parties to the transaction: but the sum reported due to them was paid out of the general fund in Court.

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 101, 152.

(2) Ante, vol. iii. 128.

The Solicitor General [Sir T. M. Sutton] and Mr. Steele, for the Defendants.—This is a mere purchase of an equity of redemption: a transfer of a mortgage from the Trevors to Cunliffe; * who agreed to advance the money due; and all the [* 335] testator did was personally to covenant for the payment of the debt. Still the debt remained upon the estate; which is the primary fund. Bagot v. Oughton (1) and the other cases have decided, that a mere covenant will not make the party in the first instance liable as between the real and personal representatives. Tweddell v. Tweddell is very like this case. Woods v. Huntingford does not in principle apply. By the subsequent transaction they changed situations; and Richard Huntingford, before liable to pay the money at law, thereby became liable in equity. Upon the authorities collected in Mr. Cox's note (2) the covenant will not do.

Mr. Lloyd, in reply.—The distinction between this case and Tweddell v. Tweddell is, that in this there was no communication with the mortgagee. It is true, as the Master of the Rolls observed, these cases go upon very nice distinctions. How can any purchaser have more than the equity of redemption, if he never pays off the mortgage? It is therefore no objection, that he has nothing but an equitable estate. How can this be only an assignment of the original security? It is a distinct transaction. The Ince estate is sold; not sold subject to the mortgage. Another lot is sold; for which the testator paid 2000*l.* In that the Trevors had no interest. They were paid out of the whole fund of 32,000*l.*, the testator's own money; not out of the specific sum produced by that estate. This is not conveyed as an assignment. The concurrence of the heir at law was necessary; but not as to the lot purchased for * 2000*l.; as to which they were mere strangers. The [ 336] testator and his wife, she being the heir at law of the original mortgagor, did ratify and confirm it. The former proviso of redemption is discharged; and there is a new one; if Richard Hill Waring pay, &c.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I am of opinion, the personal estate is first liable to the payment of this sum of 20,000*l.*; for that is the real question; and therefore to the payment of all the component parts of that sum. The rules as to this subject are extremely clear: and the principle, upon which the personal estate is first liable in general cases, is, that the contract primarily is a personal contract: the personal estate receiving the benefit; and being primarily a personal contract, the land is bound only in aid of the personal obligation to fulfil that personal contract. It has long been settled therefore, that upon a loan of money, the party meaning to mortgage in aid of the bond, covenant, or the simple-contract debt, if there is neither bond nor covenant, his personal estate, if he dies, must pay the debt for the benefit of the heir. Suppose a second descent cast; and the question arises between the personal estate of the son and his real estate descended to the grandson: then the personal estate of the son shall not pay it; as it never was the personal contract of the son. So, upon the transfer of a mortgage, not originally the personal debt of the party, by adding his personal contract he will not make his personal estate liable in the first instance; as a son transferring a mortgage by a father: the personal covenant of the son to pay the money does not make it originally a personal contract of his. It remains still the personal debt of the father, secured by a pledge of his land, * and secured farther by the personal contract of the son. That contract of the son is in the third rank of securities, instead of the first; and Lord Thurlow carried that doctrine to this extent; that, where there was a mortgage, and afterwards upon a transfer the person, to whom the equity of redemption belonged, covenanted for the money; and also to raise the interest from 4 to 5 per cent.; though the person, who first made the mortgage, never was liable upon his personal contract beyond 4 per cent., yet between the personal and real representatives of the party, who raised the interest to 5 per cent. he thought the additional 1 per cent. not primarily a charge upon the personal estate; as it was an obligation growing out of a transaction, the intention of which was not to disturb the order of charge. The same principle applies to the purchase of an equity of redemption; for the party means at the time of the contract to buy the estate subject to that mortgage; in relation to which mortgage the personal contract was entered into; and that was not his. If he enters into no obligation with the party, from whom he purchases, neither by bond nor covenant of indemnity to save him harmless from the mortgage, yet this Court, if he receives possession, and has the profits, would, independent of contract, raise upon his conscience an obligation to indemnify the vendor against the personal obligation to pay the money due upon the vendor's transaction of mortgage; for, being become owner of the estate, he must be supposed to intend to indemnify the vendor against the mortgage.

(1) 1 P. Will. 347.

(2) 2 P. Will. 664. See also, ante, vol. i. 187; and the note. Hamilton v. Worley, ii. 62; Butler v. Butler, v. 534.

The case of Tweddell v. Tweddell certainly went upon this principle; that the debt due to Delaval was never a debt due directly from that person, whose personal assets they sought to have applied in payment of it. Whether that was quite accurate depended upon the construction of the articles of agreement and the deed executing them. But, taking the articles and the deed together, it may very well be said in support of the decree, that the real intent, notwithstanding the particular expressions in those instruments, was, that the purchase between the vendor and vendee was a mere purchase of an equity of redemption; not meaning by that transaction to disturb the mortgage as a mortgage, to alter the contract itself, even in respect of the sum due. Mr. Madocks, who, I recollect, was not satisfied with the decision, laid great stress upon the recital, that John Aynesley had contracted for the absolute purchase of the premises. Whether Lord Thurlow was right or ill founded in the opinion, that upon the whole, either the agreement at first, or the deed executing it, the contract was for an equity of redemption and nothing more, reasoning upon the facts, yet the case is a clear authority, that, if he decided the fact right, such a contract, for a mere equity of redemption, will not make the mortgage debt, which is to remain an incumbrance upon the estate, the debt of the person buying under those circumstances; for in his hands it is the debt of the estate: a mortgage interest as between his representatives. But that case differs totally from this. To assimilate them I must suppose, that this testator treated for the manor of Ince subject to the mortgage to the Trevors; and had paid into Court so much money as was the value of the equity of redemption subject to that mortgage. In that case he would have been bound in conscience, if no such obligation was taken from him, to indemnify those, who conveyed the equity of redemption to him, against the mortgage. But this transaction is not at all with reference to that mortgage. It is a purchase of the inheritance of the premises. The sum of 30,500*l.* the purchase-money, was to be paid, not as in Tweddell v. Tweddell: but under the Report he became in this Court the purchaser of the inheritance, bound to pay in the whole of the purchase-money: * entitled to call upon [*339] this Court, in a sense a contracting party with him, as representing all the parties contracting, to deliver out to him the whole inheritance of that estate for that sum. He borrows out of Court the sum of 20,000*l.*; having become in Equity the owner of the estate; not borrowing as much as will enable him to buy the estate subject to the mortgage, but that sum of 20,000*l.* to be paid into Court; to the intent, that being added to the sum of 10,500*l.*, which he had absolutely paid in, he might have the estate delivered out to him by the Court. Then it was paid into Court for his use upon an agreement between them, that Cunliffe shall have a mortgage of the estate, which in Equity was Waring's at the moment, as soon as it could be given. Suppose, at that moment Waring had died: could not Cunliffe have compelled his representative to get the estate out of Court; to the intent to have a mortgage made to him? Does the Court then, executing the contract, as in Tweddell v. Tweddell, keep alive the mortgage to the Trevors? No: the contract is executed, as it ought to be, by a conveyance of the inheritance. The question is, what Waring took ; and that is, whatever he took, and Cunliffe also. The latter claiming under him as a mortgagee, what he took is only a part of what Waring took. The whole inheritance was between them both. The debt to the Trevors, as theirs, did not exist after this transaction. It was gone. The debt between Waring and Cunliffe alone continued to exist. In Tweddell v. Tweddell the original mortgage debt continued. In this instance it did not continue a moment. If it did, this Court could not have executed the contract, that conveyed to him the whole inheritance ; and in that transaction destroyed the original mortgage debt. That transaction did not create the debt to Cunliffe. That was created by paying the money ; and the conveyance was only fulfilling that part of the obligation to make a [* 340] *mortgage of the whole of these premises : whether of the Ince estate only, or also including the others, is not material ; though the latter circumstance makes it stronger. It is merely fulfilling the obligation he had come under in this Court, as equitable owner of the estate.

The conclusion therefore is, that originally this was a personal contract ; and the estate a pledge for the farther security of that personal contract ; that the real contract being only secondary, and the personal being the primary contract, the personal estate must relieve the real estate. I observe in the Report (1) Lord Alvanley said, he had a strong opinion upon the point ; and I have no doubt upon it.

See the notes to S. C. 5 V. 670.

JORTIN, Ex parte.

[1802, JULY 17, 19.]

AN increase of the revenues of a Charity applied for the benefit of the Charity (a).

THIS petition was presented under the authority of an Act of Parliament by the patron and trustees of the Free School at Wooton-under-Edge ; stating an increase of the revenues of the charity, to the amount of 60*l.* per annum, in consequence of an exchange and the improved value of the estates ; and proposing, that the salary of the master should be increased from 40*l.* to 70*l.* a year ; in consideration, that one of the Statutes required, that he should receive all

(1) Ante, vol. v. 675.

(a) 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1178; Attorney General v. Earl of Winchelsea, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 373, and notes; Attorney General v. Mayor of Bristol, 2 Jac. & Walker, 321, and other cases cited in note to 2 Story, Eq. Jur. ubi supra; Bishop of Hereford v. Adams, ante, 324; Attorney General v. Tonna, ante, 2 V. 1, and note (a); S. C. 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 103, and notes.

the boys of Wooton-under-Edge upon very low terms; and farther proposing, that 2*l.* or 3*l.* a year should be added to the yearly sum of 5*l.*, paid to each of ten boys upon the foundation; or, that the trustees should be at liberty to apply the surplus in putting boys out apprentices. The salary of the master and the number of the boys and *their annual payment had been increased [*341] under a decree upon an Information; directing, that the increase of the revenues should be applied in that manner.

The Attorney General [Hon. Spencer Perceval] and Mr. Steele in support of the Petition.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, upon all the rules of the Court something must be given to the boys; and made an order, that the salary of the master should be increased to 80*l.*; and the payments of the boys to 6*l.* each (1).

SEE the references given in the note to the case of The Bishop of Hereford v. Adams, supra.

(1) The Attorney General v. Tonna, 4 Bro. C. C. 103; ante, vol. ii. 1; and the note, 9.

BUCKMASTER v. HARROP.

[ROLLS.—1802, FEB. 18; JULY 19.]

To entitle the heir to the performance of an agreement for a purchase out of the personal estate, the agreement must have been binding upon the parties contracting, so that the property was converted in equity before the death (a). Sale of land by auction is within the Statute of Frauds (b); and the name of the vendee being put down by the auctioneer is not sufficient (c), [p. 341.] Payment of the auction duty is not a part-performance taking an agreement out of the Statute of Frauds (d), [p. 341.] The ground of the doctrine of part-performance is fraud (e), [p. 341.]

ON the 23d of July, 1800, certain estates were sold in four lots by distinct particulars ; and two agents for Peter Davenport Finney

(a) See Ram on Assets, ch. 12, § 1, p. 183, 184 ; Johnson v. Legard, 1 Turn. & Russ. 281 ; Broome v. Monk, 10 Ves. 597 ; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1251, 1252 ; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 790.

Money agreed to be laid out in land is considered in Equity as land, and land agreed to be turned into money, as money. Stephenson v. Yandle, 3 Hayw. 109 ; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 790, § 791, § 1212, and cases in the notes ; 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 476, note, 230, note. See Selon v. Slade, ante, 265, note (a).

(b) 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.), 136 [193] ; Cleaves v. Foss, 4 Greenl. 1 ; Alna v. Plummer, 4 Greenl. 258 ; Gordon v. Sims, 2 McCord, Ch. 164 ; Jenkins v. Hogg, 2 Const. Rep. 821 ; White v. Proctor, 4 Taunt. 209 ; Kenworthy v. Schofield, 2 Barn. & Cress. 947 ; Blagden v. Bradbear, 12 Ves. 466 ; Jackson v. Calkin, 2 John. 248 ; Simonds v. Calkin, 2 Caines, Rep. 61, 64 ; Kemys v. Proctor, 3 Ves. & Bea. 57 ; 2 Kent, (5th ed.) 539, 540.

(c) It is now well settled, that the auctioneer in such case may be the agent of both parties, and his signature to an entry in his books, or to a memorandum, stating the terms of the contract and the parties thereto, or which refers to the particulars or conditions of sale, or is indorsed thereon, will satisfy the statute of frauds. Cleaves v. Foss, 4 Greenl. 1 ; Jenkins v. Hogg, 2 Const. Rep. 821 ; Gordon v. Sims, 2 McCord, Ch. 164 ; Emmerison v. Heelis, 2 Taunt. 38 ; Chitty, Cont. (6th Am. ed.), 305, and notes ; 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 540 ; First Baptist Church of Ithaca v. Bigelow, 16 Wend. 28 ; Hicks v. Whitmore, 12 Wend. 548.

And his authority need not be in writing, Alna v. Plummer, 4 Greenl. 258 ; 2 Kent, (5th ed.) 540. See Blood v. Hardy, 3 Shepley, 61.

The auctioneer is not necessarily the agent of the parties : it depends upon the facts in each case. Bartlett v. Purnell, 4 Adol. & Ell. 794.

As to the efficacy of the signature of the auctioneer's clerk, see Gosbell v. Archer, 4 Nev. & Man. 485 ; S. C. 2 Adol. & Ell. 500.

(d) 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 150, [209].

As to the matter of part performance and what it amounts to, see Newton v. Swasey, 8 N. Hamp. 9 ; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 759-767, and cases cited ; 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.) 378 ; 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 451, 452 ; Chitty, Contracts, (6th Am. ed.) 306, and numerous cases cited in note ; 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 140, [199], et seq., and the cases in the notes ; Tilton v. Tilton, 9 N. Hamp. 385 ; Tybbe v. Barker, 1 Blackf. 58 ; Whitbread v. Brockhurst, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 417 ; Whitchurch v. Bevis, 2 ib. 566, note (a).

Part performance is held not to over-rule the statute, but to take the case out of it. Newton v. Swasey, 8 N. Hamp. 9.

In order to make the acts done such as will be deemed a part performance of an agreement within the statute, it is essential that they should appear to have been done with a view to the performance of the agreement. Acts merely introductory or ancillary to an agreement are not considered as a part performance thereof. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 762, and cases cited.

(e) 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 141, [199] ; Whitbread v. Brockhurst, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 417 ; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 759, 761 ; Carlisle v. Fleming, 1 Har. 421.

were declared the best bidders, at several sums, amounting in the whole to 3119*l.*; and they immediately after the sale declared that they purchased for Finney; and Finney offered to pay the deposits, 10 per cent., and the auction duty, to Strethill Wright, the auctioneer; who was also the vendor: but he declined receiving either; alleging that it was then late at night; and he had to go eight miles: but he told Finney he would lay down the money; and would settle the same *with him some other time; which [*342] Finney agreed to; and accordingly Wright paid the auction duty, amounting to 77*l.* 19*s.* 6*d.* By the conditions of the sale the purchaser was to have possession of lot 3 immediately, and of the other lots at Michaelmas next; paying the remainder of his purchase-money upon the execution of the conveyance on or before the 29th of September. Finney soon afterwards gave the amount of the auction duty to his attorneys to be paid to Wright; directing them to take a proper receipt. He also sold the crops of hay, grass, and oats, then growing on the premises, comprised in lot 3, for 50*l.*, to a person, who afterwards took possession of the premises in that lot. Finney died before the 50*l.* or any rent became due. An abstract of the title was sent to the attorneys of Finney about the 15th of September; who approved the title; but, before any conveyance, on the 22d of September, Finney died.

The bill was filed by the heirs at law of Finney against the executors, the residuary legatee, and Wright; praying a specific performance of the contract; and that the purchase-money may be paid out of the personal estate.

The answers admitted the agreement. The vendor submitted to perform the contract; and the executor did not object: but the residuary legatee resisted the performance. Wright demanded the money he had paid from the executor; but never received it.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Hall, for the Plaintiffs.—If there were no circumstances of part-performance in this case, the question would be, whether the parol contract was void or not. First, a sale by auction is not within the Statute of Frauds (1). If it is, *the auctioneer putting down the name of the vendee is [*343] sufficient: Simon v. Metivier (2). Secondly, it is clear, that if the parol contract is admitted by the answer, and the Statute is not insisted on, there is a right to the performance of the agreement; though it is now certainly very doubtful, whether, if the Defendant also insists upon the Statute, the Court will compel the performance (3). In this case a subsisting contract is admitted. An executor is not bound to plead the Statute of Frauds any more than the Statute of Limitations. The heirs at law then have a right to the performance of the contract, admitted by the executors and the vendor. The moment the contract was entered into Finney was

(1) Statute 29 Charles II. c. 3.

(2) 1 Black. 599; 3 Burr. 1921.

(3) See ante, vol. vi. 37, in Cooth v. Jackson; and the note, iii. 38, to Pym v. Blackburn.

in equity entitled to the estate ; and continued so at his death. Insisting upon the Statute would disappoint his intention and wishes. These parties are all volunteers ; bound therefore by that, which he intended to bind himself.

But if this point should be against the Plaintiffs, there is a clear part-performance ; which takes this case out of the Statute. Part of the money was paid. Of lot 3 possession has been taken ; and the produce sold. Those acts must amount to part-performance ; and the contract is entire. Though the terms are different, all the lots are sold by and to the same persons. Finney bought by different agents ; who immediately declared themselves trustees. The Conditions of Sale and Particulars relate to a number of lots : but that particular provision as to the possession applies to lot 3 only ; not to the others.

Mr. Martin, for the Defendant, the residuary Legatee. The sales of these lots were distinct, and independent of each [*344] * other. The lots were sold under different conditions and particulars. Therefore acts of part-performance as to one could not affect the others. The effect of such acts depends upon the intention, Quo animo ; and the act must be done with an intention to complete the purchase. The act relied upon by the Plaintiffs, viz., the payment of part of the money by the purchaser to his own agent, is nothing, unless paid over by him : being in truth paying from one hand to the other.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The object of this bill, filed by the co-heirs of the purchaser, is to have the contract carried into execution. The vendor submits to perform the contract. The executors do not object to it. But the residuary legatee contends, that there is no contract this Court ought to execute ; neither a contract in writing, nor part performed. It is insisted by the Plaintiff, that the residuary legatee has no right to object to the performance of a contract, to which the testator himself had no objection. I am of opinion, the Court cannot speculate upon what the deceased would or would not have done ; but the inquiry must be, whether at his death a contract existed, by which he was bound, and which he could be compelled to perform (1). That alone can give the heir a right to call for the personal estate to be applied, or to the personal representative a right to call upon the heir. Whether the executor would or would not perform it, is of no moment. A mere executor has no right to give away the personal estate from the residuary legatee ; who in this case is before the Court ; and undertakes to show, the Plaintiff has no right to call for a performance of the contract.

[*345] * The principle upon which the Court acts for or against the heir, is stated (2) in The Attorney General v. Day, and Lacon

(1) Post, vol. x. 607.

(2) 2 Ves. 220.

v. Mertins (1). The question must be the same, whether a purchase or a sale is insisted on. Was the ancestor himself bound? Was there such an agreement as converts the real estate into personal, or the personal estate into real (a)? I am of opinion, every objection may be taken upon either, which it would have been competent for the deceased to take, if he had resisted the execution in his life. The Plaintiffs say, if it is necessary, and I am of opinion, it is, they can show, there was such an agreement. First, they say, either a sale by auction is not within the Statute of Frauds; or, the auctioneer putting down the name of the vendee is an agreement in writing; and they cite Simon v. Mitivier. But, whatever is the authority of that case, it has been held not to extend to land. It was twice so ruled by Lord Chief Justice Eyre. In Walker v. Constable (2) and Stansfield v. Johnson (3) it was held not sufficient, that the agent wrote down the name (b).

The Plaintiffs then contend, that the agreement is part-performed as to all the lots; and, if not as to all, as to lot No. 3. I am of opinion, this is no part performance. The Revenue Laws ought never to be held to operate, beyond their direct and immediate purpose, to affect the property, and vary the rights of the parties, not within the intention of the act. Upon a sale by auction so much is paid to the vendor as part payment; and so much to the Government, as tax. If the purchaser refuses to pay the tax, his bidding is void. If he pays it, the only consequence is, his bidding has the same effect, as it would have had, if no such law [(346)] had been made, and no other. That, without which there would have been no contract, cannot be said to be in part-performance of the contract. The only contract with the vendor, and which I can enforce, is for the price. But, suppose the payment of the auction duty could be considered part of the price: I do not see, how that could bind the purchaser. In general the party seeking the performance must show a performance on his side; as a reason for the interference of the Court in his favor; for the ground, upon which the Court acts, is fraud in refusing to perform after performance by the other party. The inquiry is, whether Finney, if so disposed, could have resisted the performance; for, if he could, upon the principle I before stated, the heir is not entitled to call for an application of the personal estate for this purpose. Now, his refusal, after paying part of his purchase-money, would be no fraud upon the seller, but his own loss; in this case the loss of the personal estate. Wright having advanced the duty is entitled to call upon the executors. In Lacon v. Mertins the act of part-performance was

(1) 3 Atk. 1; 1 Ves. 312.

(a) See, ante, 341, note (a), to this case.

(2) 1 Bos. & Pul. 306.

(3) 1 Esp. 101. See post, vol. ix. 249, Coles v. Trecottick; Blagden v. Bradbear, xi. 466; Mason v. Armitage, Buckmaster v. Harrop, xiii. 25, 456; Higginson v. Cloves, xv. 516; Kemey v. Proctor, 3 Ves. & Bea. 57; 1 Jac. & Walk. 350.

(b) But see, ante, 341, note (c).

payment of a considerable part of the purchase-money ; and the taking notes was only as a security, in case it should not proceed ; and it was held, that, notwithstanding that, it was in part-performance ; and therefore it was a fraud to refuse performance on the other side.

Another act of part-performance was insisted upon here : the circumstances stated by the witness Barlow relative to lot 3. If this were held to be an act of part-performance, it could not affect any other lot ; for the several lots were included in distinct articles of sale ; and so were unconnected. But even as to this lot I am of opinion, it is not a part-performance. The bargain with Barlow was the mere act of the vendee. The vendor had no [* 347] * prejudice. He had done nothing to entitle him to say, the non-execution was a fraud upon him. If he had let Barlow into possession, that would be an act, by which he might have had a prejudice. All Barlow says is, he is now in possession ; which cannot be taken to be before Finney's death ; and nothing, that passed since, could influence the question : the inquiry being, whether at his death he could have been compelled to perform the agreement. I am aware, there are cases that acts done by the Defendant can be made a ground for compelling him to perform the agreement : but it is difficult to bring those cases to bear : for, to what do such acts amount, when there is no prejudice to the Plaintiff ? Only to proof of the existence of an agreement. The existence of the agreement may be put out of all doubt by the acts : but the objection upon the Statute, that the agreement is not in writing, remains, where it did. The Court does not profess to execute a parol agreement, merely, because it is satisfactorily proved. In Whaley v. Bagenal (1), which being before the House of Lords must supersede the authority of every other case, various acts had been done, which implied, that the party had sold the estate, and did not consider himself any longer the owner of it. The question still remained, whether that agreement should be carried into execution ; and it was held, that the acts done by the Defendant did not entitle the Plaintiff to have it specifically performed.

Upon the whole the Plaintiffs are not entitled to this relief. The bill therefore must be dismissed, but without costs. The vendor must have his costs from the Plaintiffs (2).

[This note has reference also to S. C. 13 Ves. 456.]

1. The rights and the liabilities, both of the heir and the personal representatives of a person deceased, in respect of any contract entered into by him for the purchase or sale of real estates, are to be determined solely by the rights and the liability of the contracting party, as those questions stood at the time of his decease. See, ante, note 5 to Selon v. Slade, 7 V. 265.

2. With respect to the inadmissibility of parol evidence, offered in contradiction or qualification of the written particulars under which a sale by auction has taken place, when such evidence is tendered by a party who seeks specific performance of the contract so varied or qualified, see note 3 to Calverley v. Williams, 1 V. 210.

(1) 6 Bro. P. C. 45.

(2) See the appeal in this cause, post, vol. xiii. 456.

3. The original propriety of the determination has been much doubted, but it seems to be settled, that, when lands are sold by auction, the auctioneer is to be considered as the agent of both parties; and that his taking down the name of the purchaser is a sufficient signature to satisfy the statute of frauds. Kemey v. Proctor, 3 Ves. & Bea. 59; S. C. on appeal, 1 Jac. & Walk. 351; Coles v. Trecothick, 9 Ves. 249. Such signature, however, must either be made in the sale catalogue having the conditions annexed, so as to be connected with, and evince a clear reference thereto; or, if a separate memorandum be so signed, that also must distinctly refer to the conditions. Kenworthy v. Schofield, 2 Barn. & Cress. 947; Emmerson v. Heeks, 2 Taunt. 47; White v. Proctor, 4 Taunt. 209. But, provided the instrument showing the whole of the terms be authenticated, it matters not in what part of the instrument the signature of the name is to be found. Ogilvie v. Foljambe, 3 Meriv. 62. Still, although an auctioneer may, in general, be considered as the agent and witness of both buyer and seller, if the auctioneer be himself the seller, (and be not a mere trustee, but beneficially entitled to the purchase-money,) his signing the name of the buyer will not satisfy the statute, notwithstanding the buyer may at the time have consented thereto: for the agent contemplated by the legislature, as empowered to bind a defendant by his signature, must be some third person, and not the other contracting party upon the record. Farebrother v. Simmons, 5 Barn. & Ald. 385.

4. An appeal from a subordinate branch of the Court of Chancery to the chief thereof, it has been said, is, in effect, only a rehearing; and upon such rehearing new evidence may, according to the present practice, be produced; but, upon an appeal from the Lord Chancellor to the House of Lords, no evidence can be tendered which was not before the Court of Chancery; see note 2 to Hill v. Chapman, 1 V. 405, where the proposed new regulations are stated.

5. As to the effect of part-performance, in taking a contract respecting real estate out of the statute of frauds, and what acts are to be considered such a part-performance as to justify a Court of Equity in decreeing specific execution of the whole, see note 3 to Brodie v. St. Paul, 1 Ves. 326, and the note 1 to Wills v. Stradling, 3 V. 378. The propriety of a reference to the master, to report as to acts of part performance, must depend on the establishment of the preliminary fact, whether the terms of the contract are ascertained; for, if no evidence of the terms has been given, no reference will be directed to supply the absence of this very material part of the case: if the evidence on this head be contradictory and doubtful, a reference, or an issue, to ascertain the fact, may be proper; but, where the precise terms have not been put in issue before publication, it would be holding out an opportunity to the party to supply the defects by fabricated evidence, if an inquiry were directed. Savage v. Carroll, 1 Bell & Bea. 283.

THE EARL OF ILCHESTER, Ex parte.

[1803, APRIL 4; MAY, 21.]

The Lord Chancellor. The Master of the Rolls. Lord Alvanley, Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

- THE proper application to change a guardian is by petition (a). The testator married, but not then having children, gave the guardianship of all his daughters born or to be born to his wife, and of all his sons hereafter to be born to his wife and his brother or the survivor. The guardianship extends to all the children by that or a future marriage, [p. 348b.] A second marriage and the birth of children, the wife and children provided for by settlement, and there being children by the former marriage, a case of exception from the rule, that marriage and the birth of a child revoke a Will (b), [p. 350.] Testamentary appointment of a guardian not revoked by a subsequent testamentary appointment, not executed according to the Statute, and not directly importing revocation (c), [p. 351.] Rule of construction not to make any intendment contrary to the plain and usual sense of the words, unless from other parts of the Will plainly appearing not intended to have that extensive operation, [p. 368.] Though the testator might not have contemplated the event, that will not affect the construction, [p. 369.] By the Common Law a man could not by testamentary disposition affect his lands or the guardianship of his children, [p. 370.] An act inconsistent with the Will, though by some accident, independent of the

(a) See post, 381, Mr. Hovenden's note (1) to this case.

(b) 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 108, 109; 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 523, 524; Sheath v. York, 1 Ves. & Bea. 390. See also, Hodden v. Lloyd, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 540, note (d) by Mr. Eden; Yerby v. Yerby, 3 Call, 334; Israel v. Rodon, 2 Moore, Priv. Coun. 51; Jacks v. Henderson, 1 Desaus, 543; Brush v. Wilkins, 4 John. Ch. 410; Baxter v. Dyer, ante, 5 V. 656, and notes.

(c) As to testamentary guardians, see 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 224, 225, and the notes.

In order to prevent the introduction of loose and uncertain testimony to revoke a will, it is provided, that the revocation must be by another instrument executed in the same manner; or else by burning, &c., with a view to cancellation, by the testator himself, or in his presence by his direction. This is the language of the English statute of frauds, and of the statute law in every part of the United States. 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 520, 521, note (c).

It requires the same capacity to revoke a will as to make one. Allison v. Allison, 7 Dana, 94.

An indorsement made on a will indicating an intention to alter or modify it at a future day, is no revocation. Ray v. Walton, 2 A. K. Marsh. 73. See also Granley v. Garthwaite, 2 Russ. 90.

But words indorsed on a will expressive of an intent that it shall no longer operate as a will is a revocation. Brown v. Thorndike, 15 Pick. 388.

An instrument intended to be a will, but failing of its effect as such on account of some imperfection in its structure, or for want of due execution, cannot be set up for the purpose of revoking a former will, although it contains an express clause of revocation; because it cannot be known that the testator intended to revoke his will, except for the purpose of substituting the other. Laughton v. Atkins, 1 Pick. 535, 543. See Reid v. Borland, 14 Mass. 208.

But a second will, inconsistent with the first, which though perfect in form, &c., yet is inoperative on account of some incapacity in the party for whose benefit it is made to take under it, may be set up as a revocation of the first. Laughton v. Atkins, 1 Pick. 535, 543.

- Will, it fails of effect, is a revocation; as a covenant to make a feoffment and letter of attorney to make livery, but no livery made (a), [p. 370.]
- Parol revocation of Will before the Statute of Frauds (b) [p. 371.]
- Previously to the Statute of Frauds and that as to guardianship, any declaration from which an intention to revoke could be collected, was sufficient, [p. 371.]
- A Will not executed according to the Statute of Frauds has no operation; not even to raise an election against a person taking a benefit in the personal estate, [p. 372.]
- Difference between the 5th and 6th Sections of the Statute of Frauds, [p. 372.]
- Disposition by Will, so as to have legal effect, and afterwards another, by which the former would be revoked, but the other substituted, and it is evident, the testator did not intend revocation for any other purpose than to give it effect: if the second instrument cannot have the effect of disposition, it shall not be a revocation (c), [p. 373.]
- Where the act is valid for the whole purpose, but by disability of the person to take, or some matter dehors or subsequent to the Will, it is ineffectual, it is a revocation (d), [p. 373.]
- A Will may be revoked by an instrument, not attested as would be required, to give it effect. Any disposition, that would by the instrument have completely put an end to that Will, shall have that effect, though the instrument becomes ineffectual by any accident or circumstance dehors the Will, [p. 374.]
- Principle, upon which instruments not duly attested according to the Statute of Frauds are rejected, and even one part may have effect, as to the personal estate, though not as to the real; not even raising a case of election, [p. 375.]
- The rule of the Civil Law required the same solemnity to annul an instrument, that was necessary to its completion: relaxed by Justinian in certain cases as to the revocation of a Will, [p. 376.]
- The rule never adopted in its full extent in this country, [p. 377.]
- Parol revocation of a Will good before the Statute of Frauds, [p. 377.]
- Parol revocation of agreements, [p. 377.]
- Different solemnities by that Statute for the framing and the revocation of Wills, [p. 377.]
- Ground of the cases of feoffment without livery and bargain and sale without enrolment, with respect to revocation of a devise, [p. 378.]
- A perfect and complete Will, inconsistent with the former, is a revocation, though the devisee may never derive benefit from it: otherwise if defectively executed, and incapable as a Will, [p. 379.]
- An express revocation, if only subservient to another purpose, for which it is incompetent, shall not revoke (e) [p. 379.]
- Rule of the Civil Law: "Tunc prius testamentum rumpitur, cum posterius perfectum est," [p. 380.]
- THE late Earl of Ilchester, being married, but not having at that time any children, by his will, dated the 28th February, 1778, and
- (a) A deed executed under circumstances, which make it void in Equity and not at law, is a revocation of a prior will. Simpson v. Walker, 5 Sim. 1.
- So a conveyance, totally inoperative for want of completion or incapacity in the grantee, may amount to a revocation, if it shows the intention of the testator to revoke his will. Walton v. Walton, 7 John. Ch. 269. See Hedges v. Green, 4 Russ. 28.
- But in order to defeat altogether a testamentary disposition, the deed of conveyance must embrace the whole estate devised by the will, otherwise it is a revocation pro tanto only. Hawes v. Humphrey, 9 Pick. 360.
- But a deed obtained by fraud is not a revocation of a prior devise. Hawes v. Wyatt, 3 Bro. C. C. 156.
- (b) See Lawson v. Morrison, 2 Dall. 289; 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 99, 100.
- (c) See note (c) above.
- (d) Laughton v. Atkins, 1 Pick. 535, and note (c) above.
- (e) 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 74, 79; Winsor v. Pratt, 2 Brod. & Bingh. 650; Kirke v. Kirke, 4 Russ. 435; note (c) above.

duly executed to pass real estate, after bequeathing a leasehold house in trust for his wife for her life, and giving her all the household goods, furniture, &c. that should be therein, and the sum of 500*l.*, to be paid upon his decease, committed the care, tuition, and guardianship, of all his daughters born or to be born unto the said Mary, Countess of Ilchester, his wife, during their respective minorities ; and he committed the care, tuition, and guardianship, of all his sons hereafter to be born unto his said wife and his brother Stephen Fox Strangways, or the survivor of them, during their respective minorities. The testator then gave and devised all his estates, subject as to his estates in the county of Dorset to a jointure of 1000*l.* a-year to Lady Ilchester, to the heirs male of his body begotten or to be begotten, and, for want of such issue, to his brother Stephen Fox Strangways, his heirs and assigns for ever ; in case he should be living at the time of the testator's decease ; and in case he should die in the testator's life, then to his youngest brother Charles Fox Strangways, his heirs and assigns for ever ; and he gave [^{* 349]} all his personal estate, * not specifically disposed of, to his said brother Stephen Fox Strangways ; and appointed his said wife and his brother Stephen Fox Strangways executor and executrix.

The testator afterwards made several codicils, giving legacies and various directions. He also left other papers, in his own handwriting, and most of them signed by him, but not attested, entitled " Additional Memoranda ; " the first of which, dated April 3, 1788, soon after the birth of the present Lord Ilchester, is expressed thus :

" I wish, that my friends Mr. Robert Scott and Stephen Digby would be kind enough to act as guardians together with my wife and brother Stephen Strangways, to my son Henry or any other sons that may be hereafter born. ILCHESTER."

Lady Ilchester died in 1790 ; leaving the present Lord Ilchester, her only son, and several daughters surviving.—After her death he wrote the following memorandum, also unattested :

" 1790. In case of any accident happening to me it is my earnest wish, that my dear sister Harriet would take under her care and protection my unfortunate children. I know it is a heavy and an anxious task ; yet on consideration of the love she bore their dearest mother and the forlorn and helpless situation they will be in I am inclined to hope and think she will undertake it. My dear Eliza though young has good sense and heart full of tenderness ; and I do not doubt but she will assist her aunt to the best of her abilities ;

[* 350] and prove a mother to her younger sisters and brother ; who will need to have the best of principles *instilled in him, before he is sent adrift to a public school. Good principles once fixed in him will stay with him for ever."

The testator then observing, that his daughters cannot have very large fortunes, there being so many, expressed a wish, that Harry, should he have the advantage of a long minority, would add 2000*l.*

a-piece to them, if his fortune can prudently bear it ; and proceeded thus :

" I mean, he should go first to a small school and afterwards at a proper age to Eton, should that school be then in good repute. I have requested my dear brother Stephen, Mr. S. Digby, and Mr. Scott, to be his guardians after the time my sister shall think fit to give him up ; which I should think would be about the age of ten, or, when he goes to a public school. I request his guardians would endeavor to sell Redlynch for him, if it can be done to his advantage."

Then followed some other directions and legacies. Some of the other papers also gave legacies and annuities, and directions to his son and the guardians, by the general description " my son's guardians."

In August 1794 the testator married Maria Digby. By the settlement on that marriage, dated the 27th of August, estates in the counties of Dorset and Somerset were conveyed to the use of the testator for life ; with remainder, subject to a jointure of 1500*l.* a-year, to him, his heirs, and assigns for ever ; and by a deed of appointment of the same date, reciting his former marriage settlement in 1781 of an estate in Somersetshire upon himself for life, with remainder, subject to a jointure of 500*l.* a-year, to the first and other sons of the * marriage, in tail male, [* 851] with power to him, in the event of his surviving, to appoint 500*l.* a-year by way of jointure, charged upon that estate, to any future wife, he executed that power in favor of his second lady. It was admitted at the hearing, that there was a provision by this settlement for the children of this marriage. By this marriage there was issue two sons, William Fox Strangways and Giles Fox Strangways.

The last testamentary paper was written and signed by the testator, but not attested ; and was thus expressed :

" December 8th, 1801. A Codicil to be considered as part of my Will.

" I will, that Maria, my present wife, do act as sole and only guardian to all my children : and do sincerely desire her to take that trust upon her.

" I do also desire, that she may have my house, gardens, &c. with the use of the park at Redlynch to reside in herself, if she chooses, for her life ; or, if she prefers the house at Abbotsbury for that purpose, then that she should have that house to reside in herself for her life : if she does not however reside in either of the houses, that they should be let for the advantage of my eldest son. If she chooses to reside in either of the houses, then that house, whichever it may be, to be kept in repair for her at the expense of my eldest son."

The testator died in September 1802. A petition was presented by the present Lord Ilchester, of the age of fourteen, and the other children of the testator, two sons and two daughters, to the Master

The other objection, is, that no case has yet occurred, in which a second marriage and birth of children by the second wife, there being also children by the first marriage, have been held a revocation. There is no such case: but a second marriage, with children, there being no children by the first marriage, was decided to be a revocation in Christopher v. Christopher. Gibbons v. Caunt (1) was under circumstances something like these: but the question certainly was not decided. Some doubt was expressed by Lord Alvanley; but certainly the inclination of his mind was, that the second marriage would be a revocation. But how is the exception to be framed? Not upon the circumstance, that there are children by both marriages; for suppose, before the death of the testator all the children by the first are dead; there is just the same reason, as strongly applicable: the same alteration of circumstances occurs: the testator dying with quite a new family: that new family in existence the only persons having strong claims upon his bounty; all the others being removed. That exception therefore must admit of this exception out of it; introducing all the inconvenience of exceptions grafted upon exceptions. A rule of law ought to be laid down without [*356] reference to particular cases: *for there can be no rule, that will not be liable to some cases of inconvenience. In Kenebel v. Scrafton the Court seem to have attended very much to the particular circumstances. A case might be put upon that, in which it would be quite clear, that decision would have frustrated the intention; as, if it had happened, that there were many children born before the marriage, and only one born after: all the children born before marriage must have been unprovided for: legitimate children only taking under the description of children (2).

But the strongest ground for submitting, that there is not at present any testamentary guardian of these petitioners, is the other; that the instrument of 1801 is a revocation of the appointment of their uncle. Upon the birth of the eldest son the testator seems to have changed his intention; and from the paper written soon after the death of the first Lady Ilchester a clear intention appears at that time, that his brother and the other persons should not be guardians till the period, to which he points. The statute is entirely silent as to the manner, in which a will appointing a guardian may be revoked. There can be no doubt, that, if the Statute of Frauds (3) had not interfered, a will devising land might be revoked without witnesses. This is analogous to the cases upon the Statute of Wills (4), before the Statute of Frauds. In that period the will, though it must have been in writing, might have been revoked by parol; and there are many cases in Roll's Abridgment (5), Dyer (6), Shep-

(1) Ante, vol. iv. 840; see the note, 848.

(2) Ante, Cartwright v. Vaudry, vol. v. 530; see the note, 534.

(3) Stat. 29 Ch. II. c. 3.

(4) Stat. 32 Hen. VIII. c. 1; 34 Hen. VIII. c. 5.

(5) 1 Rol. Ab. 614.

(6) Dy. 310.

pard's Touchstone, and other books. It is very difficult to distinguish that from this: but in Onions v. Tyrer (1) something is said by Lord Cowper, upon which an objection will be taken; that, even if by the latter will the premises had been given to a third person, it should never have let in the heir; as the meaning of the second will was to give to the second devisee what it had taken from the first, without any consideration had to the heir, &c. The decision was not upon this ground. By the Statute of Frauds a will may be revoked either by a subsequent will or other writing. In that case it was impossible to consider the subsequent instrument as a mere writing of revocation. If it was not a revocation, as being a will, it was no revocation. It was not a will; not being attested, as the Statute requires. Neither of the modes pointed out by the Statute, which by the latter expression must mean a formal revocation and nothing more, was followed. The reasons of the decision are very fully stated in the decree itself (2). Upon some cases there is great reason for doubting the authority of that decision; unless it proceeds upon the distinction in the Statute of Frauds (3) between a will and any other writing: but the reason, upon which that must proceed, cannot apply to this case. From a devise by the second instrument to a different person, the inference is, that another person had by some means acquired higher claims upon the bounty of the devisor; and that he preferred that person: but it is very difficult from thence to infer any intention in favor of the heir. That would be a very strong inference.

A testamentary guardian exists only by the act of the testator under the Statute of Charles II. He has very important * powers; that may influence the happiness of the ward [* 358] all the rest of his life; among others, that of preventing marriage under the Marriage Act (4). Suppose such a change of circumstances in this long period, twenty-three years, making the party the most unfit person to be the guardian; and another instrument is made, absolutely excluding that person; and declaring, that another person shall be sole guardian: that cannot stand upon the same ground as a disposition of real and personal estate; for there is no one, upon whom that duty will devolve. There would be no testamentary guardian, if the latter appointment could not take effect: nor could the Court substitute one; for, though the Court may appoint a guardian, he will not have the powers of a testamentary guardian. The consequence in the case of a devise of real estate, that the testator would give to a person, to whom he does not mean to give, does not apply to this case; and that case, before Lord Cowper, therefore can have no application. But, if it had, how can it be distinguished from the case of a devise of land to a person,

(1) 1 P. Will. 343.

(2) Stated from the Register's Book by Mr. Cox, 1 P. Will. 345, n.

(3) Sect. 5 and 6.

(4) Stat. 26 Geo. II. c. 33.

who cannot take, revoking a former devise; as in the instances in Roll's Abridgment (1) of a devise to a corporation, Rooper v. Constable (2), Rooper v. Radcliffe (3); which went to the House of Lords upon another point; the parties acquiescing in this. Hawes v. Wyatt (4) is in opposition to Hick v. Mors (5): but that case was not cited upon the former. Hyde v. Hyde (6). Shove v. Pinke (7), Beard v. Beard (8). The principle, upon which all these cases were decided, is directly applicable to this; that, though [¶ 359] the second instrument * cannot take effect as a will, yet it is a revocation; and it is much stronger in this instance; upon which your Lordship has not to determine between different claimants, as devisee and heir at law, or legatees and next of kin; but merely, whether a testamentary appointment of guardian exists. It is clear, that in 1788 the testator did not intend his brother to be sole guardian; and as clear, that in 1801 he was not intended to have any part of the guardianship. No particular form of revocation is necessary: Lord Shaftesbury v. Hannam (9). Cranwell v. Sanders (10). As the appointment is sufficient, provided the intention is sufficiently apparent, so is the revocation. In Burtonshaw v. Gilbert (11) Lord Mansfield states another ground for Lord Cowper's opinion in Onions v. Tyre, namely, that the cancelling was by mistake. Your Lordship will not for the first time throw any difficulty in the way of the revocation of so important a trust; and will also consider the feelings of the children, placed under the guardianship of a person, appointed twenty years ago, against the plain intention of their father.

Another question is, whether the appointment ought to be immediate, or by a reference to the Master. The Court has in many cases appointed in the first instance the person pointed out by the testator; and it is the stronger; as in this instance the intention fails only by want of form: otherwise there would be a good appointment under the Statute.

Mr Richards and Mr. Fonblague, against the Petition.—A petition is the proper mode; and preferable to a bill.

[¶ 360] *Upon the first point, it is certainly too late now to dispute the cases, that have established this rule of revocation; which, however, is improperly called a rule, being only a presumption of facts forming an exception, not within the direct words of the Statute of Frauds; but a revocation implied, either upon the

(1) 1 Roll's Ab. 614.

(2) 8 Vin. 141.

(3) 10 Mod. 233; 1 Bro. P. C. 450.

(4) 3 Bro. C. C. 156.

(5) Amb. 215.

(6) 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 408.

(7) 5 Term Rep. B. R. 124, 310.

(8) 3 Atk. 72.

(9) Finch, 323.

(10) Cro. Jam. 497.

(11) Cowp. 49.

ground of the total change of circumstances, inferring a change of intention, or upon an implied condition, that in certain events that will was not to operate. This presumption has always given way in two cases: where there are children by the first marriage; and, where a provision is made for the children by the second: Thompson v. Sheppard (1): Gray v. Altham (2): Jackson v. Hurlock (3); and according to Lord Mansfield in Brady v. Cubitt (4) there must be a farther requisite to raise it; that the disposition is of the whole property. The question is not, whether your Lordship is to act upon the rule, but to extend it to a case never yet decided. The testator had the wife and children in contemplation. By the settlement made on the second marriage he makes an anxious provision for that wife and those children; a settlement ample enough to rebut the presumption. The very act of the settlement takes away pro tanto the provision for the children of the first marriage; and transfers it to those of the second. Can the act be said to be a revocation, when a provision is made for those objects, in whose favor the revocation is to be presumed? The quantum of the provision is a circumstance, to which the Court will not look. It is alarming to extend this to the case, where there are children by the first marriage. Suppose the provision made for the younger children, not for the eldest only: the consequence would be, that the eldest would take the whole estate, discharged from any provision charged upon it for the other children; and the father might [ 361] have no personal estate. It might also destroy the provision for the children by the second marriage. The rule must be carried to this extent; and there is as little principle as authority for thus extending it. Suppose, a father with seven or eight children, not expecting any more, disposes of his property among them by will; and afterwards marries again; and has another child. He must be taken to mean, that the child of the second marriage should partake with the others; and this doctrine must be carried to the extent, that, whenever a circumstance happens, upon which it would be clear, that he would have made a different provision, the will is revoked. Suppose, there were daughters only by the first marriage, provided for by the will; and a second marriage takes place, and the birth of a son by that marriage: that accident would sweep away the provision for those equally objects of the bounty and the duty of the parent. The presumption cannot with any attention to justice be carried farther.

Upon the second question it is contended, that the codicil, though inoperative for the purpose of substituting a guardian, is operative for the purpose of revocation. The Statute of Wills does not point out any ceremony, but merely a writing, to denote what the testator meant to do with his property; and it was held that a very slight

(1) Amb. 490, margin.

(2) Cited Amb. 490.

(3) Amb. 487.

(4) Doug. 30.

matter, writing certainly, would revoke a testamentary disposition ; and farther, that even parol declarations would amount to a revocation. It is to be remembered, that this codicil is a mere paper-writing, not under seal, not executed with any solemnity. At this moment any interest in a mere paper-writing without seal may be waived by parol ; an agreement for instance : but if under seal, it could not be done away without seal. The object of the Statute of Frauds was not merely to authenticate the instrument, but to secure its effect, when *authenticated ; and that object would be much endangered, if the validity of the instrument was to depend upon a change of purpose, evidenced by parol. In this instance the Statute expressly requires the presence of two witnesses. Why should it be undone without the same solemnity ? Can it be compared to cases upon the Statute of Wills, requiring no solemnity ? Where is the principle for undoing such an appointment without some form ? No authority is produced. There is great reason for requiring, that it should be with two witnesses, the ceremony required for giving life and activity to the intention appointing. Your Lordship is called upon for the first time without any authority, affording even analogy, to decide, that an act undisputably good according to the Statute, should be avoided by what merely shows the private intention. That opinion of Lord Cowper is right ; and has been followed. The testator clearly intended to take from the first and to give to the second devisee ; and, that the heir should not take. It follows then, that the old will, which was revoked only to let in the other, must stand ; as if the revocation had been only for one purpose ; which fails entirely in form and substance. In Limbery v. Mason (1) the same principle prevailed. In the cases referred to, a devise to a person, who cannot take, &c. the instrument is complete ; the intent perfect : but the law will not allow it to be carried into execution. It does not fail from any defect of the instrument. In the cases of imperfect conveyances the instrument is perfect at the moment : the bargain and sale is good till the end of the six months : so upon a feoffment, when livery is made, the estate passes out of the feoffer from the execution of the deed. The instrument is perfect ; and the intention, that the first devisee should not take, is complete. In this case, where the [*363] supposed intention * was not completed, the instrument was never perfect, and the interest has never shifted, why should it go, as if there was no appointment ? As to the inconvenience, that a person appointed guardian twenty years ago might not now be a proper guardian, cases of inconvenience may be put for ever ; as upon a devise not executed according to the statute the estate may go to a person, to whom the testator had the greatest reason not to give it. If the act is not sufficient in law, the inconvenience must follow. The Court cannot control the appointment of an improper guardian ; though they may control his conduct.

When the Court is in possession of the will duly appointing a guardian, why should they receive evidence short of that, which is required for an appointment? The purpose was the protection of these children. The testator might have intended to clothe this guardian with powers, which your Lordship could not give to any other guardian. Before those powers, to which he intended to subject his children, are reduced, your Lordship ought to be satisfied, that there was a change of that purpose, by evidence rising as high as that, by which it was proved.

Upon the last question, whether your Lordship would appoint a guardian now, or upon a reference to the Master, there is no instance of an appointment in the first instance, except in the case of natural children; and a reference is particularly proper, where there has been an attempt to appoint by an imperfect instrument.

Mr. Romilly in reply.—Scarcely any question has been brought into more doubt, than whether parol evidence can be received to rebut this presumption. Lord Alvanley's opinion in Gibbons v. Caunt is against it; and Lord Rosslyn's (1) in [ 364] Kenebel v. Scrafton; and the Court of King's Bench declared, it was unnecessary to decide that question. Where is this rule of law found, as confined to children by the first marriage? The claim upon the parent applies just as much to the other case. Those, who endeavor to establish an exception to the rule, ought to produce authority; as they do not attempt to go upon principle. The rule has been laid down as to marriage generally, without reference to the first or second. Thompson v. Sheppard cannot be considered an authority; the circumstances not being at all stated. The same objection applies to Gray v. Altham. I admit, the rule is laid down, that the will must dispose of all the property; and this is a disposition of the whole, both real and personal. It is now of importance to know, what the settlement was; for many settlements might put an end to all question: if, for instance, it was a covenant, that the testator should be considered a freeman of London. Suppose, a testator having disposed of all his property should marry a woman with very little property; and he should settle that: would that prevent the revocation? Every presumption would exist as strong. Is it not better to follow the rule without ingrafting particular exceptions upon it?

As to the second point, there is no rule of law, that an instrument cannot be revoked without the same forms, that are necessary to give it validity originally. The Statute of Frauds proceeds upon the presumption, that there is no such rule; having a clause, expressing, that the devise shall not be revoked without three witnesses. The clause as to nuncupative wills (2) also proves, that but for that express provision a will in writing might be [ 365] revoked by parol; and the same conclusion follows from

(1) Ante, vol. v. 664.

(2) Sect. 22.

Onions v. Tyrer, and Eccleston v. Speak (1). So an agreement relating to land may be determined by parol; and the writing only is necessary for that, and not attestation also. If the form can be dispensed with, it is not material, what that form is. It is doubtful, whether a revocation of an appointment of guardian must be by a testamentary act; or whether a testamentary appointment must be proved in the Spiritual Court. In Lady Chester's Case (2) a prohibition was granted. The intention in none of the cases was to give to the heir, but to revoke only for a particular purpose; which could not take effect: yet the estate went to the heir. The only decisions against those are Eccleston v. Speak, and Onions v. Tyrer; in both which the estate was devised by the second will to the same person; and the intention was only to carry it into effect more substantially. So in Limbery v. Mason the intention was, not to defeat the first will, but to do the same thing more completely; and the Court would most reluctantly have determined against the intention. An appointment by deed may be revoked by will. Lord Shaftesbury v. Hannam (3).

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—If the points upon this petition had been confined to that, which arises upon the second marriage and the birth of children by that marriage, under the circumstances, in which that marriage and the birth of those children took place in this particular case, notwithstanding that question must have been determined, not merely with respect to this matter of guardianship, but must have had relation to, and effect [* 366] upon, the property of this family,* which I take to be considerable, I should not have been justified in giving the Master of the Rolls and the Lord Chief Justice the trouble of attending upon that point; for I had no considerable doubt at first, nor has that been increased since, that the second marriage and the birth of children by that marriage should not under all the circumstances be taken to be a revocation. My opinion is, it ought not to be so considered. I am happy to find, the Master of the Rolls and the Lord Chief Justice concur with me upon that; and, without stating any opinion upon the cases, that have been cited, I may state the sentiments of us all to be, that, where a testator stands in the circumstances, which appear in this case, with regard to the children of the prior marriage, and the circumstances, in which he placed himself, as to the children of the second marriage, this case forms a case of exception. I do not go farther; for it is too obvious from what has since passed, that from the rule, originally adopted and now settled, whether to be considered a rule of law or a presumption, whether going upon the intention or an implied condition, those difficulties have arisen, which some judicial persons, one in particular, foresaw. I think it better therefore to confine the opinion in these terms ; that under all the circumstances of this case, this appointment is not revoked by the subsequent marriage and birth of children.

(1) 3 Mod. 258; Show. 89.

(2) Vent. 207.

(3) Finch, 323.

The point, upon which we wish to take a little time to consider, is the other ; whether this codicil, most clearly demonstrating, that to the extent of effectuating the special purpose the testator meant to revoke the appointment by the will, but being incomplete for the effect of appointing a guardian, shall be sufficient to revoke the appointment of a guardian by testament. That depends upon two points : First, whether the want * of two witnesses would have made it ineffectual, even if this codicil [* 367] upon the face of it proposed a purpose of revocation in all events : Secondly, if not professing that general purpose of revocation, whether the circumstance of expressing a special purpose will make it ineffectual as to that appointment, because ineffectual to accomplish that special purpose. That will depend upon the points very ably put in the argument. The question takes this turn ; whether, as it is necessary under the Statute, that the instrument, whether a deed, which I take to be only a testamentary instrument in the form of a deed, or a will, should be executed in the presence of two witnesses, the Statute not using the same expression as the Statute of Frauds, it is therefore also necessary, that any instrument revoking that shall be executed in the presence of two witnesses. It is argued, that it is not necessary ; but that any thing, that can be admitted as evidence of a change of intention, is sufficient ; though by an instrument not attended with the same forms and ceremonies as the original instrument. That is said to follow from this, that the Statute of Wills would admit of a parol revocation, if the Statute of Frauds had not been made ; and upon the latter Statute many cases are to be collected, in which certain ceremonies are prescribed as necessary to the creation of an instrument, which may be destroyed without those ceremonies. With respect to the difference between the 5th and 6th Sections of that Statute it may be observed, that a will is made revocable by a great variety of acts. The three witnesses are all witnesses to the sanity, as well as to other circumstances. But he may obliterate or cancel the will in the presence of no one ; or if before a single person, his proof will destroy the will : yet there is not the same guard. The argument is worthy attention, that, if that clause had not directed, that a revocation in writing should be with three witnesses, it would have been inferred without * those circumstances of [* 368] attestation. Upon agreements and in other instances the Statute affords inferences for the same point.

May 21st. Lord ALVANLEY, Chief Justice, stated the case ; and delivered his opinion :

The questions are : First, whether the will of 1778, giving the guardianship of the daughters of the late Earl of Ilchester to his first lady, and of his sons to her and his brother, or the survivor, must, according to the true construction and legal effect of that clause, be restrained to the children of the marriage at that time; or whether it extends to all the children he might have by that or any future marriage: next, whether, supposing all are included, the paper signed by the testator in 1801 has revoked the appointment of guardian by that will.

If I was at liberty to indulge conjecture, I should certainly be apt to suppose, he had not in his contemplation any future marriage. I have read this will with an anxious desire to satisfy myself, that I could state to your Lordship as my judicial opinion, that it would admit of the restrained construction: but upon the rules and principles, that I have ever thought it my duty to observe in the administration of justice, I have ever thought it imposed upon me not to make any intendment contrary to the plain and usual sense of the words used; unless from other parts of the will I could plainly see, that the testator could not have intended them to have that extensive operation the words themselves could carry; and upon this will and all the other instruments, if I can take them into consideration, I cannot see any decisive inference, that necessarily and unavoidably this testator must have meant to restrain the guardianship to the children of his then wife. It cannot be denied, [*369] *that the survivorship as between the brother and the wife was not confined to a survivorship to commence after the testator's death; for it is clear, though the wife died before him, the brother would have been the guardian of any sons by his deceased wife. It cannot therefore be construed "provided they both survive." The word "survivor" must have its natural meaning: namely, whether both survive him, or only one; and though, considering it as the case of a wife, it must be supposed, that the testator had not in his contemplation any sons but those of that marriage, yet it has been repeatedly determined, and is not to be departed from, that though he might not have contemplated the event, that happened, yet that will not affect the construction. I cannot illustrate it better than by supposing, that he had accompanied the guardianship by a bequest to any sons he might have: then all the inclination of the Court would be to include after-born sons; which proves the impropriety of being swayed against the natural import of the words by argument, that probably correspond with the intention. I must therefore reluctantly declare my opinion, that in point of law this clause extended to all the children either by that or any future marriage; and is not to be restrained to children by that marriage only.

Your Lordship having disposed of the question, whether the subsequent marriage and birth of children effected a revocation, the next question is, whether the testator's brother being as the survivor constituted by this clause the guardian of all sons by that or any future marriage, the paper-writing of the 8th of December, 1801, is a revocation of that clause. That paper was made after the other papers, pointing to the guardianship he supposed to exist; intimating either, that he had given the guardianship, or, that he intended by some sufficient instrument to confer it. He unfortunately neglected to * procure this eodicil to be attested by [*370] two witnesses ; and the question is, whether, notwithstanding it will not have the effect of giving the guardianship to Lady Ilchester, it nevertheless operates as a revocation of the clause in the will creating the guardianship in his brother, the survivor of the two persons appointed. This will in a great measure depend upon the determinations as to wills of land. It is clear, by the Common Law a man could not by any testamentary disposition affect either his land or the guardianship of his children. The latter appears never to have been made the subject of testamentary disposition till the Statute 12 Charles II. It is impossible to contend, that it was comprehended under the Statute 32 Henry VIII. Till that time, as to land, and as to guardianship till the later Statute of Charles II. the law pointed out the person to succeed, and it was incompetent to the party by any testamentary act to alter the succession of the person to inherit the real estate, or, whom the law pointed out as guardian ; whether the party died intestate, or not. Very soon after the Statute, authorizing devises of land, the question arose, what sort of testamentary acts would be sufficient to revoke them ; and it was soon determined, that an act inconsistent with the will, though by some accident independent of the instrument, it failed of effect, yet produced a revocation. Therefore upon a covenant to make a feoffment to the use of the covenantor and Mary, the daughter of the covenantee, whom he intended to marry, which covenant was executed by letter of attorney to make livery, and livery was made of one manor, but not of the other land, it was contended in Montague v. Jeffereys (1), that as the intention of feoffment would not have full effect for want of the livery, the devise was revoked only as to the manor. *The Book says, it seemed (that is the expression) to the Court a countermand of the whole. My opinion is, that is right; for there was no defect in the instrument making a different disposition. That was complete ; if the act had been done after the execution. The party made the letter of attorney, authorizing a person to do the act, which would have made it complete ; and that has been determined since the Statute of Frauds to be a revocation of a will of lands according to the Statute.

Upon the question as to parol revocations, a great number of cases are alluded to in Roll's Abridgment (2) : in which the question has been determined, in a manner forbidding your Lordship to say, they are wrong, that if there is a devise according to the Statute, and a revocation by parol in the presence of certain persons, and the testator says, that, when he comes to D. he will alter it, and before he comes to D. he is murdered, it is a revocation, though not in writing. The great question has been, whether inchoate acts, inconsistent, shall revoke: but in all the cases it is admitted, that if the act gives power to destroy the will, though the act is not done, yet the will is revoked. I collect then, that previously to the Statute of Frauds or the Statute of Charles II. as to guardianship, any declaration, from which an intention to revoke could be collected, would have been sufficient, equally as if it was in writing. That continued as to land down to the Statute of Frauds. But the Statute 12 Charles II. intervened. It is extremely material to observe the words of that Statute; for it is necessary to contrast them with those of the Statute of Frauds. Nothing appears to have arisen, bearing upon this question in point of the construction of this Statute as to the power of revocation by parol, prior to the Statute of Frauds. The words of that Statute as to [*372] devises of land are much more *extensive than those of the Statute 12 Charles II. The words in the Statute of Frauds (1) "or else they shall be utterly void and of none effect" are the foundation of those determinations, which have in subsequent times worked so much injustice; that wills not executed according to the Statute have no operation; not even to raise an election against a person taking a benefit in the personal estate (2). Those words do not occur in the Statute 12 Charles II. The difference between the 5th and 6th Sections of the Statute of Frauds is most singular; and, if I am at liberty to impute mistake to the Legislature, it is hardly possible not to suppose it in this instance; and to imagine, that they meant to institute one sort of revocation, so nearly approaching, and not exactly conformable, to the mode of disposition prescribed. But this is demonstration, that by the Common Law an act might not be sufficient to give, that might be sufficient to revoke: the Legislature specifying, what shall be sufficient to revoke. It was enforced at the Bar, that if that clause of revocation had not been inserted, a parol revocation might have been sufficient even after the Statute; and this is legislative authority, that a revocation need not have been accompanied with all the sanction of disposition; especially when the sanction prescribed differs from that, by which a disposition is to be made.

(1) Moor, 4, 291 ; 1 Rol. Ab. 615. For the general law of revocation, see Brydges v. The Duchess of Chandos, ante, vol. ii. 417 ; and the note, 437.

(2) 1 Roll's Ab. 614.

A great number of decisions have been made upon revocation since the Statute; and from Eccleston v. Speak and Onions v. Tyre it has been held, that, where a disposition is made, so as to have legal effect, and afterwards another, by which the former [*373] would be revoked, *but the other substituted, and it is evident, that the testator, though using the means of revocation, could not intend it for any other purpose than to give effect to another disposition, though, if it had been a mere revocation, it would have had effect, yet, the object being only to make way for another disposition, if the instrument cannot have that effect, it shall not be a revocation. In those cases the testator, so far from intending to revoke, only took other means of carrying the purpose into effect; for in both the uses were the same. In Onions v. Tyrer the Lord Chancellor thought it necessary to express in the decree the reasons; which is very uncommon now; and was not usual even then. The essential circumstance in those cases is, that the disposition was the same; and therefore they do not go the length of this case.

(1) Sect. 5.

(2) Post, Sheldon v. Goodrich, vol. viii. 481, and the note, 497.

There are many other cases, of a different sort; where the act done was set aside: the act in itself upon the face of it being valid for the whole purpose: but by some circumstance, either disability in the person to take, or some matter dehors or subsequent to the Will, it was ineffectual; and then upon the principle of Montague v. Jeffereys it was a revocation. Beard v. Beard (1) is a case of that sort. There are two cases, Hawes v. Wyatt and Hick v. Mors, which do not bear much upon this question: but as the decree in Hawes v. Wyatt was reversed, and as the great authority of the noble Lord, who reversed that decree, may be brought in some degree to bear upon this subject, I shall make some observations upon them. In that case the son after the disposition went abroad. During his life he never intimated any intention to quarrel with it. The bill was filed to set it aside upon the exertion of parental authority, such, that * this Court would not permit an instrument so obtained to stand; and I was of opinion, that the deed could not operate against the heirs of the son: yet I was of opinion, it would revoke the will; for the son thought it absolutely revoked; and therefore to permit it to stand would be against the principle. Lord Thurlow differed upon that: but I believe Hick v. Mors was not then adverted to. But now there is the authority of Lord Hardwicke, that such an instrument is sufficient to revoke a will (2).

Those cases afford these principles; that a will may be revoked by an instrument not attested, as would be required in order to give it effect; that any disposition, which would by the instrument in question have completely and entirely put an end to that will, shall have that effect: though the instrument by any accident or circumstance dehors the Will becomes ineffectual; as in Beard v. Beard, and Rooper v. Radcliffe; as if the person becomes incapable of taking. Shove v. Pincke (3) struck me at first, and according to the margin of the Report it seems, as if the Court had almost determined the question. The point argued by Serjeant Shepherd is, that there was no power to make the deed; and as the deed was in itself good for nothing, it was not a revocation. The Counsel on the other side was stopped. By the judgment and certificate it is clear, the Court did not intend to decide that question; but determined upon another question: namely, that the deed was not null and void ; but operated as a covenant to stand seised to uses. This puts that case entirely out of the question ; for it was not determined on this ground. The certificate, independent of the reasoning, is decisive, that this question did not arise ; and there is nothing in the judgment or the reasons, from which it is to be collected, [* 375] that they * determined upon that ground, except in the preamble of Lord Kenyon's judgment ; where the words are certainly extremely wide ; and in their widest sense would embrace this question. But his Lordship clearly decides, and certifies as the ground of the decision, what shows, that this question never arose ; namely, that the deed was valid, as a covenant to stand seised to uses. There is therefore no authority in the way of this proposition ; that an instrument, imperfect to the point, to which it is directed, shall operate as a revocation of a will duly attested.

(1) 3 Atk. 72.

(2) See post, vol. viii. 283; ante, vi. 215.

(3) 5 Term Rep. 124, 310.

As to the principle, upon which Courts are at liberty to reject all instruments not duly attested, by which wills may be revoked or altered, and even to permit one part of the instrument to have effect, as to the personal estate, though not as to the real estate, that must proceed upon this ; that wills of land or guardianship requiring to be attested in a particular manner, if the testator leaves an instrument, which cannot have the effect of giving the land, but is sufficient to give personal estate, the person entitled under it may claim the personal estate ; and if he is heir, he may take the real estate ; only upon this ground ; that if a person having power to give by a certain mode has executed that power, and afterwards disposing by a mode not effectual, and having no operation, until accompanied by certain solemnities, neglects to add those solemnities, the Court can consider that instrument only as an intimation of what he would do ; and not having consummated it by the solemnities required, he leaves it an inchoate act, not competent to any purpose whatsoever. Those are the principles, upon which a will, rejected totally as to one part, not even raising a case of election, and effect being given to it as to the other, upon the clause in the Statute of Frauds, declaring the will null and void, must proceed ; and though those words are [* 376] not * contained in the Statute 12 Charles II. yet it requires that the will must be executed in the presence of two witnesses. But I admit, that, if the object of this instrument was to revoke, though it was not sufficient to give the guardianship to another, it must have had that effect. But the object was to make a new guardian ; which was attempted by an insufficient instrument, not sufficient to revoke the appointment of guardian, and not effectual to appoint another.

My opinion therefore is, that the writing, dated the 8th of December, 1801, is not sufficient to revoke the will, so far as it is an appointment of the testator's brother as guardian, as surviving the first Lady Ilchester.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The first point having been already disposed of, with respect to the second, the codicil, said to be a revocation, though not a valid appointment of a new guardian, the Statute of Charles II. authorizing a father to appoint a guardian by deed, executed in his life, or by will with two or more witnesses, is silent as to the manner, in which such appointment may be revoked. But it has been contended against this application, that as a solemnity is prescribed for the appointment, the revocation ought to be authenticated by a solemnity of the same sort. The Civil Law, proceeding upon the rule, "nihil tam conveniens est naturali aequitati quam unumquodque dissolvi eo ligamine quo ligatum est," required the same solemnity to annul an instrument, that was necessary to its perfection. Till the time of Justinian seven witnesses were required to the revocation as well as the completion of an instrument. That Emperor decreed, that in certain cases a mere revocation might be with three witnesses. But the rule was never adopted in its full extent in this country. The Statute of * Wills prescribed writing : yet it was held, that a [* 377] parol revocation was sufficient. It is determined, that agreements in writing, and required by the Statute of Frauds to be in writing, may be determined by parol ; and it is observable, that different solemnities are required by the Statute for the framing and for the revocation of wills. I should therefore have been of opinion, that, if the professed object of the codicil had been only a direct revocation, that object would have been accomplished, though without two witnesses. But this instrument has no words of direct revocation, nor any other indication of an intention to revoke than by an attempt to make a new appointment. It is contended, however, that the intention so indicated ought to prevail ; and that the codicil, though not effectual as to the appointment of the guardianship, constitutes a revocation, and if an intention absolutely to revoke the first appointment could with certainty be collected from the design to substitute another guardian, it ought to be held a revocation of the first appointment ; for, if I am right, the Court has before it an instrument capable of operating as a revocation, if a revocation is contained in it ; as it would, if the intention was sufficiently manifested. There can be no doubt, that part of the intention was to revoke the appointment ; otherwise Lady Ilchester could not be the only guardian. But the question is, whether that was the substantive, direct object, or only as an incidental and necessary part of the ultimate object ; and whether it would ever have been entertained except with a reference to that. A new devise might be expressed so as to show absolutely and at all events an intention to annul the former ; as if he showed a dislike of the person first appointed. That might show an intention absolutely to revoke. But, where there is nothing but the mere fact of a new devise, the intention to revoke can be considered only with reference to the * new devise, and as the testator means to give effect to it ; [* 378] and if the instrument is so made as to be incapable of operating, I cannot conceive, how an instrument, inoperative to its direct purpose, can give effect to an intention, of which I know nothing but by that purpose. I know nothing of this intention but by the manifestation of the other. There is no legal certainty. The Statute has prescribed the mode, by which alone the intention to appoint a guardian can be effectually shown. If that is not pursued, he does not furnish complete evidence of his intention. Upon a devise of land by an unattested will no notice can be taken of the intention, so as to raise a case of election. The answer is, it is not competent to him to express an intention as to land by such an instrument. The cases of feoffment without livery and bargain and sale without enrolment do not effect this. The reasoning in those cases is, that the instrument is complete. There is no intrinsic defect to prevent its being read as full evidence of the intention to pass the land, and revoke the devise. It is from something extrinsic and subsequent to the complete manifestation of the intention by the instrument, that the effect it is in its own nature capable of producing is prevented.

In each of the cases in Roll's Abridgment (1) the party had done all ; and the intention failed from a circumstance extrinsic. In one case a complete power of attorney authorizing a person to make livery was executed : but the livery was not made. In the other, a grant of a reversion before devised, the tenant did not attorn. That did not take from the sufficiency of the grant, fully and legally manifesting the intention of the grantor. It is said in Roll (2), that if there is a devise to one by will in writing, and a subsequent devise to ^[* 379] another by parol, the latter, though void as a will, is a revocation of the former. That is given as a dictum of Lord Chief Justice Popham, not as a decision ; and cannot be supported ; if I am right in these principles. It is said, Rooper v. Radcliffe proves, that a will may be ineffectual to the object in view ; and yet shall operate as a revocation. But that does not bear upon the question, whether a will defectively executed, and incapable as a will, shall be a revocation. There the will was perfect and complete ; though the devisee was prevented by personal incapacity from taking. A perfect and complete will, inconsistent with a former, must necessarily be a revocation ; though the devisee may never derive any benefit from it. So in Beard v. Beard the deed poll had no defect in itself ; and therefore notwithstanding the personal incapacity to take it revoked the will.

The cases of Eccleston v. Speak and Onions v. Tyrer, prove, that even an express revocation of all former wills, though not wanting in any circumstance for a revocation, shall not operate as such ; as it was evident, the only purpose of revocation was to give effect to the new will. It is true, the uses were nearly the same : but those cases prove, that an express intention declared to revoke, if only subservient to another purpose, for which the instrument is incompetent, shall not revoke. In this case the purpose to revoke is only subservient to another purpose, for which it is incompetent ; and therefore it is incapable of effecting a revocation. Besides in Onions v. Tyrer Lord Cowper says, it would have made no difference in his judgment, if the latter will had been in favor of a different person. His Lordship is speaking of an instrument containing also an express revocation; but in this instance there is only an implication from the new and ineffectual appointment. I should have no difficulty of *acceding to this doctrine; for the revoking [^{*380}] clause is only intended to operate as part of the will; and the rule of the Civil Law, is "Tunc prius testamentum rumpitur, cum posterius perfectum est." In Limbery v. Mason (1) that is laid down as the rule of our law:

(1) 1 Roll's Ab. 615.

(2) 1 Roll, Abr. 615.

"There is no doubt, but the testator by any writing directly designed for the purpose, and executed as the Statute 29 Charles II. directs, or by any cancelling, obliteration, &c. designed merely to disannul the former will, might have revoked it without more: but he designs to do it by a new will; and unless such writing be effectual to operate as a will, it shall not amount to a revocation (2)."

Upon the whole my humble opinion is, that the codicil of 1801 does not revoke the appointment of Mr. Strangways to be guardian.

The question then is, whether he is appointed guardian of all the sons, or of those only by the first marriage. From the circumstance of committing the guardianship to the wife and brother or the survivor it may be argued, that he could only mean sons of that marriage; as the wife could not by survivorship be guardian of any other sons. I thought that probable at first. But the words are large enough to comprehend all sons born after the will. No restriction is imposed upon the generality of the expression. The inference, though probable, is not necessary; and I am not inclined, any more than my Lord Chief Justice, to put a construction upon words requiring none, as having in themselves a plain and distinct meaning, because some other words do not quite so well accord with them as upon the proposed construction. There is no direct repugnance between *the different parts of the clause. The [^{*381}] whole might operate, as the event should turn out; and the guardianship of all the sons would be provided for in the event of either surviving; so that the guardianship could be claimed. If Lady Ilchester had survived, she would necessarily have been guardian of all; unless the case of a divorce and children by a second marriage in her life can be supposed; which certainly was not in the testator's contemplation. She having died first, he will be guardian. There is no inconsistency in saying, the guardianship shall extend to all, making it necessary to restrain it; for either could take the guardianship of all at the time either could claim the guardianship. Mr. Strangways therefore is the guardian of all the sons.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I have only to express my entire concurrence in the judgments that have been delivered; and I do not think, that I can more correctly express my acknowledgments to the Master of the Rolls and the Lord Chief Justice than by referring myself to the reasons, that have been so ably stated in those judgments.

(1) Com. 451.

(2) Com. 454.

The consequence is, this petition must be dismissed. In this case I need not add, that though the effect of the appointment of a guardian is to commit the custody of the guardianship, this Court looks with great anxiety to the execution of the duty belonging to the guardian, and the attention expected to be paid to the reasonable wishes of the natural parent. Though it is not necessary in this instance, upon such a contest it is important to observe, that it can never end happily but by implanting in the hearts of the children filial and dutiful feelings towards the parent; the best and most important duty imposed upon the guardian by the deceased parent.

1. A GUARDIAN may be appointed on petition, without any suit being instituted. Ex parte Salter, 3 Brown, 501; Ex parte Mountfort, 15 Ves. 445; Ex parte Myerscough, 1 Jac. & Walk. 152; Corbet v. Tottenham, 1 Ball & Bea. 60; Eyre v. The Countess of Shaftesbury, 2 P. Wms. 103; In the Matter of Woolcombe, 1 Mad. 213. And the principal case is an authority, that an application to change a guardian may be made by petition: but, in O'Keefe v. Casey, 1 Sch. & Lef. 106, this distinction was taken: where a guardian has never acted, and declines to undertake the office, there an application to have another guardian appointed may be made by petition, though no suit is pending: but, where a testamentary guardian has once taken the trust upon him, and has acted as guardian, there, if it be sought to remove him for misconduct, a bill must be filed.

2. With respect to the doctrine of revocations of testamentary instruments, see, ante, note 3 to Ellis v. Smith, 1 V. 11, and the notes to Brydges v. The Duchess of Chandos, 2 V. 417.

3. For some of the leading rules with respect to the construction of testamentary instruments, and the exceptions which those general rules occasionally admit, in favor of the testator's intent, see notes 4, 5, and 6 to Blake v. Bunbury, 1 V. 194, the note to Jennings v. Gallinore, 3 V. 146, note 4 to Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 V. 277, note 2 to Hockley v. Mauby, 1 V. 143, the notes to Everest v. Gell, 1 V. 286, and note 5 to Bristol v. Ward, 2 V. 336; and that no instrument is to be construed by any consideration of contingencies which occur after its execution, and which have not been provided for, see note 8 to Moggridge v. Thackwell, 1 V. 464.

4. As to the qualifications of the general rule, that a will attempting to dispose of real estate, but not executed according to the statute of frauds, cannot be read, as against the heir, even for the purpose of putting him to his election, see note 7 to Woodford v. Thellusson, 4 V. 227.

BRUDENELL v. ELWES.

[1802, JULY 20.]

SETTLEMENT in pursuance of articles, previous to marriage, to convey to the use of the husband for life: remainder to the wife for life: remainder upon trust to convey unto and amongst all and every or any of the children in such parts and proportions, &c. as the husband and wife or the survivor should by deed or writing with or without power of revocation or by Will appoint: in default of appointment, to the first and other sons in tail male; remainder, subject to trusts that failed, to the heirs of the husband. A joint appointment by deed, subject to a proviso for revocation and re-appointment by the husband and wife and the survivor, well revoked by the wife surviving; and by the same deed a re-appointment to the daughter and two sons successively for life, with remainders in tail to the grand-children, and the ultimate remainder to the daughter in fee, void for the excess beyond the power, namely, the estates to the grand-children, and the ultimate limitation upon them to the daughter; and the principle of cy pres not applicable. All beyond the life estates of the children therefore to go as in default of appointment (a).

The rule, that a limitation to the heirs of the body in articles shall be carried into execution by a strict settlement, does not prevail, where the concurrence of both parents would be necessary to bar the entail, [p. 390.]

THE bill was filed to obtain specific performance of a contract entered into by the Defendant to purchase the manor and estates of Garlands in the county of Essex. The decree directed a reference to the Master, to see, whether the Plaintiffs could make a good title. The state of the title was as follows:

By articles of agreement dated the 16th of December, 1730, previous to the marriage of Jerningham Cheveley with Louisa Mary Jamineau, the said Jerningham Cheveley covenanted, that he would within six months after the marriage convey the manor and estates of Garlands upon the following trusts, namely, to the use of himself for life, without impeachment of waste; remainder to the use of the said Louisa Mary for life; remainder to the use of trustees and their heirs; upon trust to convey and assure all or any part of the said estates unto and amongst all and every or any of the children of Jerningham Cheveley on Louisa Mary Jamineau to be begotten, in such parts and proportions, and for such estate and estates, and with and under such charges, provisos, conditions, and limitations, as they or the survivor should from time to time by any deed or deeds, writing or writings, either with or without power of revocation, to * be by him, her, or them, signed and sealed in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, or by his or her last will and testament in writing, testified as aforesaid, limit or appoint; and in default of such appointment it was declared, that the trustees should stand seised to the use of the first and other sons of Jerningham Cheveley and Louisa Mary Jamineau successively in tail male; with remainder to the use of trustees, upon trusts, which afterwards became incapable of taking effect; remainder to the use of the right heirs of Jerningham Cheveley.

(a) Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.), 314, et seq., 509, 512, 541-545, 551, et seq.

The marriage took place; and by indentures of lease and release, dated the 20th and 21st of September, 1768, reciting the articles, and that there was issue of the marriage then living two sons, Jamineau and Jerningham Cheveley, and one daughter, Jane Cheveley, all of whom had attained the age of twenty-one, Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, in pursuance of the articles, and in consideration of the marriage, &c. conveyed the said estates to the surviving trustee in the articles and his heirs; to hold to the following uses: namely, to the use of Jerningham Cheveley the elder, for life, without impeachment of waste; remainder to the use of Louisa Mary Cheveley for life; remainder to the use of all and every or any of the children of Jerningham Cheveley on Louisa Mary begotten or to be begotten, in such parts and proportions, and for such estate and estates, and under such charges, provisos, conditions and limitations, as they or the survivor should from time to time by any deed or deeds, writing or writings, either with or without power of revocation, signed and sealed, in the presence of three witnesses, or by will, testified as aforesaid, direct, limit, or appoint; and in default thereof to the use of Jamineau [^{384]} Cheveley, the eldest son, and the heirs male of his ^{}body; with similar remainders to Jerningham Cheveley, the second son, and to the third and other sons; remainder to the use of the right heirs of Jerningham Cheveley the elder.

By indentures, dated the 22d of September, 1768, reciting the articles and settlement, and the intention to make some provision for Jane Cheveley and Jerningham Cheveley, the younger, Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, and Louisa Mary, his wife, by virtue of the power in the articles and settlement did direct, limit, and appoint, unto and to the use of Jane Cheveley, her heirs and assigns, the reversion in fee, to take effect in possession after the decease of Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, and Louisa Mary, his wife, and the survivor, to hold unto and to the use of Jane Cheveley and her heirs; upon trust, as soon as conveniently might be, to raise 1000*l.* for the benefit of Jerningham Cheveley, the younger, also a party to that deed, as therein mentioned; in which deed there was the following proviso; that it should be lawful for Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, and Louisa Mary, his wife, and the survivor, from time to time or at any time or times, during the lives of them or the survivor, by any deed or instrument in writing with or without power of revocation, sealed and delivered by them or the survivor in the presence of and attested by three or more credible witnesses, subject to the payment of the said 1000*l.*, to revoke, alter, and make void, the said limitation and appointment to or in favor of Jane Cheveley, her heirs and assigns, and by the same or any other deed or instrument, to be by Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, and Louisa Mary, or the survivor, sealed, &c. to direct, limit, &c. unto and amongst all and every or any of the children of the said Jerningham Cheveley on Louisa Mary, his wife, begotten, in such parts and proportions, and for such estate and estates, and with and under such charges, provisos, and limitations over, but such limitations over to be for the benefit of some or one of the said children, as Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, and Louisa Mary, his wife, or the survivor, should from time to time direct, limit, or appoint.

By indentures, dated the 23d of September, 1768, 1000*l.* was raised for Jerningham Cheveley the younger, by mortgage for a term of 500 years under the deed of the 22d of September, 1768.

Jerningham Cheveley, the elder, died on the 2d of February, 1769, without having revoked the appointment; and not having any other children.

Louisa Mary Cheveley by a deed, dated the 29th of March, 1773, revoked and annulled the said joint appointment of the 22d of September, 1768, except as to the said sum of 1000*l.*; and by virtue of the power in the indenture of the 22d of September, 1768, &c. and in execution thereof, did direct, limit and appoint, the remainder or reversion expectant upon her decease in the said estates to the use of the said Jane Cheveley and her assigns for life, without impeachment of waste for cutting such timber as would not improve, subject to the payment of the said sum of 1000*l.* and interest, and to the said term of 500 years: provided; that it should be lawful for Jane Cheveley, when she should be in the actual possession of the premises for life, by demise, lease or mortgage, to raise any sum not exceeding 1000*l.*, payable after her decease to such person and persons, and in such manner and form, as she by deed or will should appoint; and subject to such appointment, if any, from and after the decease of Jane Cheveley to the * use of Jamineau Cheveley for life without impeachment [* 386] of waste; remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to his first and other sons in tail male; remainder to Jerningham Cheveley the younger and his first and other sons in the same manner; with remainders to the daughters of the two Mr. Cheveleys, and to the sons of Jane Cheveley; remainder to the use of Jane Cheveley, her heirs and assigns.

In 1776 Louisa Mary Cheveley died, leaving her three children surviving.

Jane Cheveley having by her will, dated the 4th of May, 1790, devised the estates to the Plaintiffs in trust to sell, died without issue. Jamineau Cheveley was the surviving son and heir at law of Jerningham Cheveley, the elder; and he survived Jane Cheveley, his sister; and died without issue. Jerningham Cheveley the younger was long since dead; leaving issue three daughters, Defendants; who were heirs at law to Jamineau Cheveley.

The bill also prayed, that, if the Court shall be of opinion, there is any estate in such of the Defendants as claim under the will of Jamineau Cheveley, they may be declared trustees; and may join in the conveyance.

The Master by his Report stated his opinion, that the joint appointment to Jane Cheveley under the deed, dated the 22d of September, 1768, was good; and that the appointment by the deed, dated the 29th of March, 1773, was wholly void, though made, so far as respects the children of the marriage, in pursuance of the power of revocation and re-appointment reserved by the deed of the 22d September, 1768; because it was not intended by the articles, that a joint appointment should be defeated by [* 387] any but a joint revocation: but if the said power of * revocation and re-appointment was well reserved by the deed of the 22d of September, 1768, and well executed by the deed of the 29th of March, 1773, yet Louisa Mary Cheveley executed it in such a manner as never to displace in equity the fee simple vested in Jane Cheveley by the first appointment: or, if she did devest that interest by such deed of revocation, she revested it in Jane by the re-appointment contained in the same deed; and therefore he was of opinion, that Jane Cheveley was seised in law or equity of the fee simple of the estate in question at the time of making her will; and consequently, that a good title may be made.

Exceptions were taken to the Report by the purchaser; on the ground, that the deed of 1773 was a complete revocation of that of the 22d of September, 1768; and therefore the fee simple limited by the latter to Jane Cheveley was wholly displaced; and the re-appointment to her of the reversion in fee expectant upon the determination of the particular estates limited to persons, not objects of the power, by the deed of 1773 was void; and such fee never did revest in her.

Mr. Richards, and Mr. Horne, for the Plaintiffs, and Mr. Trower, for Defendants in the same interest.—The question is, whether the Plaintiffs can make a good equitable title: whether the Defendants claiming under Jamineau Cheveley are trustees for the Plaintiffs. If there is a doubt upon the title, the Court will not compel a purchaser to take it (1). But all the parties are brought before the Court, who can make a good title. Though in strictness [* 388] a limitation to grand-children is not a good * execution of such a power as this (2), yet the Court will mould it so as to answer the general intent; according to Pitt v. Jackson (3), Griffith v. Harrison (4), and other cases. Though these are cases of wills, upon the execution of articles the Court takes the same course; and controls the legal effect; particularly in the case of articles made before marriage; availing itself of the distinction between trusts executed and executory; which prevailed in Honor v. Hon-

(1) Ante, Cooper v. Denne, vol. i. 565; 4 Bro. C. C. 80; Roake v. Kidd, ante, vol. v. 647; see the note, ante, i. 567.

(2) See ante, the note, vol. i. 310; Bristow v. Warde, Smith v. Lord Camelford, ii. 366, 698; Crompe v. Barrow, iv. 681, and the references.

(3) 2 Bro. C. C. 51.

(4) 3 Bro. C. C. 410.

or (1), Trevor v. Trevor (2) and several other cases (3): the trusts not being finally settled by the instrument; but some future act remaining to be done, or conveyance to be executed. Mrs. Cheveley by the appointment in 1773 meant to give estates warranted by the articles; and the Court will lay hold of any thing to support that manifest intention. Her intention was to provide for the issue; which she could not do by making them purchasers. Her general intent therefore must be taken to be to keep the estate in her family by giving her sons estates tail; which would descend to their issue. The Court seeing the substantial object will overlook the form; and execute the general intention. Upon the argument of this case at law (4) Lord Kenyon supported his opinion in Pitt v. Jackson. If a Court of Law will mould legal limitations in a will to answer the intent, much more will a Court of Equity mould the equitable interests.

The Counsel for the Defendants was stopped by the Court.

* The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—If you cannot find [* 389] a case, that has adopted the doctrine of Cy pres upon such a head as this, I will not introduce it in this instance. I do not see how to get at it either upon principle or authority. Suppose, instead of articles, an actual conveyance, reciting the marriage; that Jerningham Cheveley was to take a considerable personal estate; and he had thereby conveyed to the use of himself for life, without impeachment of waste; with remainder to his wife for life; remainder to trustees and their heirs, for a legal estate, but upon trust to convey according to these limitations: this settlement would be a contract, under which all the issue would be purchasers of the estates thereby limited; and under which the husband and wife would be purchasers of the powers given to them; and the issue would be purchasers of the estates after to be limited by a due execution of the power. But they must be limited by a due execution of the power, in order to raise them: for there is no equity whatsoever between one purchaser under the deed and another to raise any question, whether a different effect shall be given to the instrument, called an execution of the power; as is done in the cases, that have been alluded to.

If it stood thus in 1773, the date of the execution of the power, the elder Mr. Cheveley would have had a vested estate tail; and his brother would have had an estate tail; and they would have a right both in law and equity to the enjoyment, unless their sister could produce some instrument, placing her prior to them in the order of limitation. Mrs. Cheveley executes her power by a deed, professing an intention to execute it according to the real meaning of the articles; revoking the appointment before made, with intent, I agree, to execute the power according to the real meaning of the articles.

(1) 1 P. Will. 123.

(2) 1 Eq. Ca. Ab. 387.

(3) Fearne's Cont. Rem. 123, &c., 4th edit.

(4) 1 East, 442.

This case does not come near Pitt v. Jackson and the other cases upon wills: first, as they are cases upon wills, not deeds; to which this doctrine has not been applied: secondly, those cases have at least gone, as Lord Kenyon observes (1), to the utmost verge of the law (a); and I shall find it very difficult to alter an opinion I have taken up, that it is not proper to go one step farther; for in those cases, in order to serve the general intent and the particular intent, they destroy both. But it is not necessary to go farther into them; for in those cases the Court have said, this is the legal effect of the language. There is no possibility of saying that here: nor could it be argued consistently with the real intention of the author of the deed; for I must suppose her conusant of the estate her sons had under the articles, and would have had under the settlement, if executed. Then she must contemplate them as having already estates; tail; and that the reversion in fee was to be disposed of. Can it be said, her intention by this deed, with these limitations, was to throw in Jane's estate before her brothers, and to give them just what they had before; and that after the execution of that deed they were to have just what they had before, only in a different series of limitation?

The cases as to articles do not apply. In those cases the Court says, such words in articles shall be taken to denote such an intent; and the conveyance shall be according to the intent so manifested. In Highway v. Banner (2) the concurrence of both parents being necessary for barring the intail, a different construction was given to the words "heirs of the body," from that adopted in the other cases.

But the question here is, not how to construe articles, so [*391] as to protect the issue *against the parent; but whether, where it is agreed on all hands, that there is no doubt as to the meaning, as between persons all alike purchasers, there is an equity for one to have the estate against the others, merely, because the parent exceeded the power given by the articles. Those cases do not apply; and there is no one authority, that upon the mere ground of the intention of the person executing you take away for the benefit of one child that estate, which for default of a due execution of the power was vested in the other child. The sons did not execute the deed with their mother. It is therefore her act alone; and there is nothing to bind them.

The bill was dismissed.

1. As to the extent to which Courts of Equity will go, in the construction of a deliberately executed settlement made on marriage, (and, a fortiori, in the construction of more hastily penned articles for such a settlement,) in furtherance of the intent of the parties, see, ante, notes to Hockley v. Mawby, 1 V. 143.

2. That there is a class of cases in which the execution of powers may be void in part only, though, where the line of separation between the excess and the right

(1) 1 East, 451.

(a) Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.), 544.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 584.

execution is not clearly distinguishable, the whole will be bad: see note 1 to Bristow v. Warde, 2 V. 336; see, also, note 6 to the same case for authorities limiting the application of the doctrine of cy pres, even in testamentary cases.

3. As to the occasional construction of the words "heir of the body," and "heir male," when those words are found in a will, the context of which shows unequivocally that the testator did not intend to use the words in their technical sense, see note 4 to Thellusson v. Woodford, 4 V. 227.

NANNOCK v. HORTON.

[1802, JULY 20.]

INVESTMENT of stock directed in trust to pay the dividends to the testator's son for life; and after his death to transfer part of the capital according to his appointment: an interest, for life only, with a power (a).

Power of appointment not executed by a Will having no reference to the power or the subject of it; and the Court will not inquire into the circumstances of the property (b), [p. 391.]

Under a residuary bequest to the legatees in proportion to their legacies all legatees, pecuniary and specific, even of rings, &c. not expressly or by implication excluded, were held entitled: so annuitants, if they had not been excluded upon the construction of the whole Will, [p. 391.]

Where a particular, limited, interest and a power concur, though the latter alone might amount to an absolute gift, they are distinct, [p. 398.]

Distinction as to real and personal estate, [p. 399.]

Every gift of land, even a general residuary devise, is specific, and that only, to which the party is entitled at the time, can pass: in the case of personal property what he has at his death will pass; and if the description is specific, it may operate as a direction to purchase (c), [p. 399.]

A charge of legacies held a charge of annuities, [p. 402.]

THOMAS NORMAN, by his will, dated the 17th of February, 1792, gave to several persons each a mourning ring, of the value of two

(a) Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.), 90, et seq.

(b) Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.), 287, 288; 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 334, 335.

The power may be executed without reciting it or even referring to it, provided the act shows that the donee of the power had in view the subject of it. In case of wills it has been frequently declared and is now settled, that in respect to the execution of a power, there must be a reference to the subject of it or to the power itself. 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 334; Hunlode v. Gell, 1 Russ. & My. 515; Walker v. Mackie, 4 Russ. 76; Lewis v. Llewellyn, Turn. & Russ. 104; Lovonds v. Lovonds, 1 Young. & Jer. 445; Webb v. Honor, 1 Jac. & Walk. 352. The intent must be so clear, that no other reasonable purpose can be imputed to the act. 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 335. See Adams v. Austin, 3 Russ. 461; Haste v. Blackman, 6 Madd. 190; Davies v. Williams, 3 Nev. & Man. 821; Bradish v. Gibbs, 3 John. Ch. 551; Doe v. Roake, 2 Bingh. 497; S. C. on Error, 5 Barn. & Cress. 720; Hughes v. Turner, 1 My. & Keen, 666; Ram on Wills, p. 208-224; Wigram on Interpretation of Wills, p. 18, et seq., pl. 26, 27, 53; Bagge v. Miles, 1 Story, C. C. R. 426, 445; Lovell v. Knight, 3 Sim. 275; Lempriere v. Valpy, 5 Sim. 108.

If a married woman, having a testamentary power of appointment, makes a will, it must be intended to be an exercise of the power though it contains no reference to it. Churchill v. Dibben, 9 Sim. 447; Heyer v. Burger, 1 Hoff. 2.

So in all cases a will will operate as an appointment under a power, provided it can have no operation without the power. 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 335. As where the testator having no real estate at the time of making his will, but having a power over the real estate of another, devises his real estate over to some person. Wigram on Interpt. of Wills, p. 43, pl. 53; Lewis v. Llewellyn, 1 Turn. 104; Napier v. Napier, 1 Sim. 28; Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.), 287, 288; Standen v. Standen, ante, 2 V. 589. See the rule stated, Ram on Wills, § 22, p. 220, where it is said that collateral evidence may be introduced to show that the testator had no other land to satisfy the terms of the will. See also to the same point, Andrews v. Emmot, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 297, note (1), 304, note (c); Sibley v. Perry, post, 522; Baugh v. Read, ante, 1 V. 257, note (b).

(c) See for the rule of law upon this subject and the statute enactments affecting it, Perry v. Phelps, ante, 1 V. 255, note (a), and Mr. Hovenden's note (5), and cases guineas. He gave several pecuniary legacies, as to some with a limitation over in case of the death of the legatee under the age of twenty-one. He also gave some annuities for the lives of the several annuitants. He gave to the five children of Elizabeth Norman 50*l.* each, to be paid at their respective ages of twenty-one; with survivorship, in case of the death of any under that age, equally. He gave 2000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities to his executors; which he directed should be * invested one month after his decease; in trust to pay [*392] the interest from time to time to Frances Jackson for the maintenance and bringing up of her two children Thomas Charles Jackson and Frances Jackson, who were also legatees of 200*l.* each, payable at twenty-one, with survivorship, until they shall respectively have attained their ages of twenty-one years; and in case of her death the said interest was to be paid to her husband Charles Jackson, to be by him applied for the benefit of his said two children; and when the said two children should have respectively attained twenty-one, in trust to transfer a moiety of the principal stock unto each of such children upon their attainment of their said ages respectively; and in case either of such children should die before, then he gave the whole principal stock and all benefit thereof unto the survivor of them absolutely. To the said Frances Jackson, the wife of Charles Jackson, for her sole use and benefit for life he bequeathed the interest and dividends of 1000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities; and directed, that his executors should invest the said sum of 1000*l.*; and should stand possessed thereof in trust to pay the interest to her for life, free from the contracts of her husband, for her separate use; and after her decease he gave the said principal sum unto her said two children equally; and in case of the death of either of them before that time he gave the share of him or her so dying to the survivor absolutely. He directed, that the said legacies and annuities therein before given should vest immediately after his decease in all such of the several legatees and annuitants, who should survive him. The testator then gave to his son Robert Norman 4000*l.* He likewise gave to him during his natural life the interest and dividends of 8000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities; which he ordered that his executors should purchase and transfer in their names: and should stand possessed thereof, in trust to pay such dividends, as the same

* should become payable, unto his said son during his life; [*393] and from and immediately after his death in trust that his executors should pay, apply, and transfer 6000*l.* part of such capital stock, unto such person or persons, at such time, manner, and form, as his said son by any deed or writing, executed in the presence of two witnesses, or by his last will and testament executed by the like number of witnesses, should in that behalf order, give, direct and cited; 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 510, and note (d), 511, 512; Gerard v. City of Philadelphia, 4 Rawle, 323; Hove v. Earl of Dartmouth, ante, 137; Brydges v. Duchess of Chandos, ante, 2 V. 417, note (d), note (2) of Hovenden.

appoint; and, as to the remainder of such capital sum or stock, from and immediately after his said son's death in trust to pay and apply the same to and amongst the several persons, thereinbefore mentioned, to whom he had given legacies, rateably and in proportion to their said legacies. He also gave his said son a leasehold house.

The testator also ordered his executors to purchase or transfer into their names 14,000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities; and that they should stand possessed thereof in trust to apply the whole or such part of the interest as should be necessary for the maintenance of the two natural children of his late son John Norman, until they should respectively attain twenty-one; and when they should have attained that age respectively, in trust to transfer such capital stock as follows: viz. 9000*l.*, part thereof, to John Henry Norman, one of the said children, and 5000*l.* to Ann Norman, the other; and he directed his executors to see to the bringing them up until the age of twenty-one; and, if any overplus at that time, to be divided between them in proportion to their shares: but in case the said two children should die before their attainment of such age, then he gave and bequeathed the capital of the 14,000*l.* unto and amongst the several persons thereinbefore named, to whom he had given legacies, to be divided amongst them in proportion to their several legacies thereinbefore given to them respectively [*394] (his son Robert Norman excepted); and in like manner as to the shares of such capital stock of either of them dying before the attaining of such age, except as aforesaid.

He then gave a freehold house to his executors; upon trust to convey to the said John Henry Norman, his heirs, &c. when he should attain twenty-one; and in the mean time to receive the rents and profits, and improve the same for his benefit; but in case of his death before that age to be sold, and the money to be divided amongst the said legatees in proportion to their several legacies by him thereinbefore given, except as aforesaid, and the natural daughter of the said Ann Pratt.

The testator then gave three more legacies of 50*l.*, 10*l.* and 10*l.*; and bequeathed to different persons different suits of clothes and a bed and furniture, and bed-linen. All the rest and residue of his estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever and of what nature or kind soever he gave and bequeathed the same unto and amongst the several legatees thereinbefore named, to be divided amongst them in proportion to the several legacies by him thereinbefore given to them respectively, except as aforesaid, and the said natural son of his late son John Norman deceased; and he directed, that if his estate should fall short in payment in full of the said legacies and annuities, the same should be made good by and out of the said 14,000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities so as aforesaid given to the son and daughter of his late son John Norman.

By a codicil of the same date the testator directed, that his said son Robert Norman should receive the interest and dividends of 6000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities during his life only, instead of the interest and dividends of 8000*l.* like annuities given him by the said will; and that he should at his death have liberty to dispose of 4000*l.* part of the said 6000*l.* Bank Annuities, only; and the testator thereby confirmed his said will in all other respects.

Robert Norman, the testator's son, by his will, dated the 8th of November, 1793, executed in the presence of two witnesses, and signed by them, gave and bequeathed to Elizabeth Laws, his friend and companion, the sum of 2000*l.* 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Stock: to his wife Alice Norman 1000*l.*; and he gave to five other persons legacies of 500*l.* each; not disposing of the residue, nor appointing executors.

The bill was filed by some of the legatees of Thomas Norman; and the necessary accounts and inquiries were directed. The cause coming on for farther directions, it appeared by the Master's Report, that, exclusive of the interest that Robert Norman had in the 4000*l.* stock under the will of his father, his whole personal estate was not equal to the legacies given by his will. That sum of 4000*l.* was claimed by the widow of Robert Norman; who had taken out administration to him.

The questions were, first, whether under the will and codicil Robert Norman took the absolute interest in the 4000*l.* stock, or an interest for life only with a power of appointment: and if the latter, whether his will could be considered an execution of the power: Secondly, whether the personal representative of Robert Norman in respect of his pecuniary legacy of 4000*l.* was entitled to a share of the 2000*l.* stock, the surplus beyond the stock, which was the subject of the first question: Thirdly, whether the annuitants, and the specific legatees of rings, &c. were entitled to share in the residue with the pecuniary legatees.

The Solicitor General, [Sir T. M. Sutton], Mr. Lloyd [*396] and Mr. Stanley, for the Plaintiffs.—Upon the first question, as to the interest of Robert Norman in the 3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Annuities, he took only the interest for life, with a power of appointment; according to the distinction taken in Liese v. Saltingstone (1); followed by Maskelyne v. Maskelyne (2), Elton v. Shephard (3), and Fisher v. The Bank of England (4): determined expressly upon that distinction. Some intention then to execute this power must be shown: Andrews v. Emmot (5). In Hales v. Margerum (6) it was held the absolute property of the testatrix, independent of any power; and qualified merely with reference to her situation as a married woman. In that case Lord Al-

(1) 1 Mod. 189; Carter, 232; 2 Lev. 104; Tomlinson v. Dighton, 1 P. Will. 149.

(2) Amb. 750.

(3) 1 Bro. C. C. 532.

(4) At the Rolls, 3d July, 1795.

(5) 2 Bro. C. C. 297.

(6) Anst, vol. iii. 299. See also Langham v. Neney, iii. 467; Croft v. Slee, iv. 60.

vanley expressly says, no inquiry can be made into the property. This sum of 4000*l.* stock must therefore fall into the residue.

As to the persons, who are to take the residue, the legatees of stock are entitled to share with the pecuniary legatees in proportion to their legacies; but how can the legatees of rings or clothes be entitled to share? They could not be intended.

Mr. Richards, and Mr. Trower, for the Defendant, the administratrix of Robert Norman.—If it appears, the party intended to act upon this property, that is sufficient to enable him to dispose of it, pursuant to his power. Lord Kenyon in Andrews v. Enmot cites those cases with approbation. In this instance, as in that, the personal estate, exclusive of the subject of the power, is not [*397] *nearly sufficient for the legacies. By the codicil no form of disposition is prescribed; a complete and absolute power of disposition is given to him. Suppose a devise of an estate in Middlesex: the devisor not having any estate in Middlesex; but having a power to dispose of an estate in that county: your Lordship would admit evidence. This testator had not 2000*l.* 3 per cents. and must therefore have intended disposing of that sum to exercise his power over the 4000*l.* stock; though not particularly disposing of the whole of it. A reference to the subject of the power is sufficient within all the authorities.

But there is a great deal in the other point; that this is an absolute gift to Robert Norman in all events. A gift to a person, to be at his disposal, is an absolute gift. The variation between the will and the codicil, both executed in the same day, is important. Though the codicil expresses the gift to be for life, he has also an absolute power of disposition; and might have done any thing with it.

With respect to the 2000*l.* stock, beyond the subject of his power, Robert Norman was entitled to share with the other legatees. He is expressly excluded, wherever intended to be excluded; and there is nothing absurd or uncommon in the circumstance, that the benefit does not arise till after his death.

The Solicitor General, [Sir T. M. Sutton], in reply observed, that the principle was clearly settled in Andrews v. Enmot, Standen v. Standen (1), and Hales v. Margerum; and, that the insufficiency of the estate to answer the legacies was never considered a sufficient ground for holding the will an execution of the power.

[*398] *The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The first consideration is, what interest Robert Norman had in the 4000*l.* stock. If he was absolutely entitled to it, there can be no question, that it will pass under his will. The express subject of the bequest in the will of the father is the interest and dividends; and the stock itself, as far as the legal disposition of the capital, is to be vested in the names of trustees, and to remain in their names at least during his son's life. By the will the power of the son is to be executed by a certain form ; and he could give no interest by a will in any other form. In the gift of the remainder of the stock to the legatees, it is true, the words would vest transmissible interests, if they should die before his son : but in considering what he meant as to his son it is fit to attend to the very words. In the codicil, of the same date as the will, there is a phrase, which coupled with the will satisfies me he meant, the stock should remain in the trustees during the whole of his son's life ; " that he should at his death have liberty to dispose of 4000*l.*," &c. The meaning of both instruments, taken together, is, that the executors should purchase or transfer to their names 6000*l.* stock : the son to have the interest and dividends for his life ; and of the capital, which during his life was to remain in the names of the trustees, he was to have liberty to dispose of 4000*l.* at his death. But the codicil was not by any means intended to enlarge the interest he had in it under the will. On the contrary, the primary intention of the codicil was to reduce his power as to the quantum, over which the testator had given him an authority ; and this is within the principle of the cases, that, where there is a particular, limited, interest, and this sort of power, liberty, or authority, though the latter without a particular, partial, limited, interest pointed out might have amounted to an absolute gift, yet, where both occur, the gift is held to be of the limited interest ; and the other to be but a power, and not an interest. Robert Norman

(1) Ani, vol. ii. 589; see the note, 594.

* therefore had not that interest, which, if he meant to give [* 399] by his will what he was interested in, would pass by his will ; but it was necessary, in order to pass it, that he should execute it as a power.

The next question is, has he executed it as a power ? I am not sure, the rule does not oblige the Court to act against what probably might have been the intention nine times in ten. There is not in this will any reference whatsoever to the power ; nothing having a necessary reference to it ; or, that can be stated as having any reference ; except the words "3 per cent. Consolidated Bank Stock." That sum is so given, that it cannot be disputed, that, if, when he died, he had not had any stock, but had other personal estate, that stock must have been purchased for the legatees. It is not specific. It would operate only as a direction to purchase stock, if he died without any stock ; and it is very difficult to say, that what would amount to that direction in a will, is to be construed into a gift of that, which was not his to give, but over which he had a power. With respect to the case put in the argument, of Black-acre in Middlesex, there is great difference between real and personal estate. Every gift of land, even a general residuary devise, is specific. Only that, to which the party is entitled at the time, can pass. But, as to personal estate, he may give that, which he has not, and never may have ; and at all events whatever he may happen to have at his death will pass. He might have had stock, before he died ; though he might have had none at the date of the codicil. But, if he never had any, yet the terms of this bequest would be satisfied ; calling for this construction; that the executors must buy it after his decease.

The case of Andrews v. Emmot and the others of that class are clear, and distinct, and positive, and express, * to the point, that you are not to inquire into the circumstances of the testator's property at the date of the will, to determine, whether he was executing the power or not (1). It may be difficult to reconcile the application of that rule with a construction, that may be put upon the passage cited (2) from Moderns (3). But that may amount only to this; that, where it is sufficiently described, the gift shall hold as an interest or as a power. But the subject must be described in apt terms. The difficulty I had as to Andrews v. Emmot was, how the Court could by any evidence, that could be stated by the Report, have brought under the words "my personal estate," that property, which was in no sense his. Hales v. Margerum is very different. The true point of Lord Alvanley's decision turns upon this; that the testatrix had by the effect of the other will such an interest in that stock, as entitled her with great propriety to say, that was her stock; and his Lordship was of opinion, the other will, placing the stock in trustees, and giving her the receipt of the profits for her separate use and the power of disposition at her death, amounted to evidence upon the face of the will sufficient to satisfy the Court, that the testator meant, that stock should be her's; and he would not infer against that any thing from the circumstances and the trusts created in the will; which he thought were inserted only to make the stock more effectually her's than it would have been without those trusts and circumstances; considering, that she was a married woman. But his Lordship most distinctly states, that he decided that case consistently with all the other cases. In this will there is nothing, that refers to the power; nothing necessarily descriptive of the property, over which it existed; and therefore, whatever might have been the intention, I [* 401] am bound by the authorities to * say, this testator did not mean to affect any property but what was his own.

The next question is as to the 2000*l.* stock; whether Robert Norman is entitled to any interest in it. That depends upon the will, the codicil, and the general scheme of the whole, taken together. I am strongly of opinion, it was not the intention of the testator to consider this son as, in the sense in which the words are used, one of the persons "thereinbefore mentioned," to take a share of that fund of 2000*l.* stock. The son would be dead, and could not be existing as a person, to whom it could be paid or transferred; and though I agree, as to the others, it would be transmissible in case of their deaths, yet that is more the effect of the law than of the testator's intention; and I am confirmed in that by this; that, when he disposes of the contingent interest in the 14,000*l.* stock and of the residue, excepting those he means to except, he names them ; and, excluding Robert Norman in both instances, the general intention appears, making this provision for him, not to include him after his decease as one of the persons to take a share in the capital. As to the 14,000*l.* stock he thought it necessary to exclude Robert Norman by name ; satisfied, that in the former instance he was excluded, though not expressly, by the manner, in which the gift was made : but in the disposition of other property by a subsequent part of his will, not thinking he had excluded him in the manner of giving that. In the contingent disposition of the produce of the house, directed to be sold, he makes a similar exclusion ; with the addition of the natural daughter of Ann Pratt ; not excluding her brother ; upon whose death the gift depended. It is not a circumstance of great weight, but not altogether unworthy attention, that it is not very probable, the testator should exclude Robert from a share of the other funds, meaning, that he should take a *share of the 2000*l.* He is therefore excluded as to the [* 402] 2000*l.* ; and the 4000*l.* falls into the residue ; from which he is expressly excluded.

(1) 2 Mer. 537.

(2) 2 Bro. C. C. 300.

(3) 12 Mod. 469.

The question then is, who are the legatees to take these different funds. The word "legacies" would take in all sorts of legacies. Annuity is in a sense legacy ; and annuitants legatees. There is a good deal of difficulty as to the arrangement in supposing specific legatees meant here. But all conjecture upon that is shut out ; for that part of the will excluding the natural children of Ann Pratt shows, they would take under the description of legatees, unless expressly excluded. In the case upon the Duke of Bolton's will a charge of legacies was held a charge of annuities (1). But then the question always is upon the whole context of the will, taken together ; and I rather think, this testator did not mean annuitants, upon the clause, in which speaking of annuities he contradistinguishes them from legacies, using the words "legacies and annuities." The same reasoning therefore, that proves, specific legatees are intended, authorizes the Court to say, annuitants are not intended there. They are also probably not intended ; as it is much more easy to collect the share upon the pecuniary legacy than the share of an annuitant ; valuing his annuity. But there also the difficulty occurs as to the specific legacies. The annuity is not transmissible ; but ceases with the annuitant ; and it is much more difficult to suppose, they are meant to take than pecuniary legatees : the legacy being part of the property of the legatee. This is only my conjecture upon this ; and if I had found the other construction declared, I should not feel strong enough to disturb it. But my opinion is, that the distribution is to be among all the legatees, thus considered, whose names occur prior to the distribution, except those expressly or by implication excluded, them to take any share: but still they are legatees; and there is no phrase to characterize them, upon which I can conjecture, as I can upon the word "annuities." The best construction is to give the word all the operation, it will have, unless there is something else in the will to confine it.

* As to the legatees of rings, I do not believe, he meant [* 403]

(1) Sibley v. Perry, post, 522.

1. THAT a right of enjoyment for life, coupled with a power of appointment by will, does not give the absolute property; or enable the first taker to dispose of the subject so limited, otherwise than by a due execution of the power: see, ante, note 3 to Bull v. Varty, 1 V. 270. But that, in order to execute a power by will, it is not necessary to recite the power therein: see note 5 to Blake v. Bunbury, 1 V. 194.

2. Every devise of lands is specific: it follows, that no man can dispose by will of lands to which he had no title at the time of making such will. See note 2 to Brydges v. The Duchess of Chandos, 2 V. 417. But the state of a testator's pecuniary funds, at the time of making his will, cannot be gone into, for the purpose of showing (from the inadequacy of his own personal property to answer the bequests he made) that he must have intended to execute a power over funds of which he had a right of appointment, supposing that power to be duly exercised. See note 5 to Blake v. Bunbury, as before cited.

3. That, unless the context (as in the principal case) distinguishes them, legacies and annuities given by the same will must receive exactly the same considerations in all respects. See Foly's case, 2 Freem. 49; Sibley v. Perry, 7 Ves. 534; Habergham v. Vincent, 2 Ves. Jun. 231; and see the note to Barnes v. Rowley, 3 V. 305, as well as note 2 to Gibson v. Bott, 7 V. 89.

PETRE, Ex parte.

[1802, JULY 21.]

A LARGER allowance for maintenance and education ordered under circumstances; but with reluctance (a).

THIS Petition, presented by Edward Robert Petre, and Julia Maria Petre, infants, prayed, that the Master's Report may be confirmed.

The Report stated, that the real estate, of which the petitioner Edward Robert Petre is tenant in tail under the marriage settlement of the late Lord Petre, is of the annual value of 7250*l.*; subject to a jointure to Lady Petre of 1500*l.* a-year, and to portions of 10,000*l.* for the two younger children, equally, at the age of 21, and maintenance out of the interest, not exceeding 400*l.* a-year. The late Lord Petre by his will gave Lady Petre the sum of 2000*l.* the use of a house rent-free, with the furniture, an additional annuity of 500*l.* and a legacy of 10,000*l.*, to be void, if that additional annuity should be settled upon her by his son, now Lord Petre; and appointed her guardian.

(a) 1 Macpherson on Infants, (Lond. ed. 1841), 250, 224; Greenvill v. Greenvill, ante, 5 V. 199, note (a). See the provision on this subject of maintenance to children out of their own property, while their father is living, Mass. Rev. Statutes, ch. 78, § 2. See also, Whipple v. Dow, 2 Mass. 415; Wilkes v. Rogers, 6 John. 566; Davies v. Howard, 4 Mass. 97.

Edward Robert Petre was born in 1794 ; the daughters in 1795 and 1798. They had no fortune, except what they were entitled to under the settlement.

The Report farther stated, that Lady Petre had taken a country-house and some land ; and that the petitioners were educated at home. A private tutor was engaged at 100*l.* a-year, and it was proposed, that a governess and proper masters should be employed : a man servant for the son ; a coachman ; one household servant at the country-house ; a gardener, and two maids for the daughters. * The Master found, that the probable annual expense [* 404] of the maintenance and education of the son is 1550*l.*, and of the daughters 500*l.* ; and stated that 1600*l.* a-year is proper to be allowed to Lady Petre for the maintenance and education of the son for the time past (1) since the death of his father, and the time to come ; and 400*l.* a-year for the daughters.

When this petition first came on, the Lord Chancellor directed a reference to the Master to review his Report ; regard being had to the circumstances of the daughters and of their mother.

The Master by his farther Report repeated his former opinion ; observing, that Lady Petre's annual income does not exceed 2000*l.* a-year ; and that considering the rank and tender years of the petitioners, and their religion (2), it is most advantageous, that they should be brought up together, and educated under their mother.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] stopped Mr. Romilly, in support of the petition ; saying, he should confirm the Report, though not very willingly ; and would not lend a willing ear to any application to increase this allowance (3).

SEE, ante, note 2 to Greenwell v. Greenwell, 5 V. 194, and the farther reference there given.

RIDGEWAY v. DARWIN.

[1802, JULY 21.]

EXECUTOR, charged by his answer, not permitted to discharge himself by his affidavit of payments to the testator in his life (a). Admission of the receipt of sums, which sums he had paid, &c. a good discharge, [p. 405.]

THE Defendant, an executor, being charged by his answer with the receipt of money, attempted to discharge himself by his affidavit

(1) Ante, vol. v. 199, and the note.

(2) The Roman Catholic religion.

(3) 1 Turn. 18.

(a) See Thompson v. Lambe, post, 587, and note (b); Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 John. Ch. 62.

of different sums, amounting in the whole to 150*l.*; as paid by him to the testator in his life; and the Master not having allowed that discharge, he excepted to the Report.

[* 405] * Mr. Richards and Mr. Hart, in support of the Exception.—The Attorney General, Mr. Romilly, and Mr. Johnson, for the Plaintiff.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, that if a man admitted, he had received certain sums, which sums he had paid, &c., the discharge following immediately, in the same sentence, that would do (1); but he never knew an instance, where a man was allowed to discharge himself in this way by affidavit; observing, that he swore safely to payments to a dead man.

Mr. Hollist (Amicus Curiae) said, Lord Hardwicke determined against such a discharge; as appeared by a case in the Register's Book.

The Exception was over-ruled.

THE rule, laid down in the principal case, that a defendant cannot discharge himself from a sum with which he is charged by the admissions in his own answer, unless the circumstances of such charge and alleged discharge are so immediately connected as to form, in fact, only parts of the very same transaction, was confirmed in Thompson v. Lambe, 7 Ves. 588, and in Robinson v. Scotney, 19 Ves. 584. In the case last cited, it was intimated that, when the admission of the charge was made by mistake, the party should apply for leave to correct that mistake by putting in an explanatory answer; but that, if he omitted to take this course, he could not except to the master's report, founded on his own admission.

STOKES, Ex parte.

[1802, JULY 23.]

PETITION to supersede a Commission of Bankruptcy, before any meeting, upon affidavits of the solvency of the bankrupt, that he never committed an act of bankruptcy, and did not owe the petitioning creditor 100*l.* refused: nor would the Lord Chancellor direct an issue.

Commission of Bankruptcy an execution for all creditors. The petitioning creditor therefore cannot receive his debt, and the Commission be superseded, while the others are unsatisfied, [p. 406.]

THE prayer of this petition was, that the Commission of bankrupt issued against the petitioner, an attorney, may be superseded. No meeting had taken place under the Commission. The affidavit of the petitioner stated, that he never had committed an act of bankruptcy; that he is solvent; and does not owe the petitioning creditor 100*l.*; and the petitioning creditor had brought an action against him in the last Term for 80*l.* only; that he desired the particulars to be sent to him ; which had not been done. The agent of the petitioner swore, that he is worth 3000*l.* after all his debts paid.

(1) Ante, Blount v. Burrow, vol. i. 546; post, Thompson v. Lambe, 587; Robinson v. Scotney, vol. xix. 582.

In opposition to this the affidavit of the petitioning creditor stated positively, that 178*l.* is due to him from Stokes ; that the deponent brought an action against him for that sum, which he found he could not recover ; and many other creditors [ 406] are in the same situation ; that, after the Commission is sued, Stokes offered to pay the deponent ; and that he shall be able to prove Stokes a bankrupt.

Mr. Rickards, Mr. Romilly, and Mr. Cooke, in support of the petition, cited Ex parte Parsons (1).

The Solicitor General [Sir Thomas Manners Sutton] and Mr. Hall, for the Assignees.—This application is perfectly new. If it can be supported, it is at least necessary, to induce your Lordship to interfere, that it should be quite clear, that there is no debt, upon which a commission can be taken out, and no act of bankruptcy. The creditors cannot be prevented from taking this course, if they please. In Ex parte Parsons the question was only as to the trading ; which any man is competent to speak to : but whether there was an act of bankruptcy, or not, is matter of law as well as of fact.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This is one of the most important applications, that ever was made in bankruptcy. Suppose, the petitioner should turn out to be perfectly solvent ; yet if a debt of 100*l.* is sworn to, and he is a trader, and has committed an act of bankruptcy, a commission may be taken out ; and those facts being well established, the creditor has a right to do so. If this is the effect of the Statutes, the Chancellor has nothing to do with the consequences. Whether the law has sufficiently protected the party against the consequences is a consideration for the legislature. If the creditor, who, before the Commission issues, must swear to the effect of all this, an act of bankruptcy, a debt above 100*l.*, and that the party is a trader, takes a false oath, he is responsible [ 407] to the law of the country. It does not rest there. The petitioning creditor's bond to the Chancellor to prove the party a bankrupt is not a considerable additional security ; being in so small a sum : but where ruin ensues from a commission maliciously taken out, there is no limitation to the damages a Jury may give. Nor does it rest there ; for, though it would be an improper length for me to inquire into all the particulars, I do not think it unfit to ask the Solicitor the general question, whether he was instructed, that there was an act of bankruptcy. He will become deeply responsible for the propriety of his proceedings as the solicitor under the commission ; and, if he has been the instrument of malice without any ground for sustaining the commission, he will be in a situation of great peril. It is too true in my experience, that any thing may be sworn in bankruptcy : but I trust, the day will come, when the Ex parte Freeman, 1 Ves. & Bea. 41. Upon this principle, as a fraudulent commission may, even after a certificate, be superseded (Ex parte Poole, 2 Cox, 230,) so, on the other hand, a commission, it has been said, is never superseded to the injury of purchasers under it; Ex parte Edwards, 10 Ves. 104; nor, where purchases have been made under such commission, without the consent of all the creditors, (even those who have received twenty shillings in the pound,) and a confirmation by the bankrupt of the titles of the purchasers. Ex parte Milner, 19 Ves. 204, and see the note to Ex parte Jackson, 8 V. 533. This rule, however, should appear to be qualified by the eighty-seventh section of the statute of 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, which, by enacting that "no title to any real or personal estate sold under any commission, or under any order in bankruptcy, shall be impeached by the bankrupt, or any person claiming under him, unless the bankrupt shall have commenced proceedings to supersede the said commission, and have duly prosecuted the same, within twelve months from the issuing thereof," seems to imply that, if proceedings are commenced within that time, a commission may be superseded, notwithstanding titles have been made thereunder; but the equities of purchasers, in such cases, will, of course, be duly considered.

5. Even when the titles of purchasers are not implicated, the propriety of superseding a commission may be materially affected by a consideration of the length of time which has been allowed to elapse, before an application was made for that purpose: Ex parte Kirk, 15 Ves. 468; Ex parte Moule, 14 Ves. 603. To be sure, when a commission has been concocted in fraud, as far as the fraudulent parties are concerned, no objection can arise against superseding such commission after any length of time; and, if the bankrupt were implicated in the fraud, as against him the commission may properly be superseded, although he may have obtained his certificate. Ex parte Poole, 2 Cox, 230; Ex parte Cullen, 2 Buck, 69. But, as such certificate must necessarily fall, together with the commission out of which it originated, (Ex parte Leaverland, 1 Atk. 145; Everett v. Backhouse, 10 Ves. 99,) should it seem probable that on the faith of the certificate many persons have honestly entered into dealings with the bankrupt, who would be materially injured if it were to be revoked, a reference may be directed to ascertain that fact. Ex parte Tallis, 1 Ball & Beat 322. And, if it appear that hardship and injustice would arise to innocent persons, if the certificate fell to the ground, that would deserve and meet serious consideration. Ex parte Reed, Buck, 430. And, it is to be observed, a bankrupt, after he has applied for and obtained a certificate, will not, himself, be allowed to impeach the commission under which he took such certificate, on the ground that he was no trader; but if, upon an action by the assignees against a creditor to the bankrupt's estate, their title is successfully resisted, and the commission thereby becomes inoperative, the bankrupt may petition to supersede it. Ex parte Bass, Buck. 270. When the commission, however, has not been impeached aliiunde, the bankrupt himself will be restrained from proceeding at law to set it aside, upon any alleged informality, after he has (not merely acquiesced for a length of time under the commission, but) actively co-operated with his assignees in the administration of his estate, thereby inducing them to prosecute the commission in supposed security. Ex parte Cullen, 1 Glyn & Jameson, 320.

6. The eighth section of the Consolidated Bankrupt Act, expressly declares, that where the creditor who struck the docket against his debtor has received any part of his demand, or any security for payment of the same, the commission may be superseded, leaving this, however, to the discretion of the Lord Chancellor; with that discretion, indeed, as to this matter of superseding commissions, the bankrupt statutes very rarely interfere by any positive directions. But the old decision of the Court with respect to concerted commissions, which formerly were always superseded, must be materially modified by the sixth and seventh sections of the statute 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, which permits any trader to file a declaration in the Bankrupt Office of his own insolvency, upon which declaration (the forms prescribed by the statute being duly observed) a commission may be founded. It should seem, however, that a concerted commission would still be invalid, if it did not pursue all the forms, and guards, and precautions, of the late act.

7. A commission will not be superseded merely because it was not taken out for the sole purpose of making a distribution of the bankrupt's estate amongst his creditors; there may be by-motives for the measure, perfectly consistent with good faith; (Ex parte Wilbean, Beck. 461;) though, of course, if the transaction were not bona fide, it will not, in general, be allowed to stand; (see the note to Ex parte Thorpe, 1 V. 394;) but this qualification of the rule was laid down by Sir John Leach, V. C.:—Even though a commission has issued upon the application of a creditor who was actuated by the most unjust motives, still, if his unfair purpose may be defeated without superseding the commission, the Court will only interfere so far as may be necessary to prevent such commission from becoming an efficient instrument of fraud; though, if the bankrupt cannot be relieved from the meditated fraud except by superseding the commission, that course will be adopted. Ex parte Bourne, 1 Glyn & Jameson, 216. But it should be observed that the decision just cited, being brought before Lord Eldon, by appeal, his lordship did not acquiesce in the doctrine, that if the fraudulent purpose for which a commission was taken out, could be defeated without superseding the commission, the commission should be allowed to stand. Ex parte Bourne, 2 Glyn & Jameson, 146, 150.

8. A commission taken out with a view to press the bankrupt, or his friends, to a private arrangement, rather than for the purpose of a fair distribution under the direction of the Great Seal (of which a neglect to proceed under the commission will be prima facie evidence), may be superseded. Ex parte Smith, 1 Rose, 133; Ex parte Masterman, 18 Ves. 290; Ex parte Bourne, 16 Ves. 150. But, that the general order which prescribes the time within which commissions are to be proceeded in, or, in neglect thereof, to be supersedable, though a wholesome general rule, is not universal and inflexible; see, ante, note 1 to Ex parte Leicester, 6 V. 429.

NEWMAN v. HODGSON.

[1802, JULY 24.]

PREROGATIVE probate not dispensed with on account of the smallness of the sum (a).

A MOTION was made, that the sum of 38*l.* might be paid upon a provincial probate only, in the diocese of York; upon the ground that the sum was so small, and the authority of former orders (1).

Mr. Mansfield (Amicus Curiae) said, the sum, for which such an order might be had, was limited to 40*l.* in Lord Thurlow's time: but he put a stop to it; and a great deal of money has been since lost; where the sums could not bear the expense of a prerogative administration.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] refused to make the order; intimating, that a bill ought to be brought into Parliament for these cases: but an order against Law could not be made.

SEE, ante, the note to Sweet v. Partridge, 5 V. 148.

(a) See 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 188, 189.

(1) Ante, Sweet v. Partridge, vol. v. 148; over-ruled by Challoner v. Murrall, vi. 118; Thomas v. Davies, post, xii. 417.

OLDHAM v. OLDHAM.

[1802, JULY 24.]

WRIT of Ne exeat Regno for arrears of alimony and costs.

Affidavit for a writ of Ne exeat Regno must state an intention to go abroad: that the Defendant will hide himself is not sufficient. It must be positive, that he is going abroad; or to some declaration, that he is; by himself, not a third person (a) [p. 410.]

MR. WETHERELL moved for a writ of Ne exeat Regno on behalf of a married woman against her husband.

Upon the affidavits it appeared, that the Plaintiff had instituted a suit in the Spiritual Court against the Defendant for restitution of conjugal rights; and had obtained a decree for alimony, with costs. The alimony was payable quarterly; and 5*l.* arrears was due; and for costs 8*l.* 14*s.* The affidavit did not state any intention of going abroad; but merely, that a third person communicated to the Plaintiff's Proctor, that the Defendant would not perform the sentence; and would hide himself, where the Plaintiff could never find him.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—That is not stating an intention to go abroad. You must either swear positively, that he is going abroad, or to some declaration, that he is. It is not sufficient to swear, that another person said so. The rule is, that there must be an affidavit positive to that extent.

The motion stood over for the purpose of filing a proper affidavit (1).

For a summary of the general doctrines established with respect to writs of ne exeat, see, ante, the note to Sedgwick v. Watkins, 1 V. 49; the note to Coglar v. Coglar, 1 V. 94; and the notes to De Carriere v. De Calonne, 4 V. 577.

[*411]

WILEY v. PISTOR.

[1802, JULY 14, 24.]

MOTION by Defendant for inspection of letters, referred to by the Plaintiff's depositions, as exhibits, refused, with costs (b).

A MOTION was made for the Defendant before the Master of the Rolls, sitting for the Lord Chancellor, that letters referred to by the

(a) See on this head, Coglar v. Coglar, ante, 1 V. 94, 95, note (a); Russell v. Ashby, ante, 5 V. 96, note (a), 98, note (a); 2 Story, Eq. Jur. 1471–1473; 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. b. 3, c. 6, § 4, p. 652; Ayckbourn, Ch. Pr. (Lond. ed. 1844), 172–174.

(1) Shaftoe v. Shaftoe, Dawson v. Dawson, ante, 171, 173; Etches v. Lance, post, 417; Coglar v. Coglar, ante, vol. i. 94, and the notes, 95; and iv. 592; Beames Ne ex Reg. 34, 2d edit.

(b) 1 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 388; 2 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th Am. ed.), 394.

Plaintiff's depositions, as exhibits, may be delivered to the Clerk in Court for the Defendant, to be inspected.

Mr. Pemberton, for the Plaintiff, insisted, that the motion was contrary to the course of the Court : the constant rule being, that one party cannot see the exhibits of the other. Hodson v. The Earl of Warrington (1).

Mr. Hollist (Amicus Curiae) said, Lord Thurlow refused to allow a deed, referred to by the Plaintiff's depositions, to be produced for the inspection of the Defendant ; saying, if he had a right, he must file a bill.

Mr. W. Agar, in support of the Motion.—The practice is according to the case cited, where the party refers to deeds as exhibits ; but the exhibits, that are the subject of this application, are mere letters. The reason, that governs the case of deeds is, that by the inspection you may invalidate the deed. But letters are mere matters of evidence ; and the application is reasonable unless some disadvantage arising from it can be shown.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT], having consulted the Register, who did not recollect any such order, inclined against the motion ; but permitted it to be made before the Lord Chancellor. The motion was accordingly made before his Lordship.

* For the Motion.—The cases of deeds, Davers v. Davers (2) [*412] and Hodson v. The Earl of Warrington, being cases upon deeds, forming the title, have no application to this case ; in which the title cannot be affected. In Stanhope v. Roberts (3) the production of the draft of a deed was ordered : and in a case before the House of Lords, there referred to, a demurrer to a bill for the discovery of a case submitted by the Defendant to his Counsel was over-ruled. In Gardiner v. Mason (4) a production of letters and papers referred to by the answer was ordered. Under a cross bill this production might be compelled ; and it is reasonable, that it should be had without that expense.

Mr. Stratford (Amicus Curiae) said, a similar motion was refused in Cooth v. Jackson (5).

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This must be very familiar, if there was not some objection to it ; and I never heard of such a motion. It must go much farther. At least you must describe the exhibit to be proved viva voce : but I do not remember any motion for inspection of such an exhibit.

The motion was refused with costs (6).

As a general rule, a defendant cannot move for an order upon the plaintiff to produce documents. Anonymous case, 2 Dick. 778. But, where the sight of an

(1) 3 P. Will. 35.

(2) Davers v. Davers, 2 P. Will. 410.

(3) 2 Atk. 214.

(4) 4 Bro. C. C. 479.

(5) Ante, vol. vi. 12.

(6) See post, Pickering v. Rigby, vol. xviii. 484; The Princess of Wales v. The there is not sufficient ground for the Plaintiff to say, that, after they have tried an action, still, if he chooses, the instrument is to be delivered up; and instead of this species of proceeding, which in many cases the Court would not have permitted, the Court should be assisted in the old way by a proceeding at Law permitted under directions and regulations of its own.

I say nothing as to the Lis pendens applying to negotiable securities. But the order for restraining the Defendant in this case is not conclusive upon this point. You are obliged to come here for injunctions upon mortgages, conveyances, &c. which I have known three or four deep. But even then, unless the instrument is delivered up, you are not relieved from all danger. The very circumstance, that the holder may compel you to defend yourself against the demand with the expense and vexation attending a suit, is a more reasonable ground for entertaining jurisdiction originally than for departing from the established doctrine. Therefore I do not admit, that this Court will not examine the facts of the case, with a view to determine, whether relief shall be administered, or not, merely because an action may be maintained. I agree, when the discovery is obtained, if the facts are contradictory, a Judge sitting here would act rashly if he should not desire the assistance of a jury; and if matter of Law arises, unless it is very clear, he ought to take advantage of the assistance he can have as to that. But, if the facts and the law are indisputably clear, I cannot admit, that it is not within the jurisdiction of this Court and the due application of those circumstances to act, not only without sending them, but without allowing them to go to Law (a). At the hearing the Court will determine, whether an action ought not to be tried; but is not bound till the hearing.

[*416] * Another ground for continuing this Injunction is, that the dates and other circumstances, which may be very material, as to the bona fides, with which Bolt received this bill, are very loosely stated in the answer. The circumstances therefore require the injunction to be continued; and it is within the jurisdiction to do so. As to depositing the bill of exchange and the letters, it is clear, that under the circumstances admitted in the answer Bolt ought to be restrained from negotiating this bill; and, if so, the bill ought to be deposited. Bolt ought to have an opportunity of applying for the production of it in all circumstances, in which it may be necessary: the Court taking care, that it shall still continue in the same custody. The letters also ought to be produced. They may be extremely material evidence either here, or at Law, if it should be sent there, upon the bona fides, with which Bolt received this bill.

Afterwards by a farther answer, put in upon exceptions, Bolt submitted to the relief prayed against him; and by consent the bill, which had been deposited with the Master was delivered up to the Plaintiff to be cancelled ; and Bolt was ordered to discontinue his action.

(a) 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 702; Smith v. Carl, 5 Johns. Ch. 118, 119.

SEE the notes to S. C. 6 V. 738.

ETCHES v. LANCE.

[* 417]

[1802, JULY 24; AUGUST 3.]

To obtain a writ of Ne exeat Regno the affidavit must be positive as to the intention to quit the kingdom, or declarations to that effect. It is sufficient, that the debt will be endangered ; without stating, that it is to avoid the jurisdiction (a). No Injunction upon belief of an intention to cut timber, [p. 417.] Ne exeat Regno a high prerogative writ (b), [p. 417.]

MR. LEACH, for the Plaintiff, moved for a Ne exeat Regno. The affidavit in support of the motion stated, that the sum of 15,000*l.* was reported to be due from the Defendant ; that the Plaintiff was entitled to a certain part of that sum ; and that the deponent is informed and believes, that the Defendant was appointed to an office under the East India Company at Canton ; and therefore the deponent believes he intends to go abroad.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—Does the Court grant this writ upon belief and information, that the Defendant is appointed to a situation abroad, and therefore the deponent believes he intends to go ? Must not something more positive be sworn as to the fact of his going abroad, or declarations ; and ought not the affidavit to state, that he is going to avoid the jurisdiction of the Court ? I have refused the motion, where the affidavit was nothing more than that the deponent verily believes, the Defendant is going abroad. I never would grant an injunction upon an affidavit, stating, that the deponent verily believes, the Defendant is about to cut timber. The application of this high prerogative writ to these purposes can only be justified by usage and practice. If they will not warrant it

(a) See Oldham v. Oldham, ante, 410, and note (a); Atkinson v. Leonard, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 218, 224, and notes; Sherman v. Sherman, ib. 370, note (b); 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. 649, 650; Mattocks v. Tremaine, 3 John. Ch. 75; Hampson v. Harrison, 8 Ves. 32; Russell v. Ashby, ante, 5 V. 96, note (b); De Carriere v. De Calonne, ante, 4 V. 577, note (a).

(b) Though originally a prerogative writ, it has now become an ordinary process of Courts of Equity, and is as much a writ of right as any other process used in the administration of justice. Gibert v. Colt, 1 Hopk. 496. This writ is resorted to for the purpose of obtaining equitable bail. Mitchell v. Bunch, 2 Paige, 606; Dunham v. Jackson, 1 Paige, 629; De Rivaflonoli v. Corretti, 4 Paige, 264. Its object is to hold the party personally within the jurisdiction of the Court to answer any order or decrees made by the Court, and the writ is proper only for the purpose of detaining the person of the defendant to respond to the decree of the Court. Gleason v. Biddy, 1 Clarke, 551; Johnson v. Clendenin, 5 Gill & John. 463; 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. 647.

under such circumstances, I do not know, upon what it is to stand. Lord Rosslyn lately considered it in the nature of equitable bail (1).

[* 418] * The motion stood over, to search for precedents, and to get a positive affidavit.

Aug. 3d. An affidavit was produced, that the Defendant informed the deponent (the Plaintiff), that he (the Defendant) had that appointment at Canton; and that he is going out in one of the next ships, to reside there; and the deponent believes, if he quits the kingdom, the recovery of the balance reported due to the Plaintiff will be greatly endangered.

Mr. Leach, in support of the motion.—The books do not afford very decisive evidence upon this subject; though inferences may be drawn from them. Prac. Reg. 289. Lloyd v. Cardy (2). Baker v. Dumaresque (3): in which case he was returning to the place of his abode. All the cases support the inference, that it is sufficient, that the debt will be endangered; though the motive for quitting the kingdom is not to avoid the jurisdiction.

The Lord CHANCELLOR.—There are some later cases, of parties, inhabitants of the West Indies, going there. Atkinson v. Leonard (4) and the reasoning upon it are very satisfactory. You may take the order (5).

SEE, ante, the note to Sedgwick v. Walkins, 1 V. 49; the note to Coglar v. Coglar, 1 V. 94; and the notes to De Carriere v. De Calonne, 4 V. 577.

(1) See, ante, Russell v. Ashby, vol. v. 96, [98, note (a).]

(2) Prec. Ch. 171.

(3) 2 Atk. 66.

(4) 3 Bro. C. C. 218.

(5) Ante, Oldham v. Oldham, 410. See the notes, vol. i. 95; iv. 592; and Mr. Beames's Brief View of the Writ.

MILLET v. ROWSE.

[1802, JULY 31.]

UPON marriage of a ward of the Court, under flagrant circumstances, the husband obtaining a license upon a false oath, that she was of age, the clergyman was ordered to attend, and reprimanded: the husband was committed, and ordered to be indicted. Being convicted and having suffered the punishment, upon his petition to be discharged on executing a settlement, the Lord Chancellor would not approve a proposal giving him any farther interest than, in case of his surviving and no children, under her appointment; requiring the fund to be transferred to the Accountant General: with a trust declared to pay the dividends to her separate use for life, from time to time, and not by way of anticipation: after her decease the capital among all her children by any marriage: if none, and he survives, according to her appointment by Will; if no appointment, to her next of kin; and if he survives, subject to her appointment, to her, her executors, &c.

No costs to the husband, [p. 419.]

JAMES THOMPSON having been married to Maria Withers, a Ward of the Court of the age of fourteen, by license, to procure which he took the usual oath, a petition was presented; and the parties, and the clergyman (1), who performed the ceremony, attending in Court under an order for that purpose, and the young woman appearing evidently to be under age, Lord Rosslyn, then Lord Chancellor, severely reprimanded the clergyman; and, committing Thompson, directed, that he should be prosecuted. He was accordingly indicted; and convicted; and, having suffered the punishment of the pillory and imprisonment, he presented a petition; praying, that he may be discharged upon executing a settlement according to a proposal, approved by the Master. His proposal was, that the property, to which the infant was entitled, consisting of 1000*l.* stock, should be vested in trustees for the separate use of the infant for life; and after her decease for the children: if there should be no children, and she should survive, in trust for the infant, her executors, and administrators; and if he should survive, for him, his executors, &c.

A petition in opposition was presented by the mother of the infant; making a different proposal.

Mr. Roupell, for the Petitioner Thompson.—Mr. Pemberton, contra.

* The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—In a case flagrant, [*420] as this is, I should have made all the alterations proposed by the petition of the mother. The only settlement I ever will approve is this. Instead of trustees the fund shall stand in the name of the Accountant General; where it will be always safe; and a trust shall be declared for the separate use of this infant for life, to be paid to her from time to time, and not by way of anticipation, during her life: after her decease the capital to go among all her children by this or any other marriage (1): if she dies without any children in the life of Thompson, then according to her appointment by will; and, in case she makes no appointment, to her next of kin. In case he redeems himself by good behavior during her life, she may give it to him by will. If she does not, I never will let him touch a farthing of it. If she survives him, it shall go according to her appointment by deed or will, and if she makes no appointment, to her, her executors, &c.

(1) See, ante, Priestley v. Lambe, vol. vi. 421; Warion v. Yorke, post, vol. xix. 451.

When he shall have executed a settlement according to these directions, and not till then, let him be discharged. I shall give him no costs. The costs of the other parties must come out of the fund (2).

As to the consequences of a contempt incurred by marrying or assisting in improperly procuring the marriage of a ward of Court, see the note to Priestley v. Lambe, 6 V. 421, with the farther references there given; and also note 4 to Nicholson v. Squire, 16 V. 250.

ANDREWS v. EMERSON.

[1802, AUGUST 2.]

THE rule, that an advance of 10 per cent. entitles the party to open biddings, not to prevail in future (a).

MR. STANLEY moved to open biddings upon a lot sold for 800*l.*; offering an advance of 80*l.*; exactly 10 per cent.

LORD CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—That rule of 10 per cent. [* 421] was not a wise rule to * establish. The consequence is, you never get more. I remember the time, when no such rule prevailed; and desire it to be observed, that in future there shall be no such rule (3).

Mr. Stanley then offering 100*l.* the order for opening the biddings

(1) Ante, Wells v. Price, vol. v. 398; Winch v. James, iv. 386. As to the extent to which the Court will go in providing for a subsequent marriage, see post, Bahurst v. Murray, vol. viii. 74; Halsey v. Halsey, ix. 47; Long v. Long, 2 Sim. & Stu. 119.

(2) Ante, Stevens v. Savage, vol. i. 154; and the note, 155.

(a) See as to opening biddings and the practice thereon, Anonymous, ante, 1 V. 453, note (a); Cheham v. Grueon, ante, 5 V. 86, note (a); 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. 537; 1 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) p. 86, [122], &c seq., and notes of Mr. Hammond.

The English practice of opening biddings on an advance seems not to have been adopted in several of the States of this country. See, ante, 1 V. 453, note (a), above cited; Duncan v. Dodd, 2 Paige, 100; Collier v. Whipple, 13 Wendell, 224.

(3) White v. Wilson, post, vol. xiv. 151. See the note, ante, vol. ii. 55.

was made, upon a deposit of 200*l.*, and the usual terms of paying the purchaser all his costs.

SEE, ante, the note to the Anonymous case, 1 V. 453.

BRANSTROM v. WILKINSON.

[ROLLS.—1802, AUGUST 5.]

LEGACY, when the legatee shall attain twenty-one, may be so controlled by the apparent intention as to postpone the possession only, not the vesting (a); as where it was to two children, when they shall attain twenty-one, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike; appointing their father in trust for the same and trustee for them during their minority; and in case of the death of either the survivor to take the whole; and in case both die in their minority, over.

THE question in this cause arose upon the following clause in a will:

"I give and bequeath to the two twin children of my said niece Charles Branstrom and Frederick Branstrom my one Dock share in the present new Dock at Kingston-upon-Hull, when they shall attain the age of twenty-one years to be equally divided between them share and share alike and I appoint Mr. John Branstrom the father in trust for the same trustee for them during their minority and my will is that in case of the death of either of them the survivor to take the whole and in case they both die in their minority I then give the whole Dock share to my said niece their mother and her heirs for ever."

The testator appointed his nephew Joseph Wilkinson sole executor and residuary legatee.

* The bill was filed by the testator's niece and her husband and their two infant children against the executor; praying a transfer of the Dock share. The question was, whether the children had a vested interest before twenty-one. The dividends during their minority were claimed by the Defendant. It was admitted, that this Dock share was to be considered as personal estate.

Mr. Johnson, for the Plaintiffs, insisted, that the infants had a

(a) See 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1026; Chaworth v. Hooper, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 82, note; Green v. Pigott, ib. 103, and notes; Walcott v. Hall, 2 ib. 305, and notes; Benyon v. Maddison, 1 ib. 75-78, and notes; Shattuck v. Sedman, 2 Pick. 488; Slott v. Price, 2 Serg. & R. 59; Bunch v. Hurst, 3 Desaus. 286; Fonbl. Eq. b. 4, pt. 1, ch. 2, § 4, note (k); O'Driscoll v. Koger, 2 Desaus. 295.

A legacy to be paid when the legatee attains majority, is vested, though contingent. Caldwell v. Kinhead, 1 B. Monroe, 231; Lister v. Bradley, 1 Hare, 10; Rofe v. Sowerby, Taml. 376; Davson v. Kille, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 123, note (a); Barnes v. Allen, ib. 182, note (b).

vested interest in these dividends, given expressly in trust for them during their minority.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Horne, for the Defendant.—Nothing is given during the minority of these children. To give the dividends during that period the Court must insert words in the will. The expression, "when they shall attain twenty-one" must be understood "at" that age. This is Debitum et solendum in futuro. There is nothing but the circumstance, that a trustee is appointed; and no case has gone the length, that that alone will do. That appointment might be intended as guardian. A gift to a trustee in trust for a legatee at twenty-one is just the same as a gift to the legatee at twenty-one.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—There is no doubt upon this point. It is perfectly clear, what this testator intended to postpone was, not the vesting, but the possession. He appoints a trustee. How could there be a trustee for them of nothing? There are many cases, in which notwithstanding the word "when" the interest vested. In Hanson v. Graham (1) I held, that a bequest in these terms may be so controlled by expressions and circumstances as to postpone the possession only, not the [*423] * vesting. Of what is the father trustee during their minority? I cannot put any other meaning upon those words. He intended to appoint a trustee for them beneficially.

Decree, that this Dock share be transferred to the father upon the trusts of the will.

SEE the notes to Hanson v. Graham, 6 V. 239, and the farther references there given.

WHITE v. WHITE.

[ROLLS.—1802, AUGUST 9.]

BEQUEST to poor relations sustained as a charity (a).

THE testatrix by her will bequeathed a personal fund, consisting of about 3000*l.* stock, for the purpose of putting out "our poor relations" apprentices. Afterwards by a codicil she confined it to two families.

Upon a bill to have the trusts of the will carried into execution, Mr. Richards, for the Defendant, contended, that this was not a charity; as if it was to the poor in general; being merely a legacy to poor relations; and, if not to be supported as a charity, it was void; exceeding the limits allowed by law.

(1) Ante, vol. vi. 239. See the note, iii. 364.

(a) See Attorney General v. Price, 17 Ves. 371; Crichton v. Grierson, 3 Bligh, N. S. 438.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—Are not such cases supported as charities? There was a case of this kind, Mocatta v. Lowando, lately before me; where a great number of Jews were the objects. I may execute it as far as I can. I do not know, why those, who are ready, may not be put out apprentices.

The decree directed such of the objects as were ready to be put out apprentices; and the fund to be laid out from time to time; with liberty to apply (1). —

WHERE the distribution is to be made by the Court, and not at the unlimited discretion of a testator's trustees, an immediate bequest to "poor relations" must be applied to the use of such relations only as come within the degrees prescribed by the Statute of Distributions; but a donation in such terms, if intended to found an endowment of permanent continuance, will be supported, as a charity, in favor of all such relations of the testator as are poor and proper objects. See note 5 to Brown v. Higgs, 4 V. 708.

OSBORNE v. DENNE.

[* 424]

[ROLLS.—1802, AUGUST 10.]

THE Court refused a Prochein amy the costs beyond the taxed costs. In charity cases the Court often gives the Relators costs beyond the taxed costs, [p. 424.]

The bill was filed by a legatee, entitled also in right of his wife to the residue, on behalf of himself, and as Prochein Amy of an infant legatee, now Mrs. Osborne; and the usual decree was made: the costs to be taxed; and to come out of the estate.

Mr. Cooke on behalf of the Prochein Amy desired, that in some way he may have costs beyond the taxed costs; either by a direction to have them taxed as between attorney and client, or by a reference to the Master, to see, what extra costs he has been put to; observing, that if this cannot be done, no one will file a bill on behalf of an infant except in the plainest case; admitting, however, that this application was against a late decision by the Master of the Rolls.

MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—If the Prochein Amy is to a certainty to have all, that exceeds the taxed costs, that leads him to be very careless. The inquiry could be only, what was properly expended. This is a bill filed also by other parties as well as on behalf of the infant; and not purely for her right. I understand, the Lord Chancellor has said, he never will direct such a reference.

Mr. Harvey (Amicus Curiae) said, Lord Rosslyn had directed a reference for this purpose in the case of Champernoon.

(1) The Attorney General v. Price, post, vol. xvii. 371.

Mr. Romilly (Amicus Curiae) said, in the Attorney General v. Taylor (1), a very late case of a charity, upon a gross breach [*425] * of trust the Lord Chancellor did make such a direction in favor of the relators in that particular case; as otherwise people would not come forward to file informations; but not laying it down as a general rule.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT], said, it was often done in cases of charity.

No order was made (2). —

With respect to some of the liabilities of a prochein amy, see, ante, note 2 to the Anonymous case, 1 V. 409. And, as to the protection which, in certain cases, will be extended to him, see note 4 to Dixon v. Parks, 1 V. 402. See, also, Fearns v. Young, 10 Ves. 184, that a trustee may be fairly entitled, not only to costs, but to charges which, though they could not come under that head, may be given as just allowances.

(1) 21st July, 1802. See Beames on Costs, 25; The Attorney General v. Carle, 343; and 1 Dick. 113. Mr. Beames observes, 25, (note 10,) that the order in the Attorney General v. Taylor, does not appear in the Register's Book: and probably was never drawn up: there is not any trace of the cause beyond its being heard.

(2) See, as to just allowances, post, Fearns v. Young, vol. x. 184; Crump v. Baker, xviii. 285; Beames on Costs, 135, 215.

RIPLEY v. WATERWORTH.

[1802, JULY 22, 26.]

UPON the construction of a deed for the purpose of a partnership real estate held to be converted out and out, into personal (a).

The interest in an estate pur autre vie to a man, his executors, administrators, and assigns, beyond the debts, belongs to those, who are entitled to the personal estate. The executor was therefore held a trustee for the residuary legatees (b), [p. 426.]

General principle, that where a person dealing upon his own property only has directed a conversion for a particular purpose, or out and out, but the produce to be applied to a particular purpose, when the purpose fails, the intention fails; and this Court regards him as not having directed the conversion (c), [p. 435.]

Property held converted under the effect of a contract by relation; though the actual conversion depended on a contingency, not in the option of the owner; and did not take place during his life, [p. 437.]

Executor may be a special occupant, [p. 440.]

Stock bequeathed by a Will without two witnesses, is subject in the hands of the executor to the directions of the Will; even for the purpose of a residuary bequest (d), [p. 441.]

Tenant pur autre vie made a lease for years; and died during that lease, living the Cestui que vie. The lessee for years would take the estate itself (e), [p. 442.]

Requisites to occupancy; a vacant possession, and a filling up of it by some person, who meant to occupy, [p. 442.]

Advowson in gross assets by descent at Common Law for specialty debts, [p. 447.]

No special occupancy of a rent; being an incorporeal hereditament: but if the heirs, &c. are named in the grant, the executor is said to be quasi occupant, [p. 448.]

THE usual decree was made in this cause for an account of the personal estate of the testator William Marsh Mears, received by the Defendant, the executor, &c. and inquiries were directed, among others, what interest the testator had in a freehold estate and sugar-

(a) See on the subject of real estate purchased with partnership funds, Story, Partnership, § 93; Thornton v. Dixon, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 199, 200, note (a), and cases cited; Smith v. Smith, ante, 5 V. 193, note (a), and cases cited; Dyer v. Clark, 5 Metcalf, 562; Howard v. Priest, 5 Metcalf, 582; Cookson v. Cookson, 8 Sim. 529; Fereday v. Wightwick, 1 Russ. & Mylne, 45; 3 Kent, (5th ed.) 37, 38, 39, and notes. See the case of Ripley v. Waterworth, stated at large on this point in Collyer on Partnership, (2d. Am. ed.) 70-76; Townsend v. Devaynes, reported, ib. 76, 77, and 1 Mont. Partn. App. 96; 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 199, Mr. Belt's note, (1).

(b) 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1190, 1191, 1192; Ram on Assets, ch. 9, § 1, p. 151, 152. Generally in America, executors are trustees for the residue undisposed of in all cases. See Nesbitt v. Murray, Murray v. Nesbitt, ante, 5 V. 158, note (a); Bennett v. Batchelor, ante, 1 V. 68, note (a); Nourse v. Finch, ib. 344, note (a); 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1208; Urquhart v. King, ante, 224, note (a).

(c) Where the object, for which the conversion of real into personal estate was directed, fails, either wholly or in part, so that the proceeds thereof are not legally and effectually disposed of by the will of the testator, there is a resulting trust, as to the land devised in favor of the heir at law pro tanto. Hawley v. James, 7 Paige, 213; S. C. 5 Paige, 318; Bogert v. Hertell, 4 Hill, 492; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1200; Hewitt v. Wright, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 86-90, and notes; Robinson v. Taylor, 2 ib. 589-595, and notes; North v. Valk, C. W. Dud. Eq. 212; Walker v. Denne, ante, 2 V. 170, and notes; Wheldale v. Partridge, ante, 5 V. 397, note (a), and cases cited.

(d) 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 578, 579, 52.

(e) See 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 593, 594.

houses, and in leasehold estates, in the pleadings mentioned; and what pews or seats he had in St. Thomas's church or chapel; and whether they were to be considered as real or personal estate.

The Master by his Report as to the freehold estate and sugar-houses stated, that the testator was seised in fee of three undivided eighth parts of the said estate and sugar-houses; and that by indentures of lease and release of the 11th and 12th of May, 1790, the same with the remaining five eighth parts were conveyed to the Defendants William Tennant and Thomas Holland, their heirs and assigns for ever, to the use of such person or persons and for such estate or estates as Stephen Waterworth, the testator William

Marsh Mears, and Margaret Woods, should together appoint; and in the mean time *as to the testator's three eighth parts to the use of the testator for the purpose of carrying on the trade in partnership with Waterworth and Margaret Woods, or with such other persons as they should agree to admit as partners; and, in default of such appointment, upon trust that Tennant and Holland, or the survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of such survivor, should upon the decease of the shortest liver of Waterworth, Woods, and the testator, or upon the dissolution or cessation of such partnership by any one or more of the said partners, sell the whole of the said sugar-houses and premises, and apply the moneys arising from such sale (after paying off the incumbrances thereon, if any) in discharging such of the joint debts of the partnership as the joint stock of such partnership might fall short of paying; and pay the residue between the said three partners in the proportions following: to the testator, his executors, administrators, or assigns, three eighth parts: and the remaining five eighth parts between the other two partners; and the indenture contained a proviso, that in case there should be no such appointment, as aforesaid, then upon the decease of the shortest liver of the said three partners the two survivors if they should think proper, or such survivor as might think proper, might have and take the part or share of such shortest liver as well of the said sugar-houses and premises as of the implements, utensils, and fixtures, therein described at the prices following: viz. of such buildings, additions, and improvements, as may hereafter be erected or made thereon, at such price as may be laid out in building or making the same; and of the sugar-houses and premises as then enjoyed, with the implements, &c. at the rate of 3200*l.* for the whole; upon condition, that such price should be paid to Tennant and Holland within six months after the decease of such shortest liver.

The Report farther stated, that by indentures of lease [*427] and *release, dated the 1st and 2d of February, 1792, other messuages and buildings adjoining the sugar-houses were conveyed to Tennant and Holland and their heirs to the same uses. The Master did not find, that any appointment was made by the three partners; and after the testator's death, which happened on the 11th of October, 1792, Waterworth gave notice according to the proviso, that he elected to become the purchaser of the testator's three eighth parts of the premises; which he purchased accordingly. The Master stated his opinion upon the circumstances, that the testator had a chattel interest in the said freehold estate and sugar-houses.

The Report also stated, that Thomas Mears, the testator's late father, was at his death possessed of a lease of four houses with warehouses and other buildings and a piece of ground at Copperas Hill, of another lease of three houses and a warehouse in Paradise Street and Manesty Lane, and another lease of houses and parcels of land in Park Lane and Frederick Street, all in Liverpool, to Thomas Mears, during the lives of three persons and the life of the survivor, and after the decease of the survivor to Thomas Mears, his executors, administrators, and assigns, during the farther term of twenty-one years. Thomas Mears died about December 1773, intestate; leaving the testator, and Mary Ripley deceased, the late wife of the Plaintiff, and the Defendant Catherine Mercer, his only children and next of kin. The testator took out administration to his father. In 1776 the testator agreed with the corporation of Liverpool for a renewal of the lease of the premises at Copperas Hill; and accordingly by indentures, dated the 18th of January, 1776, the Corporation in consideration of 40*l.* demised to the testator, as sole administrator of his father, his executors, administrators, and assigns, those premises for three * lives [* 428] and the life of the survivor, and after the death of the survivor to the testator, his executors, administrators, and assigns, for the farther term of twenty-one years, at the yearly rent of 12*s.* 6*d.*

The Report farther stated, that the testator purchased the interest of Mercer and Ripley and their wives in the premises at Copperas Hill; who by indentures, dated the 1st of May, 1788, assigned, conveyed, and released, all their interest respectively, to hold to the testator, his executors, administrators, and assigns, in such manner as Mercer and Ripley in right of their wives were entitled. The testator having also in 1784 agreed for a renewal of the premises in Paradise Street and Manesty Lane, upon a fine of 67*l.*, by indentures of lease and release, dated the 19th of January, 1784, the Corporation made a similar demise to him of those premises; and he also purchased the interests of his sisters in those premises; and in 1788 in the same manner renewed the lease, as to those premises. By indentures, dated the 31st of March, 1791, the Corporation of Liverpool made a similar lease of a piece of land, called the Sandhole with other premises in Liverpool to the three partners, as tenants in common; which premises were by a memorandum indorsed to be held as to three eighths by the testator, three eighths by Waterhouse, and two eighths by Margaret Woods. The Master then having stated his approbation of contracts for the sale of part of the property, certified his opinion, that the testator had a chattel interest in the said several leasehold estates.

The Report also stated, that the testator had two seats in St. Thomas's Church in Liverpool, one of which descended to him as heir-at-law of his maternal grand-father, who was one of the original proprietors of the church, and as such had the seat [* 429] allotted to him ; and * the other descended to the testator as heir-at-law of his father ; who purchased it ; and the Master stated, that both the said seats were to be considered as freehold estate.

Exceptions were taken to the Report by the Defendants Mercer and his wife, and William Ripley, an infant, stating as to the said freehold estate and sugar-houses, that the Master ought to have certified, that the testator had a fee-simple estate ; and that the money received by the sale belonged to his heir-at-law ; and, as to the leasehold estates for lives, that the Master ought to have certified, that the testator had a real or dispendible estate and interest of freehold in the said several leasehold estates ; and that the same belonged to, or descended upon, the heir-at-law.

The residuary legatees, the Defendants Stephen and Frances Waterworth, contended, that the leasehold estates, having passed by the will, which was not attested by three witnesses, were to be applied as personal estate disposed of by the residuary clause, and not as upon an intestacy. In that point they were opposed by the next of kin.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. R. Smith, Mr. Richards and Mr. Hollist, the Solicitor General [Sir T. M. Sutton] and Mr. Bell, for different parties in support of the Exceptions.—The question upon the first exception is, whether this is a trust of real estate for the heir-at-law ; or whether by the deeds, that were executed, it was converted into personal estate. It is to be considered real estate at the death of the testator, upon this short principle ; that what was not at that time absolutely converted either in Law or Equity, but merely to answer a particular purpose, for which a conveyance was [* 430] to be made, remains real estate. * For any particular purpose, to which the produce is destined, it must of course be personal estate : but as between the representatives it remains real. This case, though the question arises upon deeds, is like the late cases upon wills ; directing the conversion of real estate into personal ; and yet, if the purpose, for which the conversion is to be made, does not exist in the life of the testator, and the disposition by the will fails, so that there is no reason for the conversion to answer the purposes of the will, in the view of this Court the estate remains real for the benefit of the heir.

The last case of that sort is Collins v. Wakeman (1) ; in which all the cases upon the point are referred to. That was as strong a case for defeating the right of the heir as could be imagined : yet it prevailed. The words in this deed, with regard to the payment of the money, are mere words of course : "executors, administrators, or assigns ;" and the inference is, that the words "heirs" and "executors," &c. were used indiscriminately, as meaning representatives. The liberty of pre-emption to the surviving partner is strong to show, that till then it continued real property. The clear object of the framers of this deed was to let in the debts of the partnership as well as any other incumbrances upon the estate. The power of sale was only in aid of the other funds, to pay the partnership debts ; and could only be intended to suit the exigencies of the trade. There was no necessity for exercising it. There was a use executed in the testator for the purpose of carrying on the trade in partnership. It must be real or personal in all events.

(1) Anle, vol. ii. 683. See also the notes, i. 45, 204 ; Brown v. Bigg, ante, 279, and the references ; and Bell v. Phyn, the next case.

Whether the legal or equitable fee was in * the testator at [* 431] his death, in one event it could not be personal estate.

Suppose, he had not died first, and the estate had been sold : the only object of a sale would have been to pay the incumbrances, and the debts of the trade ; which might have been done by a charge ; and the residue would have been real estate in him. In Hewitt v. Wright (1) Lord Thurlow observes the difference between a charge and residue ; that a charge is personal from its first creation ; but a residue continues real till converted (2).

The interest, which is the subject of the second exception, also belongs to the heir ; and cannot go as personal estate by this unattested will. In Westfaling v. Westfaling (3) Lord Hardwicke said, it would go to the executor as special occupant (4). That is singular upon the Acts of Parliament, the Statute of Frauds (5), and Mr. Fazakerly's Act (6) ; and is in opposition to the authority of Dyer, Roll and Comyns ; that being an estate of freehold it cannot go to the executor as special occupant. It is quite anomalous, if an executor in that character can take freehold estate. But the present question is not that ; but, whether this lease for lives can pass by an unattested will ; being made by the law clear personal property. Lord Redesdale could not discover any case in which that point was decided. It would be directly against the Statute of Frauds ; the expression of which being "any estate pur autre vie," without any qualification, it is impossible to say, it can be divisible in any other manner than with three witnesses. Afterwards the special occupancy of the heir is noticed. By the other Statute it is distributable among the next of * kin as personal estate ; [* 432] but it is not made personal estate ; and the same word "devise" is used. All the authorities treat this as real property,

(1) 1 Bro. C. C. 86.

(2) 1 Bro. C. C. 90.

(3) 3 Atk. 460.

(4) 3 Atk. 466 ; so 2 Ves. 685, in Williams v. Jekyll : but that is doubted by Lord Redesdale, 1 Sch. & Lef. 268, in Campbell v. Sandys ; where the old authorities are considered ; Rol. Ab. tit. Occupant ; G. 2, 3, Com. Dig. Estates ; F. 1, tit. Occupant. See post, 440, 448.

(5) Stat. 29, Ch. II. c. 3, s. 12.

(6) Stat. 14, Geo. II. c. 20, s. 9.

though not an inheritance, a descendible freehold : Low v. Burron (1), Oldham v. Pickering (2), St. John's College v. Fleming (3), Williams v. Jekyl (4).

The Attorney General, [Hon. Spencer Perceval], Mr. Fonblanche, and Mr. Whishaw, for the Report.—The doctrine of the Court, upon the point arising on the first exception, after fluctuating some time, is now settled by Ackroyd v. Smithson (5), Walker v. Denne (6), and the succeeding cases ; and the general doctrine is deduced by Lord Alvanley from the various decisions in the late case of Whedale v. Partridge (7) ; referring to your Lordships argument in Ackroyd v. Smithson, and to Ashburner v. Mac Guire (8). The point, upon which Ackroyd v. Smithson was determined, is, that, supposing all the legacies lapsed, the heir might have called for a conveyance.

This estate was under a contract of sale, and the price stipulated, provided the persons having an option chose to take advantage of it. This provision was not by any means made merely with a view to the exigencies of the trade ; but that the interest of the deceased partner should be absolutely converted, and there should be an end of the trade, whether these persons should choose to purchase, or not. The words “executors, administrators,” &c. are material to show the intended quality of the estate. The intention [*433] manifestly was to convert out * and out. Certainly at the death of the testator it had the quality of real estate ; but the purpose required conversion. In all the cases the trust resulted in respect of the title of the heir, provided he should answer the paramount purpose ; as in the instance of a devise charged with debts, &c. The consequence of the construction contended for would be a tenancy in common, destructive of the business. The primary object of this conversion was to pay the debts, and then to pay over to the executors, not to the heir ; and the purpose required the conversion, to prevent the consequence of the surviving partners being entangled by a tenancy in common with the heir ; which might have interfered with the purpose of carrying on the trade. Even if there should be no debts, the property is to be sold.

Upon the second exception, the most sensible and reasonable construction is to consider the persons pointed out as entitled to take. Why is not an executor to be considered special occupant as well as an heir at law ? In The Duke of Devon v. Kinton (9) the Lord Chancellor took it, that even before the Statute of Frauds, if an estate pur autre vie came to an executor or administrator, it would

-
- (1) 3 P. Will. 262.
 - (2) 2 Salk. 464 ; Carth. 376.
 - (3) 2 Vern. 320.
 - (4) 2 Ves. 681.
 - (5) 1 Bro. C. C. 503.
 - (6) Ante, vol. ii. 170.
 - (7) Ante, vol. v. 388.
 - (8) 2 Bro. C. C. 108.
 - (9) 2 Vern. 719.

be assets. The Statute providing, that, if there is no special occupant, it shall go to the executor, it would be strange, that, where it is given expressly to a man and his executors, it should not go to the executor. The fair construction of the latter Statute is, that either in the case of no devise or a devise intended to pass the property, but not executed according to the Statute of Frauds, it is to be distributed as the personal estate of the testator or intestate. If there is a special occupant, the case is beside the Statute; and that there is, Westfaling v. Westfaling, following the case in Vernon, is an authority. In Oldham v. Pickering * there was no [* 434] special occupant: the limitation being to a man and his assigns; and therefore the administrator was immediately within the Statute. The purpose of the Statute of Frauds was confined to making it assets; and it was not distributable till the latter Statute. The executor then as a special occupant takes it as personal estate, chargeable with the debts, and subject to application as personal estate after the debts paid. Lord Hardwicke, and Lord Kenyon in Atkinson v. Baker (1), describe it as personal estate. It is charged then with all the considerations and duties attaching upon personal estate; and the constant usage has been so to consider it.

Mr. Mansfield, in reply.—With respect to the first exception, this estate cannot be considered converted out and out. This is quite unlike the cases of absolute contract, depending upon the principle, that what is to be done is considered as done. The expression "executors, administrators, or assigns," is used very inaccurately.

As to the second exception, there is not a hint, that the executor takes as special occupant, till it was mentioned by Lord Hardwicke in the case referred to; the decision of which did not require it. The reason assigned in Connyns and other books, why he cannot be special occupant, is a reason of tenure, producing that singular thing, which remains to this day, general occupancy; namely, that there would be no occupant liable to the lord for his services and duties before probate of the will. No such thing is to be found in any of Lord Coke's works, or any other old book. It is nowhere converted into personal property: but by the Statute of Geo. II. it shall go and * be distributed as personal es- [* 435] tate; and it is made devisable only with three witnesses.

Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—Upon the subject of the first exception I am strongly inclined to think, this is personal estate; being of opinion, that upon the true construction of the deed the parties had contracted with each other, that, when the partnership should be determined, whether by the act of the parties or of God, the property should be converted to all intents and purposes. There is an obvious difference from all the cases; which establish this general principle, that where a person dealing upon his own property only has directed a conversion for a particular special purpose, or out and out, but the produce to be applied to a particular purpose, when the purpose fails, the intention fails; and this Court regards him as not having directed the conversion. But, first, this is a case, in which not an individual gives directions by will or other instrument as to his individual property, but three persons are contracting with each other as to what is to be done with property of a very peculiar nature. By the deed it is to be considered part of capital or stock in trade. The subject, I admit, is real; but combined with a great number of fixtures, utensils, and implements; many of which are personal. There being three parties, it was rational that they should so engage: and that, when the partnership should cease, the property should by mutual agreement be disposed of; as should be most beneficial to all of them. It was beneficial, that the whole should be sold out and out at the end of the concern, rather than that each individual third part should be brought to market. My idea upon the whole deed is, that a partnership was proposed between these persons, entitled to this property in eighths.

It was necessary they should bring in capital; and have [* 436] a place for carrying it on; to * purchase utensils, &c.; in which they were to have similar interests, as in the houses, for the benefit of the trade, though many of them were personal; and they agreed to carry on the business as long as it should be their pleasure. The question is, whether three persons engaging in a purchase of real property, such as this, and to be applied to such purposes, might not, and did not, contract, that, if the partnership should be dissolved by the act of all or the death of one, it should be all sold together for the purpose of producing more benefit upon the sale. There is another purpose, very rational; a stipulation, that, if this concern should cease by one partner choosing to go out, the others wishing not to dissolve the partnership, but to go on, should have liberty to purchase the share of him retiring, for a certain, fair, valuable consideration. So, in the case of death. There is an obvious inconvenience, if two wishing to go on should not be able to compel the third to sell, but should be entangled with him as landlord of that share; provided they could prevail upon him to demise it. The question therefore is, whether three persons having interests as tenants in common, and looking to these events, the death or retirement of one, might not contract in this manner, in order to make the most of property, though real in a strict sense, yet commercial in its nature, to sell it altogether; and upon this deed, though extremely inaccurate, I think, such an intention appears; and the meaning upon the whole is, that, if the surviving partners chose to buy the share of the deceased or retiring partner, to be estimated according to the proviso, they should have that option to buy out his interest in that manner.

In a case before Lord Kenyon, at the Rolls, upon the 15th of February, 1785 (1), Witterwronge demised to Douglas for seven years, with a covenant, that, if the tenant after the 29th of September, 1761, and before the 29th of September, 1765, should choose to purchase the inheritance for 3000*l.*, Witterwronge would convey to him. In 1763, before any election, Witterwronge died; and left all his real estate to Bennett in fee, and all his personal estate to Bennett and his sister equally as tenants in common. In 1765, before the time mentioned, Waller, who purchased the lease and benefit of the agreement from Douglas, called on Bennett to convey for 3000*l.*; which conveyance was made in consideration of that sum. Afterwards the sister and her husband filed a bill against the representative of Bennett, claiming a moiety of the 3000*l.* and interest, and it was decreed accordingly; and though the testator could never have compelled the lessee to purchase, yet, when the assignee made the election, it was held the personal estate of the testator, and not to belong to the devisee of the real estate (a).

(1) Lauves v. Bennett, 1 Cox, 167: stated by the Lord Chancellor, post, vol. xiv. 596; xvi. 253, 4.

Another case was there mentioned. A man having a timber estate agreed to sell a given quantity per annum, to be chosen by the vendee. The owner died; and a vast deal of timber was cut after his death; and that timber, though in the option of the buyer, was held to be the personal estate of the party to the contract. That is a very strong case.

As to the other question, it is singular, that it falls to me to decide it for the first time. It is impossible, that the exception can be right in stating, that it descended upon the heir. I always understood, that this was a freehold; though the word "descendible" has been inaptly applied to it (1); for though he is described as heir, * he does not take as such, but as a special occupant named in the grant. An opinion of Mr. Booth, treating upon what have been inaptly called intails and contingent remainders, notices the impropriety of that: every person named or described by the term "heirs," &c. being merely a special occupant: that description ascertaining the person to take, not by descent, but as named in the grant as special occupant. It was never doubted, that it was in a sense a freehold estate. It must be taken, either that the executor may be special occupant, or not. If the reasoning to prove, that he cannot, is sound, it follows, that a grant to A., his executors and administrators, must be construed, as if those latter words were not inserted. If so, it is directly within the Statute of Frauds and the other Statute together; for then there is no special occupant whatsoever; and the Statute of Frauds will directly attach; and it will go to the executor or administrator, because there is no special occupant; and at least is personal estate to the extent of being assets. In the case in Salkeld the question arose in a Court of Law between the Statute of Frauds and the other Statute, whether the Court would compel him to do more than

(a) 1 Sugden, Vendors & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) [291, 292] 212, 213. See Craig v. Leslie, 3 Wheat, 563, 577; Postell v. Postell, 1 Desaus. 173.

(1) Cu. Lit. 230.

to pay the debts. The decision, as far as it goes, is, that the Court would not interfere farther. Yet I doubt, whether an executor or administrator ever takes any thing as such, that he would not be bound to apply as personal estate of the testator (a). That doubt is founded upon this; that, when the last Statute passed, it did not recognize that case as well decided; treating it only as raising a doubt; reciting expressly, that doubts had arisen. It is clear, that after that Statute, if an executor or administrator is incapable of being a special occupant, they cannot hold for their own benefit any part of the personal estate taken under the Statutes. It is equally [* 439] clear, that, as far as the party dies intestate, it is not by force of the will, but of the Statutes, that the distribution is to be among the next of kin; and unless the doubts recited by the Statute are ill founded, the consequence is clear, that the exception, as taken, cannot be allowed; for it would prove, that, if this had arisen before the last Statute, and the executor was incapable of being special occupant, it would have gone to the executor to the intent to pay the debts; and then the question would have arisen here, whether there was any trust for the heir. It would be very difficult to maintain that; and either the executor must have kept it himself, or it must have been laid hold of in a scramble. In the case in Peere Williams (1), in the note, it is said, it is distributable in Chancery. That fortifies the doubt, that this Court has always considered, that what an executor or administrator takes as such is clothed with a trust of that kind; and that confirms the proposition, that it is not to go to the heir. The Statute of Geo. II. orders a distribution, if this Court would not: if it would, there are two authorities to take it from the heir.

An ulterior and different question is, whether if this is taken from the heir, it is to go as the personal estate undisposed, or with that, which is disposed of; and not by the mere effect of the disposition, but by the accumulated effect of the will and the Statute, or rather the Statute disposing to the same purpose of what is undevised as what is devised. It is not a great stretch, though hazardous, to say, the Statute meant to apply both to testacy and intestacy. The difficulty is, that both those cases must have been contemplated; for if the executor gets it by the Statute of Frauds, there must have been a will: if the administrator, in all probability an intestacy:

and that Statute has both expressions. If the Legislature [* 440] * intended in all cases, either of intention to dispose, or not, to give it to the next of kin, they would probably not have used any other expression than "distributed;" not "shall go, be applied," &c. So "the personal estate of the testator" is a singular expression; for upon the construction now pressed it would have been sufficient to have said, "if the party dies intestate."

(a) See 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 825; Milner v. Harewood, 18 Ves. 273.

(1) 2 P. Will. 382, note (a). See also Witter v. Witter, 3 P. Will. 99; and, ante, vol. vi. 642.

All I have said is upon the notion, that an executor cannot be a special occupant; which is a strong assertion now from the authority in Vaughan and the other considerable authorities; and Lord Hardwicke in Westfaling v. Westfaling treats him as capable of being so (1). It might be said, he is a species of special occupant; and the law in early periods might struggle against general occupancy to say, that by relation when appointed he should take from the general occupant; and considering, that the grant itself affects to give it to executors, there is not much favor due to the objection, that the executor as executor shall not take under the grant of the grantor.

But the question remains, if he does take as executor, has or has not this Court considered him as taking for the benefit of those, who take the personal estate? In the case of intestacy the administrator does take for the benefit of those, who would in that case take it. Whether that reasoning will enable the Court to say, that an executor, who will not be permitted in this Court to take for his own benefit, shall apply it for the benefit of those, who gave him the character of executor, is new. I rather incline to hold it. The case of stock affords some analogy. Under all the Acts stock cannot be given by will except with two witnesses: yet this Court often considers it given without witnesses; and for the purpose of a residuary bequest. Lord Thurlow has said, the executor takes it as executor; but takes it still under the *will: yet it is ex- [*441] pressly against the Statutes requiring expressly two witnesses. He reasoned it thus; that the will was a direction to the executor how to apply it; though it was not devised by that will.

July 26th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This case is involved in great difficulty of form, as well as turning upon one or two considerable questions. The Master's Report does not answer the inquiry. The Master was only to state, what the interest was. The reference also ought to have been to state, what deeds, &c. were executed; and the Court ought to have reserved to itself the question as to the right to the property. The Master has reported, that this property was a chattel interest.

The considerations are very different, whether it is a chattel interest, or a freehold interest in this Court clothed with a trust for persons claiming the personal estate. I do not wonder, that in framing the second exception, great difficulty was found, what expression to apply to this sort of property; for upon the cases I have found it very difficult to determine, under what phrase to describe this interest. If I had been aware of the importance of the point upon the second exception, I should have called in the assistance of the Master of the Rolls. The question seems to me to be new: what is to become of the property in a leasehold estate for lives, originally granted to a man, his executors, administrators, and assigns, beyond the point of the payment of the debts. I take it to be thoroughly settled, that a leasehold estate for lives, if of a freehold character, when so granted, is assets for the payment of simple-contract debts ; and in this respect at least this freehold is distinguished [* 442] from * all other freeholds. But it has never been decided in specie, what is to become of such an interest, so granted, after the debts paid. The case in that respect is new ; and the point difficult ; for every Judge has avoided a decision upon it.

(1) See note, ante, 431.

I am clearly and decidedly of opinion, that the last proposition of this exception, that these estates belonged to, or descended upon, the heir at law, cannot be maintained. In every view of it, and subject to all the difficulties belonging to the question, my opinion is, that if the executor is not a trustee for the next of kin or those taking under testament the personal estate, he has himself a better right than the heir ; and, without going through all the cases, it might be made out by unquestionable authority, upon a reason analogous to those given in the species of case, that I am about to mention. Where a tenant pur autre vie had made a lease for years, and the lessor died before the under-lease expired, the Cestui que vie still living, the lessee for years wóuld in that case take the estate itself ; for to occupancy there are necessary a vacant possession, and a filling-up of it by some person, who meant to occupy ; and no one could enter upon the lessee for years. Therefore if he chose to say, his lease should merge in the freehold, the estate would be full of him ; and he would take it as his own. So the executor being in possession of the estate, and the estate full of him, it is impossible that he can be a trustee for the heir. The heir is therefore quite out of the case ; and the question is between those claiming under the testament and the next of kin, and the executor, except as to the twenty-one years ; which interest is clearly personal estate ; and passes by the will.

This question upon the authorities is involved in great doubt and obscurity. First, without presuming to state, which of the [* 443] * authorities are most conclusive, there appears to be great countenance given in many books to the same sort of difficulty in making the heir a special occupant as in making the executor one ; for if this is a descendible freehold, the heir takes by descent ; and, that it is so in a sense, is excessively difficult to deny upon Vaughan's very learned and able argument (1), alluded to in all the books upon this subject, and particularly noticed in Mr. Hargrave's note (2). Vaughan's expression is very like that in Seymor's Case (3). Vaughan says (4), "The heir hath it not as a special occupant ; for if so, such heir were an occupant ; which he is not : for a special occupant must be an occupant ; but he takes it as heir, not of a fee, but of a descendible freehold ; and not by way

(1) Holden v. Smallbrooke, Vaugh. 187.

(2) Co. Lit. 41, b. n. 241.

(3) 10 Co. 95.

(4) Vaugh. 201.

of limitation, as a purchase, to the heir, but by descent," &c. He then cites Bracton, to prove, that an assize of Mort d' Ancestor might be maintained by the heir. Lord King seems also to think, that the question, as a question of assets, must be considered both with reference to taking as special occupant and in some other character (1). Lord Coke in Seymor's Case says, he is special occupant but in a manner. In other books it is said, that he is not only special occupant, but he takes by descent. I do not quite understand this sort of language. But with this sort of language as to the title of the heir, it is a clear fact, that long previously to the Statute of Frauds the observation of the Courts was thrown upon the effect of these grants of an estate to a man and his assigns, to a man, his executors, and assigns, or his executors, administrators, and assigns. That Statute upon reading it does not appear intended to apply to such grants. From the early cases the question seems [ 444] to have arisen, whether these estates were devisable; and it was held, that they were not; though they had a descendible nature about them. Upon the Statute the observation is very proper, that if the executor was considered as special occupant, as the heir was, it is very singular, that there is no express provision as to estates so granted to executors. If previously the executor was considered as being the special occupant, or "in a manner" or "as it were" special occupant, this Statute has not said, what is to become of the estate, in case there is such a special occupant; but only, in case there is no special occupant; and then only declares, that it shall be assets in the hands of the executor, or administrator. It is necessary therefore to inquire, what was conceived upon this subject previously to the Statute; which is to be collected from the older books. The passages are referred in the more modern books. Most of them are in Westfaling v. Westfaling; and I have found Lord Hardwicke's judgment upon that case. The Duke of Devon v. Kinton, first, before Lord Cowper (2) and afterwards before Lord King (3), was, according to the report in Vernon, a lease, in which originally the grant was to a man and his heirs, in the sense, in which those words are used as special occupant: but in Peere Williams it appears originally granted to trustees. The heir however might be in a sense represented as special occupant of the equitable interest. The Counsel seem to have been taken to be clear, that, if permitted to go to the administrator without devise, it would be assets for payment of debts generally. The Lord Chancellor states, that it is made personal estate. The difficulty upon that is, what is the nature of the estate in the executor? Is it freehold? If so, how is it assets for simple-contract debts? If it is to be considered assets for simple-contract debts, as personal estate, and [ 445] the effect of the Statute is to be laid out of the question, upon what principle is it personal estate to the extent of paying

(1) Duke of Devon v. Atkins, 2 P. Will. 380.

(2) 2 Vern. 719.

(3) Duke of Devon v. Atkins, 2 P. Will. 380.

simple-contract debts, and no farther? It is difficult to know, how a principle of law can work that distinction; though a Statute might. But the Statute is laid out of the question; and upon the whole reasoning it is intimated, that it would be so, because it is personal estate. In what sense personal? Upon the executor's death who would take it? If he dies without an executor would it go to the administrator de bonis non? Would it go to the representative of the executor? That is left in doubt (a). Would it be freehold estate in the man, who first got possession? That is left in doubt. But the clear opinion of Lord Cowper was, that, whatever was the nature of the interest, it was, independent of the Statute, assets for all creditors generally. It does not rest upon that authority only: that case coming afterwards before Lord King; and the account of Lord Cowper's opinion in the argument of Lord Talbot being, not only that the estate was assets, but that it was distributable. The difficulty upon this case is, that, when it is said, the premises are personal estate as naturally as if limited originally to executors, that involves as much difficulty as the question, what is to become of the estate, if granted originally to the executor; and all the doubts, that I before stated, occur upon that. What is to become of it, if the executor dies without a representative? Is the administrator de bonis non to have it: the executor of the executor, &c.? All that is left undetermined by the language of these cases.

The case of Oldham v. Pickering, in a great many books, was also a case long before the Statute of Geo. II. and therefore does not at all determine, what would have been the opinion of the Court, if it had been subsequent to that Statute. That was an [*446] original *lease to a man and his assigns pur autre vie.

There was no assignment of it: therefore it is directly within the Statute. The Judges were of opinion, the Statute made it assets for debts: but beyond that they left it just where it was. But it is to be observed, that is a case, to which none of the doctrine of this Court, as applied to grants originally made to a man, his executors, administrators, and assigns, could be applied; for that is a case, in which the executor is treated as being a special occupant; and this Court has considered him with reference to that, and also as being personal representative. It was their own by force of the Statute, not the grant; and therefore that had nothing to do with the question, if that grant had originally contained the word "executors." I am not surprised, that great difficulty occurred to them upon the point, what would become of it after the debts paid. It is not easy to determine that in case of the death of the executor. In Carthew, Lord Holt even doubts, whether it would not be assets for legacies; and if so, it is very difficult to say, it would not for the residue; which is in the nature of legacy. By the note in Peere Williams to The Duke of Devon v. Atkins, which note being in the first edition of that book is of some authority, it seems to have been the opinion of the author of that note, that there was an equity to say, if the executor or administrator took it as a special occupant, the effect of his character as executor or administrator, should fix upon his legal title as such an equity for those, who claim the personal estate, to make him a trustee.

(a) 1 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 471, 656, note; Oldham v. Pickering, Carthews, 376.

In Westfaling v. Westfaling it appears from Lord Hardwicke's notes, that several points were made. It was heard in May, 1746; and his Lordship took time till the 13th of April, 1747, to consider. The Duke of Devon v. Kinton was cited; and there is a reference "Quod vide;" * which I understand as a hint [* 447] to himself to refer to the original case. Great stress was laid upon that decision. The case was argued very fully; and it was insisted, that an estate pur autre vie to a man, his executors, administrators, and assigns, was assets for debts before the Statute. Lord Hardwicke says, there are four questions: two of law, and two of fact. First, as to the advowson, he held an advowson in gross to be assets by descent at Common Law for specialty debts, upon the authority of Co. Lit. 374b, Sir Thomas Jones, Robinson v. Tonge (1), before Lord King: in which the general question was referred by the Lords; and all the Judges agreed, that an advowson in fee-simple is assets in the hands of the heir for the debts of the ancestor. Secondly, as to the lease pur autre vie; he held such a lease to A. and his heirs, was within the Statute of Fraudulent Devises as to specialty creditors: plainly within the words and meaning; and he agreed with Lord Cowper, 2 Vern. 719: and he farther declared, that a lease pur autre vie, where there is no special occupant, though devised, is by the Statute of Frauds assets in the hands of the executor to pay debts generally; for that Statute in effect made him special occupant in all such leases, as if inserted therein. Lord Hardwicke then refers to 2 Roll. Ab. 151 (2), and Lord Cowper's judgment in The Duke of Devon v. Kinton, and the reasoning of Lord Holt in Oldham v. Pickering, and in Carthew. In the case in Roll's Abr. it seems held, that an executor might be a special occupant; and a case (3) immediately follows, in which it is said the executor shall not be a special occupant, because it is a freehold: which cannot descend to the executor. Lord Redesdale in an opinion I have seen says, great confusion has arisen upon that by not referring * to a case in Dyer (4); from which it is [* 448] collected, that the executor is treated clearly as having a freehold estate. But still, if a freehold, it is in contemplation of this Court a freehold, that has got into the executor; and the question is, whether he holds it as freehold for his own benefit in this Court. If the executor is to be considered as special occupant, the Statute takes no notice of him as such. I do not know how to state

(1) 3 Bro. P. C. 556; 3 P. Will. 398.

(2) 2 Roll's Abr. 251, G. pl. 2.

(3) 2 Roll's Abr. G. pl. 3.

(4) Dy. 328, pl. 10; Lord Winsor's Case, 3 Leon. 35.

the principle, that the executor is to be considered a special occupant, better than it is expressed in Bacon's Abridgment (1); which has brought all the subject together; and which is very well filled up, as to the late cases, by Mr. Gwillim:

"If a lease be made of land to J. S., his executors and assigns, during the life of B., the executors of J. S. shall be the special occupants, if he dies in the life of B.; for though it be a freehold, which in course of law would not go to executors, yet they may be designed by the particular words in the grant to take as occupants; and such designation will exclude the occupation of any other person; because the parties themselves, who originally had the possession, have filled it by this appointment."

And the reasoning is analogous to rents; of which, being an incorporeal hereditament, there could be no special occupant. Therefore if it was granted to A. during the life of B., by the death of B. there is an end of the grant: but if to the heirs, &c. then it is said, the executor should be quasi occupant (2): that is, he should take under the appointment and designation of the grantor, the person having a right to designate, who should take it.

[* 449] * Then, as to the Statute 14 Geo. II. we must look a little to the history of the law for the intention of it. First, suppose this sort of grant to A., his executors and administrators, during the life of another, not at all within the Statute of Frauds: if so, it should seem not to be within the Statute 14 Geo. II. If it is to be said in this sense to be within the former, in the words of Lord Hardwicke, "that, where it is granted without mentioning the executor, the effect of the Statute is to make it go to the executors and administrators, as if they were named," then you take this circumstance, that between the two Statutes the question had arisen, what was to become of such an estate under the effect of the Statute of Frauds; and the Court was of opinion, the executor or administrator as such could keep it against an application in a Court of Law, notwithstanding any claim of the next of kin or under a will in the Spiritual Court. That opinion however was doubted. Lord Holt doubted, whether legatees should not take it; and very considerable doubt was entertained in this Court upon the subject. The Statute was therefore made to exclude all doubts. First, take it, where the executors and administrators were not named: the doubt was, to whom it was to go after the debts. It seems, the Legislature would have left the matter very short of a rational and prudent purpose, if they had said simply, it should go among the next of kin. How is it to go among them, supposing, there was no other claim? If one dies, he took it as personal estate: does it become real estate afterwards? If more than one: is it to be divided; and each aliquot part to become freehold? Was it intended, that in all cases, where there was a will of personal estate generally, unless executed with three witnesses, it should not touch this interest:

(1) 2 Bac. Ab. 277.

(2) See the note, ante, 431.

which as to the claim of the next of kin would be personal estate? I have a strong inclination, that the meaning was, that the * residuum of such an estate should go with the rest of the [* 450] personality, where there was a will; and to the next of kin, where there was an intestacy; and that the language of that Statute would bear out that; and it would be more extraordinary, that persons claiming by bequest should not have been attended to, when upon the Statute of Charles II. Lord Holt doubted as to legacies. The question is, whether, if the executor has the interest as in the nature of a freehold, he is not a trustee in equity for the persons taking the personal estate; and a will, not attested by three witnesses, will give them a title to call upon him for their benefit; he having the interest in him; and the interest not having passed from him. I think, that is the case in a Court of Equity; for I cannot think, how it should be, that such a property in an executor, independent of any Statute assets for simple-contract debts, from the fact, that it is in him as executor as well as special occupant, does not give that title; because it has in him the nature of personal estate. If so, I cannot state the principle for saying, it should be personal estate to the point of giving creditors a claim upon it, and no farther. The character of executor still remains in him. He is no less executor, because afterwards he is special occupant. If the character of executor raises a trust in him, and an interest in others, to that point of giving interest to all, who can claim it as personal estate, it is personal estate. This was the opinion of Lord Cowper and of Mr. Peere Williams; and it would be a whimsical state of the law, that, considering it freehold, it should be in the power of the ordinary to dispose of it ultra the debts. To the heir it could not go, for the reasons I have stated. It must therefore remain with the creditor. The opinion of Lord Hardwicke also to a very considerable extent is in favor of this. All admit, it would be assets for debts; and in Williams v. Jekyl, Lord Hardwicke says, "The estate is a term * for three lives, not created originally as a descendible freehold to go to the heir as special occupant, but to the lessee, her executors, administrators, and assigns; so that the executor of the first lessee must take this as a special occupant under the limitation" (1).

Lord Hardwicke seems to consider it for that as personal estate. Lord Kenyon also seems to consider it personal. But if not, it must now be determined, what is to become of it. If he takes it beyond the debts as special occupant, then, if he should not have an executor, (for an administrator de bonis non, is not sufficient under the original grant) would an administrator durante minori aetate take it? A second executor would be one taking it for his own benefit without any description of persons to take after his death. Then if he dies during the life, his case would fall directly within the terms of the Statute of Frauds; and it would be assets for his debts; and then under the Statute 14 Geo. II. would go to his next of kin. It would be very extraordinary, that, if such an estate was given to A., his executors, administrators, and assigns, and he should die, his executor paying the debts should hold it entirely for his own benefit; but, if that executor should die, his executor should take it under the two Statutes; and by the first Statute pay the debts, and by the other hand it over to the next of kin of the first executor.

(1) 2 Ves. 683.

There is very arduous difficulty in this. But I rather think, in Equity such a freehold estate, originally granted to A., his executors, administrators, and assigns, though devisable as to the legal interest only with three witnesses, has been considered as belonging to those, who take the personal estate, by an equity attaching upon the character of executor as executor, and there is extreme difficulty [* 452] in saying, the administrator should take for his own benefit. It is the same as the case of stock; which is to be disposed of by will only with two witnesses: but Lord Thurlow said, where it is not so bequeathed, devolving upon the executor, it devolves upon him as executor, in trust for those, who are entitled to the personal estate. This is according to the idea of Lord Redesdale; and that is confirmed by a conversation I had with his Lordship, which produced a passage in the Legacy Act (1); for it was necessary to consider, how the duty was to be collected upon estates pur auter vie; where they happened to be personal estate; and a clause was introduced into the Statute, that they should be valued: the Legislature leaving, as they found it, how much was to be personal estate.

Upon this case therefore I am of opinion, that this interest can in no event go to the heir; that it does not belong to the administrator; and, as to the point between the next of kin and the residuary legatees, that the executor is in this Court a trustee for those, to whom the testator has given the personal estate by a will sufficient to pass personal estate; and therefore he must be considered as holding it for the residuary legatees (2).

Upon the other question, this is to be distinguished from the cases of disposition, being a case of contract; and the value of the property enjoyed as real estate during the partnership; for it could be in no other form; and the contract applying to every purpose of a testator at liberty to dispose with reference to the obligation of his contract, I am of opinion, it is personal estate.

Declare, that the money arising from the sale of the [* 453] sugar-houses and premises, &c. is to be considered *as personal estate; and that, with regard to the leases pur auter vie, the produce of those estates is in like manner to be considered the testator's personal estate. They remain freehold estates to the purchasers undoubtedly.

1. THAT a lease, or similar interest in real property, if acquired solely for the purpose of carrying on a trade, becomes, by operation of law, a mere incident of

(1) Stat. 36, Geo. III. c. 52, sec. 20.

(2) Post, vol. xviii. 273.

that trade: see, ante, note 2 to Lyster v. Dolland, 1 V. 431. But whether freehold property, purchased for the purpose of trade, ought, or ought not, to be considered as personality, with regard to the representatives of a deceased partner, has been verata quæstio. Lord Thurlow, in Thornton v. Dixon, 3 Brown, 200, held, that although copartnership agreement may alter the nature of a real estate, yet, to have this effect, the agreement must be express; or the claims of the heir at law must prevail. And Sir William Grant considered that decision too conclusive for the question to admit of argument. Balmain v. Shore, 9 Ves. 508. His honor had previously declared a similar opinion in Ball v. Pkyn, 7 Ves. 457. In Smith v. Smith, 5 Ves. 193, Lord Rosslyn held the widow of a deceased partner to be dowable out of estates conveyed to her husband, though purchased with the partnership funds; but the estate in question, in that case, could not be considered as partnership property, because, notwithstanding the partnership furnished to complete the purchase, the estates were conveyed to the one individual partner, under a specific agreement, that the estates should be his, and he should be a debtor for the money. In the principal case, Lord Eldon decided, that property enjoyed as real estate during the continuance of a partnership, was, according to the proper construction of the instrument under which the said property was applied to partnership uses, converted into personality, and devisable as such. This, it will be observed, was not in contradiction of the determination in Thornton v. Dixon; both cases turned upon the construction of the several deeds upon which each case respectively arose. And, in Stuart v. The Marquis of Bute, 11 Ves. 665, Lord Eldon said, that in cases where persons engaged in partnership have bought freehold houses, the difficulty of distinguishing and arranging property of different natures, partly personal and partly real, has never been held sufficient to exclude the heir, except by the effect of the contract, or the will, of the deceased partner. In Selkirk v. Davies and Salt, 2 Dow, 242, the distinguished judge last named did declare his opinion to be, that all property involved in a partnership concern ought to be considered as personal; but his lordship, when advertizing to this same point in the later case, of Crawsley v. Maule, 1 Swanst. 508 and 521, evidently considered it as a question by no means settled, whether freehold estates purchased by a partnership, and, in some sense, an article of stock in trade, would, on the death of a partner, pass as real estate, or as stock; as personal estate in enjoyment, though freehold in nature and quality.

2. As to the resulting trust which arises, whenever a conversion of real estate has been directed for a particular purpose, which fails; and that such resulting trust is not affected by the fact, that the conversion has been actually completed, if the proceeds are not effectively disposed of; see, ante, notes 2, 3, and 4 to Kidney v. Coussmaker, 1 V. 436.

3. A contract for sale of real estate, the completion of which is entirely at the option of the proposed vendee, may, if he should think fit to call for an execution of the contract, not only amount, by relation, to a conversion of the property, as between the representatives of the vendor; but, even with regard to intermediate purchasers, for valuable consideration, and without actual notice, such a contingent contract may be binding, and operate a compulsory conversion. For instance, every purchaser has presumptive notice of the whole interest which a tenant in possession has in the premises; and, therefore, if the tenant was entitled by agreement with the vendor to an option of purchasing the estate, he may enforce that agreement against the vendee: see note 2 to Taylor v. Stibbert, 2 V. 437.

4. That an estate pur autre vie, granted to a person, his executors, administrators, and assigns, if the grantee die testate, is taken by his executors, subject to the same debts and demands as other personality is; and that, if he die intestate, the statute of Geo. II. makes the estate, so granted, distributable (and, of course, liable to all debts,) as personality: see, ante, note 2 to Watkins v. Lea, 6 V. 633. But, when an estate pur autre vie has been limited to a man, his heirs, and assigns, if it be not devised, it goes to the heir, and is liable only to the same debts as a fee simple is: Atkinson v. Baker, 2 T. R. 230. For an estate per autre vie (clearly, at all events, when it is limited to a man and his heirs,) is in its nature freehold; the devise thereof is not valid unless it be attested by three witnesses, and it can only be conveyed by a freehold conveyance. Lord Redesdale, indeed, doubted whether such an estate could be converted into a chattel interest by any convention of the parties; and whether a grant to a man, his executors, and adminis- trators, could make the property liable to be acted upon as a chattel interest, except to the extent, and in the cases, for which the statute has specially provided. Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Sch. & Lef. 290. But Lord Hardwicke appears to have recognized the distinction which may arise out of the terms of limitation, as such terms may direct the devolution of the property, either on the heir or the personal representatives. Williams v. Jekyl, 2 Ves. Sen. 684; and see The Duke of Devonshire v. Alkins, 2 P. Wms. 332. However this may be, there is no doubt that an estate pur autre vie, limited to heirs, is within the Statute of Fraudulent Devices, and liable to specialty debts. Westfaling v. Westfaling, 3 Atk. 465.

5. In the Anonymous case, reported in 2 Freem. 155, Lord Keeper Bridgman, after calling in other judges to his assistance, decided, that a vendee who had entered into a purchase contract with the tenant of a "frank tenement descendible," could not enforce the contract against the heir who had entered as special occupant; for, as such, his claim was not under his father, and, therefore, it was said, the covenant or agreement of his father was not binding upon him. The precise date of the case just cited does not appear, but it seems to have been decided about seven years before the seemingly contradictory case of Stephens v. Bailey, which cannot, therefore, have overruled it (as, by mistake, was intimated in the note to the last edition of Freeman:) that indeed would not have been the necessary effect of the determination of Stephens v. Bailey, even had it been subsequent in point of time. In Stephens v. Bailey, a lessee for another man's life contracted to convey the estate to the plaintiff, but died before the conveyance was perfected; the defendant entered as the heir of the lessee pur autre vie, and held the land as special occupant; a bill being brought against him, he demurred to it, but it was ordered to answer. The ground upon which the demurrer was overruled is not assigned; but it certainly appears probable, that the Court considered the occupant as bound by the trust raised by the agreement of the preceding tenant pur autre vie. And, in Pool v. Pool, 1 Cha. Rep. 18, and S. C. Tothill, 106, a son who took lands by grant and conveyance, and not by descent, was decreed to perform his father's real covenants; this case, however, was also prior to that in 2 Freem. 155. Whatever may be the extent to which a positive covenant of a tenant pur autre vie may be binding on those who take the estate after him, it is clear, that a contingent covenant to bar the remainders over at a certain time, provided the covenantor live till that time, cannot be considered, if he die before that time, as a covenant binding on the rights of other parties. Lecky v. Knox, 1 Ball & Beat. 215.

BELL v. PHYN.

[ROLLS.—1802, JULY 20, 26.]

REAL estate purchased with a partnership fund held to have descended to the heir against the claim of the residuary legatee (a).

Bequest to the testator's three children to be equally divided between them, share and share alike, but in case of the death of any without being married and having children, the share of such child so dying to be divided between the surviving children, and so if one should only survive: one being married and having a child, her share vested, [p. 452.]

Exoneration of the heir from a mortgage, the personal debt of the ancestor, (b), [p. 452.]

The expression "without being married" in a Will construed according to the common acceptation "without having ever been married."

The word "children," legally construed, is confined to legitimate children.

"And" construed "or" to give effect to all the words, (c).

JAMES PHYN, Alexander Ellice, and John Inglis, carrying on business in partnership, Phyn in one third, the others in unequal shares, as merchants in London, in 1791 joined with George Shand in the purchase of a plantation in the island of Grenada, with the stock, &c. for the sum of 25,000*l.*; of which sum 4000*l.* was paid immediately out of the partnership funds of Phyn, Ellice, and Inglis; and the remainder of the purchase-money was secured by bond and a mortgage on the estate. The estate was accordingly conveyed, and the stock, &c. assigned, subject to a term for 2000 years, in trust to secure 21,000*l.*, to Shand, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, respectively; and Shand conveyed and assigned to Phyn, Ellice, and Inglis, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, (a) This decision seems to have been very much questioned. See the notes on this subject in Smith v. Smith, ante, 5 V. 193, note (a); Thornton v. Dixon, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 199, note (1), 200, and note (a); 3 Kent, (5th ed.) 37, 38, 39, and notes; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 674; Ripley v. Waterworth, ante, 425, note (a); Hunt v. Benson, 2 Humph. 459.

In Phillips v. Phillips, 1 Mylne & Keene, 649, it was held by Sir J. Leach, M. R. that real estate purchased with partnership capital for the purposes of the joint trade in personal estate, and in respect to the share of a deceased partner, retains that character as between his real and personal representatives. So also in Broom v. Broom, 3 Mylne & Keene, 443. See also to the same effect, Mr. Belt's note, (1), to Thornton v. Dixon, ubi supra; 3 Kent, (5th ed.) 37, 38, 39; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 674; Selkirk v. Davies, 2 Dow, Parl. Ca. 231, 242; Townsend v. Devaynes, reported 1 Mont. Partn. 97, and Mr. Belt's note, (1), to 3 Bro. C. C. 194; Freday v. Wightwick, 1 Russ. & My. 45; Collyer on Partnership, (2d Am. ed.) 70-79. Upon this subject, however, there is a great diversity of judicial opinion, as well as of judicial decision. Story, Partnership, § 93, and note; 3 Kent, (5th ed.) 37-39, notes, where the conflicting decisions are referred to more at large.

See also Dyer v. Clark, 5 Metcalf, 562; Howard v. Priest, 5 Metcalf, 582; Burnside v. Merrick, 4 Metcalf, 537; Sigourney v. Munn, 7 Conn. 11; Hoxie v. Carr, 1 Sumner, 181-186; Morris v. Kearsley, 2 Young & Coll. 139; 3 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. (6th Am. ed.) 167, [249,] note (1).

(b) See post, 460, note (3).

(c) The word "or" may be read "and," or "and" may be construed "or," to effect the intention of the testator. Ray v. Enstin, 2 Mass. 554; Carpenter v. Head, 14 Pick. 449; Maberley v. Strode, ante, 3 V. 450, note (a), and cases cited; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 794, 795.

respectively, two thirds of the estate and stock, subject to the payment of 12,666*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* the residue of the consideration for their two thirds; which sum they severally and respectively covenanted to pay. The accounts relative to the estate were kept in the partnership books. Farther payments were made from time to time out of the partnership funds till the death of Phyn; at which time only 4000*l.* of the principal of the purchase-money remained due. He died in December 1800; and by his will, dated the 26th of October 1800, after giving 1000*l.* a year to his wife for life, a [* 454] legacy of 500*l.*, and all his household goods, and * other specific articles, and giving his son 6000*l.*, he disposed of the residue thus: "As to all the rest, residue and remainder of my personal estate or effects of what nature or kind soever the same may consist, I give and bequeath the same equally between my three children, George, Jane, and Catharine, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike: but it is my wish and desire, that in case of the death of any of my children (without being married and having children) the share of such child so dying shall be divided between the surviving children; and so if one of my children should only survive."

The testator left his widow and the three children mentioned in the will surviving. His daughter Jane married William Bell, and they having one child, and the other daughter, filed the bill against the testator's son, who was his heir at law, and one of his executors, and against the widow and the other executors; praying an account of the personal estate, &c.; that the sums of 7500*l.*, and 500*l.*, produced by the sale of the testator's interest in the Grenada estate, which took place by agreement, and subject to the question, may be declared to be part of the personal estate, that one third of the residue may be paid to the Plaintiffs Bell and his wife; and that the other two thirds may be secured, and the interest paid to the other Plaintiff, and the Defendant George Phyn respectively, with liberty to apply for the principal, when they shall respectively marry and have children, or die without being married and having children.

The heir by his answer insisted, that the estate formed no part of the capital of the partnership; and submitted, that the sums of 7500*l.*, and 500*l.* belonged to him as real estate; and that [* 455] as heir at law he was entitled * to have the testator's share of the 4000*l.*, remaining due of the purchase-money, being one third of two thirds, paid out of the personal estate.

The widow by her answer insisted upon her right to dower.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Steele, for the Plaintiffs insisted, that the money produced by the sale of this estate, which the heir admits to have been purchased with the partnership property, was personal estate.

Upon the other point they contended, that the share of Mrs. Bell under the will was vested: the gift to the children being absolute in the first instance; and the condition performed.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Stanley, for the Defendant George Phyn, and Mr. Hart, for the Widow.—This is not a question with creditors. The plantation was purchased by these partners to their separate use, independent of the partnership. In this estate therefore they were as among themselves interested in thirds. The creditors of the firm had no claim upon it as partnership property. The only difference between this case and Thornton v. Dixon (1) is, that in this the estate was purchased by, and conveyed to, the partners as a new purchase; and was paid for out of the partnership fund. It is simply the case of a man, who has bought a freehold estate with part of his partnership property; and left it to descend. Smith v. Smith (2) is a strong case certainly.

* Mr. Romilly, in reply.—This case is argued, as if, there [* 456] being so much clear profit from the partnership, they had agreed to invest it in real estate; and taken it in equal thirds. But it is admitted, that the fact is directly the contrary; that, though the estate was conveyed to them in equal thirds, they were not so entitled, but in the same proportions as in the partnership. They were in fact, notwithstanding the conveyance, trustees for the partnership. In Smith v. Smith, after all the facts stated, how was it possible to consider that partnership property? The Lord Chancellor went expressly upon the agreement. What difference arises, whether the estate purchased with the partnership property is conveyed to one partner only, or to all, but not for the same interests, in which they are entitled to the partnership property? In the latter case they are equally trustees. Where is there in this case such a special agreement? The general doctrine stated in Thornton v. Dixon, the real name of which case is Thompson v. Dixon, is correct; and Lord Redesdale said, he had many notes to the same point. Suppose, this partnership had turned out a losing concern; and it had been necessary upon Phyn's death to call upon his representative: would it not have been said, the real estate was to go to his heir; and his personal estate was to make up that demand? Yet that circumstance can make no difference as to this transaction; which was not upon any settlement of their partnership accounts. For what purpose was any account kept in the partnership books, unless this was partnership property? All merchants open distinct accounts of every adventure.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—Suppose, this was partnership property, I doubt, whether the consequence is a conversion. There was no * occasion to call [* 457] for it for any of the purposes of the partnership. It remains clear. Each might have entered into the enjoyment of his share. Then suppose all die: why is it to be considered personal property, something different from what it really is as between the real and personal representative (3)?

(1) 3 Bro. C. C. 199.

(2) Ante, vol. v. 189; Balmain v. Shore, post, ix. 500; Crawshay v. Maule, 1 Swanst. 495, and the references in the note, 521.

(3) Ripley v. Waterworth, the preceding case, and the references. See the notes, ante, vol. i. 45, 204.

June 26th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—Upon the first point, I doubt, whether there is quite enough admitted by the heir to show, that the estate at Grenada could be considered in a proper sense partnership property at the death of Phyn. But even if it can be so considered, upon the authority of the case before Lord Thurlow I am obliged to decide in favor of the heir. That case, as it appears in the Register's Book, does not differ materially from the Report. The buildings, &c. upon one piece of the land were purely for the purposes of the trade. The other piece of land likewise was purchased for the purposes of the trade; and held by the partners in the shares and proportions, in which they were interested in the trade. Joseph Dixon, one of the partners, had before his death acquired five tenths, one half. He died, leaving a widow, a son, and a daughter. The son was let in; and received half the profits. Upon his death the daughter was let in; and received half the profits. She married the Plaintiff; and executed a conveyance upon trusts, the last of which was to her husband in fee. Upon her death he insisted upon the conveyance to him of her half of those two pieces of land. The widow by her answer insisted, that the moiety of the profits was wrongfully received by her son and daughter; the buildings and premises purchased for the [* 458] purpose of the trade being as well as the stock to be considered *a chattel: one moiety therefore constituting part of the personal estate of Joseph Dixon. Then if it was to be considered real estate, she insisted upon her title to dower. But she was interested in having it considered personal estate. The question therefore was, whether it was to be considered real or personal estate. The decree, pronounced at some distance from the hearing, was, that it was to be considered real; and the Plaintiff was entitled to his wife's moiety under the settlement.

The authority therefore goes the full length of the point for the heir; for, even if this was partnership property, there was nothing done by the partners to alter the nature of it. This sum therefore, for which the estate sold, must be considered of the nature of real estate; and there must be a reference to the Master to settle the widow's dower.

Another question was made, whether in the event Mrs. Bell took a vested interest in her share of the residue under the will of her father. I am of opinion, the expression "without being married" must be construed, "without having ever been married." Lord Alvanley in Maberley v. Strode (1) says, that is the common acceptance of the word "unmarried." As to the other expression "and having chidden," it may be contended, that, though she cannot now die unmarried within the meaning of this clause, yet if she dies without leaving children, the share shall go over: for the word "and" must be taken to be "or;" as it was in the case I have mentioned (2). Indeed the contingency of dying unmarried

(1) Ante, vol. iii. 450.

(2) See, ante, other cases referred to in the note, vol. iii. 452; Weddell v. Mundy, Turner v. Moor, vi. 341, 557.

and without children, cannot properly be said to mean anything more than the latter event; as, legally speaking, there can be no children without a marriage (1). Therefore to give effect to all the words it is almost necessary to construe the copulative as disjunctive.

Supposing that done, the question is, what the testator meant by dying without having children. These words admit of different constructions; which are stated in Pinbury v. Elkin (2). The first is out of the question here: the word being "children." The third sense, a person dying without leaving issue at the time of his death, undoubtedly is the only construction, that can be put upon these words, wherever the interest is limited to the parent, and the capital to the children, but given over, in case the parent dies without children. Then it must mean, if there are none at the death of the parent; for then the provision is intended to be made. But, by this will nothing is in any event given to the grand-children; but every thing in the first instance to the children: whether to remain with them absolutely, or to go over, is made to depend upon a contingency; which is that of having children: either having them born, or leaving them at his death. It is not very reasonable, that if his children should have children, who should live to require an expensive education, or to contract marriage, it should be out of the power of the parent to touch the capital for either of those purposes, on account of the possibility, that the children might die in the life of the parent; though the only consequence of surviving the parent would be, not that the children would take any thing, but, that the parent might dispose of the whole as he thought fit. The intention was to enable the parent to make a provision for the children; * which might be in the life of the parent as well [*460] as after the death; that if the children should live to marry and have children, they will require more than the income; and then the capital shall be at their disposal: but, if they should not live to marry or have children, then it shall go over. This is the most likely construction; and does no violence to the words according to the case in Peere Williams. In the event, that has happened, therefore, Mrs. Bell's share is vested.

There is no question as to the exoneration. It remains the testator's debt (3).

1. The authorities bearing on the question, whether freehold property, purchased for the purpose of carrying on a partnership trade, ought, or not, with respect to the representatives of a deceased partner, to be considered as personalty, are stated in note 1 to the last preceding case.

2. As to the convertible quality of the words "and" and "or" in testamentary instruments, and as to the varying construction of the word "unmarried," according as the intent of a testator may require that word to be understood, either as "never having been married," or "not married at the time," see, ante, notes 1 and 2 to Maberley v. Strode, 3 V. 450.

(1) Ante, Cartwright v. Vaudry, vol. v. 530, [and note]; see the note, 534.

(2) 1 P. Will. 563.

(3) See Waring v. Ward, ante, 332, [and note (a)]; and the references, 335.

3. With respect to limitations over of personal property, see the notes to Everest v. Gell, 1 V. 280.

4. Whether the assets of a person deceased are, or are not, applicable to the discharge of an incumbrance upon his real estates, must depend on the previous question, whether he originally contracted that incumbrance, or subsequently took it upon himself: see note 3 to Hamilton v. Worley, 2 V. 62.

RAINSFORD v. TAYNTON. TAYNTON v. HANNAY.

[1802, BEFORE THE LORD CHANCELLOR, MARCH 9. ROLLS.—JULY 26, 27.]

ADMINISTRATION granted under statute 38 Geo. III. c. 87; where the executor went to Scotland.

It cannot be disputed in this Court; though it may at law, [p. 461.] Though not for a limited time, it is for a limited purpose; namely, being made Defendants to suits in equity, [p. 461.]

The effect of the return of the executor, in this instance, the executor's executor, is, that he must be made a party in the usual course; and then the temporary administrator may account, have his costs, and be discharged: but the proceedings had are not put an end to, [p. 461.]

Administration during a particular period, or till a particular event, determines at that period, or on that event: for instance an administration during the absence of an executor; and the administrator ought in his declaration to aver, that the executor is out of the realm, [p. 468.]

JOHN HANNAY died in India in September 1795, having by his will given one third of the residue of his estates to his niece Jane Hannay, one third to Mary Hay, and the remaining third to his brother Johnston Hannay; whom he appointed his executor.

In March 1798, Johnston Hannay proved the will; and went to Scotland; where he resided. Soon afterwards administration with the will annexed of John Hannay was granted to Nathaniel Taynton, under the late Act of Parliament (1) for the administration of *assets, in cases, where the executor, to whom probate has been granted, is out of the jurisdiction. In Michaelmas Term, Jane Hannay having married Thomas Rainsford, they filed a bill against Taynton and against the other residuary legatees, for an account; and to have a receiver appointed. A receiver was appointed; and the usual decree was made on the 21st of March, 1799.

Alexander Hannay died in India in 1782; having bequeathed all the residue of his estate to his brothers William, John, Ramsay, and Johnston Hannay, to be divided equally between them; and appointed his brothers Samuel, John, Ramsay and Johnston Hannay and John Levett, his executors. In 1783, Samuel Hannay alone proved that will. Ramsay Hannay received the personal estate of Alexander in India; and remitted part to Samuel Hannay; who died intestate; and upon the return of Ramsay Hannay he was compelled to take probate of the will of Alexander. A bill was filed by Taynton, and the Receiver appointed by the decree, against Ramsay Hannay, as executor of Alexander, and against Johnston Hannay, as one of his residuary legatees, and others, for an account of his estate and payment of John Hannay's fourth of the residue. Other suits were instituted, and great litigation ensued, both at law and in equity, upon the affairs of Alexander Hannay, and cross demands between the estate of John Hannay and Ramsay and Johnston Hannay. In November 1799, Taynton was cited by Johnston Hannay to the Prerogative Court for the purpose of setting aside the administration obtained under the Act of Parliament: but it was confirmed. Johnston Hannay died in Scotland; having never returned to England. By two instruments in writing, according to the law of Scotland, dated the 16th of August, 1794, and the 12th of March, 1800, he conveyed all his real and personal estates to his widow, * and William and [* 462] Ramsay Hannay, and others; of whom Ramsay Hannay alone proved the said instruments or will in England.

(1) 38 Geo. III. c. 87.

This bill was filed by Taynton, as administrator under the Act of Parliament, against Ramsay Hannay and two other executors of Johnston Hannay, (the rest being out of the jurisdiction), Rainsford and his wife, and Hay and his wife; praying, that the decree in the cause of Rainsford v. Taynton may be established and carried into effect against Ramsay Hannay and the other executors of Johnston Hannay, with regard to the residuary share of John Hannay's estate, to which Johnston Hannay was entitled; as if Johnston Hannay had been a party to the decree; praying an account of the dealings and transactions between John Hannay and Johnston Hannay, and that the balance may be ascertained, an account of the personal estate of John Hannay come to the hands of Johnston Hannay, and of Johnston Hannay's personal estate; and that, in case the Court shall be of opinion, that Ramsay Hannay is to be considered as executor of John Hannay, capable of acting as such, proper directions may be given with regard to the Plaintiff's administration and the suits instituted by him. The bill stated various dealings between John and Johnston Hannay; in respect of which the latter was much indebted; that he possessed the personal estate and sold part of the real estate; which was admitted by the answer; and that if Ramsay Hannay is the executor of Johnston Hannay, he ought to be made a party to the cause, Rainsford v. Taynton, by supplemental bill; and in all events as personal representative of Johnston Hannay; and that the several persons claiming to be his executors, and to have an interest in the residue, ought likewise to be parties; but that Rainsford and his wife refuse to institute a suit.

* Ramsay Hannay by his answer stated, that a considerable balance was due to him from the estate of John Hannay; and he submitted, that the administration ought not to have been granted to the Plaintiff, Johnston Hannay not being out of the kingdom or out of the jurisdiction of the Courts of Law and Equity, being domiciliated in Scotland; and the affidavit, on which the administration was obtained, not being agreeable to the form prescribed by the Act of Parliament; being obtained without the knowledge of Johnston Hannay; and farther submitted, that the administration upon the death of Johnston Hannay, and in the event of the Defendant's becoming his personal representative as aforesaid, ceased and became void: the Defendant having become the executor of Johnston Hannay; who was the sole executor of John Hannay; and the Defendant residing in England ought, as such executor of Johnston Hannay, to be considered executor of John Hannay, and capable of acting as such notwithstanding the act; and the said decree ought not to be established against this Defendant, nor the accounts taken, &c. without first making him a party as the personal representative of Johnston Hannay; and that the Plaintiff ought to be restrained from acting accordingly.

A motion was made on behalf of Ramsay Hannay, that he being now resident within the jurisdiction, one of the executors, who has taken probate of the will of Johnston Hannay, the executor of John Hannay, may become and be made a party to the suit of Rainsford v. Taynton, pursuant to the act, as the legal personal representative of John Hannay; and that Taynton may account for what he has received; and pay the balance into Court.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Richards, and Mr. Fonblanche, in support of the motion, insisted, that the act, which provides, that the [* 464] * party is to swear, that the executor hath departed this kingdom, and is out of the jurisdiction of the Courts of Law and Equity, has not provided for the case of a person being in Scotland. The ground of the application to the Ecclesiastical Court for the administration, that the executor was out of the jurisdiction of the Courts of Law and Equity here, is true: the executor being in Scotland. The administration is expressly limited by the act to the purpose of being made a party to bills in Equity, and to carry decrees into effect. Though the act provides for the return of the executor only, the construction must extend to his executor, who is in law to all intents the executor of the original testator. If any answer was required from Ramsay Hannay as to the effects of John Hannay possessed by the executor, that might be an objection to this application, to be substituted in the decree for the account: but an answer has been put in, with schedules, stating all the accounts. Upon the action in the Court of Common Pleas (1), Lord Alvanley was of opinion, there was an end of the administration. The other two Judges were of a contrary opinion. In fact, Ramsay Hannay had not then obtained probate of the will of Johnston Hannay. The point therefore, whether the probate does not completely determine the temporary administration, has not been before the Court of Law. But how is it possible for this fictitious administrator to maintain an action; considering the express limitation in the act to the purpose of maintaining suits here? The whole object of the act is gone, when there is an executor here capable of maintaining a suit in Equity.

Mr. Alexander and Mr. Owen, against the Motion.—The object of this motion seems to be, that all the proceedings instituted in the name of Taynton should abate, *and be at an [*465] end. He was obliged to file a bill in this Court; having brought an action with a view to compel Ramsay Hannay to account; who filed two bills in the Exchequer to restrain that action. Whenever another representative comes in, the course of the Court, independent of the act, requires, that he shall be made a party; which can be only by supplemental bill. The probate obtained in this case was supplemental matter; and a supplemental bill has been filed in the cause of Rainsford v. Taynton for the mere purpose of bringing him before the Court. A distinct suit was absolutely necessary for an account of Alexander Hannay's estate. That suit and the action, both which are necessary for winding up the affairs, which are the subject of this suit, instituted by the residuary legatee, would be determined, if this application succeeds. It is matter of discretion for the Court to continue this suit.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This motion is, that Ramsay Hannay may become and be made a party to this suit. By what means am I to make him a party upon the record? It also prays, that the temporary administrator may account for what he has received, and pay the balance into Court; founded upon the fifth section of the act. If this person answers the description of an executor within the act, being executor of the executor, he must be made a party; not by a short order; but it is incumbent upon the Plaintiff in the suit to find the means, consistent with the state of the record, of bringing him before the Court. If he had been originally a party, he must be served with process. This is a dry question upon the construction of an act, calculated to relieve a grievance, that had been long felt. How can a man being in Scotland be stated to be without that relief in Law or Equity mentioned in the first section? *The Ecclesiastical Court have thought, he was; [466] and have taken an affidavit, not according to the terms of the act; and granted administration. Notwithstanding that, the question would be with a Court of Law, whether the administration was well granted: but it is not with me. I have no discretion about it. The object of making an administrator under this act, is purely to make him Defendant to bills in Equity. It does not strike me, that he could bring an action, or have one brought against him, unless for the purpose of this limited administration; which would enable him to answer the exigency of any decree in this Court. Upon that footing this is a bill against this administrator for a distribution of the assets; and the Court thought it reasonable to let him try to recover by action debts due to the testator. There is a sort of power in the act to appoint a receiver (1). I am clearly of opinion, no decree will add to his authority to sue at Law, if this administration does not give that right. Suppose, this was not the executor of the executor: you could not come here for a short order: you only put upon them the necessity of making him an executor in proper form; and if he is the executor of the executor, there is no other way than by supplemental bill. As to determining the administration by the return of the executor, if having the power to sue he has got the effect of the suit, and the account has proceeded nearly to a report, it would not be very wholesome to say, the construction of this act is, that, because the executor is to be made a party to the suit, in which the administrator remains a party, the administrator is forthwith to cease to be accountable, and to be discharged. Then, is an executor of an executor within the act? I am not sure, of which opinion I should have been upon that. But I cannot agree, that it belongs to the Court of Chancery [ 467] to say, *whether the administration is gone, or not; for if it is gone at Law, he is not administrator here. If the right way of making this person a party is by a supplemental bill, whatever is the construction of the Act, the individual, who, it is insisted on both sides, ought to be before the Court, is before the Court.

The motion was not granted. The cause of Taynton v. Hannay afterwards came on at the Rolls.

Mr. Alexander and Mr. Owen, for the Plaintiff.—Mr. Richards and Mr. Fonblanche, for the Defendant.

July 27th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT]. Upon this case I am of opinion, it is not competent to the Defendant to bring into discussion the validity of the administration granted by the Ecclesiastical Court; and if it was, that Court has acted according to the intendment of the Act, to provide a method of proceeding in the Courts of this country, where executors are out of the jurisdiction of those Courts. On the other hand, within the true meaning and construction, though perhaps not the strict letter, Hannay is to be considered as an executor returned, and within the jurisdiction, and capable of acting as such. The question is, what effect the return has in the suit and upon the administration. It is contended for the Defendant, that the administration is completely at an end: an administration during the absence of an [* 468] executor. Certainly upon general principles *of Law an administration during a particular period, or until a particular event, determines at that period, or, when that event happens. When the Ecclesiastical Court in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction grants administration during the absence of an executor, it is at an end the instant he returns. In Slater v. May (1), it was held, that the administrator durante absentia, &c. Plaintiff, in his declaration ought to aver, that the executor is out of the realm.

But under this Act the administration is, not for a limited period, but for a limited purpose: viz. to become and be made a party to a bill or bills in Equity; and to carry the decree or decrees into effect. Resting there, it seems, as long as any of the purposes of the decree are to be carried into effect, the administration must be kept on foot. But it is contended, that, taking the whole together, that could not be the intention; and it is said, the executor returning must be substituted for the temporary administrator. Thus much is certain; that the suit is not to fall to the ground, to be at an end by the return of the executor. It is to go on; he being made a party. To make him a party seems properly the business of the Plaintiff. I do not understand, why the Plaintiff has not taken the necessary steps for that purpose: an administrator ex officio insisting upon being permitted to carry on suits for Mr. and Mrs. Rainsford; who will not even take the pains of bringing the executor before the Court. But, however that might be, a limited administrator, placed, as he is, in a new situation by the return of the executor, may file any bill that is necessary. He may, if the executor is to be substituted, take the steps necessary for that purpose. He may require the accounts of his administration to be taken; and that a provision shall * be made for the costs. But, when that [*469] is done, his connection with the estate and the suit is at an end; and I cannot conceive, that it was intended, there should be both an executor and an administrator of the same estate, prosecuting and defending suits relative to that estate. Very clear words in the Act of Parliament would be necessary to induce the Court to sanction so anomalous a proceeding. If the executor is before the Court as such, his character must be that of complete executor, exclusive of any co-operation by an administration. The fifth section of the Act provides, that if the executor, capable of acting as such, shall return to or reside within the jurisdiction pending the suit, he shall be made a party, and the costs incurred by granting administration, and by proceeding in such suit against such administrator, shall be paid, as the Court shall direct. That seems to imply, that the moment the returned executor is made a party the Court may ascertain the costs. The administrator then is discharged; and has nothing more to do with the suit. To the extent of effectuating the substitution he must be permitted to act: but that he should continue to act as administrator, and to act in suits, after a capable executor is returned, would be contrary to the express terms of the Act and all legal analogy.

A decree was made; directing an account of the receipts of Hannay, and of all costs in prosecuting and defending suits as to John Hannay's estate, and the bill was amended by substituting Rainsford as Plaintiff instead of Taynton.

THOMSON v. THOMSON.

[ROLLS.—1802, JULY 19, 27.]

A CONTRACT for sale of the command of an East India ship is illegal (a), and therefore cannot be enforced by suit upon the equity against the fund paid by the Company as a compensation, under the regulation of 1796, to restrain the practice in future.

Payment to an agent is payment to the principal, [p. 470.]

Upon a contract for smuggled goods, though they are received, the money cannot be recovered. So upon an illegal insurance contrary to the Act of Parliament, though the money was received by the broker, it cannot be recovered, (b), [p. 473.]

By articles of agreement, between William Thomson and his brother George Thomson dated the 5th of December, 1770, reciting, that George Thomson, late Commander of the ship Calcutta in the service of the East India Company, had resigned the command thereof in favor of William Thomson, it was witnessed, and William Thomson covenanted with George Thomson, that he, William Thomson should during so long time as he should continue to be Commander of the said Calcutta Indiaman pay to George Thomson, his executors, &c. an annuity of 200*l.*, as therein mentioned; and farther that in case William Thomson should at any time hereafter quit the service of the Company or resign the command of the said ship, he should, to the good liking of George Thomson, his executors, &c., cause and procure the next succeeding Commander of the said ship either to pay such sum as should in the judgment of George Thomson, his executors, administrators, or assigns, be deemed a full and fair equivalent, price, or satisfaction, for said annuity of 200*l.*, or otherwise to bind and oblige himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, to continue the payment of said annuity of 200*l.* during so long time as he should continue to command said ship; and also upon his resigning or quitting such command to bind and oblige himself to pay such sum of money as in the opinion of two skilful and disinterested persons, to be chosen in manner therein mentioned, should be deemed a fair satis-

(a) Chitty, Cont. (6th Am. ed.), 673, 674; Harralson v. Dicking, 2 Car. Law Repos. 66.

No action will lie on any contract, bond or agreement for the sale of the depuration of the office of a clerk of the Court. Harralson v. Dicking, supra. Or of any office relating to the administration of justice. Oulton v. Rodes, 3 Marsh. 433; Lewis v. Knox, 2 Bibb, 453.

The office of a deputy sheriff or constable cannot be the subject of a sale; and a contract for such a sale is illegal and void. Carlton v. Whitcher, 5 N. Hamp. 196; Meredith v. Ladd, 2 N. Hamp. 517; Cardigan v. Paige, 6 N. Hamp. 183; Swayze v. Hull, 3 Halst. 54; Hartwell v. Hartwell, ante, 4 V. 811, note (a).

(b) "Relief is not granted, where both parties are truly in pari delicto, unless in cases, where public policy would thereby be promoted." 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 298, and notes; Chitty, Cont. (6th Am. ed.), 637, and notes, and cases cited; Worcester v. Eaton, 11 Mass. 368; Best v. Strong, 2 Wend. 319; Groton v. Waldborough, 2 Fairf. 306; Greenwood v. Curtis, 6 Mass. 381; Walls v. Brooks, ante, 3 V. 612, note (a); Hartwell v. Hartwell, ante, 4 V. 811, note (a).

faction and compensation for said annuity ; and George Thomson thereby agreed, that he, his executors, &c., should stand possessed of and interested in all and every sum and sums of money, which should be paid to or received by him or them in pursuance of the articles in trust for the benefit of his *two [*471] sons George and William Thomson as therein mentioned.

George Thomson, the eldest son of George Thomson the elder, having attained the age of twenty-one in 1785, and his brother William Thomson the younger in 1787, their father assigned to them all his interest under the articles. William Thomson the elder becoming a bankrupt, his nephews obtained an order to prove under the Commission the arrears of the annuity. Afterwards William Thomson the elder having obtained his certificate, and being appointed commander of the ship Lord Thurlow, which was taken up by the Company in the room of the Calcutta, and insisting that he did not remain liable to the annuity, an action was brought for the arrears; and a judgment was obtained against him; and the amount levied under an execution. From that time the annuity was paid up to Christmas 1800; when another commander was appointed to the Lord Thurlow; William Thomson having relinquished the command and quitted the service. Under the regulation adopted by the East India Company in 1796, to prevent the sale of commands of their ships, an allowance was made to William Thomson the elder of 3540*l.* of which 2040*l.* was secured by the bonds of the Company, delivered to Archibald Paxton, agent for William Thomson; and the remainder was to be paid when the Lord Thurlow should return to England.

The bill was filed by George Thomson the younger; praying, that the money upon the securities received from the Company may be invested in securities to satisfy the annuity of 200*l.*; and that such annuity may be paid to the Plaintiff and the Defendant William Thomson, junior, until the compensation for the same shall be paid; and that the value of such annuity or the compensation *may be ascertained, and paid out of the money [*472] allowed by the Company to the Defendant William Thomson, senior; and in the mean time that the bonds may be secured.

Mr. Piggott and Mr. Cox, for the Plaintiff.—The only case against this bill is Blachford v. Preston (1) (a); the principle of which is extraordinary; considering this as a public office. That case is also to be distinguished upon the circumstances. This cannot be considered a public office: neither is there any fraud in the transaction; and under the circumstances there is a clear remedy in equity. Upon the confession in the answer it is impossible that the Defendant can keep this money; of the payment of which, though asserted in his answer, he has never produced any evidence; and the answer is replied to. The Plaintiff goes against the fund. The

(1) 8 Term Rep. B. R. 89.

(a) See the observations on this case in Richardson v. Mellish, 2 Bingh. 247, 250, 251.

Defendant has received the compensation, in respect of which this payment is due; and the Plaintiff, to whom he was bound to make it, comes here; stating, that it is against all conscience, that he should keep that fund.

Mr. Romilly, for the Defendant, took two objections: first, that there is no equity; but a mere action of covenant: secondly; that the contract was illegal. Upon the second objection the rule Courts both of Law and Equity have taken, is, that upon such transactions they will not interpose: Melior est conditio possidentis.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—In the East India Company v. Neave (1), the late Lord Chancellor held the same doctrine as in the case cited; that this is an illegal agreement.

There is an equity against the fund, I admit; if you can [*473] *get at it by a legal agreement. The defence is very dishonest: but in all illegal contracts it is against good faith as between the individuals to take advantage of that. A man procures smuggled goods; and keeps them; but refuses to pay for them. So in the Underwriter's case, an insurance contrary to the Act of Parliament, the brokers had received the money and refused to pay it over; and it could not be recovered (2). No matter who complains of it: the thing is illegal. You have no claim to this money except through the medium of an illegal agreement; which according to the determinations you cannot support. I should have no difficulty in following the fund; provided you could recover against the party himself. If the case could have been brought to this, that the Company had paid this into the hands of a third person for the use of the Plaintiff, he might have recovered from that third person; who could not have set up this objection as a reason for not performing his trust. Tenant v. Elliott (3) is, I think, an authority for that. But in this instance it is paid to the party; for there can be no difference as to the payment to his agent. Then how are you to get at it except through this agreement? There is nothing collateral; in respect of which, the agreement being out of the question, a collateral demand arises; as in the case of stock-jobbing differences (4). Here you cannot stir a step but through that illegal agreement; and it is impossible for the Court to enforce it. I must therefore dismiss the bill.

The bill was dismissed (5). —

1. As to the illegality of contracts for sale and brokerage of offices, see, ante, note 1 to East India Company v. Neave, 5 V. 173.

2. That an account of the profits made by illegal transactions will not be directed at the suit of a party thereto, though it may, in certain cases, be granted in behalf of creditors and legatees, see notes 2 and 3 to Brandon v. Johnson, 2 V. 517.

(1) Ante, vol. v. 173; see page 181.

(2) Ante, Ex parte Mather, vol. iii. 373; and the note, 374; Watts v. Brooks, iii. 612; Vandyck v. Hewett, 1 East, 96.

(3) 1 Bos. & Pul. 3; Farmer v. Russell, 1 Bos. & Pul. 296.

(4) Petrie v. Hannay, 3 Term. Rep. 418. As to the authority of that case and Faulkney v. Reynous, 4 Bur. 2069, see Ex parte Mather, ante, vol. iii. 373; and the note, 374.

(5) Hartwell v. Hartwell, ante, vol. iv. 811; and the note, 816.

MORRIS v. STEPHENSON.
STEPHENSON v. MORRIS.

[ROLLS.—1802, JULY 28.]

HUSBAND under the circumstances decreed to procure his wife to join in a surrender of copyhold estate, (a).

JOHN MORRIS and Jane, his wife, seized of freehold and copyhold estates to the use of Jane Morris for life, and after her decease to the use of John Morris for life, with remainder to the use of such persons, and for such estates, &c., as they or the survivor should appoint, by indentures, dated the 18th of June, 1799, joined in revoking the uses according to a power for that purpose, and in limiting and appointing the estates ; and John Morris for himself and his wife (she thereby consenting thereto) covenanted, that he and his wife should within one month surrender the copyhold estates to the use of Rowland Stephenson and others, their heirs, &c. ; upon trust to sell ; and pay the debt of 3299*l.* 15*s.* due to them from John Morris ; and to pay the residue according to the appointment of John and Jane Morris or the survivor.

A sale having taken place, the first bill was filed on behalf of Jane Morris by her next friend, for the purpose of setting aside that sale, on the ground that the deed was obtained by fraud : but that the case not being made out, the bill was dismissed.

The bill in the other cause prayed, that the Defendants Morris and his wife may specifically perform the covenant ; and surrender the copyhold estates, &c. The Defendants by their answer attempted to set up the same ground of fraud, as in the original bill.

Mr. Richards, Mr. Romilly and Mr. Thomson, for the Plaintiffs in the second cause.—* The husband is bound by [*475] his covenant to procure his wife to join in a surrender :

(a) In Martin v. Mitchell, 2 Jac. & Walk. 412, where the husband and wife had entered into an agreement to sell her estate, the Master of the Rolls held, that the agreement was void as to the wife, for a married woman had no disposing power, and a Court of Equity could give no relief against her in such a contract ; nor would the Court compel the husband to procure his wife to join in the conveyance. See also Davis v. Jones, 4 Bos. & Pull. 269.

It seems to be universally true, that though a wife may convey her estate by deed, she will not be bound by a covenant or agreement to levy a fine or convey her estate. The agreement by a feme covert with the assent of her husband, for the sale of her real estate, is absolutely void at law, and the Courts of Equity never enforce such a contract against her. Buller v. Buckingham, 5 Day, 492. See also Watrous v. Chalker, 7 Conn. 224 ; 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 168.

It has been repeatedly held that a wife is not liable on her covenants in a deed. Fowler v. Shearer, 7 Mass. 21 ; Colcord v. Swan, ib., 291 ; Jackson v. Vanderheyden, 17 John. 167 ; Martin v. Dwellly, 6 Wendell, 1 ; Wadleigh v. Glines, 6 N. Hamp. 17.

Whether the wife's covenant might not operate by way of estoppel. See Colcord v. Swan, 7 Mass. 291 ; Hill v. West, 8 Ohio, 225 ; Jackson v. Vanderheyden, 17 John. 167 ; 2 Kent, (5th ed.), 168.

Hall v. Hardy (1). The reason is given in the note (2) to that case; and the concluding observation applies to what is not suggested in this case. In Barrington v. Horn (3), and Berry v. Wade (4), the latter certainly in a book of no great authority, decrees of the same kind were made. The last case is Withers v. Pinchard (5). An agreement was entered into by a man on behalf of himself and his wife to sell the estate in question to the Plaintiff. One moiety was the wife's. The estate was settled to certain uses, with a power of revocation in the husband and wife, with consent of the trustees. The wife by her answer, as well as the husband, swore, that she never gave her consent to the sale; and they stated, that they believed, the trustees would not consent to the revocation of the uses. The Lord Chancellor decreed a specific performance; and that the husband should convey, and should procure all proper parties to convey, as the Master should direct, if the parties should differ concerning the conveyance.

In that case the wife must necessarily have executed the power of revocation; which would not do without the consent of the trustees. In this case the husband has covenanted to surrender, as far as he has an interest, and to procure her to surrender, as far as she has an interest. The Court will not execute the agreement against the wife: but it is necessary to bring her before the Court.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—Has that doctrine ever been controverted or shaken?

[*476] * For the Plaintiff.—There is only one case, that looks like an inclination of the Court to the contrary: Outram v. Round (6); which is noticed by Mr. Fonblanche (7). But in that case the husband had actually offered to refund the money by his answer.

Mr. Piggott, and Mr. Stanley, for the Defendant, the husband: Mr. Fonblanche, and Mr. Leach, for the wife.—Independent of authority, the Court will not countenance this doctrine; which is not now the sense of Westminster Hall. Hall v. Hardy has not been followed. Outram v. Round, a later decision, is in opposition to it; and it is not put upon the circumstances: but the practice is reprobated. There is no case in favor of it from 1773 till the decree in 1795. These Plaintiffs reciting the settlement knew the extent of her power: how far she could make any alteration in the uses of the settlement. No consideration passed to the wife. They had lent money to the husband upon his personal security; none upon these estates. This is a case, in which the covenantee ought to be left to law. In the case in 1733 the only purpose was to bar

(1) 3 P. Will. 187.

(2) 3 P. Will. 189.

(3) 5 Vin. 547; 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 17, pl. 7.

(4) Finch, 180.

(5) In Chancery, at Lincoln's Inn Hall, July 7th, 1795.

(6) 4 Vin. 203, pl. 4.

(7) 1 Treat. Eq. 294.

dower; and there is merely the general language of the Master of the Rolls. Unless bound by authority, so as to have no discretion left, the Court will not conceive this a case for a specific performance according to the just and measured discretion of the Court. It would be in opposition to what the Court does every day as to the interest of a married woman. The presumption, that the wife has consented cannot prevail against the fact. Will the Court under these circumstances send the husband to jail, till he can prevail upon his wife to join? A party may be bound to procure an Act of Parliament; or to do any thing, which he may *be [477] supposed to have in his power; but not to use his control over his wife, to compel her to part with her property; per fas aut nefas to obtain that, which the Law would not permit her to accede to without a private examination. If the Plaintiffs contract with a person not sui juris, or whose contract cannot have effect but through the medium of a person not sui juris, they cannot complain. This Court will not give encouragement to that. The Court has uniformly said a personal decree cannot be made against the wife: but this will be such a decree in the most oppressive form. The principle of not making a decree against her is, that, if it is competent to her to contract, they ought to be assured, that she does so without the influence of her husband. The policy of this Court ought to conform to the policy of the Law, or at least ought not to counteract it. This decree will declare, that it is the duty of the husband to use his influence; and then the Court will be bound to relieve the wife against the effect of that influence. The way to try, whether the wife is a necessary party, is to inquire, whether there could be a decree against her; and as it must be admitted, there cannot, the bill must be dismissed, and with costs.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—The wife is a party in all these cases; and has a right to be made a party; that she may state her reasons against the demand. There is nothing to prevent the exercise of proper influence. In the case in Peere Williams there was an actual decree; and Sir Joseph Jekyll says, there have been one hundred precedents. Where is the difference upon the right to dower? That is as much her interest, as if the estate had been originally her's. The exception in the note proves the general rule. There was nothing dissenting in Mrs. Morris. She executed the deed of revocation; and joined in her husband's applications to the Plaintiffs from time to time. It must be presumed, she had no objection to the covenant. *The husband having under- [478] taken with his eyes open to do the specific thing must take the consequences. There is no suggestion, that now Mrs. Morris will not perform, if the Court makes the decree against her husband. There is no hardship upon her; for she has agreed now, as far as she can in point of conscience; and the motive is to get her husband out of difficulties. Why is the wife allowed to levy a fine? The Court cannot prevent her; and has no right to do any thing but to ask her, whether it is of her own accord ; whether there is any coercion upon her ; whether it is her act. If proper means are used by the husband, this is within all the policy of the law and of society.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The Defendant, the husband, does not allege, that he is unable to procure his wife to join. He does not offer to pay the debt ; and it is impossible for him to put the Plaintiffs in the same situation, as if the deed was never executed ; for they would in 1779 have had an execution against him, if he had not redeemed himself by giving this security. It is unnecessary therefore to discuss Lord Cowper's reasoning : this case being so extremely dissimilar to that ; this differing in all its circumstances. The Defendant there stated absolute inability to perform ; and offered to put the other party in the same situation, as if the agreement had never taken place. Here the only objection he or she states to the performance is, that the agreement was obtained by fraud ; not, that she is unwilling to enable him to perform it, merely, because it is incompetent to him to dispose of her estate ; but because he and she were imposed upon in entering into the deed. The last case, in 1795, was infinitely stronger ; for the wife never had expressed any assent. The first time she was consulted she expressed her disagreement.

[* 479] * The contract was made without her knowledge : yet she was decreed to perform it ; without regard to the possible consequences resulting ; that to relieve him she might be under the necessity of disposing of her estate. But here the wife executed the deed ; and even in the very covenant it is declared, that it is entered into by him with her consent. In such a case it is too much to say, there shall not be a specific performance. It would be to say, that, merely because he is a husband, he is to be exempted from performing his covenant ; for non constat, that there is any difficulty in obtaining her consent. I should therefore be obliged to go the length of saying, that merely because he is married, he shall not be compelled to perform his covenant.

It is unnecessary to observe upon Lord Cowper's reasoning. But there are many other ways, in which a wife would be under compulsion ; and yet it would be quite impossible to abstain from enforcing the demand against the husband. The effect would have been just the same, if she had originally refused. The creditor would have thrown her husband into a prison ; and there would have been the same necessity upon her. If therefore there is any thing in that reasoning in the instance of a voluntary sale by the husband, it would not perhaps hold, where the object is to redeem himself from the demand of a creditor, having that power over him. But it is unnecessary to enter into that reasoning upon this occasion : this case being quite different from that before Lord Cowper.

As to dismissing the bill against the wife, I should wish to see the form, and to look at the decree in Withers v. Pinchard.

Decree the Defendant John Morris specifically to perform the covenant, and to procure his wife, &c. with liberty to retain the costs out of the purchase-money (1).

SEE, ante, note 4 to Emery v. Wase, 5 V. 846.

WEBB v. THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY.
THE EARL OF SHAFTESBURY v. ARROWSMITH.

[1802, JULY 30, 31.]

THE Court controls a trustee in the exercise of a power to appoint new trustees, though given in very large words, (a).

A trustee and executor, though taking under the Will a commission as a satisfaction for his trouble, entitled to allowances under a general trust to set and manage, as he should think proper, and out of the rents and profits to pay all rates and taxes, charges of repairs, stewards', bailiffs', and gamekeepers' salaries and expenses, and all other charges and expenses he should think proper (b), [p. 480.]

But he was not allowed to appoint an establishment, gamekeepers, &c. except as the due management required, [p. 480.]

Inquiry therefore directed as to that: and whether the liberty of sporting during the continuance of the trust could be let for the benefit of the Cestui que trust: if not, the game belongs to the heir, [p. 480.]

Election between claims against a Will and under it: though remote interests (c), [p. 480.]

SIR JOHN WEBB by his Will devised all his real estates in the county of Gloucester to Edward Arrowsmith, his heirs and assigns; upon trust to set and manage, as he should think proper, and out of the rents and profits to pay all rates and taxes and the charges of repairs, and stewards', bailiffs', and game-keepers' salaries and expenses, and all other charges and expenses, which he and they should think proper, and the commission after-mentioned; and after these payments, upon trust, until his grand-daughter Lady Barbara Ashley should attain the age of twenty-one, or marry, to invest the

(1) Ante, Emery v. Wase, vol. v. 846. The decree affirmed by the Lord Chancellor upon appeal, post, viii. 505. See 1 Madd. 6, 7; and the note, ante, vol. i. 329.

(a) See on this point, Millard v. Eyre, ante, 2 V. 94; 1 Barbour, Ch. Pr. 542. If trustees decline or refuse to act, the Court will appoint other trustees, if necessary, to carry the trust into effect. De Peyster v. Clendining, 8 Paige, 296; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1061. Trustees at all times have a right to call for direction from a Court of Equity. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1276, note; and in all cases of doubt it is best for trustees to act under the advice and direction of the Court. Ib.

(b) As to commissions and allowances to executors, see Chetham v. Audley, ante, 4 V. 72, note (a). To trustees. Fountaine v. Pellet, ante, 1 V. 337.

(c) It is now well established that the doctrine of election applies to all interests, whether they are immediate or remote, vested or contingent, of value or of no value; and whether these interests are in real or in personal estate. 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1096; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 1034, 1035; Wilson v. Townshend, ante, 2 V. 697.

surplus from time to time in real or Government securities, and upon her attaining that age or marrying to convey the estates [* 481] and * transfer the accumulations to his said grand-daughter, her heirs, executors, &c. with other remainders over.

The testator also gave all his real estates in the county of Dorset to Arrowsmith, in the same manner and with similar powers ; directing an accumulation of the rents and profits during the lives of Lady Barbara Ashley, and her mother Lady Shaftesbury, and after the decease of the survivor to convey and transfer to the children of Lady Barbara Ashley, as therein mentioned.

He gave all the residue of his real estates to Arrowsmith, his heirs and assigns ; upon trust to raise such sums of money for the payment of his debts, &c. as his personal estate should fall short of paying ; and as to all his estates in the county of York he devised the same to Arrowsmith, his heirs and assigns ; upon trust to let and set, &c. and deduct such commission, as before mentioned as to the Gloucestershire estates ; and, until his natural son James Webb should attain the age of twenty-one, to pay such sums out of the rents and profits, as Arrowsmith, his heirs or assigns, should think proper for the maintenance and education of James Webb, and for his advancement and preferment in the world : and after twenty-one until twenty-five to pay him 1200*l.* a-year ; and to invest the surplus rents from time to time in real or Government securities ; and upon his attaining twenty-five to transfer to him the accumulation ; and in case of his death under that age to his children equally : if none, to the testator's other natural sons John and Frederic Webb ; and, if they should die under twenty-five, to John Frankland, his executors, &c. ; and on James Webb's attaining twenty-five or at any other time his said trustee should think proper, he directed him to convey the said estates to James Webb for life, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders ; remainder to his first and other sons, in tail male ; with similar remainders to * John and Frederic Webb and their first and other sons ; remainder to John Frankland and his heirs ; and he gave a power for raising a jointure for any wife of his son James and portions, as Arrowsmith, his heirs or assigns, should think proper.

The testator then devised his Lincolnshire estate to Arrowsmith in the same manner upon similar trusts for his second natural son John Webb and his first and other sons, and his estates in the counties of Northampton, Durham, Wilts, and Middlesex, and in Westminster, for Frederic Webb and his first and other sons ; with remainders respectively to the other sons, and the ultimate remainder to Frankland and his heirs ; with similar powers in Arrowsmith, and subject to commission to him, as to the other estates. The testator then among other legacies and annuities gave an annuity of 100*l.* to Frankland for his life ; and directed, that he should be continued agent and steward of his estates in the same manner and upon the same terms, salary and allowances, which he had done and received, for his life, or so long only as Arrowsmith, his heirs or assigns should think proper; and in case Frankland should refuse or neglect to give every advice and assistance in his power to Arrowsmith, his heirs and assigns, in the execution of the trusts of the will, then he revoked all the devises and bequests to him. He also directed that Arrowsmith should have and retain to himself and for his own use as a satisfaction for his trouble in the execution of the trusts of his will at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, upon the amount of the gross annual rents and profits of his real estates; and also upon the amount of the interest and dividends to arise from the accumulations of such rents and profits and from his personal estate; and he gave and bequeathed the said commission and allowance to Arrowsmith, and directed, [ 483] that he should receive and be entitled to the same, until the several and respective persons, to whom he devised and bequeathed his real and personal estates, should become entitled thereto in possession; and that the same should be retained by or paid to him from time to time during his life. The will then proceeded thus :

"I do hereby authorize and empower the said Edward Arrowsmith at any time during his life by any deed or instrument under his hand and seal to nominate and appoint one or more person or persons to be a trustee or trustees for all or any part of the purposes and trusts in this my will contained; and who shall act in all things as fully and effectually as the said Edward Arrowsmith; and he and they shall upon the death of the said Edward Arrowsmith be entitled to the same commission, which I have given to him; and when such new trustee or trustees shall be so nominated and appointed, as aforesaid, I direct the said Edward Arrowsmith to convey, assure, assign, and transfer, all my real and personal estate into the names of himself and such new trustee or trustees."

The testator then appointed Arrowsmith and the mother of his said children their guardians. He also directed, that each and every of the person and persons, to whom he had thereby made any gift, devise, or bequest, should accept the same in full satisfaction and discharge of all debts, claims, and demands, upon him or upon any part of his real or personal estate or otherwise; and he revoked the gifts and bequests to such persons, who should not accept the same in satisfaction, and execute releases. He gave his daughter the Countess of Shaftesbury the sum of 2000*l.* to be paid within six months after his decease; and all the residue [484] of his personal estate he gave to Arrowsmith, upon trust to accumulate, until his son James should attain the age of twenty-five, and to be transferred to him at that age; in case of his death under that age without issue, to his son John; and in case of his death, &c. to Frederic; and in case of his death, &c. to Frankland, his executors, &c. He declared, that if his daughter or granddaughter or any of their issue should institute any suit against his trustee, his heirs, executors, &c. or molest or disturb them in the execution of any of the trusts, he revoked the several devises and bequests to them ; and gave the same to Frankland ; and he appointed Arrowsmith sole executor.

The first bill was filed to have the will established : the second by the heir at law. The will was established by a decree, directing the accounts, and among other things, that Arrowsmith should let and set with the approbation of the Master. Exceptions were taken by Arrowsmith and Frankland for disallowing several claims set up by them, as follows :

Allowances to them for salaries, audit dinners to the tenants, travelling expenses, postage, and a variety of other charges.

£168, claimed by Arrowsmith, is due from the testator at his death upon the balance of an unsettled account for money laid out by him for the testator.

£81, 11s. 7 1-2d. claimed by him as an allowance for game-keepers and stewards' wages upon the Gloucestershire estate, and for powder, shot, and dogs.

Frankland, who was a relation of the testator's, claimed as a creditor an annuity of 15*l.* charged upon part of the estates [*485] by the will of Dame Barbara Webb ; an annuity of 120*l.* secured by the bond of the testator ; a mortgage by the testator in 1784 for 3500*l.* ; an allowance for valuing and selling estates, &c. ; 355*l.* as a certain salary enjoyed by him during the testator's life ; rent of a house ; and allowance for taxes ; travelling charges, about 60*l.* a year ; and board and lodging, when attending the testator for settling his accounts. Some of these claims were objected to as unreasonable ; and it was also insisted, that this was a case of election.

The causes came on upon the exceptions and for farther directions ; and upon a motion, that the Defendant Arrowsmith may be restrained from executing a conveyance to a new trustee.

The Attorney General, [Hon. S. Perceval], Mr. Richards, and Mr. Stanley, for the Plaintiffs, in the first cause.—Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Cox, for the Plaintiffs, in the second cause.

The object of the motion is to restrain the Defendant from executing a conveyance delegating his whole authority. Upon general principles, no one acting in the character of trustee can remove himself from the control of the Court administering the affairs of the Cestui que trust. The cases of charities are applicable. It cannot be conceived, that an executor or trustee can have an authority not in some degree under the control of the Court, and there are many instances of the most unlimited words. This can never be treated as a benefit to the trustee. A positive direction, that he should not be subject to the control of the Court, would not prevent it. The principle is to be found in the Duke of Beaufort v. Berty (1) and many other cases. This cause, instituted for the benefit of the Cestuis que trust, being under the eye of the Court, the trustee must act under the direction of the Court. If therefore he wishes to assign his trust, he must submit a proper person to the Master in the usual course.

(1) 1 P. Will. 702.

Mr. Romilly, for the Defendant Arrowsmith.—If the Defendant has the power under the will to appoint a new trustee, though this Court has taken upon itself to superintend his conduct so far as to require him to pass his accounts before the Master, which is all the Court has done, nothing can be done by this motion. If he has not that power, he can do nothing. Every trustee has the power of passing the legal estate. The Court will hardly interpose from the mere apprehension of that. If this is to be under the authority of the Court, he will have no power; for without this power he might propose a trustee. The argument contends, that the Court will do this for him; which would be contrary to the will. The testator has said, he shall have these great powers during the time he acts himself; and that he shall nominate the trustees, when he ceases to act; knowing the situation of the property; and thinking him the best person to execute this power. What authority has the Court to interpose? The only mischief can be, that the legal estate might be vested in some other person; whom the Court might order to convey to any one else.

Mr. Mansfield, in reply.—A clause giving trustees a power to nominate others is not uncommon; but it never was supposed, that, when once the estate was under the management of the Court, a trustee having such a power could sua sponte appoint a new trustee. In that respect there is no difference between this trustee and any other. The argument must be, that he might sell this; or appoint the most distressed gambler. Is it of no consequence, to * whom the legal estate is to go? The first effect would [* 487] be a new suit: a supplemental bill; and additional expense.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The Defendant appears to me to have no interest whatsoever in the act of appointing a new trustee. If it stands upon this clause alone, he has no other discretion with regard to the appointment of a new trustee than trustees in ordinary cases. It is true, he can, by the appointment of a trustee, convey a much more extensive interest than a trustee appointing a new one in general cases can. But that circumstance does not at all affect the control of the Court over his discretion; though it imposes upon the Court a duty more especially to take care, that its own discretion is wisely exercised; for, when such a remuneration is given to the new trustee as Mr. Arrowsmith can give, no one motive ought to operate upon him in the appointment, but to do the very best thing, not for himself, or the person whom he is to appoint, but for those, whose interests they are to take care of. There is no doubt therefore of the control of the Court over his discretion. It does not prevent the exercise of his discretion; but takes care, that it shall be duly exercised. In the ordinary case trustees, parties to the suit, will not be allowed to change the trustees without the authority of the Court. There is no doubt, the Court will restrain; and it is not a sufficient answer, that the Court will take care to prevent the consequences : for the mischief is in a great measure done by the appointment : the necessity of getting back the legal estate. It is enough to say, the Court does not permit the discretion to be exercised except under the direction of the Court. The Defendant must therefore, if he wants to appoint a new trustee, go [* 488] before the Master ; and propose a person ; * and therefore ought to be restrained from appointing a new trustee without an application to the Court.

July 31st. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—In this case I feel a strong inclination to hold, that this Commission of 5*l.* per cent. was the whole Arrowsmith was to have : but the will does not say so ; and upon the will I must give him the other allowances.

As to the power of appointing new trustees, I am very well satisfied, notwithstanding the strong words of this will, the Court has control over Arrowsmith. Nothing proves it more strongly than the authority given him by the decree to let and set with the approbation of the Master (1).

I am of opinion, he has no right to appoint bailiffs, gamekeepers, &c. except as the due management of the estate requires that. It is quite impossible for him under this will to keep up an establishment of pleasure ; as a gamekeeper, &c. There must therefore be a reference as to the establishment ; regard being had to the will. There must also be an inquiry, whether the liberty of sporting can be let for the benefit of the Cestuis que trust ; and if not, I think, the game will belong to the heir. If it is necessary for the preservation of the game, that he should appoint a gamekeeper, I would not prevent him from appointing one ; but for that purpose only ; for he cannot under this will have an establishment of pleasure there.

The decree must direct an election against Frankland ; though clearly not intended by the testator with reference to these remote interests (2). Also, taking the whole will together, upon the particular expressions in this will, Arrowsmith cannot claim his debt and commission both. Therefore he must elect.

See the notes to S. C. 4 V. 66.

(1) — v. Robarts, 1 Jac. & Walk. 251.

(2) Upon Election see the notes, ante, vol. i. 523, 7.

BASTARD v. CLARKE.

[1802, AUGUST 2.]

No order under the statute 7 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2: the bill not being confined to a mere foreclosure; but including also another subject, (a).

THE bill was filed for a foreclosure; and also set up another demand against the Defendant upon a distinct ground; praying a satisfaction in respect of that; and that the estate should be a security for both.

Mr. Mansfield, for the Defendant, moved for the usual reference to the Master under the Statute (1).

Mr. Romilly, for the Plaintiff, objected, that the order under this Act of Parliament can be made only upon a mere bill of foreclosure; never, where there is any thing else in the cause; and if the other was a distinct subject, the Defendant ought to have demurred on the ground, that the bill was multifarious.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, he never knew an instance of this order, where there was any thing else in the bill beyond the foreclosure; observing, that it would not obtain the object of the act; for the cause must go on as to the other matter.

Mr. Lloyd (being applied to by the Lord Chancellor) said, a similar application was refused in Vaughan v. Lloyd (2): the mortgagee wanting to tack all his other demands to his mortgage.

Mr. Mansfield said, in that case the other matter was connected.

Mr. Romilly mentioned Huson v. Hewson (3); where Lord Rosslyn was of opinion, though certainly Lord Alvanley * was not, that the reference under the Statute was such [* 490] an acquiescence, that the Defendant should not afterwards before the Master insist, that part of the money was paid.

The Lord CHANCELLOR said, the justice of the case seemed to be, that the reference should be made as to the mortgage; and the cause should go on as to the rest; but he never knew it done.

The Order was not made. —

1. SEE the note to Huson v. Hewson, 4 V. 105.

2. Not only, when a bill is brought for repayment of money lent on mortgage, or, in default of such payment, for a foreclosure; but in every case where a bill is brought for a mere pecuniary demand, the Court, it has been said, will stop a suit at any time when the defendant submits to satisfy the plaintiff's just demands; and an order will be made referring it to the master to compute the sum due. Boys v. Ford, 4 Mad. 43. This inherent jurisdiction of Courts of Equity, it has been farther intimated, rendered the aid of the legislature, in this respect, superfluous as to them; and the only use of the statute 7 Geo. II. c. 20, was to give a new jurisdiction, in the case of mortgages, to Courts of common law. Praed v. Hull, 1 Sim. & Stu. 332. In the case just cited, it was again observed, that in any cause, and in any stage of the cause, proceedings will be stayed, if the defend-

(a) See 1 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.), 543, 544.

(1) Statute 7 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2.

(2) Cited ante, vol. v. 48.

(3) Ante, vol. iv. 105.

ant will at once submit to a decree establishing the full demand made by the bills, and the whole relief prayed in respect of that demand, with costs. This dicton was, doubtless, not intended to contradict the rules previously laid down by Lord Eldon, that it is indispensable for a mortgagor who asks a reference under the statute, and that in the mean time proceedings at law may be stayed, should make his application before the mortgagee is entitled to take out execution; (Amis v. Lloyd, 3 Ves. & Bea. 16;) and that, even when the whole proceedings are in equity, a mortgagor, who is defendant to a bill of foreclosure, cannot obtain a reference under the statute, on motion, whilst he is in contempt. Hewitt v. M'Cartney, 13 Ves. 560.

3. An order under the statute of Geo. II. will not be made on application of the assignees of a bankrupt mortgagor, without the consent of such bankrupt; for the statute gives the right of redemption to the bankrupt, as well as to his assignees. Garth v. Thomas, 2 Sim. & Stu. 189.

4. A mortgagor, who is defendant to a bill of foreclosure, may, in equity, after having an order for an account and redemption under the statute above cited, apply for time to complete the payment; though at law it has been held, that he ought to have his money ready, to entitle him to the indulgence of a summary order. Wakerell v. Delight, Coop. 28; S. C. 9 Ves. 36. As to the practice for enlarging the time first appointed for the payment of money due on mortgage, see, ante, note 3 to The Bishop of Winchester v. Paine, 3 V. 314.

CARY v. ABBOT.

[ROLLS.—1802, FEB. 4; AUGUST 3.]

RESIDUARY bequest for the purpose of educating and bringing up poor children in the Roman Catholic faith void.

The fund does not go to the next of kin; but is in the disposition of the Crown to some other charitable use by Sign Manual, (a), [p. 490.]

The Statute 1 Edw. VI. c. 14, relates only to superstitious Uses of a particular description then existing, [p. 495.]

GEORGE CARY, a Roman Catholic, by his Will, after giving several legacies to his executors and others, and two annuities, and some other bequests, gave and bequeathed, as follows:

“I also give and bequeath in trust to my executors hereinafter named and for the purpose hereinafter named all the residue of my personal estate not hereinbefore disposed of whatsoever nature kind or quality the same may be also all the interest arising therefrom I give for the purpose of educating and bringing up poor children in the Roman Catholic Faith such as orphans or those whose parents or friends were not able or willing so to educate those children to be chosen by my trustees hereinafter named or such trustees as they shall afterwards appoint or cause to be appointed: nevertheless I at all times allow a part of this residue to pay such sum or sums as may be requisite for the legal security or execution of this or any other part of this my last Will.”

[* 491] * The bill was filed by the brother and sister and nieces of the testator, as next of kin, who were also legatees; claiming their legacies; and praying, that the bequest of the residue may be declared illegal and void; and that it may be declared, the testator died intestate as to the residue; and the Plaintiffs, as next of kin, may be declared entitled thereto, &c.

(a) 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1168; De Themines v. De Bonneval, 5 Russ. 292; Trustees of Baptist Ass. v. Smith, 4 Wheat. 1; Moggridge v. Thackwell, ante, 37, 76, and notes; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 773-775.

The Attorney General [Hon. S. Perceval] was made a Defendant.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Trower, for the Plaintiffs.—The claim of the Plaintiffs is upon the ground, that this residuary bequest is completely void. The Attorney General insists, that, though it cannot be sustained in the form intended, yet, as a superstitious use, either this Court or the Crown may appoint to some charity. That point will be rested upon the Statute of Edward VI. (1). It is stated in all the abridgments, that, wherever there is a disposition for a superstitious use, it goes to the Crown. That probably arose from a mistake of the law, arising from a passage in Duke (2). The Statute appears plainly to have a retrospect to gifts made before; and has no provision applicable to those subsequent, as to forfeiture, though clearly void; and it cannot be maintained upon that Statute, that property given at this time to a superstitious use shall be forfeited. It is clear from the Statute, that this is, not a charitable, but a superstitious, use: but all the expressions are retrospective merely. The Attorney General v. Guise (3), and the case there cited, are certainly against the Plaintiffs. Gates and Jones's Case is not to be found: but it will probably turn out to have been before the Statute; and all the cases of forfeiture to the Crown will also be found to have been previous to it. By what authority can the Crown claim, if not by the act? * As [* 492] Parens Patriæ the right of the Crown is to execute charitable uses. Only the seventh section of the act relates to money. What could be the use of that section, if this right existed in the King as Parens Patriæ or by the prerogative? Upon that hypothesis also it would have extended to all future dispositions. The claim therefore rests solely upon the subsequent cases, and Dicta, founded upon mistake, and a defective construction of the Statute, and the passage in Duke. If so, the common equity for the heir or next of kin must prevail. In a very recent case, De Garcin v. Lawson (4), not yet decided, The Attorney General v. Baxter (5), and The King v. Lady Portington (6), were questioned; and Lord Thurlow's opinion in Moggridge v. Thackwell (7) is strong against the first decision of the former. To educate these children in the Protestant faith would be directly against the intention.

Mr. Mitford, for the Attorney General.—The right of the Crown

(1) Stat. 1 Edw. VI. c. 14.

(2) Duke's Char. Use, 105.

(3) 2 Vern. 266.

(4) Ante, vol. iv. 433, n.

(5) 1 Vern. 248. The decree reversed in The Attorney General v. Hughes, 2 Vern. 105.

(6) 1 Salk. 182.

(7) Ante, 36 vol. i. 464; 3 Bro. C. C. 517.

is established by a great number of decisions; many of which are upon subjects, that arose long since the act. Superstitious uses are void, not only by the Statute, but by the general policy of the law. The King v. Lady Portington received great discussion. The principle, as laid down in De Costa v. De Pas (1) has been always distinctly looked up to. The distinction is there taken, that when the devise is to a superstitious use, and made void by statute, or to a charity, and made void by Statute of Mortmain, then it should belong to the heir at law or next of kin; but where it [^{* 493}] is in itself a charity, * but the mode, in which it is to be disposed of, is such, that by the law of England it cannot take effect, as promoting a religion contrary to the established one, then the Crown by Sign Manual directed to the Attorney General may give orders, in what charitable manner it shall be disposed. The disposition made under that decision was certainly a complete departure from the intention of the testator.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—It is not disputed, that this is a superstitious use; as much as any of the uses specified in the Statute; which has the expression “other like thing.” There is a plain intention here to make proselytes: which is the characteristic of this religion. If a gift to a Roman Catholic Priest is void, a gift for the purpose of educating children in the faith he teaches must be void also (2). That it is void by the Statute appears clearly through the whole of it. The object cannot take place; and the forfeiture arises by way of penalty for the attempt; and it is so considered in Duke and all the cases. It is equally clear, that the Statute is retrospective throughout; and it has been always so considered; as it was in Moggridge v. Thackwell; though incidentally only; the use in that will not being superstitious. The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Oxford (3) and Corbyn v. French (4) were decided in favor of the next of kin, upon the principle, that, if the particular object pointed out could not be attained, no other object should take place. In the case of Downing College (5) Lord [^{* 494}] Chief Justice Wilmot was of opinion, * that it should go to another Charity. But Lord Thurlow dissented from that; and after Lord Kenyon’s decree in The Attorney General v. The Bishop of Oxford acted upon it. The consequence is like that of the Statute of Mortmain (6); making the disposition absolutely void; and being so, the Court cannot give it effect or energy. In that way Lord Hardwicke understood it in De Costa v. De Pas.

Mr. Romilly (Amicus Curiae) mentioned Isaac v. Gompertz in

(1) Amb. 228. See that case, as corrected by the Lord Chancellor from Lord Hardwicke’s notes, ante, 76, in Moggridge v. Thackwell.

(2) Ante, vol. vi. 567, Smart v. Prujean, and the note; De Garcin v. Lauzon, iv. 433, n.

(3) Stated ante, vol. iv. 431, from the Register’s Book.

(4) Ante, vol. iv. 418.

(5) The Attorney General v. Downing, Wilm. 1; Amb. 550, 571; The Attorney General v. Bouyer, ante, vol. iii. 714; v. 300; The Attorney General v. Vigor, post, viii. 256.

(6) Stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 36.

which Lord Thurlow held a purpose to educate Jews a good Charity.

Aug 3d. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—This bill, filed by the next of kin of the testator, some of whom are legatees under the will, among other things prays, that the bequest of the residue for the purpose of educating Children in the Roman Catholic Faith, may be declared illegal and void; that it may be declared, the testator died intestate as to the residue; and that the Plaintiffs as next of kin are entitled thereto. The Attorney General, who is made a Defendant, insists, that the residue ought to be applied to such charitable purposes as his Majesty shall please to direct. That the residue cannot be applied according to the will is certain. The Roman Catholic religion has received a considerable degree of toleration by the Statute of the present King (1): yet there is a provision in that act, that all dispositions before considered unlawful shall continue to be and be deemed so. There is no doubt, a disposition for the purpose of bringing up and educating children in the Roman Catholic religion was unlawful before that time. The consequence of its being void, if authority * was [* 495] out of the question, would be an intestacy; that the gift being so void must be considered as no gift. But that is contradicted by authorities without number. According to them, whenever a testator is disposed to be charitable in his own way, and upon his own principles, we are not to content ourselves with disappointing his intention, if disapproved by us: but we are to make him charitable in our way and upon our principles. If once we discover in him any charitable intention, that is supposed to be so liberal as to take in objects, not only not within his intention, but wholly adverse to it. It is not for me to attempt to overturn the settled law and practice; according to which charitable bequests void as to one object may be appropriated to another.

But in this case can I, sounding myself upon the expression of Lord Hardwicke in De Costa v. De Pas (2), say, this is so wholly void as not to be applicable to any other purpose? According to that statement to entitle the heir or next of kin it is requisite, not only, that the devise is to a superstitious use, but to such as is made void by Statute. There is no Statute making superstitious uses void generally. The Statute of Edward VI. relates only to superstitious uses of a particular description, then existing. The Statute of Henry VIII. (3) relates only to assurances of land to churches and chapels; which, if for a longer term than twenty years, it declares absolutely void. The Statute of George I. (4) was only temporary. In The King v. Lady Portington one of the resolutions is, that the use being superstitious is merely void; and

(1) Stat. 31 Geo. III. c. 32.

(2) See that case, as corrected by the Lord Chancellor from Lord Hardwicke's notes, ante, 76, in Moggridge v. Thackwell.

(3) Stat. 23 Hen. VIII. c. 10.

(4) Stat. 1 Geo. I. c. 55.

for that reason the King cannot have it: yet however it is not so far void as that it shall result to the heir; and therefore the King shall order it to be applied to a proper use. In The Attorney General v. Guise the case of Gates and Jones is mentioned: in which it is said, a charity given to maintain Popish priests was applied to other uses by the King, and not to turn to the benefit of the heir. It is unnecessary for me to mention the other well known cases; in which bequests void as to the particular objects, but being charitable in their nature, have been applied to other charitable purposes. In the note to Corbyn v. French of the argument in De Garcin v. Lawson it is said by the Counsel for the next of kin, that "the opinion, that prevailed in some cases, particularly Baxter's Case, that the Crown may appoint, was disapproved by Lord Thurlow in Moggridge v. Thackwell; and in The Attorney General v. Whorwood, the next of kin upon the foundation of Lord Hardwicke's opinion filed a supplemental bill; upon which Lord Keeper Henley declared, that the disposition of the personal estate after the death of Mrs. Scott, so far as it was intended for a charitable purpose, was void; and that it would belong to the next of kin; and under that decree the next of kin upon the death of Mrs. Scott, about eight years ago, obtained a transfer of all the funds."

Upon looking at The Attorney General v. Whorwood (1), it appears, the doubt was, whether it was a bequest for a charitable purpose, or not; whether any charity was in the intention; for the argument upon the other side is, that this was no devise to a charity. Lord Hardwicke says, "if this trust is no charity, there is no ground for the Information in the name of the Attorney General at the relation of the College on a devise to the College only; for such Information can only be supported on the foot of a charitable use. On a * general devise to the College without more, the College being a body capable of taking must sue: the Attorney General having nothing to do with it; and it is only before me upon that Information."

[* 497] I do not therefore see, how that case can be an authority, that an illegal, but charitable, use shall go to the heir or next of kin. Here the use is clearly charitable in its nature: namely, for poor orphan children. What vitiates it is, that they are to be educated in the Roman Catholic religion.

I must declare the bequest of the residue void (2); but that it must go to such use as the King shall direct. The Attorney General therefore will apply for a Sign Manual.

SEE, ante, note 3 to The Attorney General v. The Haberdashers' Company, 1 V. 295, and notes 5, 6, 7, and 9 to Moggridge v. Thackwell, 1 V. 464.

(1) 1 Ves. 534.

(2) Attorney General v. Power, 1 Ball & Beat. 145.

SPERLING v. TREVOR.

[1802, AUGUST 5.]

EXCEPTION to a Report, in favor of a title, on the ground, that the reversion in fee might have been disposed of, so as not to have descended to the heir, from whom the title was derived, over-ruled, (a).

THE bill was filed to obtain specific performance of an agreement by the Defendant for the purchase of a freehold estate from the Plaintiff. The usual reference to the Master having been directed, the Report was in favor of the title; to which Report the Defendant took an exception, as to part of the estate called the Bower Farm.

The ground of the objection to the title was, that Elizabeth Baker ought to join in a recovery: the title being derived from John Paine; who by indenture, dated the 19th of January, 1693, limited the estate to the use of himself for life; remainder, subject to a term, to his first and other sons by his then wife in tail male; remainder to his first and other sons by any other woman in tail general; remainder to his daughters in tail; remainder to John Paine in fee.

* John Paine and Blanch, his wife, had one daughter—[* 498] Elizabeth; who married John Smith. John Paine by his will gave all such wordly estate, wherewith it pleased God to bless him, to his second wife, whom he appointed his executrix: but the will was attested by two witnesses only. He died without any other issue. Elizabeth Smith upon the death of her father entered into possession as tenant in tail; and levied a fine. She had issue John Smith, who married, but died without issue, and Elizabeth, who married William Baker. They had issue one daughter, Elizabeth Baker. From her the estate was purchased under a decree; and by mesne purchases became vested in the Plaintiff.

The Defendant suggested, that the ultimate remainder in fee may have been by deed or will disposed of by John Paine or by any other person, to whom it may have descended; and if the same should have been so disposed of, it could now be barred only by Elizabeth Baker.

In support of the title it was urged, that the bare possibility, that Paine might have disposed of the reversion from his only child and heiress Elizabeth, would not be permitted by a Court of Equity to impede the sale; and as it appeared, that the estate was not devised, it was to be assumed, that the ultimate reversion descended to his only child and heiress at law.

Mr. Mansfield, and Mr. Steele, in support of the Exception.—Mr. Romilly and Mr. Fonblanque, for the Report.

(a) See as to the title which the vendor is bound to make, and at what time it is necessary he should make it, Rose v. Calland, ante, 5 V. 189, note (a), and cases there cited; Cooper v. Denne, ante, 1 V. 565, note (a); Omerod v. Hardman, ante, 722; Wynn v. Morgan, ante, 202.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] held a recovery not necessary.

The Exception was over-ruled; and a specific performance decreed.

As to the title which a purchaser has a right to insist on before he completes his contract, see the notes to Cooper v. Denne, 1 V. 565, and the farther references there given.

[* 499]

HOLMES v. COGHILL.

[ROLLS.—1802, AUGUST 3, 5.]

DISTINCTION between a power and absolute property. A power, unless executed, not assets for debts (a).

Power executed by Will, but afterwards discharged; and a new power created.

A subsequent codicil will not by the mere effect of republishing the Will be an execution of the Power, [p. 499.]

Though the rule is settled, perhaps with some violation of principle, but with no practical inconvenience, that equity will, in certain cases, aid a defective execution of a Power, the want of execution cannot be supplied (b), [p. 499.]

By the settlement, previous to the marriage of Sir John Coghill, Bart. dated the 15th and 16th of October, 1754, estates in Ireland, in fee simple, in the counties of Kilkenny and Cavan, and leaseholds for lives in the county of Kildare, were settled to the use of Sir John Coghill for life; with remainder, subject to an annuity by way of jointure and a term for raising portions for younger children, to the first and other sons of the marriage in tail male; and it was declared, that Sir John Coghill should have full power by any deed or writing to be by him subscribed, sealed, and executed, in the presence of three or more credible witnesses, or by his last Will and Testament, by him signed, published, and declared, in the presence of the like number of witnesses, to charge the said premises in the counties of Kilkenny, Cavan, and Kildare, with any sum, not exceeding 2000*l.* for such uses and purposes as he should think proper, but without prejudice to the aforesaid jointure and portions.

Sir John Coghill was also entitled under a Will to estates in the counties of Meath and Dublin; with remainder in tail to his eldest son; who attained the age of twenty-one in 1787. Soon afterwards they joined in suffering recoveries of all the estates, except the leaseholds; and by indentures of settlement, dated the 29th and 30th of June, 1787, they conveyed to trustees and their heirs the estates in the counties of Kilkenny, Meath, and Dublin, and the leaseholds in the county of Kildare, subject to the jointure and provision for younger children, but freed and for ever discharged of and

(a) See 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 1200; Ram on Assets, ch. 8, § 2, p. 148, 149.

(b) Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.) 339, 395, 396; 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 169, 170; Fonbl. Eq. b. 1, ch. 4, § 25, note (b), and note (k); 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 339, 340.

from all right and power by the said settlement reserved to Sir John Coghill by Deed or Will to charge and incumber the premises in the counties of Kilkenny and Kildare with any sum, not exceeding 2000*l.* for such uses and purposes as he should think proper.

This conveyance was declared to be in trust for securing an annuity to the son, and then to trustees for a term of 200 years; and subject thereto, to the joint appointment of the father and son; and, in the mean time and until default of appointment, to Sir John Coghill for life; and then to the survivor of him and his son. The trust of the term of 200 years was declared to be for securing the annuity to the son; and then, that the trustees should at the request and desire of Sir John Coghill, to be signified, and to be by him signed, by demise, sale, and mortgage, of the premises in the counties of Meath and Dublin, comprised in the term, or of a competent part thereof, or by such other ways and means as they or the survivor, &c. shall think fit, raise and levy such sum or sums of money as Sir John Coghill should direct and appoint, not exceeding in the whole 2000*l.*; and pay the same to Sir John Coghill or his assigns in his life-time to or for his and their own use for ever; or if the same or any part thereof shall not be levied, raised and paid over, to him and assigns in his life-time, then upon trust by all or any of the ways and means aforesaid to raise and levy the same at such time and times, and to pay over the same to such person or persons, as Sir John Coghill should by deed, or by his last Will by him duly executed and attested by two or more credible witnesses, direct and appoint; and then upon farther trust to indemnify the aforesaid lands in the county of Cavan from all charges affecting the same; and then upon farther trust to raise a farther sum in addition to the portions under the settlement.

Sir John Coghill by his Will, dated the 9th of September, 1775, and several codicils, executed and attested so [* 501] as to pass real estate, gave the sum of 2000*l.*, to be raised under his power, and all the rest and residue of his personal estate, goods, and effects (except his furniture at Coghill Hall, which he directed to be appraised, and delivered at the appraised value to his son), and the amount of such appraisement, with the above fund to be applied towards payment of his debts; and he appointed his wife and two other persons executrix and executors. He died in March 1790. One of the codicils was subsequent to the deed of 1787: but it took no notice of the power; and was for a distinct purpose, wholly unconnected with it.

The bill was filed by simple-contract creditors against the widow, who alone proved the Will, and against Sir John Thomas Coghill, the eldest son and heir-at-law of the testator; praying an account and payment of their debts, an account of the personal estate; and that if any part of the personal estate has been applied in payment of specialty debts, for so much the simple-contract creditors may stand in the place of the specialty creditors upon the real estates, of which the testator was seised, or in which he had such an interest as may be affected with specialty debts ; and receive satisfaction thereout.

The Defendants stated by their answers the accounts ; from which it appeared, that the personal estate and the real estate descended were insufficient for the specialty debts. The general question therefore was, whether the Plaintiffs could avail themselves of the fund, which was the subject of the power ; considered either as the absolute property of Sir John Coghill ; or the power being [* 502] executed by the codicil, as republishing the Will ; or the want of execution to be supplied in Equity.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Hall, for the Plaintiffs.—This power must be considered as executed by the effect of the codicil, republishing the Will. Where a codicil takes notice of the Will, it is clearly a republication. Carte v. Carte (1). Heylin v. Heylin (2). The effect of this codicil is to make the whole speak at that date ; and therefore it is a republication. But if this case cannot be so considered, without any disposition the fund, which is the subject of the power, will go as the absolute property of the party. Under similar circumstances the money has been raised for creditors ; though there was no execution of the power ; and in other instances against the express appointment. Lassells v. Lord Cornwallis (3). In Maskeleyne v. Maskelyne (4) there was no execution of the power. In Robinson v. Dusgate (5) it was raised for an administrator ; a general power to appoint giving the absolute property ; and an execution not being necessary. In Goodtitle v. Otway (6) it was held, that a power to dispose of, generally, gave the absolute property, and not in nature of a power. In Tomlinson v. Dighton (7) the distinction is taken by Lord Chief Justice Parker between a general power, giving the absolute property, and a limited power, confined to particular objects. In Maddison v. Andrew (8) the subject of a power was considered the absolute property. In Pack v. Bathurst (9), and Troughton v. Troughton (10) there had been an appointment : but Lord Hardwicke's opinion was, that though there had been no appointment, and nothing done, it would be assets for debts. In Bainton v. Ward (11), Lord Hard-

(1) Amb. 28 ; 3 Atk. 174.

(2) Cowp. 130 ; Pigott v. Waller, ante, 98.

(3) 2 Vern. 465 ; Pre. Ch. 232.

(4) Amb. 750.

(5) 2 Vern. 181.

(6) 2 Wils. 6.

(7) 1 P. Will. 149 ; Salk. 239 ; 10 Mod. 31 ; Com. 194 ; 2 Eq. Ca. Ab. 309, pl. 13.

(8) 1 Ves. 57.

(9) 3 Atk. 260.

(10) 3 Atk. 656 ; 1 Ves. 86.

(11) 2 Atk. 172. That case appears to be stated more correctly 2 Ves. 2. The following abstract is taken from the Register's Book :

Power to George Ward by deed or will to charge the premises with any sum not exceeding 2000L.

George Ward, having made his will, dated the 25th of April, 1726, and thereby wicke according to the report in Atkyns states, that " where there is a general power given or reserved to a person for such uses, intents and purposes, as he shall appoint, this makes it his absolute estate ; and gives him such a dominion over it as will subject it to his debts."

* Mr. Alexander and Mr. Fonblanche, for the Defendants.—This is, not the absolute property of the party, but [* 504] a power to be executed in a particular manner. According to the statement in the great case of Lord Townshend v. Windham (1) there was an appointment of the whole in Bainton v. Ward; and Lord Hardwicke's opinion is expressed in Lord Townshend v. Windham, that it will not do without executing the power. In Tollet v. Tollet (2) the distinction is taken between a defective execution and a non-execution of a power : this Court in the particular cases aiding the former ; but not the latter. All the cases cited fall within the distinction ; there having been an execution in all of them. The rule may be harsh in not going this length in favor of creditors : but it must prevail. In this case there is total absence of intention to execute. In many instances the date of the will is brought down to that of the codicil (3) ; but this codicil is quite distinct ; and does not look to the power. This is not like Tomlinson v. Dighton ; in which the question was, whether the effect was not to enlarge the estate.

Mr. Romilly, in reply.—It is very difficult to find a reason for the distinction between the defective execution and the non-execution of a power : as is observed in Lassells v. Lord Cornwallis. The case, that approaches nearest to this, is Lord Townshend v. Windham : but it turned entirely upon the particular circumstances. As to the point of republication, the objection is, that the thing, to which the Will applied, did not exist at the date of the codicil : but the effect of this codicil, annexed to the Will, duly executed, is to make the * whole speak at that date. It is therefore a republication of the Will, and an execution of the power. [* 505] taking notice of the said deed and power, devised to his mother, the said Phoebe Ward, 500*l.* ; to the said Defendants Lætitia and Anne, 1000*l.* ; and the remaining 500*l.* to his wife Isabella ; and made her sole executrix ; and charged the premises with the said 2000*l.* legacies ; and died without issue, indebted to the Plaintiffs and others.

The decree declared, that the sum of 2000*l.*, with the interest thereof, which the said George Ward had power to appoint by virtue of the said deed of the 12th of February, 1725, and of which he made an appointment by his will, is to be considered as part of his personal estate, liable to the satisfaction of the residue of his said debts. Reg. Lib. A. 1740, folio 613. See post, vol. xii. 215.

A case frequently referred to upon this subject under the title of Shirley v. Lord Ferrers, before Lord Talbot, is probably Lord Ferrers v. Lady Ferrers, Reg. Lib. A. 1733, folio 285 ; the date of which, 7th of December, 1733, corresponds with the case in the beginning of Forester. That decree however does not appear to include a decision of this point.

(1) 2 Ves. 1.

(2) 2 P. Will. 489.

(3) Pigott v. Waller, ante, 98.

Aug. 5th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—The question in this cause is, whether the sum of 2000*l.* which Sir John Coghill had power to raise, should be considered assets for his debts. The creditors contend, first, that he has executed the power. If he has, there is an end of the question. If he has not, secondly, they insist, that this sum is substantially his property; as he had an absolute power to appoint it.

As to the first point, it is clear, the only power in existence at his death was created by the deed of 1787. The power reserved by the marriage settlement was discharged for valuable consideration. That power he had executed by his Will. But the power itself being gone before his death, the Will had nothing to operate upon; unless it can be applied to the new power, created for appointing the same sum, to be raised out of different estates. It is admitted, he has not directly executed the new power. But it is said, that subsequent to the creation of it, he executed a codicil that has the effect of republishing the Will, and making it speak as at the time of the republication. Be it so. It speaks only of the power given by the marriage settlement; which was as much gone, as if it never had existed. There is no way, in which the will can be made to speak of the new power, for a new consideration, affecting different estates. I am clearly of opinion, there is no execution of this power.

[* 506] * Upon the second point, there is an evident difference between a power and an absolute right of property: not so much with regard to the party possessing the power, as to the party to be affected by the execution of it. If our attention is to be confined to the former entirely, there is no reason, why the money he has a right to raise should not be considered his property, as much as a debt he has right to recover. But the latter can only be charged in the manner, and to the extent, specified at the creation of the power. The compact is not to raise 2000*l.* absolutely, and in all events; but, that it may be raised in a certain manner: namely, according to his appointment by deed or will, to be duly executed, and attested by two or more witnesses. To say, that without a deed or will this sum shall be raised, is to subject the owner of the estate to a charge in a case, in which he never consented to bear it. The chance, that it may never be executed, or, that it may not be executed in the manner prescribed, is an advantage he secures to himself by the agreement; and which no one has a right to take from him. In this respect there is no difference between a non-execution and a defective execution of a power. By the compact the estate ought not to be charged in either case. It is difficult therefore to discover a sound principle for the authority this Court assumes for aiding a defective execution in certain cases. If the intention of the party possessing the power is to be regarded, and not the interest of the party to be affected by the execution, that intention ought to be executed, wherever it is manifested; for the owner of the estate has nothing to do with the purpose. To him it is indifferent, whether it is to be exercised for a creditor or a volunteer. . But if the interest of the party to be affected by the execution is to be regarded, why in any case exercise the power, except in the form and manner prescribed? He is an absolute stranger to the equity between the possessor of the power and the party, in whose favor it is intended to be executed.

As against the debtor it is right, that he should * pay. [*507] But what equity is there for the creditor to have the money raised out of the estate of a third person in a case, in which it was never agreed that it should be raised? The owner is not heard to say, it will be a grievous burthen, and of no merit or utility. He is told, the case provided for exists: it is formally right: he has nothing to do with the purpose. But upon a defect, which this Court is called upon to supply, he is not permitted to retort this argument; and to say, it is not formally right: the case provided for does not exist; and he has nothing to do with the purpose. In the sort of equity upon this subject there is some want of equality. But the rule is perfectly settled; and, though perhaps with some violation of principle, with no practical inconvenience. But farther than supplying a defect in the execution the Court has never gone. In Lassells v. Lord Cornwallis the Lord Keeper says (1), that "the Court has not gone so far as, where a man has a power to raise money, if he neglect to execute that power, to do it for him; although he thought it might be reasonable enough, and agreeable to equity in favor of creditors."

At the opening I was strongly impressed with an idea, that there was no authority for the proposition contended for by the creditors. None was adduced, except some generality of expression in Atkyns's statement of the judgment in Bainton v. Ward. There is no such general proposition necessary to the decision of that case; for the whole sum was appointed; in which particular the statement is more correct, as introduced. (2) in the Report of Lord Townshend v. Windham; and there Lord Hardwicke lays it down expressly, that without an appointment no person could be entitled to the money; though the power was as large as in this instance. It was *argued, that because the Court will for creditors lay hold [*508] of the money, when it is appointed for a volunteer (3), the Court ought to lay hold of it for them, though there is no appointment; for in the former case the application is against his intention. But in the given case the money is already raised by a due execution of the power; and the Court only directs the application. It does not follow, that by its own act it shall charge the estate, when the power is not executed, nor attempted to be executed. Many of the cases cited determine only, that a limited gift to a man, with a power to dispose of the thing given, will carry the ownership. But there is no doubt, this is a power in the proper sense of the word;

(1) 2 Vern. 465.

(2) 2 Ves. 2.

(3) George v. Milbanke, post, vol. ix. 190.

and the power not having been executed, I am of opinion, the money cannot be raised (1).

1. With respect to the distinction between absolute property, and a right of enjoyment for life, coupled with a power of appointment by will, see, ante, note 3 to Bull v. Vardy, 1 V. 270. And that (with a single exception as to powers vested, beneficially, in a bankrupt) no effect can be given to a power not coupled with an interest, which has been left unexecuted by the donee, see notes 1, 2, and 6 to the same just cited case. But, where a person in debt has a general power of appointment, and has taken any step towards appointing to volunteers, a Court of Equity will arrest the fund in transitu, in favor of creditors. Harrington v. Harte, 1 Cox, 132; Townsend v. Wyndham, 2 Ves. Sen. 11. And, where there has been any act done, indicating an intention to execute a power, and such intended execution is supported by a meritorious consideration, equity will aid the transaction. A due execution must, of course, be the same both in Courts of Law and Courts of Equity; but a Court of Law cannot give effect to an imperfect execution, whilst a Court of Equity will, in proper cases, enforce the substantial intention of the person executing. Wytham v. Wytham, 18 Ves. 415; Parry v. Brown, 2 Freem. 171; Butcher v. Butcher, 9 Ves. 394; Campbell v. Leach, Ambl. 749. A defective appointment, even to a mere stranger and without any sort of consideration, may be supported, in equity, when the defect has been occasioned by the fraud of a person interested in the non-execution of the power. Bath and Montague's case, 3 Cha. Ca. 67, 93, 122; Bagot v. Oughton, Fortescue, 333; Pigot v. Penrice, Comyns, 254. See, also, Shannon v. Bradstreet, 1 Sch. & Lef. 73, the Anonymous case, 2 Freem. 224, and Blore v. Sutton, 3 Meriv. 247, that even a remainder-man may be compelled to make good a lease, professedly granted by the tenant for life under a power, when such remainder-man, with full knowledge that the power has been exceeded, or not properly executed, has lain by, and has suffered the tenant to expend money on the estate, without giving notice of an intention to dispute the validity of the lease.

2. Since the statute of 55 Geo. III. c. 199, a previous surrender to the uses of the testator's will is no longer necessary to render testamentary dispositions of copyhold valid.

(1) This decree affirmed by Lord Erskine, C. upon appeal: post, vol. xii. 206. See Reid v. Shergold, x. 370; Hizon v. Oliver, xiii. 108, and the note, ante, ii. 594; Doe on Dem. of Thorley v. Thorley, 10 East, 438.

TRIMMER v. BAYNE.

[1802, August 6.]

PAROL evidence admissible to rebut a presumption (a), without regard to the nature of it; as, whether a mere casual conversation with a stranger, or between the parties and upon the subject; or whether at the time of the transaction, previous or subsequent. But those circumstances are very material with reference to the weight and efficacy of it, (b).

Presumed satisfaction of a legacy by a portion: the evidence not being sufficient to rebut the presumption, (a).

Distinction as to satisfaction between the cases of double portions and performance of a covenant, [p. 515.]

In the former small circumstances of difference are overlooked (c), [p. 515.]

Where the executor is trustee of the residue for the next of kin, parol declarations previous and subsequent to the Will, as well as at the time, are admissible: but their weight and efficacy very different (d), [p. 517.]

JOHN BAYNE by his will, dated at Calcutta, the 11th of January, 1790, gave, devised, and bequeathed, to Alexander Bayne, and four other persons, all his estate real and personal, that he should die possessed of or entitled unto, subject to the following trusts and payment of all his just debts and the legacies in that his will mentioned; out of which estate he gave, devised, and bequeathed, the sum of 5000*l.* upon trust for his natural daughter Jean Read; the interest whereof to be paid yearly to the said Jean Read, as long as the said Jean Read shall continue sole, on her own receipt or order in writing; and he directed, that upon the marriage of the said Jean, or if she shall be married at the time of his decease, his [* 509]

(a) See 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1531; where a certain presumption would in general be deduced from the nature of an act, such presumption may be repelled by extrinsic evidence showing the intention to be otherwise. Greenl. Ev. pt. 2, ch. 15, § 296; Coot v. Boyd, 2 Bro. C. C. 522; Osborn v. Duke of Leeds, ante, 5 V. 381, note (a), and cases cited.

(b) In Shudal v. Jekyll, 2 Atk. 516; Ellison v. Cookson, 1 Ves. jun. 100; Debese v. Munn, 2 Bro. C. C. 165, 519; Ellison v. Cookson, 2 Bro. C. C. 307; 3 ib. 60; Robinson v. Whitley, 9 Ves. 577, the declarations that were admitted were made to the persons interested, or to those connected with the interested persons, as relative, agent, &c.; and in these cases the declarations were held of the first importance. So declarations made to a stranger are important, if they bear a general character of seriousness and veracity. Dwyer v. Lyaghi, 2 Ball & Beat. 156. But vague, frivolous or evasive discourse, addressed to officious and intrusive inquiries, is altogether void of force. Mathews on Presump. 145, 146; Trimmer v. Bayne, the principal case. See also 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1114; Gay v. Sharpe, 1 Mylne & Keene, 589; Baugh v. Read, ante, 1 V. 257, and note (b); Ellison v. Cookson, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 309, note (b); 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 955-957.

As to the comparative force and effect of declarations made before, at the time of, or after making the will, see Murless v. Franklin, 1 Swanst. 13; Langham v. Sandford, 2 Meriv. 23; Conolly v. Lord Howe, 5 Ves. 700; Richardson v. Watson, 4 Barn. & Adol. 787; Whittaker v. Tatham, 7 Bingh. 628.

(c) 2 Story, Eq. Jur. § 1111, and cases cited in the notes; Powys v. Mansfield, 6 Sim. 328; Weall v. Rice, 2 Russ. & Mylne, 251, 267, 268; Jones v. Morgan, 2 Young & Coll. 403, 412; Wharton v. Durham, 3 Mylne & Keene, 479.

(d) 1 Greenl. Ev. pt. 2, ch. 15, § 296; 3 Phill. Ev. (Cowen & Hill's notes, ed. 1839,) 1495, 1496, 1497; Mathews, Presump. Ev. 188-193.

said trustees do pay to the said Jean Read the said sum of 5000*l.* for her own sole use and benefit for ever on her own receipt for the same, notwithstanding her coverture ; and he did thereby charge his said estate with the payment of the said interest and sum of 5000*l.*, as aforesaid.

The testator then, after giving several other legacies and annuities, charged in the same manner upon his said estate, declared his will that in case his said natural daughter, the said Jean Read, should die unmarried, the said sum of 5000*l.*, so bequeathed as aforesaid, shall revert to his said estate, as also the annuity, granted to his sister Cecelia, on the death of his said sister ; and that, after the payment of all and every the respective legacies so bequeathed and particularly expressed, as aforesaid, he gave, devised, and bequeathed, the rest and residue of his fortune and estate, both real and personal, to be equally divided between his nephew and three nieces.

The testator after making his will came to England ; and purchased and contracted to purchase freehold estates. By indentures, dated the 3d of December, 1794, reciting the intended marriage of William Kirby Trimmer and Jean Read, the testator's natural daughter, and that the testator agreed to advance to Trimmer 2000*l.* immediately on the marriage in part of the portion of Jean Read, and also to secure by his bond the farther sum of 5000*l.* to Trimmer, to be paid him within twelve months after the decease of Bayne, with interest from the day of his death, to be applied upon the trusts in the said indenture mentioned ; and that Trimmer agreed to secure by his bond the payment of 5000*l.* within twelve months after his decease with interest from his death, upon the trusts therein also mentioned, and that bonds were executed accordingly, it

[* 510] * was witnessed, that the said bonds were in trust in the first place, in case the marriage should take effect, that the trustees should receive the said sums of 5000*l.* and 5000*l.*, when respectively payable, and invest the same in Government or real securities, and stand possessed of such funds upon the following trusts ; in case the 5000*l.* secured by the bond of John Bayne should become payable during the joint lives of William Kirby Trimmer and Jane his wife, then that the trustees should pay to or authorize the said Jane Bayne or her assigns, to receive the interest, dividends, &c., during her life, for such intents and purposes as she should from time to time notwithstanding her coverture direct or appoint by any writing under her hand ; and in default thereof to pay the same into the proper hands of the said Jane Bayne for her own sole use ; and that her receipt should be a sufficient discharge for the same ; and not to be subject to the debts, control, &c. of her said intended husband ; and after her decease upon trust from time to time to pay to or empower William Kirby Trimmer and his assigns to receive the interest, &c., during his natural life, for his and their own use ; and as to the sum of 5000*l.* secured by the bond of Trimmer, in case Jane Bayne should survive him, upon a similar trust for her benefit ; and after the decease of the survivor of them to assign and transfer the capital of the said sums of 5000*l.* and 5000*l.* or the securities to and between all and every or any child or children of the marriage in such shares and proportions, and at such ages or times, and subject to such conditions, &c., as therein mentioned; and in case there should not be any child, or all should die before the age of twenty-one or the marriage of daughters, to assign, &c., the sum secured by the bond of Trimmer according to his appointment, in default thereof to his executors, &c.; and the sum secured by the bond of John Bayne, according to his appointment, &c. in the * same manner; and John Bayne covenanted, for [* 511] payment of the sum of 2000*l.* to Trimmer immediately upon the marriage.

The marriage took place; and the testator paid Trimmer 500*l.* in part of the 2000*l.*: but the remainder of that sum and the 5000*l.* upon the bond of the testator continued due, the former to Trimmer, the latter to the trustees, at the death of the testator.

Upon the bill of Mr. and Mrs. Trimmer on behalf of themselves and all other the specialty creditors and legatees of the testator the accounts were taken and the real estates sold. The Master's Report stated the instruments and circumstances above mentioned, and the result of the accounts and produce of the sales, and the contracts entered into by the testator for the purchase of freehold and leasehold estates, after the date of his will.

The cause coming on for farther directions, the question was whether the legacy of 5000*l.* to Mrs. Trimmer was deemed by the portion provided by the testator upon her marriage.

The Plaintiffs went into parol evidence, to rebut the presumption: the material part consisting of the depositions of a Mrs. Brown; stating conversations with the testator in the month of August preceding the date of the settlement; the effect of which was, that the witness being informed by him of the intended marriage of his daughter, asked him, what fortune he intended to give her. He told her 5000*l.*; and being pressed to give more, said, "she is in my will;" intimating, when pressed to give the whole immediately, that he was worth but 10,000*l.*

* Mr. Alexander, Mr. Romilly, and Mr. Harvey, for the [* 512] Plaintiffs.—The presumption of intention to satisfy a legacy by the advancement of a portion is now a positive rule laid down by the Court to govern them as to the acts of the party. It is equally clear, that evidence must be admitted to show, that the testator did not intend to satisfy the legacy by the portion. The last case, in which this subject was very fully considered, is Ellison v. Cookson (1). Lord Thurlow thought (2), there was no great reason to be satisfied either with the presumption, or the way, in which it is got rid of: but he says, he must presume the testator to be apprised of it, as a rule of law. The evidence of this cause gives the most satisfactory information, that this testator did not so understand it. The natural presumption is, that by not revoking the will he intended, it should take effect. If however the other presumption has become the law of the country, and the mere circumstance of advancing a portion is of itself a revocation, still if there is satisfactory evidence, that the testator did not know the effect of that advancement, to revoke the legacy, that is the most satisfactory evidence, that he did intend both provisions to take effect. Your Lordship has thrown out a difficulty; that, after this conversation took place, a considerable advance was made by the father, and upon the occasion of that very marriage; which shows a different intention between the time of the conversation and the marriage. But the case of Debeze v. Mann (1) has exactly the same circumstance: the sum of 600*l.* was advanced after the marriage, but upon occasion of the marriage: viz. to buy furniture. The conversation with Mrs. Brown accounts for his giving 7000*l.* instead of 5000*l.* The contracts he had entered into made * it inconvenient to him to advance the money as he intended. There is an analogy between this sort of case and the cases of implied revocation of a will; as by marriage and the birth of a child (2). This a presumptive revocation of that part of the will. As in those cases, the presumption may be rebutted: that is, if it appears, the testator did mean, that his child should take the benefit under the will. Lord Thurlow's way of considering it in Ellison v. Cookson is very accurate.

(1) 2 Bro. C. C. 307; 3 Bro. C. C. 61; ante, vol. i. 100; see the notes, 112, 259.

(2) Ante, vol. i. 109.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Richards, and Mr. Cox, for the Defendants.— There is no evidence in this case, that can defeat the general rule of presumption, perhaps unfortunately laid down as a rule. Lord Thurlow considers (3) these presumptions as presumptions of law, and therefore not to be sent to a Jury; and yet they are to be met by evidence. It is unfortunate: but this Court has laid down these general rules; calling them presumptions of law; and it is impossible to refuse evidence certainly; as no presumption can stand longer than till the contrary is shown. The parol evidence can amount to nothing, unless it satisfies the Court, that he intended 7000*l.* by the settlement, and 5000*l.* by the will. This evidence is as doubtful as can be imagined; very unlike that in Debeze v. Mann; which, though slight, is the evidence of the father of the husband; that the father of the wife told him, he could only give her 1000*l.*, on her marriage; but she would have more hereafter; as his life was a bad one. The only explanation of that is, that she would have more at his death. The conversation was between two persons, standing in the place of parents to the parties: their attention drawn to the subject. This is mere gossiping conversation; having no reference to the subject * of the settlement; applicable to

(1) 2 Bro. C. C. 165.

(2) See Ex parte The Earl of Ilchester, ante, 348: where this subject is discussed, and the principal authorities referred to. Gibbons v. Caunt, vol. iv. 840; and the note, 848.

(3) Ante, vol. i. 108.

the intention several months before. The witness had nothing to do with it; and the question was a surprise upon the testator; who never meant to enter into the discussion. There is the most marked distinction between the two cases. Ellison v. Cookson stands upon peculiar grounds. In the cases between the executors and next of kin (1) a strong distinction has been made between the time of executing the will and any other time (2); and very properly; for, how is the evidence of the intention at one time to evidence it at another?

Mr. Alexander in reply.—It is sufficient to support this claim to show, the testator understood, his will would operate; which upon the evidence is clear. Suppose, in the case of the executor and next of kin, which is analogous, the conversation had not been upon the express intention; but importred, that the testator understood, that a legacy to the executor would not turn him into a trustee: would not that be as prevailing as the most distinct declaration of intention? In those cases there is no objection to the declarations not being at the time of the will; and many decisions have been upon declarations subsequent. At all events there is only an ademption pro tanto, to the extent of 2000*l.*

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I do not hesitate upon this particular species of case to say, I give my opinion without a hope, that any decision will afford satisfaction to every one, who looks at the circumstances; and in a case of parol evidence; upon which it is not possible to hope, that the minds of all should concur.

It appears, that different Judges have * formed very different opinions upon the nature of the rule in this Court. It is obvious, that Lord Thurlow, if it had been res integra, would have disapproved the establishment of it; and Lord Kenyon in Ellison v. Cookson thought it a very wholesome rule. Many observations occur upon similar presumptions in the case of executor and next of kin; and Mr. Justice Buller went the length of intimating (3), that if he had sat here longer, he would have driven parol evidence out. I say nothing of the nature of any of these rules. It is clearly decided, that there is such a presumption. It is also clearly established, that parol evidence is admissible to rebut the presumption; and my business is drily to determine, whether the parol evidence in this case has sufficient weight and power to overthrow the presumption, which, it is admitted, must prima facie be applied. It is not the habit of this Court to direct an issue either upon a case of this kind or such as Nourse v. Finch (4): but the rule is settled, that where a parent, or a person in loco parentis, gives a legacy as a portion, and afterwards upon marriage or any other occasion calling for it advances in the nature of a portion to

(1) Ante, Nisbett v. Murray, vol. v. 149; and the references in the note, 158; Abbott v. Abbott, vi. 343; Urquhart v. King, ante, 225. See the note, vol. i. 362.

(2) Ante, vol. i. 359.

(3) Ante, vol. i. 357, in Nourse v. Finch.

(4) Ante, vol. i. 344.

that child, that will amount to an ademption of the gift by the will ; and this Court will presume, he meant to satisfy the one by the other (a). It differs from the performance or satisfaction of a covenant in this ; that the Court overlooks small differences in the circumstances of that, which is proposed to be given, and that, in satisfaction of which it is contended to be given (1). The Court does not inquire, whether the portion by the will is entirely and absolutely to the child ; or what is afterwards advanced in this form ;

[* 516] * a settlement upon marriage ; which not being a performance of a covenant or satisfaction of a debt, yet is a presumed satisfaction of the intended portion.

Under the circumstances of this case I do not conceive, that the fact of the limitations of this property upon the marriage can be such a difference with regard to what was intended by the will and advancement under the marriage contract, that upon that it can be said there is no ademption. In ordinary cases, without examining, whether it would be satisfactory to say, this Court should adopt this rule, if it were res integra, I think, if you came to the resolution not to adopt it, you would not say so in the particular case ; and it is well worthy of discussion, whether it should not prevail in this particular case, even if it was not to be stated as a general rule ; for the legacy is given by the will with express and peculiar reference to the marriage of the daughter ; looking to the fact or the event of marriage : being given as a provision for her sole and separate use to trustees to be paid upon her marriage, or if she should be married at his decease. Upon the treaty of marriage she had an inchoate title to the portion or fortune, to be paid upon her marriage under the will. It cannot be disputed, that if there was nothing more than the will and the settlement, the latter would be an ademption. The execution of it is a fact to be looked at as a fact of evidence. The settlement itself is very material evidence of the intention of the parties, and of the testator as one party ; for it is written evidence ; and also it is final evidence of his intention. But it is said, though upon the gifts provided by the settlement, and still more upon the recitals, what is given is to be taken as an advancement of portion, and therefore in ordinary cases an ademption, yet the evidence is so applied to the act done by the testator upon the 3d of December, 1794, the final act done by him, that [* 517] * under the circumstances the declarations are sufficient to control the admitted effect of the settlement in this Court.

(a) Jones v. Mason, 5 Rand, 577 ; Devereux v. Barnwell, 1 Dev. Eq. 497 ; Timberlake v. Huish, 5 Dana, 350, 351 ; Mathews, Presump. 183, et seq. ; 3 Phill. Ev. (Cowen & Hill's notes, ed. 1839,) 1493, 1494 ; Warren v. Warren, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 305, note (1), by Mr. Eden & Mr. Belt, 310, note (b) ; Baugh v. Reed, 3 ib. 192, and notes ; 1 Greenl. Ev. pt. 2, ch. 15, § 296 ; Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, ante, 3 V. 516, note (c), and cases cited.

(1) The same principle prevails in the case of double portions by a settlement and a subsequent will : Hinchcliffe v. Hinchcliffe, Sparkes v. Cator, ante, vol. iii. 516, 530. Personal estate under an intestacy no satisfaction : Twisden v. Twisden, post, vol. ix. 413.

In the case of Ellison v. Cookson I had a large share. I knew some of the parties very intimately; and am perfectly sure, the case was rightly decided. But it was decided upon grounds of imputation as to what the testator thought, meant, and knew, as to the rules of law; which he could not understand, even as to the terms, in which they are expressed. It was impossible to talk to the family upon the subject in terms, which they could understand. Debeze v. Mann was a much more simple case; upon this ground; that the father of one of the parties talking to the father of the other upon the subject of the marriage, used an expression, from which Lord Thurlow concluded, and it is clear he acted upon the idea, that that person using it stated to the other in that conversation, that what he then meant to advance would not be all; and connecting the future advance with his death, by the expression used about his life, as an advance at that time, the principle of that decision appears, that the advancement of the 600*l.*, together with the other sum advanced upon the marriage, would not within the meaning of that conversation satisfy what was given by the will: namely, the 1365*l.*; which therefore was not deemed.

The case of Ellison v. Cookson turned entirely upon this; and it shows the danger of this sort of parol evidence. Buck, a lawyer, and a very accurate man, clearly misunderstood old Cookson; and if that letter had not been written, Ellison would have got both. But Cookson being alarmed at hearing the import of the conversation, writes to show, that was not his meaning. I knew every branch of the family; and it was his determined [ 518] purpose, that, if his wife survived, the younger children should depend upon her, and not upon him. Therefore he said, he meant, it should fail, if his wife should survive him, and should not think proper to continue it. Lord Thurlow under those circumstances thought it altogether in the power of the widow. The principle is the same as that in Debeze v. Mann with regard to parol declarations. To take it in the case, where the executor is a trustee for the next of kin. I fear, there is no possibility of saying, parol declarations both previous and subsequent are not admissible; though Lord Coke would hardly have been brought to let them in as well as declarations at the time. But there is a very great difference, as also upon these marriage treaties, upon the point, whether they are all alike weighty and efficacious. A declaration at the time of making the will is of more consequence than one afterwards; and a declaration after the will as to what he had done (I am speaking as to the time merely) is entitled to more credit than one before the will as to what he intended to do: for that intention may very well be altered: but he knows what he has done; and is much more likely to speak correctly as to that, than as to what he proposes to do; though these parol declarations are all alike admissible; whether consisting of conversation with people, who have nothing to do with it, people making impertinent inquiries, and drawing from him angry answers, or in whatever form, they are all evidence.

But they are entitled to very different credit and weight according to the time and circumstances. In Debeze v. Mann the conversation between the two fathers upon the subject of the very contract, between two persons under a parental obligation to provide rationally for the interests of their children, upon every ground is entitled to much more weight than some others. So in Ellison v. Cookson; when old Ellison took the trouble to send a brother-in-law [* 519] to the country * to talk upon the subject; an authorized agent in the treaty; speaking of declarations between him and the principal, to settle the terms of the contract of marriage. That evidence has a character, that does not belong to such as occurs in this case.

It does not appear from the evidence of any man of business, of any person having an interest of affection, piety, or of any other kind, what hope was held out to Trimmer, other than by the instrument, as to what was to be the fortune. It does not appear, that Trimmer ever heard, this conversation with Mrs. Brown had passed. It was not therefore had among parties having any sort of interest. I do not say by any means, that therefore it is not evidence. It does not appear by any declaration of the testator, that he was anxious, Mrs. Brown should know any thing more than that a marriage was intended; or, that, unless she had provoked the conversation about the fortune, she would have heard a word about it. His answer to her question was neither true according to the will or the settlement in the sense, in which she understood it. It is clear from the conversation, the testator must have been satisfied, that he misled her, and that he meant to delude her; and this shows the danger from declarations, made perhaps with that view, and sometimes necessary to keep peace in families with persons having expectations. He gives very large bequests by his Will; and yet there he insinuates, that 10,000*l.* is his whole fortune. So he again endeavors to baffle this curiosity. That she understood it is very clear from her answer. It is clear, he must have known, he was baffling the inquiry. To keep her quiet he says, "She is in my Will;" that is, for part or the whole of that 10,000*l.* He intimates at the end, that he meant to keep part of the 10,000*l.* in his power. What [* 520] had passed in the *treaty in the mean time between any of the parties, principal, agent, or interested as husband and wife, does not at all appear. She attacks him again upon it at Teddington; and he makes the same sort of answer. It is clear upon her evidence, she had no idea, he was to advance more than 5000*l.* at that time. She does not intimate beyond that. Taking it at the highest as to his intention then, her understanding was, that he was to advance 5000*l.* upon the marriage: and she was in his Will; and that declaration would be evidence, provided you believe from the whole character of the conversation, that he was serious in talking to her; which for the purpose of this cause I will believe; and if the settlement had been 5000*l.*, and with this Will, upon the authorities she might have had a farther demand. According to the conversation Mrs. Trimmer was to have 5000*l.* immediately, and 5000*l.* more at her father's death. If under the contract, infusing the effect of the Will and the conversation into the case, 2000*l.* was advanced, there was 5000*l.* at his death under the settlement, and if there was no satisfaction, 5000*l.* under the Will ; or, as it has been put for the Plaintiff 3000*l.* I am clearly of opinion, it must be the 5000*l.*, if any thing : and it is not a pro tanto ademption. That there was this variation there is no direct evidence. First, how does it stand with the written contract ? The legacy is in a more strict sense given as a marriage portion than legacies usually are. Then, not merely to try the parol evidence against a mere advance and a covenant, but as against a declaration under the hand and seal of the testator himself, and an agreement upon marriage ; which is a representation and act by him, denoting his purpose subsequent to the conversation with Mrs. Brown. She presses him to an advance of some ready money ; and he makes up his mind to do so. The settlement is a * decla- [* 521] ration under his own hand, that by the portion he meant the 2000*l.* and the 5000*l.* It may be said, it is not inconsistent to add to it by this legacy : but it would be very extraordinary, and is not the natural meaning, that 2000*l.* should then be advanced, and 5000*l.* after his death upon these trusts ; and another sum of 5000*l.* or 3000*l.* should be paid to her upon his death for her separate use. That must necessarily be done upon Mrs. Brown's evidence.

It is said for the Plaintiff, it is clear, that at the time of the conversation he was not aware of this rule of law : or, if he was, he did not intend, it should operate. Then you must take the conversation to be a bona fide declaration of his real intention ; which is a great deal. But, beyond that, it does not necessarily follow by any means, that if he meant to advance 5000*l.* in August and leave a demand under the Will, therefore in December he meant to advance 2000*l.* in money, and agree to advance 5000*l.*, and then leave her her chance under the Will. To get rid of the settlement, as adeeming the legacy, there must be some declaration as to the effect of the settlement ; and I cannot infer, that because in August he did not understand the rule, or did not intend, it should have its natural effect, therefore having afterwards substituted a different provision he was uninformed of the rule, or meant, it should not apply to the legacy. I must suppose, unless the contrary is proved, that, when he did this act, he did understand the legal effect of it ; and then proof, that at a prior time he did not know it, or meant, that a different provision was not to have such effect, will not avoid the legal effect of it. That satisfies me, that it is impossible, the Plaintiff can have more than the 5000*l.* ; for if the ademption depends upon the circumstance, that he knew the rule, and meant it should take place, the argument for the 3000*l.* * must be upon [* 522] this ; that he knew, the 2000*l.* would adeem 2000*l.* of the legacy ; and knowing that he left it to adeem so much. But he could not know that at that time without also knowing, that the advance of 5000*l.* would deem the whole. I must take him to be ignorant of the rule altogether, or to know it throughout.

Upon the whole this evidence is not so connected with the act in December 1794 as to destroy the effect of that act; operating to an ademption of this legacy; and it would be extremely dangerous, however the evidence must be allowed as admissible, to say, such evidence is sufficient to prevent the operation of a clear settled rule of law; if it is not clear and satisfactory to that point, to which it must be, to rebut the presumption according to the clear settled rule, arising out of the effect of the settlement (1).

1. THAT a portion, and even a debt, is satisfied by a legacy of equal or greater amount; but that parol evidence will be let in to repel this prima facie presumption: see, ante, note 2 to Barclay v. Wainwright, 3 V. 462. And, as to the presumption against double provisions by a parent for a child, see note 6 to Blake v. Bunbury, 1 V. 194. With respect to the doctrines of satisfaction, and of performance, see note 3 to Wilson v. Pigott, 2 V. 531; and as to the distinction between cases of double portions, and of covenants, with reference to the question whether they are to be considered as satisfied or performed, see note 2 to Sparkes v. Cator, 3 V. 530.

2. With respect to the admissibility of parol evidence, both for the purpose of raising a presumption of trust against an executor, and, on the other hand, to repel any such presumption which would go to exclude the executor's legal claims, see note 3 to Nourse v. Finch, 1 V. 344; but that the parol declarations of a testator may be entitled to very different weight, according to the circumstances under which, and the times at which, they were made, see Pole v. Somers, 6 Ves. 324; Langham v. Sandford, 2 Meriv. 23; Usticke v. Bawden, 2 Addams, 128.

3. As to marshalling assets, see note 2 to Kightley v. Kightley, 2 V. 328, the note to Norman v. Morrel, 4 V. 769, and note 1 to Austen v. Halsey, 6 V. 475. And, with respect to the lien which every vendor retains on the estate he has sold, until his purchase-money is paid, unless he has accepted a distinct security, in complete substitution of that lien, see note 3 to Ex parte Hunter, 6 V. 94, and note 3 to Austen v. Halsey, ubi supra.

(1) See this case on other points, post, vol. ix. 209.

SIBLEY v. PERRY.

[1802, AUGUST 6, 9.]

THOUGH the word "issue" will comprehend all descendants upon the particular construction of this Will, it was confined to children, (a).

The Court will not take into consideration the amount of the property or the number of objects for the purpose of construing a Will, except in the case of a specific disposition (b), [p. 523.]

Legacies not specific without something marking the specific thing; as the description "my stock," &c. A mere direction to transfer, and that so much capital be kept in the same public fund, is not sufficient (c), [p. 523.]

Testator, having directed a transfer of 3 per cent. consols three months after his decease, gave several other legacies of stock "as aforesaid." Those words upon the whole Will referred to the description of the stock, not to the time of the transfer, [p. 523.]

An annuitant falls under the general character of legatee; unless distinguished by the testator; entitled therefore under a residuary bequest in favor of legatees, [p. 523.]

SAMUEL GRIFFITH by his Will, after some directions concerning his funeral, and giving to the Reverend John Sibley all his estate real and personal, in * trust for the payment of his [* 523] debts, funeral expenses, legacies, and bequests hereafter mentioned, proceeded thus :

"Thirdly, I will, that my said trustee, whom I do appoint my sole executor, do within three months after my decease transfer 1000*l.* stock in the public funds commonly styled the 3 per cents. Consolidated to each of my relations hereafter mentioned; viz. to Thomas, John, Robert, and Mary, the sons and daughter of Mr. Thomas Dickson or Dixon and Elizabeth his wife, late of Hannay in the said county of Chester, if they be living at the time of my decease; and if all or any of them shall die before I do, then I will, that the lawful issue of every one of them so dying before me shall share

(a) As to the sense of the word "issue," see Ram on Wills, ch. 7, p. 53, ch. 15, § 3, p. 115; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 810; Leigh v. Norbury, 13 Ves. 340; Bernard v. Montague, 1 Meriv. 434; Dalzell v. Welch, 2 Sim. 319; Hampson v. Brandwood, 1 Madd. 388; Orford v. Churchill, 3 Ves. & Bea. 67; Cursham v. Newland, 2 Bingh. N. C. 50; Hockley v. Mawbey, ante, 1 V. 150, note (3); Carter v. Bentall, 2 Beav. 551; Ferrill v. Talbott, Ril. Ch. Ca. 247; Kingsland v. Rapelye, 2 Edw. 1; Davenport v. Hanbury, ante, 3 V. 257, note (a).

(b) See Andrews v. Emmot, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 297-304, note (c); Fonnereau v. Poyntz, 1 ib. 472, 480, notes; Nannock v. Horton, ante, 391, note (b); Standen v. Standen, ante, 2 V. 589, note; Ram on Wills, § 22, p. 220.

(c) On the subject of specific legacies, when legacies are to be considered specific, and the leaning of Courts in reference to them, see Ashburner v. McGuire, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 114, note (i), and cases cited; Nesbitt v. Murray, ante, 5 V. 157, note (a), and cases cited; Simmons v. Vallance, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 349, 350, notes (c), and (d).

The word "my," preceding the word stock or annuities, has been several times adjudged sufficient to render the legacies specific. 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.) 841; Kirby v. Potter, ante, 4 V. 748, note (a), where many cases are collected; Davis v. Cain, 1 Ired. Eq. 304; Barton v. Cooke, ante, 5 V. 463, note.

and share alike have and enjoy that 1000*l.* stock, which their respective parents if living would have had and enjoyed."

"Fourthly, I give and bequeath unto John, the son of Robert Dickson or Dixon, late beer brewer of the said city of Chester, and of Elizabeth his wife, 1000*l.* stock as aforesaid if living at the time of my death, and to his lawful issue share and share alike if he the parent should then be dead.

"Fifthly, I give and bequeath unto my brother Mr. John Griffith 20*l.* sterling and my wearing apparel, and also an annuity of 50*l.* a year during the term of his natural life to be paid him by two equal half yearly payments of 25*l.* during his life; and I will, that so much capital sum be kept in the same public fund of 3 per cents. consols that the dividend half yearly thence arising will regularly and constantly allow him 25*l.* sterling every half year during his life; and I will have the first half yearly payment to com-[* 524] *mence and become due from the time whence the dividends thence arising become payable and thenceforward be paid regularly in proportion up to the day of his death.

"Sixthly, I likewise give and bequeath to my brother-in-law George Ramsey Esquire of Marlborough Buildings 150*l.* stock as aforesaid for mourning for himself and wife.

"Seventhly, I give and bequeath to each lawful issue who may be alive at the time of my death of my father's sisters whose names were Martha, Mary, and Rebecca, and who married persons of the names following, viz. Martha married Mr. Roger Parry or Perry, Mary married Mr. Robert Cowduck, and Rebecca married Mr. John Fearnall, all of whom were late of the city or county of Chester aforesaid, to each I say of them then living and lawful issue I give and bequeath 140*l.* stock as aforesaid.

"Eighthly, I give and bequeath to each of the lawful issue and also to the widow of the late Reverend Thomas Denson late curate of Dodleston near Chester 130*l.* stock as aforesaid if living at my decease.

"Ninthly, I give and bequeath to each of the lawful issue of Mr. Robert Denson late of Werwin near Chester who may be living at the time of my decease 120*l.* stock as aforesaid.

"Tenthly, I give and bequeath to Captain Anthony Gibbs of the Royal Navy and Frances his wife and likewise to each of their children who may be living at the time of my decease 140*l.* stock as aforesaid.

[* 525] * "Eleventhly, I give and bequeath to Mrs. Christian Rodd, the widow of the late Reverend John Rodd, Rector of Barton-on-the-Heath in Warwickshire, and also to each of her daughters Miss Christian Rodd and Mrs. Lucy Nash, the wife of the Reverend Mr. Nash of Euston in the county of Oxford, 130*l.* stock as aforesaid to each who shall be living at the time of my decease and likewise 50*l.* stock to Joseph the son of the Reverend Mr. Somerscales and Frances his wife; both of which are deceased.

"Twelfthly, I give and bequeath to Mrs. Frances Dayrell the wife of the Reverend Mr. Dayrell of Littlington Dayrell in the county of Berks, if living at the time of my death, 130*l.* stock as aforesaid.

" Thirteenthly, I give and bequeath to Miss Sophia Stubbs the particular friend of my late dearly beloved daughter who now lives with the Reverend Mr. Estwick at a church near Oundle 400*l.* stock as aforesaid, if she be living at the time of my decease.

" Fourteenthly, I give and bequeath to each of the daughters of the Reverend John Sibley my trustee and executor who shall be living at the time of my death 120*l.* stock as aforesaid."

The testator then, after some other legacies, to charities and individuals, with regard to all the residue of his estate real and personal gave and bequeathed it also in and upon trust to John Sibley to purchase land, wherever it may best and cheapest be done in any part of England or Wales, and to appropriate the same and all the rents and profits thence arising in trust for ever to the present vicar of Backford and to his successors for ever for the maintenance and support of a school in the said parish; where [ 526] all the poor children from the age of six to fourteen shall be instructed gratis in reading English, writing, and arithmetic, by a master appointed by the said vicar and his successors.

Lastly, the testator directed, that should any of the legacies or bequests before mentioned become void or lapse by reason of the death of any of the parties or on account of the Mortmain Act or the Statute of Limitations or for any other cause, his said trustee should divide the same among the other legatees in proportion to the several bequests before made to them.

The testator died in 1796. The bill was filed by the trustee; praying, that the Will should be established, and the accounts taken; and that the rights of the persons claiming may be declared; and particularly, what persons the testator meant by the description of lawful issue of his father's three sisters named in the Will, and of the Reverend Thomas Denson and Robert Denson; and if the said bequest to the charity should be declared void, that the residue may be divided among the Defendants or such other persons mentioned in the Will as the Court shall declare entitled. Upon the supposition, that grand-children and great grand-children were comprehended, the number of legatees would be so great as to exhaust the whole personal estate.

Mr. Mansfield, for some of the Children, was stopped by the Lord Chancellor; who observed, that in this Will the word "issue" must mean "children."

* Mr. Benyon, for some of the grand-children, and Mr. Alexander, for others, relied upon Parsley v. Freeman (1), in which the Lord Chancellor considered himself bound by authority against his opinion upon the meaning of the words, and Davenport v. Hanbury (2). As to the comparison of the quantity of the fund and the number of objects, they remarked, that it had been considered, that such a reference ought not to have been made in Andrews v. Emmot (1); that nothing dehors the Will can be produced to explain the words.

(1) Ante, vol. iii. 421.

(2) Ante, vol. iii. 257; see the note, 260.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I agree, we must go out of the Will. I also agree, we must find in the Will reason to limit the words. It is clear, in many clauses of this Will the testator meant children: where parents, and still more, where children are spoken of. Where he knows, the parents are living, he gives to them: Where they are not living, he gives to those he calls “lawful issue.” At present I think, it must be construed children (a).

The next day the Lord Chancellor expressed considerable doubt upon looking into the authorities, whether this opinion was not too hasty: and directed it to be spoken to.

Mr. Mansfield, Mr. Lloyd, Mr. Richards, and Mr. Whishaw, for the Children.—In some clauses of this Will, the third and fourth for instance, the testator has expressed himself so clearly, that there can be no doubt; and upon the true construction of the whole Will it must be so confined; though after the cases decided it must be admitted, that the word “issue,” may comprehend all descendants. Unless the Court is absolutely bound, * they will not construe a will in so irrational a way; but will rather feel an inclination to confine it; as in the case of legacies to relations it is confined according to the Statute of Distributions (2). So upon legacies to grand-children the Court has refused to extend it to great-grand-children. Having so distinctly pointed out children in several clauses, it is difficult to conceive, that he could mean anything else by that word in others. That is also the sense, in which testators generally use the word. The nature of the gift must be taken into consideration. To satisfy the extended sense of the word, he must have a very large property. The first rule in all writers upon law is, that instruments of all sorts are to be construed according to their subject matter. In Cole v. Rawlinson (3), where Lord Holt differed from the other Judges, they grounded themselves much upon the subject being a reversion; and that construction has always been considered as properly prevailing. The fifth clause shows, that was a specific legacy; directing that so much capital “be kept” in the same fund.

Mr. Benyon, in reply.—As to the subject-matter, in a case (4)

(1) 2 Bro. C. C. 297.

(a) The term “issue” when coupled with the word “parent” has been held to be a correlative term and to be taken in the sense of “children.” Davenport v. Hanbury, ante, 3 V. 257, note (a).

(2) 22 & 23 Char. II. c. 10.

(3) Salk. 234.

(4) See Doe v. Richards, 3 Term Rep. 356; Andrew v. Southouse, Denn v. Mellor, 5 Term Rep. 292, 558. The reversal of the latter judgment by the Court of Exchequer Chamber, 3 Anstr. 781; 1 Bos. & Pul. 558, was reversed in the House of Lords, and the judgment of the Court of King’s Bench affirmed; 7 Parl. Cas. 8vo. tit. “Will.”

before Lord Kenyon it was held, that it was impossible to look at the value of a charge upon an estate, devised, in order to decide, whether an estate for life or in fee passed. The word "children" has been construed "issue;" and the word "parent" is not confined to the father. It may mean grand-father. But upon this Will, *that argument is not required. The general nature [*529] of the clauses being quite different, and different words being used, the testator may be construed to have a different meaning. The case of Wythe v. Thurlston (1) is very strong for the general sense of the word "issue."

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I have not the least doubt, the actual intention of this testator was to give so much stock as he specifically had to persons under the word "issue," meaning children. But upon the authorities, and considering what might have been the case, if he had made any change whatever in the nature of the property, it is extremely difficult to put any other construction upon it as a Judge than that, which as an individual I have no doubt was the meaning. The testator contemplates the case of persons, of whose existence or non-existence he was not sure; giving to them in the first place: and if they should not be living at the time of his decease he substitutes other persons in their place; and upon all the authorities it must be admitted, that if in the third clause the words "respective parents" were not inserted, the words "lawful issue," must be extended beyond children. He gives first 1000*l.* stock specifically: so that the legacy would fail, if he should sell out the stock; though nothing could be more contrary to his actual intention than that, if he had sold out the stock, and placed the money upon a mortgage, the legacy should have failed. I have no doubt in private, that directing a transfer of stock he means to give what he has: but there is no case deciding, that it is specific, without something marking the specific thing, the very Corpus; without describing it as standing in his name or by the expression of "my stock," * &c. Here you must determine [*530] mine each legacy to be specific, before you can raise the argument; if it is admissible. Unless I can do that, unless I can say, his intention was, that the legacy should fail, if the stock was parted with, I cannot say, he meant the one or the other, because he happened to have so much Stock at the date of the Will; for otherwise there is no legal ground for that construction (2).

In the clause I have already referred to, it is fair to put the ordinary sense upon the word "parent:" namely, father or mother; and there the word "issue" means children. That is the more

(1) Amb. 555; 1 Ves. 196. See ante, vol. iii. 258.

(2) The inclination of the Court is against specific legacies. See ante, Chaworth v. Beech, Innes v. Johnson, Kirby v. Potter, vol. iv. 555, [note (a)], 568, 748, [note (a)], and the references in the note, 750; Raymond v. Brodbeck, Barton v. Cooke, v. 199, 461, [463, note (a)]; post, Webster v. Hale, viii. 410; Deane v. Test, Wilton v. Brownsmit, Fryer v. Morris, Smith v. Pybus, ix. 146, 180, 360, 566; Lambert v. Lambert, xi. 697; Gillaume v. Adderley, xv. 384; Apreece v. Apreece, 1 Ves. & Bea. 364.

strong upon the next clause ; in which it is clear, he did not mean grand-father by the expression, "if the parent should then be dead." Upon the fifth clause, directing, that so much capital be kept in the same fund, it was argued, that this legacy at least was specific. I am not aware judicially, that it is sufficient even for that legacy ; for there is nothing more in these words than in the expression "do transfer," in order to keep. The inclination of Courts has been indulged to such an extent, in order to prevent legacies from being disappointed in substance, and they have been so anxious to procure the legatees the bounty in some cases, that they have construed words, giving the specific Corpus as a direction to purchase that thing. But if this clause would necessarily make this specific, suppose, he had changed his property, and left no more than that stock ; the Court would have been much tortured in saying, that [* 531] because upon this particular expression this bequest is specific, therefore all the others are *specific ; not upon expressions contained in them ; but by reference to this particular legacy ; when that inference would have destroyed under those circumstances every other bounty contained in the Will. Therefore I do not think, if he had changed his property from the funds to mortgage, all the rest would have failed ; which must be the necessary consequence, if they are specific.

It is not to be forgot, that in all probability the children might be as old as himself. Upon all the cases this word prima facie will take in descendants beyond immediate issue. But on the other hand there is no denying (not applying to the state of the fund or the number of persons) that, if upon fair reasoning deduced from the words of the Will all the contents and the design and tenor of it, as manifested by its contents, show, it was meant in the more restrained sense, that sense may be given to it. The clauses of this Will, to which I have referred, show, the testator was likely to use the words "lawful issue" as descriptive of children only, and the question is, whether upon the whole Will taken together he did use them in that sense. Observe the tenor and design of the Will. It is to give to persons living, whom in some instances he states, and in others conjectures, to be living, certain funds, if they shall be alive at his death ; and, if dead, to substitute their issue, that is, children, in their room. Then he takes up the case of those he considers dead ; and gives to their lawful issue. Is it a strain beyond what the Court may go in the construction of the Will upon all its parts, to say, that, substituting children under the words "lawful issue" in the room of those he knew, and of those he conjectured, to be dead, but whom he would not pass over, as they might be living, where he treats the parents as dead, he meant the same [* 532] by the same words ? If that can be supported upon this Will, it applies also to the legacy to the *issue of Thomas Denson ; and though a small circumstance, it is not immaterial, that the gift to the issue is connected with that to the widow. I take the Will to mean, that in general he meant to give to children, that he has given to children eo nomine; that he has given to children under the name of daughters and by the terms "lawful issue;" and that in different parts as to many of the legacies he has considered "children, daughters," and "lawful issue," synonymous. Then does so much of the Will upon the whole face of the Will itself furnish a fair ground for saying, that as to two or three particular legacies he meant what in every other part of the Will he meant by those terms? Upon the whole Will I incline to the opinion, that he meant children.

I have stated the grounds of my opinion, as I should be extremely sorry, if this case had passed with as little observation as was near being thrown upon it; for at last I have not so much confidence in my opinion, to have altered the contrary determination, if it had come before me upon appeal. Cases of this kind, considering the precedent authorities, ought not to pass without observation. This decision is not right unless upon the construction furnished by the different parts of this Will. I lay no stress upon the state of the fund or the number of persons: as to the first for this reason; that, before I could raise the question, I must determine, whether these are specific legacies, or not: if not, and I am to resort to the ground, that has been taken, that then the testator must have a very large fortune, there is great difficulty in reconciling the judgment upon that principle to decided cases; for as to that there is no difference between this and Andrews v. Emmot. It was there argued, that the testator had not property enough without that, which was the subject of the power; and therefore he must have intended to comprehend that. *No, said the Court, you [*533] cannot go into that: you cannot inquire into the state of his property at the date of the Will, his expectations, &c.: the Will not being to operate till a future time, there would be no end of it. So in this case, if upon the face of the Will he must be held to have given general legacies of stock, it must be so; and, whether he had money to buy it, or not, cannot be taken into consideration upon the construction of this Will. The case Mr. Benyon alluded to was very clear; for where a person is to pay absolutely out of what is given to him, it signifies very little, whether what he is to pay is more or less; and whether the estate is large or inconsiderable; for he may die, before he has received any thing. Another case, before Lord Mansfield, was thought pretty strong; where it was decided, that you are to inquire into the value, to determine, what is the limitation: but there the testator having recited, that he meant equally valuable interests to each of the devisees, that recital justified the Court in looking at the value of the interest given to one, in order to determine, how extensive the interest of the others should be; whether it should be equal to the value of that, which in clear and unambiguous terms he had given to one:

I shall express the ground of my opinion in the declaration. Declare, that upon the true construction of this will and the whole of it taken together the testator by the words "lawful issue" in these clauses meant children; and the distribution shall be accordingly (1).

A few days afterwards the Lord Chancellor intimated, that all these bequests of stock were under the effect of the words "as aforesaid" to be valued as transferred at the end of three months after the testator's death. Upon that point the cause stood for judgment.

[* 534]

Aug. 17th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—There are not words enough in this will to support my idea, that the stock was to be transferred at the end of three months after the death of the testator; except as to the fund of 1000*l.*, expressly directed to be transferred at that time; which is therefore clearly to be valued at that time. With regard to all the rest except one there is not a word to make it specific: nor is there, what he might mean, any word in the bequest of any, that can be construed as denoting the time, at which the transfer was to be made, except the words "as aforesaid:" but upon the whole will I apprehend they mean only "3 per cent. consols;" and I am the rather of that opinion; as in some bequests the expression is "stock aforesaid;" not "as aforesaid;" in others only "stock." The consequence is therefore as to those, with respect to which no time is mentioned, the value must be taken at the end of a year, the usual time.

The annuitant is clearly entitled to a share of the residue. The rule is, that an annuitant will fall under the general character of legatee, unless there is something, as in Nannock v. Horton (2), to show, the testator himself distinguished between them. In that I found myself upon the case of the Duke of Bolton's Will; upon which Lord Thurlow held, that, legacies being charged upon real estate, annuities were charged upon the real estate as legacies (3).

1. THAT the construction put on the word "issue," when used in a will, is not inflexible, but may be varied so as to give effect to the intention of the testator, in the particular instance which happens to be under consideration, see, ante, notes 1 and 2 to Hockley v. Mawbey, 1 V. 143.

2. As to the criterion of a specific legacy, see the notes to Coleman v. Coleman, 2 V. 639; and that a specific legacy is an immediate gift of the fund, with all its produce, see note 2 to Kirby v. Potter, 4 V. 748. Courts of Equity always incline to hold a legacy to be pecuniary, rather than specific: see note 2 to Chaworth v. Beach, 4 V. 555.

3. The state of a testator's property at the date of his will is not to be gone into, in general cases, for the purpose of explaining the words he has made use of; but this rule admits possible exceptions: see notes 4 and 5 to Blake v. Bungay, 1 V. 194.

4. Unless the context of the will by which they are both given distinguishes them, legacies and annuities will be subject to the same incidents: see note 3 to Nannock v. Horton, 7 V. 391.

(1) Hampson v. Brandwood, 1 Madd. 381.

(2) Ante, 391.

(3) Ante, 402.

JACKSON v. JACKSON.

[ROLLS.—1802, AUGUST 10.]

CONSTRUCTION of a Will, giving a vested interest, though subject to a contingent charge (a) ; and creating a tenancy in common as to part of the property, and as to the residue a joint-tenancy ; there being nothing to control the legal effect of the words (b).

PAUL JACKSON by his will, dated the 17th of November, 1786, after giving his wife Mary Jackson all his household goods and furniture, plate, linen, beds, bedding, and all other his implements of household, as therein mentioned, gave and devised to William Pear-eth, William Coulson, and Anthony Hopper, their heirs and assigns, a house in Newcastle, to hold to them and the survivor and his heirs ; upon trust, that they should with all convenient speed sell and dispose of his said messuage and premises ; and as to the moneys to arise from the sale he willed, that the same should be placed out in the public funds by and in the names of his said trustees, in case his said wife should survive him ; and that the clear half yearly dividends of the same should from time to time be paid unto his said wife during her life for her own use ; and from and after the decease of his said wife, in case she survived, he directed, that his said trustees should sell and transfer the moneys so directed to be placed out in the funds as aforesaid, and should pay the money to be produced by such sale and transfer to and equally between his two daughters Mary and Matilda or to the survivor of them (if one of them should happen to be then dead) in part-discharge of the two legacies of 1200*l.* a-piece, thereafter bequeathed to his two daughters : but in case his said wife should not survive him, then he directed, that his said trustees should pay the moneys to arise by the sale of his said messuage and premises to and equally between his said two daughters or to the survivor of them (if one of them should happen to be then dead) in part-discharge of the said two legacies of 1200*l.* a-piece.

* And as to all other his messuages, lands, and tenements, [* 536] and hereditaments, pottery mills, copperas work, mortgages in fee or otherwise, ready money, securities for money, and all other his estate and effects whatsoever real or personal, he gave and devised the same to his said trustees for ever ; upon trust in the first place for the better securing the payment unto his said wife or her assigns of the annuity of 80*l.* thereafter by him bequeathed unto her for her life ; and in the next place for securing during the life of his said wife the payment of interest after the rate of 4 per cent. per annum to his said two daughters or the survivor of them, for the said two legacies of 1200*l.*; and from and after the decease of his said wife and full payment of the said two legacies of 1200*l.* then upon trust for such purposes as hereinafter mentioned.

(a) See Branstrom v. Wilkinson, ante, 421, note (a), and cases cited ; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 1026 ; Barnes v. Allen, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 182 ; Dawson v. Kille, ib., 123, note (a).

(b) In America, the title by joint tenancy is very much reduced in extent, and the incident of survivorship is still more extensively destroyed, except in cases where it is proper and necessary ; as in the case of titles held by trustees. Freeman v. Reife, 2 Bro. C. C. 224 ; 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 361. So in case of conveyances to husband and wife. 4 Kent, 362. See also Stratton v. Best, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 240, note (a) ; Russell v. Long, ante, 4 V. 551, note (a).

For words that are held to create a tenancy in common, see Drayton v. Drayton, 1 Desaus, 329 ; Bunch v. Hurst, 3 Desaus, 288 ; Westcote v. Cady, 5 John. Ch. 334 ; Bolger v. Mackell, ante, 5 V. 509, note (b).

The testator then gave to his said wife one clear annuity of 80*l.*; and to his daughter Mary 1200*l.*, and to his daughter Matilda 1200*l.*; and in case either of his said daughters should be dead at the time of his decease not having been married, or should after his decease die not having been married, then he willed, that the survivor should have and take the legacy of her sister so dying ; and that the said two sums of 1200*l.* each should be paid and payable at such times and with such rate of interest, as therein mentioned ; and subject to his said wife's annuity of 80*l.* and also charged with the payment of interest for said two legacies of 1200*l.* during the life of his said wife unto his said daughters he gave all the residue and remainder of his real estate whatsoever, and all his mortgages in fee or otherwise, and all his leasehold estates with all benefit and claim of renewal of and in the same respectively, and all other his personal estate whatsoever, except his household goods and furniture to be and enure unto the said trustees for ever ; upon trust [* 537] * to permit his said two sons William Jackson and Colling-wood Forster Jackson to enter upon all his said real estates, and to occupy and possess the same at and for reasonable rents, if they his two sons should think fit, and also upon his said leasehold estates, and into the several branches of trade and business, in which he was or should be engaged or interested at the time of his decease, and jointly to manage and carry on the same under the direction and inspection of his said trustees to the best advantage, that could be made thereof or gotten therefrom during the life of his said wife ; and from and after her decease and sale of his said messuage then upon trust by and out of the rents and profits, of his said messuage the proceeds of his said trades and businesses, and by the sale or conversion of all or any part of his personal estates to raise and pay and make up unto his said two daughters or the survivor of them all such sums of money as the moneys arising from the sale of his said messuage should fall short, and as should be necessary to make up and discharge the said two legacies of 1200*l.* each unto his said two daughters : but, nevertheless, in case his said wife survived him more than twelve months, it was his will, that his said two sons should not be compelled to raise or to pay and discharge all such money as should be short, as aforesaid, at one time or in one payment, nor to raise or pay above 400*l.* in any one year for and towards the making up his said daughters' legacies as aforesaid ; and from and after full payment and discharge of said two legacies of 1200*l.* each and all interest for the same, as aforesaid, then he directed all the residue and remainder of the said trust estates to go and to be unto and for the only use and behoof of his said two sons William Jackson and Collingwood Forster Jackson, and the survivor of them, their or his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns for ever, according to the several and * respective natures and tenures of [* 538] such estates ; and to and for no other use, intent, and purpose, whatsoever ; to take and hold his said real estates and every part thereof, in case his said two sons should both survive him as tenants in common and not as joint tenants ; and he appointed the trustees his executors.

The testator died in 1787 : leaving his widow and the four children mentioned in his will surviving. The widow died in 1798. The two sons of the testator carried on together the different businesses, in which he was engaged, upon leasehold premises, the trustees interfering very little, till the death of William Jackson ; paying the annuity to the widow, and the interest of the legacies to the daughters.

The bill was filed by Mary Jackson, the widow and sole executrix and residuary legatee of William Jackson, against the surviving brother and the trustees ; praying an account ; and that the Plaintiff may be declared entitled to a moiety of the leasehold premises and the stock and effects of the partnership carried on by William Jackson and his brother, and also of all the residue of the personal estate, &c.

The Defendant Collingwood Forster Jackson by his answer claimed the leasehold premises and other effects, and also all moneys arisen from the said trades in the life of William Jackson, and the stock purchased by them, subject to the legacies to his sisters ; stating, that William Jackson died before they were paid ; and submitting therefore, that he did not take any vested interest in the residue of the personal estate or the produce thereof : or if he did, that he and the Defendant took the same as joint tenants ; and nothing was done to sever the joint tenancy.

* Evidence was produced on both sides : for the Plaintiff, that the sons carried on business from the death of the testator in equal shares : for the Defendants, as to their transactions ; that a treaty took place for their carrying on the business under the trustees at an annual salary, till the legacies should be paid, and the trusts of the will finally settled ; and then the whole to be given up to them. The legacies of the sisters were not quite settled at the death of William Jackson.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Steele, for the Plaintiff.—Mr. Lloyd and Mr. Bell, for the Defendants.

Aug. 10. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—It is impossible to be quite certain, what the meaning of this testator was : but, when we have got the general meaning, we must not reject that, merely because we cannot get at a systematic design. It was PETTIWARD v. PRESCOTT.

[ROLLS.—1802, JUNE 21; AUGUST 10.]

THE heir claiming under a Will, and against it a copyhold estate, unsurrendered, put to his election (a).

Device of "my copyhold estate at P. consisting of three tenements, and now under lease," &c., but not specifying for what interest; an estate for life only passes (b), [p. 541.]

Account of rents and profits confined to the filing of the bill under special circumstances; as laches by the Cestui que trust in not asserting his right (c), [p. 542.]

RICHARD ASTLEY by his Will, dated the 15th of February, 1778, gave and bequeathed to his brother John Astley 1500*l.*; and discharged him from all debts due to the testator at the time of his decease, whether by bond or mortgage, with all interest due upon the same; and he gave to Roger Pettward a copyhold estate in the following manner: "I give to Roger Pettward my copyhold estate at Putney, consisting of three tenements, and now under lease to" A. B. "for a term of 14 years at the yearly rent of 30*l.*"

The testator then gave all the residue and remainder of his estate, not disposed of by his Will, to his said brother.

[* 542] The testator died in December 1780. Afterwards it * was discovered, that on the surrender of the testator and his wife of the copyhold estate at Putney, they were admitted to the use of themselves for their lives and the life of the survivor, and after the death of the survivor to the use of such person or persons, for such estate or estates as they or the survivor should by any deed or writing executed in the presence of two or more witnesses appoint; and in default thereof to the use of the right heirs of the survivor for ever.

The testator survived his wife. No appointment was executed; and the Will was not attested by two witnesses. Upon the death of the testator his brother and heir John Astley was admitted; and having surrendered to the use of his Will, dated the 9th of November, 1787, he devised all his copyhold estates at Putney, among other estates, subject to a trust by mortgage or sale to discharge his debts and legacies. He died on the 14th of November following. The trustees under his Will mortgaged the copyhold estate at Putney with other estates.

The Bill was filed upon the 6th of June 1799 by Roger Pettward; praying, that the Will of Richard Astley may be confirmed,

(a) See as to election, Buttrice v. Broadhurst, ante, 1 V. 171, note (a); Blake v. Bunbury, ib. 514, note (a). S. C. 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 21, 28, and cases cited; 2 Story, Eq. Jur. 1077, et seq., and notes; 2 Williams, Executors, (2d Am. ed.), 1033–1040.

(b) In a devise without limitation to the devisee and his heirs, a life estate only passes, unless there be a manifest intention to give a fee. Wait v. Belding, 24 Pick. 129, 133; Cook v. Holmes, 11 Mass. 528, 531.

(c) See Andrew v. Wrigley, 4 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844), 125, 138, notes; Delorraine v. Browne, 3 ib. 633, &c., and notes; Yate v. Moseley, ante, 5 V. 480, note (a).

and the copyhold estate surrendered to the Plaintiff and his heirs discharged from the mortgage; and an account; charging the mortgagee with notice; and that John Astley was indebted to the testator; and was benefited by the Will to a much greater amount than the value of the estate; and was therefore bound to confirm the devise.

The answer of the trustees under the Will of John Astley stated, that the Plaintiff's mother, to each of whose children a legacy of 100l. was given by the Will of Richard Astley, refusing to perform an agreement for the demise of a house, which was disposed of by the Will, an arrangement took place; under which John Astley was to take the copyhold estate, the Plaintiff was [ 543] to have his legacy; and the house was to be given up to his mother; and under that agreement John Astley was admitted; and continued in possession till his death; and considered himself absolutely entitled; and afterwards mortgaged that estate with others, and submitted, whether under the circumstances, and particularly as the Plaintiff has acquiesced so great a length of time under the arrangement, and permitted John Astley and those claiming under him to be in possession for near twenty years without making any claim, the premises ought to be surrendered; insisting, that if the Plaintiff has any right, he has only an estate for life, and not an estate of inheritance; and that the reversion in fee subject to his life interest was well devised.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Leach, for the Plaintiff insisted, that there was no case, in which the word "estate" has been limited to mere locality; though expressions to that effect have been thrown out; and that the mere description, in what the property consists, cannot effect it.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Pemberton, for the Defendant. The word "estate" may mean either the land or the interest in it; and standing alone may be understood to mean both. But, where the testator goes on, as in this instance, to explain what he means, "consisting of 3 tenements," &c. it is exactly the same as if he had not used the word "estate." There are many cases, in which the word, used generally, has been held not to mean any thing but the land devised. Others have turned upon the words "in" and "at;" deciding, that the one would, the other would not, carry the fee: Barry v. Edgeworth (1). Fletcher v. Smiton (2) is a strong authority for limiting the words in this case. The Plaintiff therefore * could only be entitled to an estate for life. [* 544]

The account at all events must be confined to six years at most.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—The word "estate" in this Will must be intended to carry the whole interest. No decision has been made upon the distinction between the words "at" and "in;"

(1) 2 P. Will. 523; 1 Eq. Ca. Abr. 178, pl. 18.

(2) 2 Term Rep. B. R. 656.

which has no sense in it. The word may be qualified ; but it is enough to say, these words do not qualify it. It must be admitted, that if the devise had been expressed " all my copyhold estate at Putney," that would have done. The word "estate" carries more than "land." The description was for the purpose of distinguishing it from all his other property : or if he has none, it may be accounted for by habit.

Upon the other point, the Plaintiff is entitled to insist upon the account for the whole time ; and is not to be limited to six years. There is no instance of so confining the account, where there is a trustee ; as this Defendant admits himself to have been, receiving the rents, since 1780. No Statute of Limitations applies here. The property belongs to the Plaintiff, the Cestui que trust ; and under the circumstances the rents and profits also belong to him.

Aug. 10th. The MASTER OF THE ROLLS, [Sir WILLIAM GRANT]. —It is not disputed by the Defendants, that this was a case of election ; they elect to take under the Will. Perhaps, if it had been res integra, whether in the case of an unsurrendered copyhold, upon which the Will can have no operation, the heir should [* 545] be put to election, *that would have borne a question.

It is however settled, that he shall (1).

But for the Defendants it is insisted, the Plaintiff takes only an estate for life ; and that the account of the rents and profits ought to be only from the filing of the bill. Upon the construction of the Defendants I would have made a case, if the parties had not wished, that I should take upon myself the decision of the question ; the property being small. At an early period it was doubted, whether the word "estate" merely was to be applied to the land only, or to the interest in it. It has been long settled, that it is of itself sufficient to carry the fee (a). But when words of locality, as "in" or "at" a particular place are added, the question is, whether they do not narrow and restrain the import of that word. So lately as Lord Talbot's time this was a subject of doubt and controversy. In Ibbetson v. Beckwith (2) it was strenuously argued, that under a devise of "all my estate" nothing passed but an estate for life. It does not appear from the Report, but is stated in a note in Peere Williams (3), that that case first came on at the Rolls ; where it was held, that the devisee took only an estate for life. Lord Talbot however was of opinion, not, as may be collected from his judgment, that these words of themselves necessarily imported a fee, but, that upon the whole will it was sufficiently apparent, that the devisor

(1) See post, Blunt v. Clitherow, vol. x. 589, and the note, 591 ; and upon election generally the notes, ante, vol. i. 523, 7.

(a) The words "all my real estate" give a fee. Godfrey v. Humphrey, 18 Pick. 537 ; Ram on Wills, ch. 7, p. 53 ; Joselyn v. Hutchinson, 21 Maine, 339 ; 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 535, 536 ; Whaley v. Jenkins, 3 Desaus. 80 ; Rashleigh v. Master, ante, 1 V. 285, note (4), 201, note (a), and cases cited.

(2) For. 157.

(3) 2 P. Will. 337.

meant a fee to pass. Some years afterwards Goodwyn v. Goodwyn (1) occurred before Lord Hardwicke; who expressed much doubt, whether the estate passes in fee by force of the words "all my estates." The question remained undecided; and no case very nearly resembling it has since received a decision. But both *Lord Mansfield and Lord Kenyon have stated opinions [*546] similar to that, to which Lord Hardwicke appears to have inclined: the former in Hogan v. Jackson (2); and in Fletcher v. Smiton Lord Kenyon says (3), "There are cases, in which nice distinctions have been taken between a devise of an estate at such a place and a devise of an estate in a particular place; and Lord Hardwicke alluded to it in the case cited in Vesey (4): but he added, that there is no case, in which it is held, that a fee passed by the devise of an estate, if the testator added to it 'in the occupation of any particular tenant.' And I admit that the word 'estate' may be so coupled with other words as to explain the general sense, in which it would otherwise be taken, and to confine it to mean farms and tenements. But that is not the present case: no such words are here superadded to estates."

The question here is, whether the superadded words do not clearly show, the devisor did not mean to speak of the quantity of his legal interest, but merely the Corpus, or subject, in the disposition. I am of opinion they do. The words are not "all my estate" but "my copyhold estate at Putney, consisting of 3 tenements, &c.": that is, "the estate I give you at Putney consists of 3 tenements;" which is the same as saying, "three tenements compose the estate I give you:" a mere description of the thing, and not of his interest (a). That he meant to give the houses absolutely there is little doubt. So a testator generally does, when giving under any description. But we must look at what he says; not, at what he thought.

With respect to the other point, there ought to be *no [*547] account beyond the filing of the bill. There is no infant, no breach of trust, in the case. John Astley lives and dies in the belief, that no claim was to be made upon him. Under that supposition he disposes. Upon that supposition those deriving under him deal with it: and after a lapse of time nearly sufficient to bar the legal remedy, if any there had been for the estate, this Plaintiff asks, not only the estate, but the whole rents and profits from the time the title accrued, which he has been so tardy in asserting. Constructively, it is true, the heir was a trustee of the rents and profits of the estate bound by the Will: but it does not follow, that he is always so. In Dormer v. Fortescue (5) Lord Hardwicke says, upon

(1) 1 Ves. 226; Charlton v. Taylor, 3 Ves. & Bea. 160.

(2) Cowp. 299.

(3) 2 Term Rep. B. R. 658.

(4) 1 Ves. 228.

(a) See 4 Kent, (5th ed.), 540. The words "I will and bequeath to my son R. one half of my plantation whereon I now live," were held to convey a fee. Dunlap v. Crawford, 2 McCord, Ch. 177. See Wilkinson v. Chapman, 3 Russ. 145.

(5) 3 Atk. 124.

special circumstances, even in case of a trust, the Court will restrain the account to the time of bringing the Bill ; and he specifies, as one instance, default and neglect in not filing the bill sooner ; and says the Court has often thought fit to restrain it (1). The Plaintiff therefore ought in this case to be restrained from carrying the account farther back.

1. THE necessity of a previous surrender to the use of the testator's will, in order to give validity to a bequest of copyhold property, is done away with, by stat. 55 Geo. III. c. 192.

2. That, as a general rule, a will disposing of freehold property, but not executed in conformity with the Statute of Frauds, cannot be read as against the heir, even for the purpose of putting him to his election, see note 3, to Ellis v. Smith, 1 V. 11; but, for a qualification of that rule, see note 7, to Thelluson v. Woodford, 4 V. 227.

3. Words of locality, or particular description, may restrain the full import to the word "estate," when used by a testator ; but, unless it be restricted to a narrower signification by the context of the will, the word "estate" is sufficient of carry the testator's whole estate, both real and personal ; and not merely a life interest in the real estate, but the fee : see note 4, to Rashleigh v. Master, 1 V. 201.

4. As to the time to which an account in equity is usually carried back, see note 8, to Lady Cavan v. Pulteney, 2 V. 544, and note 3, to Reade v. Reade, V. 5 744. The common limitation of accounts is not, however, necessarily applied to cases of trust accounts : Attorney-General v. The Brewers' Company, 1 Meriv. 498; see, also, Milnes v. Cooley, 4 Price, 108. In Warner v. Conduit, in E. T. 6 Geo. II. (Forrester's ms.), the Plaintiff's bill stated, that he, being related to Sir Isaac Newton, and putting great confidence in him, applied to him for his advice how to place out a sum of 1,400*l.* which the Plaintiff had lying by him. Sir Isaac said, if the Plaintiff would send it to him, he would take care of it ; upon which, the Plaintiff ordered his banker to pay the money to Sir Isaac, but to take no receipt for it : however, Sir Isaac gave him a note, acknowledging the receipt of the money, and promising to repay it on demand. Sir Isaac died intestate, about the year 1729, and administration was granted to the Defendants. The Plaintiff had brought an action at law, to which the administrators pleaded the Statute of Limitations, in bar. Upon which, the Plaintiff filed his bill in chancery, to have the 1,400*l.* repaid him ; the Defendants pleaded the statute, and farther answered, that the money delivered to Sir Isaac had been put into the funds, and there lost, and that Sir Isaac had often declared he owed nothing to the Plaintiff : and farther, that the Defendants, being administrators to Sir Isaac, appointed the Plaintiff to look over the papers of the deceased, and that he put several of the papers into his pocket, and burnt others, saying they were of no use, and that the Plaintiff never mentioned any thing of his demand, till he had been intrusted with these affairs. For the Plaintiff, it was said, that the Statute of Limitations could not prevail in this case, the money being delivered to Sir Isaac Newton only on trust, to be managed by him to the best advantage ; and, to prove this, the banker deposed he had directions to take no receipt, and the Defendants admit they believe the money was laid out in the funds, and there is no evidence that the stock was ever transferred to the Plaintiff. Lord Talbot, C. said, "No doubt, if money is delivered to any one upon trust, the Statute of Limitations shall in no case bar the demand. But here is no trust mentioned in the note, nor any evidence that it was a trust of any sort, except what appears from one of the Defendants' answers, and that is only that he heard Sir Isaac Newton had said so. It is certain Sir Isaac had the money, but what he did with it does not appear." The bill was dismissed.

(1) 3 Atk. 129, 130. See the references in the notes, ante, vol. vi. 215; v. 439

MORRIS v. PRESTON.

[1802, AUGUST 10, 12.]

An agreement in 1800 for a lease of a farm to a clergyman for the purpose of occupation is void under the statute 21 Hen. VIII. c. 13.
 A provision, in case of the death of a trustee, for substitution of another, and a conveyance by the survivor, so that he and the new trustee should be jointly interested in the trust, satisfied by the substitution of two trustees, after the death of both the former, and a conveyance by the heir of the survivor, [p. 547.] Whether a clergyman buying a lease, as property, or taking it by devolution of law, as next of kin, &c. is within the stat. 21 Hen. VIII. c. 13, quare, [p. 556.]

It was referred to the Master to inquire, whether the Defendants can make a good title to the estate in question ; and whether there is any lease or agreement for a lease existing of any part thereof ; and if there * were, it was ordered, that the Master [*548] should state any particular circumstances relating thereto ; and what compensation ought to be made to the Plaintiff in respect of such lease or agreement ; and an injunction was directed to restrain the Defendants from proceeding to a re-sale.

The Master by his Report certified, that the Defendants, could make a good title ; and that there was not any lease or agreement for a lease existing. The Defendant Elizabeth Preston, on the 2d of October, 1800, entered into a lease or an agreement for a lease with the Reverend William Gooch ; of which the following is a copy :

" An agreement made the 2d day of October, 1800, between Elizabeth Preston and William Gooch of Fetcham Clerk of the other part. Said Elizabeth Preston agrees to let and the said William Gooch agrees to take the messuage late the residence of Doctor Preston deceased and the lands which were in his own occupation and also the farm and lands belonging lately to the said Doctor Preston now of the said Elizabeth Preston in the occupation of Michael Steed and Edward Burrough for the term of 7 years at the rent of 70*l.* as to the messuage and lands late in the occupation of the said Doctor Preston and as to the lands in the occupation of Michael Steed and Edward Burrough such rent as shall be determined upon by two indifferent persons one to be chosen by each party or in case they shall not agree then by a third person to be previously chosen by the other two. The said William Gooch engages to lay out upon the premises a sum of money equal to 10*l.* a-year during the lease and the said Elizabeth Preston engages that the said William Gooch shall be at liberty to assign over the * premises [*549] to any person except the following, namely, George William Manby or any friend of his."

The Master stated, that the lands, stated to be late in the occupation of Doctor Preston and Steed, were the premises in question : yet he found, that the said lease or agreement was void under the Act 21 Henry the Eighth (1).

To this Report the Plaintiff took Exceptions:—First, that the Master certified, that the Defendants can make a good title: whereas he ought to have certified, that a good title cannot be made without the concurrence of William Crooke, the heir at law of Samuel Crooke; who was the surviving trustee in indentures of lease and release, dated the 7th and 8th of April, 1769.—Secondly, that the Master certified, that the lease or agreement for a lease, dated the 2d of October, 1800, is void under the Act 21 Henry the Eighth; whereas he ought to have certified, that the said lease or agreement is an existing lease or agreement for a lease; and to have stated, what compensation ought to be made to the Plaintiff in respect of such lease or agreement.

The first Exception turned upon the settlement by lease and release of the 7th and 8th of April, 1769, upon the marriage of the Defendant Mrs. Preston with her late husband Thomas Preston, and subsequent indentures of lease and release and appointment of the 28th and 29th of April, 1801. By the settlement of 1769 the estate was conveyed to William Jennings and Samuel Crooke, their heirs and assigns, to the following uses (after the marriage): to

Thomas Preston for life without impeachment of waste; [* 550] remainder to the said * William Jennings and Samuel Crooke and their heirs during the life of Thomas Preston, in trust to support contingent remainders; remainder to Elizabeth Preston and her assigns for her life in part of her jointure; with a similar remainder to Jennings and Crooke and their heirs during her life, to preserve contingent remainders; but nevertheless to permit the said Elizabeth Preston and her assigns to receive and take the rents and profits thereof to her and their own use; remainder to trustees for 500 years upon certain trusts; remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage successively in tail male; remainder to the daughter and daughters of the marriage as tenants in common in tail with cross remainders; remainder to Thomas Preston in fee.

In this settlement is contained the following proviso: First, that notwithstanding any of the limitations and trusts, it should be lawful for Jennings and Crooke, and the survivor of them, his heirs and assigns, from time to time and at all times during the lives of the said Thomas Preston and Elizabeth Pogson, his intended wife, and the life of the longest liver of them by and with the consent and approbation of the said Thomas Preston during his life or of the said Elizabeth Pogson after his death, in case she survived him, and at his or her request testified by writing under his or her hand and seal, signed in the presence of two or more credible witnesses, but not otherwise (inter alia) to sell and dispose of all and every or any of the said freehold messuages, lands, tenements, hereditaments, and premises, and for that purpose to revoke, annul, and make void, all and every of the estates, limitations, trusts, powers, provisos, and agreements therein before mentioned, declared, and contained, of and concerning the same; and to grant and release all and singular the said premises or any part or parts thereof to any person or persons, and his, her, or their, heirs, executors, or administrators, either together or in parcels respectively, for such price or prices in money or any such equivalent as to them or him should seem reasonable, and be consented to as aforesaid, and upon payment of the moneys to arise by any such sale or sales of any of the same premises respectively, or any part or parts thereof, when the same should be sold for a valuable consideration in money, which it is thereby agreed should be paid to and received by the said William Jennings and Samuel Crooke, or the survivor of them, and the heirs or assigns of such survivor, the said William Jennings and Samuel Crooke and the survivor of them, his heirs or assigns, should sign and give proper receipts for the money, for which the same should be so respectively sold; which receipt or receipts should be a sufficient discharge to such purchaser or purchasers for the purchase-money therein to be acknowledged or expressed to be received; and he, she, or they, or his, her, or their heirs, should not after any such receipt or receipts given be answerable or accountable for any loss, misapplication, or non-application, of such purchase-money so received, or any part thereof; and, when any of the said premises should be so sold for a valuable consideration in money, the same should from thenceforth for ever remain freed and discharged of and from all the uses, estates, trusts, declarations, provisos, and agreements, aforesaid.

Secondly.—Proviso, that in case of the death of any or either of the said trustees during the lives of the said Thomas Preston and Elizabeth Pogson, his intended wife, or the life of the survivor of them, they the said Thomas Preston and Elizabeth Pogson, or the survivor of them may by any writing or writings under his, her, or their hands and seals or hand and seal, attested by two or more credible witnesses, with the consent of the surviving co-* trustee or co-trustees nominate and appoint some other fit person or persons to be trustee or trustees of and in the said premises in the room or place of the trustee or trustees so dying; and that upon such nomination or appointment the surviving co-trustee shall convey and assign all and singular the said trust estates in such manner as that the said surviving trustee and trustees, and such person or persons so to be nominated and appointed shall from thenceforth be jointly and equally concerned and interested in the several trusts herein before expressed in the same manner as such surviving trustee and the person so dying would have been, in case he were living; and in like manner as often as any trustee shall happen to die during the lives of the said Thomas Preston and Elizabeth Pogson, or the life of the survivor of them, and they or the survivor of them shall nominate a new trustee with such consent as aforesaid, such new conveyance and assignment shall be made as is herein before mentioned.

By the indentures of 1801, reciting the settlement, and that Jennings and Samuel Crooke were both dead, and that Samuel Crooke survived Jennings, and William Crooke was his heir at law; and that Thomas Preston was also dead, and Elizabeth Preston had agreed to appoint the Defendants Sir Harry Goring and Thomas Sermon trustees, in the place and stead of Jennings and Samuel Crooke, it is witnessed, and Elizabeth Preston by that her deed, executed in the presence of and attested by two witnesses, did nominate and appoint Sir Harry Goring and Thomas Sermon to be trustees in the place and stead of the said Jennings and Samuel Crooke ; and directed William Crooke to convey to Sir Harry Goring and Thomas Sermon, their heirs and assigns, in such manner as should be necessary for the absolutely vesting the same in them, to and for the same uses, trusts, intents, and purposes, and subject [* 553] * to the like powers, provisos, declarations, and agreements as were declared by the aforesaid indenture of settlement ; and William Crooke (by the direction and appointment of Elizabeth Preston) did grant, release, and confirm unto Sir Harry Goring and Thomas Sermon, their heirs and assigns, all and singular the aforesaid premises : to hold unto the said Sir Harry Goring and Thomas Sermon, their heirs and assigns, to the same several uses, for the like intents and purposes, and under and subject to the same several powers, provisos, declarations, and agreements, as were expressed in the settlement ; to the end, that Sir Harry Goring and Thomas Sermon, and the survivor of them should act and be as trustees in the place and stead of the said William Jennings and Samuel Crooke deceased.

The first Exception was waived by the Plaintiff without argument.

The Attorney General [Hon. Spencer Perceval] and Mr. Harvey, in support of the second Exception.—The objection taken in support of the title is, that this is not a lease but an agreement ; and the Court could not compel the party to act upon it ; for, if carried into effect, it would be contrary to the Statute. The case of Hitchcock v. Thurland (1), shows the construction of the act ; for which it is difficult to find a reason certainly ; that such a lease made at this day is not void ; that the words "such leases" in the third section are to be considered with reference to those in the second section only, and not those in the first ; and therefore no lease is declared void but those existing at the date of the act, and not parted with before Michaelmas following. In Carter and Claycole's Case (2) * Periam refers to Leman's Case (3) ; upon which he founds his opinion. All these authorities, it must be admitted, go to leases, not agreements ; but under this agreement, coupled with the possession, it must be considered, that the party has an interest in a lease, if not for seven years, at least a lease from year to year, independent of any thing else. It is a personal undertaking on both parts. The phrase is "Elizabeth Preston agrees to let ; and the said William Gooch agrees to take ;" and afterwards

(1) 3 Leon. 122.

(2) 1 Leon. 306.

(3) Dy. 26.

she agrees, that Gooch shall be at liberty to assign over "the premises," not any lease. There is a great difference upon the point, whether Gooch intended it for his own occupation. He never did occupy it. The agreement was assigned to Wray; and possession had under that assignment.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—In Degge's Parson's Counsellor (1) and in Greg v. Lampley (2) it is represented, that no spiritual person not beneficed is within the Statute. That surprised me: but I was told, that it was right; for the theory of our Ecclesiastical constitution knows not the character of a clergyman unemployed. They must either be beneficed or Curates with stipends.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Fonblanche, for the Report.—The cases relied upon are very obscure; and the construction which they go to establish, confining the words to Michaelmas next, is extraordinary; for upon the words of the Statute it is impossible to doubt, the lease would be void. The inference is the other way. Watson (3) refers to Lord Hobart's reasoning (4) * upon [* 555] the policy of the Statute. With respect to Degge's Parson's Counsellor, suppose a deacon; who cannot have a benefice: is not he within the Statute? Could this agreement be enforced against the clergyman contrary to the Act? If it was not binding upon him, it is not upon the other. With regard to smuggled goods, though there is not such strong prohibitory language as this Statute contains, the Courts say, they will not hear of any contract against the Law. The Law knows no such thing as an assignment of an agreement. The power is to assign the premises: that is, those he has by Law.

The Attorney General, [Hon. Spencer Perceval], in reply,—Suppose an assignment of a lease: that would not be within the Act; for the penalty must be recovered against the spiritual person himself. Under the circumstances, executing this agreement would put Wray in possession, not Gooch; and therefore would not be against the Act; and his covenant is not to occupy.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The Master has not found, that this was a lease immediately assigned to another person. This case is new in its circumstances, and in some degree very difficult; for unless I can make out, that this is a legal agreement, and the lease, if executed, would be good, and also that the lessee would not be liable to the penalty, I do not see, how I can help you. This estate was sold with the possession represented to be vacant; and that might be made good; supposing, there was a tenant at will or from year to year. The objection is founded upon an agreement for a lease, not invalid from incapacity to grant, nor upon any objection from the imbecility of the party to contract; but upon the ground, that the Legislature has upon reasons of

(1) Page 140.

(2) In the Court of Exchequer.

(3) Wats. Clerg. Law, 361.

(4) Hob. 157, Colt v. Glover.

policy passed this Act. The purchaser liking his bargain desires this Court to consider the agreement and the lease under it as good, and to make him compensation. This Court is not at liberty to say, either is good, unless the Law has said so. If they are avoided by the Legislature, acting upon grounds of policy, this Court cannot be called upon to make such an arrangement at the instance of either party; to secure the enjoyment as effectually as if they were good; which is the necessary effect of compensation given by this Court. There can be no right to call upon the Court so to administer the law as to defeat an Act of Parliament. If on the other hand it is not void, but a penalty of 10*l.* a month is incurred, it is very difficult to give compensation upon that; for though the penalty might be recovered by any one, yet, as it is made the means of preventing the thing from taking place at all, I doubt, whether a Court of Equity can take notice of it, even to the effect we are considering. It is a different thing to say, it is good, first, upon the cases, secondly, as not taken for the purpose of personal farming by the lessee. Though I admit, I am much struck with the obscurity and the doctrine of those cases, it is too much for me upon such a point of Law, with those decided cases, and upon a subject of so much intricacy, to say, they are all wrong, without the assistance of a Court of Law. The last way, in which it was put, is very important; for it is a very serious question, whether a clergyman buying a lease, as property, or taking it by devolution of law, as next of kin for instance, or in any other way as a purchase, and not for the purpose of farming and occupying the land, but as property, to be managed with regard to him exactly as if a fee-simple estate descended upon him, is to be considered liable to the penalty, or the lease as void under the Act. The only difficulty therefore is as to the assignment to Wray; for [* 557] if the case * could be neatly stated thus, that he was a beneficed clergyman, and a lease was made to him in the terms of the agreement, and he assigned, not under-leased, and the question was, whether that lease was void, or whether he was liable to the penalties during the possession of the assignee, and a Court of Law would say, it was not void, and the lessee was not liable to the penalties, I think, the purchaser would be entitled to compensation. But, if it was bad, or by the occupation tainted, as against the policy of the Act, no suitor is entitled to complain, that a Court of Equity will not make an arrangement to defeat the intention of the Act. I shall reserve the question, whether it is possible to raise such a case, upon the points, whether the lease is void; whether Gooch during his possession was liable to the penalties; and whether he was liable to the penalties during the possession of his assignee. I admit, if he took it for his own personal occupation and farming, the agreement is bad; and it is very questionable, even if he took it, having an intention not to occupy it; and if he took possession, that would be evidence of his intention to occupy; and a subsequent change of intention would not make it good.

Aug. 12th. The Lord CHANCELLOR, [ELDON].—The best judgment I can make upon this case is, that the lease was taken by Gooch for the purpose of occupation ; and therefore was void ; and the purchaser consequently is not entitled to any allowance for it.

The Exception was over-ruled.

The laws relating to the holding of farms by spiritual persons have been consolidated by the statute 57 Geo. III. c. 99.

KNOLLYS v. ALCOCK.

[* 558]

[1802, AUGUST 11, 12.]

THE effect of Revocation in equity produced by an agreement for partition, in such a manner as to deprive the testatrix in equity of any interest in the estate devised; and the devisee disappointed has no right to compensation from the heir.

The agreement good to this effect ; though it cannot be precisely executed ; admitting compensation : Whether, if abandoned, the Will is set up again, quare (a), [p. 558.]

Mere partition, whether by compulsion or agreement, is not a revocation of a Will : but the slightest addition, as a power of appointment, prior to the limitation of the uses, is sufficient (b), [p. 564.]

THE decree pronounced by Lord Rosslyn in this cause (1) declared, that the agreement ought to be specifically performed ; and directed an inquiry to ascertain the value of the estates in the counties of Berks, Lincoln, and Oxford ; and ordered, that, if the Berk-

(a) Where a contract made by a testator for the sale of land devised by him is afterwards absolutely rescinded, by the mutual consent of the purchaser and testator, who is thus restored to his former title, and dies seised of the land, the devise is nevertheless revoked and gone forever. Walton v. Walton, 7 John. Ch. 273.

(b) Brydges v. Duchess of Chandos, ante, 2 V. 417 ; Barton v. Crozall, Taml. 164.

A testator devised his moiety of an estate, and then made partition. The estate was then conveyed as to one part to a trustee for the use of the testator in fee ; and a mortgage term, created by the co-tenant, in his moiety, was assigned to attend the inheritance, and this was held not to be a revocation of the will. Barton v. Crozall, Taml. 164.

Partition is considered a special case. Each party can compel the other to make partition. See Attorney General v. Vigor, 8 Ves. 281 ; Ward v. Moore, 4 Madd. 368 ; Rawlins v. Burgis, 2 Ves. & Bea. 382. The act of Partition therefore furnishes no evidence of intention to revoke. Any other change in the property by statute or operation of law will not work a revocation or ademption. Walton v. Walton, 7 Johns. Ch. 265, 268 ; Patridge v. Patridge, Cases Temp. Talbot, 226 ; Brown v. M'Guire, 1 Beat. 358. See also Basan v. Brandon, 8 Sim. 171, where the change was made without the knowledge of the testator. See Ashburner v. Macguire, 2 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 108.

See farther as to revocation by changes in the estate, Ballard v. Carter, 5 Pick. 112, 116, 117.

(1) Ante, vol. v. 648.

shire estate is of less value than the Lincolnshire estate, the Oxfordshire estate, or so much thereof as will be necessary to make the Berkshire estate equal with the Lincolnshire, shall be allotted to the Plaintiff; and for that purpose a Commission was directed to allot and set out the same. It was declared, that the devise of the Berkshire estate to the Defendants, the Martins, was revoked by the agreement; that Thomas Martin and all proper parties should join in conveying the same to the Plaintiff and his heirs. An account was directed of the rents and profits of the Berkshire estate come to the hands of Thomas Martin: the balance to be paid to the Plaintiff, deducting the costs of the Martins: the Martins and the Alcocks to produce all deeds, &c.; and the Plaintiff's costs to be paid by the Defendant Joseph Alcock.

A petition of re-hearing was presented by the Defendants, the Martins and Longmires, against so much of this decree as directed the agreement of November 1795 to be specifically performed, and declared the devise of the Berkshire estate revoked by the agreement; complaining also, that by the decree effect is given to the claim of the Plaintiff to be heir at law of Mrs. Prankard; though no evidence was adduced in the cause upon that point.

[* 559] * Mr. Richards, Mr. Stanley, and Mr. Leach, in support of the Petition.—At the date of this agreement the Plaintiff was aware of the conveyance to Alcock and his possession under it. The agreement was perfectly inefficient. It could not have any operation. At law there was no revocation. Mrs. Prankard had nothing in the Lincolnshire and Oxfordshire estates, the subject of the agreement; and the Plaintiff, it is proved, knew, that she could not then become a trustee for him. All he could be entitled to would be a partition between him and those claiming her moiety. A mere partition between two coparceners, whether by writ or commission, will not revoke a Will: Luther v. Kidby (1). Partition is inseparably incident to the estate; which is perhaps the most satisfactory reason. The parties are in of the same estate; and their interests are the same. A recovery, though for the purpose of confirming the Will, is a revocation; as by a fiction of law the devisor takes a new estate. This is only an engagement between these parties to do that without the aid of the law, which, if done by the law, would not be a revocation. There was no intention to revoke. It is not clear, that a mere agreement for an exchange revokes a Will. Whether an actual exchange does has been a considerable time a question: but if it has that effect, it must be upon the principle, that there is a different estate. The circumstance, that these estates are in different counties, makes no difference as to the intention; and forms no objection to the partition. Though the Sheriff cannot go into another county, Commissioners may; and may give a farm in one county to one, in

(1) 8 Vin. Abr. 148, pl. 30; 3 P. Will. 170, n.

Upon the law of Revocation, see Harmood v. Oglander, ante, vol. vi. 199; post, viii. 106; and the references in the notes, ante, vi. 201; ii. 437.

another to the other: but a partition in this Court cannot have more effect to revoke a Will than a partition at law. That upon a partition the parties may take respectively in different counties, and that it is not necessary, there should be an actual partition of each tenement, is proved by many authorities, in Viner (1) and Lord Coke (2); and the same rule prevails in equity: The Earl of Clarendon v. Hornby (3).

With respect to the conveyance to Alcock the argument was, that it was void, not as being voluntary, but as fraudulent; purporting upon the face of it to be upon consideration; and by the evidence appearing to have been without consideration. The Court therefore considered him entitled, not under the conveyance, but solely by the Will; proceeding upon the principle, that under those circumstances the conveyance was void, not only against others, but against the grantor herself. Assuming then, that she was complete owner, this is a mere agreement for a partition; and therefore no revocation.

The Plaintiff claiming as heir must prove himself heir. That point was insisted on: but no evidence was produced.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Hart, in support of the Decree.—By this agreement the whole of the Berkshire estate is given to the Plaintiff. Then there is an end of the devise of it. What can the devisee take under the Will? The estate is withdrawn. Exchanging it is just the same as selling it; and in this Court there is no difference, whether it is by agreement or actual conveyance. In the instance of a sale or exchange it is not, properly speaking, revocation: but the estate is taken away: it * is no longer [* 561] the estate of the devisor. The subject is gone; and there is nothing, upon which the Will can operate. A partition does not revoke the Will, where the devisee is one person: but it may operate as a revocation or ademption; as if a person seised as a coparcener of an estate in Surrey and another in Middlesex devises all his undivided moiety of the estate in Surry to A. and of that in Middlesex to B.; and afterwards agrees to relinquish his interest in the Surrey estate, and to take the entirety of that in Middlesex: the partition, so far as it does not disturb his interest in the Middlesex estate, is no revocation: and the devise will take effect so far: but as to the Surrey estate it is gone; and the additional interest acquired in Middlesex not being devised goes to the heir. This is that case precisely. The intention alluded to upon the question of revocation, as is stated in Hick v. Morse (4), is not an intention to revoke, but to have the estate in a different manner.

The Plaintiff does not claim the Berkshire estate as heir at law, but only as party to this agreement; by which the testatrix bound herself to convey; merely desiring to have the effect of his contract.

(1) 16 Vin. 231.

(2) Co. Lit. 169, a.

(3) 1 P. Will. 446.

(4) Amb. 215.

Alcock submitting to the decree does not put it to the Plaintiff to question, which of his titles is good.

Mr. Richards, in reply.—Though Alcock does not complain of this decree, these parties are entitled to complain of a decision, affecting their interests through an agreement respecting property, which did not belong to either of the parties. Such an agreement cannot be executed: it cannot have any effect; and therefore [* 562] cannot be a revocation of a Will. The parties * themselves must have considered it of no avail. No steps were taken by the Plaintiff to have it carried into execution. The testatrix did not mean to take from these devisees the benefits she had given them; and would not have left them in the situation, in which this decree has placed them. The Plaintiff not having proceeded to enforce the execution of the agreement during her life, what right has he now to do so? He must be considered as having abandoned it; even supposing it upon a subject she could bind.

The Plaintiff claims not only under the agreement, but also as heir at law; and the decree is open to objection in many shapes, if he is not heir. How can there be a division of all the interest of the testatrix without some one representing all her interest? The devisees of the Berkshire estate have a right to insist, that the heir shall indemnify them against the loss of that estate. He ought to be before the Court to sustain his right to what does not pass to Alcock; out of which the devisees are entitled to compensation.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—This struck me as a singular decree; though it is appealed from only as to one point. The bill is filed by this Plaintiff in two characters; for so the allegations of the Bill certainly represent him: 1st, as being under the agreement entitled to the whole Berkshire estate, and therefore the Martins being by the agreement deprived of all, that was devised to them: containing also a vast number of allegations as to Alcock: that the conveyance to him was void; that he was sufficiently paid; &c.; and dealing with him in part as if he could claim, not under the deed, but under the Will only: but still, whatever was his right, dealing with him; 2dly, as entitled in the character of heir at law. It [* 563] is very clear * from the report, Lord Rosslyn's notion was, that Alcock's claim was under the Will. At the same time the decree has no judicial declaration, whether he is entitled under the Deed or the Will. In some way or other the decree does consider him entitled: but judicially it declares nothing as to his title either by the Deed or the Will. The decree even makes him pay the costs; and yet it is not at all complained of by him.

The question upon this petition of rehearing is simply as to the interest of the Martins. I had a strong prejudice in my mind originally, that the Plaintiff ought to have proved himself heir: but upon consideration I have adopted the notion, that as against them it was not necessary to prove it; for he raises only this question of revocation in Equity by the agreement as against them; propounding that question, not as heir, but as claiming under the agreement. If there is no relation of heirship at all, that question he would have as distinct a right to raise with them, as if it was admitted, that he was heir. To get rid of this, it was put very ingeniously, and I admit in general cases, if a question of worth and value is to be agitated, and the Court feel it to be their duty to have that discussed, they will not decide upon it without every one sustaining any character, the rights resulting out of which can be affected by the decision, being a party; and if the question was of such value as to require the heir to be before the Court for the discussion, I admit, the record does not furnish a right to assert, that he is before the Court; for I should not have thought myself bound by their agreeing as joint heirs, if it turned out, that they were mistaken as to that; and either party might have had an interest to reform that error in subsequent transactions. But the question being so raised, I am not called upon as a Judge to require him to prove himself heir at the instance of the Martins; for in that * view of the question we must take [* 564] the agreement in Equity to be a revocation: if it is, there is no Equity upon the part of the devisees disappointed by the revocation to call upon the heir, who takes, to compensate to those devisees so disappointed by the revocation of the Will. There is nothing in the Will leading to that, or resulting out of the character of the heir; and there is not a scintilla in any of the transactions, upon which to ground such an Equity. Therefore the argument, though ingenious, is not solid, which requires me to say, the Plaintiff has not done enough upon this agreement to entitle him to a decision as to the Martins.

The question then is reduced to this; whether in Equity this agreement is a revocation; and it is admitted, that if it was good and practicable, when entered into, and it remained either altogether practicable, or so far practicable, that Equity would for the Plaintiff carry it into effect, either wholly, or by an arrangement, it will amount to a revocation, unless upon the doctrine as to partition. As to that it is settled, that if a partition is effected either by compulsion or agreement, and the thing done is nothing more than partition, it is not a revocation. The slightest addition to that purpose will make it, not as a partition, but on account of that slight addition, a revocation; and if parties will even introduce a power of appointment, prior to the limitation of the uses, that very slight circumstance, as it certainly would be considered, if it was res integra, is sufficient. But in every case, in which a conveyance or an agreement to make partition has been held not to work a revocation, the partition did not operate to this extent; that the party, whose Will is alleged to be revoked, had no interest left after the partition in the subject of the devise. If, for instance, the parties had nothing but an estate in Berkshire, and they agreed to make partition, and she had * devised all her estate, or all her estate in Berkshire, after the partition that would have been a moiety of the Berkshire estate; and it would have passed by the Will. But if it is made so, that the words of the devise cannot by [* 565] possibility amount to a description of the thing, how can it not be a revocation? This testatrix at her death has no Berkshire estate. Are the devisees to take an equivalent from the Lincolnshire and Oxfordshire estates, out of both, or which, or all of either? Suppose, instead of a partition, by which all the estate in one county was given to one, and all in the other to others, as in this instance, she had given part of the Berkshire estate only to the Martins, viz. tenements in a particular village, and at her death she had no estate in Berkshire; the Will could not operate upon other tenements in Lincolnshire and Oxfordshire. It seems therefore, that, taking it to be matter of partition, yet if the manner of it destroys the interest of the testator in the thing given, so that at his death there is no interest in him to answer the description, the devise cannot operate; as it cannot operate upon the thing given; and in a hundred cases you cannot say, upon what other subject it is to operate.

But it is said, an agreement in Equity is a revocation only, where it can be performed, and was not abandoned. As to the former, I do not admit, that it will not be an agreement in Equity, because it cannot be in ipsissimis terminis performed. There might be differences arising out of circumstances, that will leave this Court in full power to execute it; dealing with part; and compensating for that, which cannot be strictly dealt with. Upon that principle how does this stand? They deal together, as if they were joint heirs. It is not effectual then to say, the Plaintiff knew of the transaction with Alcock; for if so, still she must be taken to represent, that she knew how to deal with him: and if both were apprised, [* 566] that * Alcock meant to claim against them both, still that is no obstacle to the Plaintiff's coming against her for the Berkshire estate; desiring compensation for what she cannot give according to the agreement. Therefore if the deed was expressly declared good, that would not have afforded a sufficient obstacle to the agreement as to the Berkshire estate; if he chose to have a specific execution as to that. Then as to the abandonment, I do not admit, that, if there is an agreement in Equity, which at the moment is a completely operative revocation, a subsequent abandonment will of necessity set up the Will (a). I do not say, whether it would be so, or not; for I am of opinion, I cannot raise the question upon the fact. If he will have a right to a specific execution as to the Berkshire estate, he never abandoned that, nor a right stated in larger terms.

The necessary conclusion is, that the agreement was made in a manner, taking from the testatrix every interest in the estate she described in her Will. She had no interest at her death in that estate, and these Defendants are not founded in saying, her Will in Law or in Equity has passed to them any interest in any other estate; and if not, I cannot say, that, because the Will is disappointed by her own act as to the only estate devised, therefore they are entitled to take something, which it is difficult to describe, some estate, not expressed to be intended. The heir has all the benefit of absence of intention; and that can never give these Defendants a right. Therefore looking at this Decree altogether, I cannot think, it has miscarried upon this point.

(a) See, ante, 558, note (a).

The Decree was affirmed.

See the note to S. C. 5 V. 648.

MAUNDRELL v. MAUNDRELL.

[*567]

The Master of the Rolls for the Lord Chancellor.

[1802, MARCH 23; APRIL 12.]

A PURCHASER cannot protect himself against a claim of dower by a term attendant upon the inheritance, unless he has procured an assignment (a).

Husband having a power of appointment, paramount the right to dower, in default thereof to himself for life, remainder to his right heirs, if the power could have effect, yet a purchaser taking by a conveyance adapted to pass the interest in the estate, as a limitation of the fee, was held to take in that way, not by way of appointment, and therefore subject to dower (b), [p. 567.]

At Law all Terms are considered as Terms in gross (c); and therefore without regard to the purpose prevent a Dowress from any legal benefit from recovery in Dower: as she recovers with stay of execution during the Term. But equity regards the purpose, for which the Term is created and subsists; and, if only for the benefit of the owner of the inheritance, it is considered part of the inheritance, not absolutely merged, but so attendant as to accompany it, and every right and interest growing out of it by operation of law or agreement. Not to be used therefore against the owner of the whole or any part of the inheritance: every description of ownership having a use in the Term commensurate with the interest in the inheritance. When dower arises, therefore, the Term in a proportion is as much attendant upon that interest as during the husband's life upon the inheritance; and protects it against either heir or purchaser (d), [p. 578.]

Limitation to such uses as A. shall appoint; and in default of appointment to him in fee; the fee is in him until appointment (e), [p. 583.]

By the decree made in this cause an inquiry was directed, as to the right of the Plaintiff Sarah Maundrell to dower.

The Report stated indentures of lease and release, dated the 18th and 19th of May, 1756, being the marriage settlement of Thomas and Thomasin Maundrell; under which their eldest son Robert Maundrell being tenant in tail male of the settled estates in the

(a) 3 Sugden, Vend. & Purch. [47.] [48.] 31, 32, et seq., [75.] 47, 48; Wilkins v. Lynch, 1 Hayes, Exch. 98.

(b) See a full and acute discussion of this subject, in Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.) 81, et seq., ch. 1, § 5, subsec. 6, p. 302.

(c) 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 87, 88.

(d) See on this point, 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 88, 89.

(e) See this point examined in Sugden, Powers, (4th Lond. ed.) ch. 1, § 5, subsection 6, p. 81, et seq.; 4 Kent, (5th ed.) 348, 349.

county of Wilts, subject to a term in trust for raising portions, suffered a recovery to the use of his father for life; remainder to the use of himself, his heirs and assigns, subject to the term.

By deed poll, dated the 1st of January, 1790, Thomas Maundrell the father directed the trustee to raise the portions; and by another deed, dated the 25th of March, 1790, he surrendered the estates to his son, his heirs, &c., and Robert Maundrell covenanted to pay the portions to the other children.

By indentures of lease and release, dated the 30th and 31st of March, 1791, Robert Maundrell conveyed the settled estates among others (1) to James Read and Thomas Marsh Hughes, their heirs and assigns, to the use of such person and persons, and for such estate and estates, and for any term and terms of years, and chargeable with any sum or sums of money, and upon such trusts and for such purposes, and subject to such powers of revocation or declaration of uses, and such provisos and agreements, and in such other manner and form, as Robert Maundrell during his life should by deed or will (2) appoint; and in default thereof to the [* 568] use of * Robert Maundrell for life; and from and after his decease to the use of the right heirs of Robert Maundrell.

By articles, before and in contemplation of the marriage between Robert Maundrell and the Plaintiff Sarah Maundrell, dated the 15th of April, 1791, Robert Maundrell covenanted to pay to trustees within six months after the marriage 2000*l.*; upon trust to pay the interest thereof after his death to Sarah Maundrell for her life; and after her death, in trust for her children: but there was not any clause expressly or by legal inference excluding her from dower. The marriage took place on the 18th of April, 1791.

By indentures of lease and release, dated the 19th and 20th of February, 1795, reciting the settlement and other deeds before mentioned, and that Robert Maundrell was seized in fee of estates in the county of Wilts, not comprised in the settlement, Robert Maundrell in consideration of 7545*l.* 18*s.* paid, and of the covenant of Henry Maundrell for the payment of 4000*l.*, 2000*l.*, and 2000*l.*, conveyed the settled and unsettled estates in the county of Wilts to Henry Maundrell and William James Wray, their heirs and assigns, to the use of trustees for 4000 years; upon trust to raise 4000*l.* for portions under the trusts of a term of 500 years, also the sum of 2000*l.* and interest, due to John Tyler upon a mortgage to him by Robert Maundrell, dated the 1st of January, 1791, for a term of 2000 years, and the 2000*l.* under the marriage settlement of Robert Maundrell; and subject thereto to the use of Henry Maundrell and

(1) The Lord Chancellor upon the rehearing questions the correctness of the Master's Report in stating, that other estates, besides those included in the settlement of 1756, were conveyed by the indentures of March, 1791. Post, vol. x. 263, 8.

(2) Upon the rehearing the terms of the limitation appear to be to such uses, not, according to the Master's Report, as Robert Maundrell should by deed or will appoint, but as he should by any instrument in writing, sealed and delivered in the presence of two credible witnesses, or by his last Will, appoint. Post, vol. x. 263.

Wray, and the heirs and assigns of Wray, for ever; in trust as to the estate of Wray for Henry Maundrell, his heirs and assigns for ever(1).

Henry Maundrell entered under this conveyance

* The Master stated, that it appearing to him that the [*569] term of 2000 years created by the deeds of January 1791 for securing 2000*l.* and interest to Tyler is now outstanding and unsatisfied, and that Henry Maundrell is a fair purchaser for valuable consideration, he was of opinion, that the Plaintiff as against him is not entitled to dower either at Law or in Equity.

As to the other estates comprised in the settlement of 1756, wherein Robert Maundrell was entitled to an absolute estate in fee-simple, (subject to the mortgages and incumbrances after mentioned) the report stated, that by an indenture, dated the 7th of January, 1758, and a fine levied by Thomas Maundrell and Thomasin, his wife, tenant in tail, the estate was limited to such uses as they should jointly by deed appoint; and, in default of such appointment, to the use of Thomas Maundrell for life; remainder to the use of Thomasin for life; remainder to the use of such person as she should by Deed or Will appoint; and for want of appointment, to her right heirs for ever; and by indentures, dated the 22d of August, 1758, in consideration of 2700*l.* they appointed and demised to Abraham Poore for 1000 years, subject to redemption. That sum was afterwards paid off; and by indentures, dated the 24th of April, 1760, part of the lands comprised in the mortgage was assigned to William Ruddle for the remainder of the term, subject to redemption on payment of 300*l.*; and by a deed, dated the 25th of April, 1760, the residue of the lands was assigned to John Gaby, his executors, &c. for the remainder of the term; in trust for the use of such person and persons as Thomas and Thomasin Maundrell should during their joint lives by deed appoint; and in default thereof to the use of Thomas Maundrell for so many years of the term as he should live; with remainder in trust for the use of *Thomasin Maundrell for so many years of the [*570] term as should run out in her life; and after the death of the survivor in trust for such person as Thomasin should by Deed or Will appoint; in the default thereof to the use of the person or persons, to whom the inheritance should belong, and his, her, and their, heirs; to the intent, that the remainder of the same should attend the inheritance of the said premises.

By indentures of lease and release, dated the 13th and 14th of October, 1760, Thomas and Thomasin Maundrell in consideration of 1000*l.* conveyed great part of the lands, comprised in the deed of the 25th of April, 1760, to Seymour Wroughton, his heirs and assigns, subject to redemption on payment of 1000*l.* and interest; and upon the 14th of October, 1760, the residue of the 1000 years' term, vested in Gaby as to the same premises, was assigned to William Salmon in trust for Wroughton for the better securing the said 1000*l.* and interest. By indentures, dated the 6th of August, 1777, the representatives of Ruddle assigned the hereditaments, comprised in the deed of the 24th of April, 1760, to Wroughton for the residue of the term of 1000 years, as a farther security for 2000*l.* and interest then due to him.

(1) See the effect of this conveyance, as represented by the Lord Chancellor, post, vol. x. 268, in the judgment upon the rehearing.

The report farther stated, that the last mentioned hereditaments were comprised in the first mentioned settlement. Robert Maundrell paid Wroughton 2000*l.* and interest : but no conveyance or assignment of the estates vested in him was made at the time of such payment. By indentures, dated the 30th and 31st of May, 1793, in consideration of the principal and interest paid to Wroughton in his life and of 5*s.* to Lord Wenman, his heir at law, Lord Wenman released, and Thomas Maundrell in consideration of natural love and affection granted, ratified, and conveyed, to Robert Maundrell all the premises comprised in the indentures of the 13th and 14th of October, 1760 ; to hold unto and to the use of Robert [^{*571} Maundrell, his heirs and assigns. *By the said deed of the 31st of May, 1793, the personal representative of Wroughton assigned the hereditaments, comprised in the deed of the 24th of April, 1760, to William Hughes for the residue of the said term, in trust for Robert Maundrell, his heirs and assigns, and to attend the inheritance ; and by the indentures, dated the 31st of May, 1793, it was declared, that the personal representative of William Salmon should stand possessed of the premises assigned to him for the residue of the 1000 years in trust for Robert Maundrell, his heirs and assigns, and to attend the inheritance : by which conveyances of the 30th of May, and the 30th and 31st of May, 1793, it appeared, that Robert Maundrell became seised of the legal estates in fee of all the estates not comprised in the first mentioned settlement, subject to the said term of 1000 years. Robert Maundrell by the indentures of the 19th and 20th of February, 1795, conveyed all the aforesaid estates, not comprised in the first-mentioned settlement, and of which he was seised in fee.

The Master found therefore, that Robert Maundrell was seised during coverture of the legal estate or inheritance of the estate not comprised in the settlement : but it appearing to him, that the said term of 1000 years, though satisfied, was assigned in manner aforesaid expressly in trust to attend the inheritance, and which inheritance was afterwards purchased by and conveyed to Henry Maundrell in manner aforesaid, he was of opinion, the Plaintiff was not entitled to dower out of the last-mentioned estate, and therefore not out of any estate, of which Robert Maundrell was seised during the

[*572] ^{coverture.}

^{*An exception was taken by Sarah Maundrell to the Report.}

Mr. Alexander, in support of the Exception.—The cases of Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy (1), Swannock v. Lifford (2), and Willough-

(1) Show. P. C. 69; Pre. Ch. 65.

(2) See Mr. Butler's note to Co. Lit. 208 a; note, 105; Amb. 6; 2 Atk. 268, by the name of Hill v. Adams; ante, Wynn v. Williams, vol. v. 130.

by v. Willoughby (1), contain the whole law upon the subject ; and Lord Hardwicke expressly states, that an assignment of the term always made part of the condition ; and the same doctrine is laid down by the late Master of the Rolls ; that the purchaser should use diligence to get in the term. The way, in which the widow puts her right, is, that the trustee is trustee for the wife in respect of her dower, just as much as for the inheritance of the husband, being trustee for all the interests. This purchaser shows, he relied upon the covenant of the husband merely, not as a collateral security only, as in Swannock v. Lifford ; for otherwise he would have got an assignment of the term. The danger of shaking titles by adopting the distinction pointed out by Lord Hardwicke does not apply, from the invariable practice to have an assignment from the trustee or a declaration by him. That is universally understood to be necessary to give the purchaser the protection of the term ; and, if that is not done, the trustee remains trustee for the inheritance, as it stood previously to the purchase, viz. for all persons having interests, and for the purchaser, as far as he has acquired an interest. In the case of dower notice is immaterial. In any other case, as a puisne incumbrancer getting in a term, in order to squeeze out a prior incumbrancer, notice makes a difference. That is the only difference ; and * it never was suggested, that the puisne incumbrancer can [^{* 573} have the advantage of a term without getting it in. This purchaser not having taken an assignment of the term, the trustee is trustee for the widow. Lord Hardwicke said, he would not go beyond Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy ; and this would be going beyond it.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. Cooke, for the Purchaser, in support of the Report.—This case has never been decided : but the principle is fully established in the cases of Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy and Swannock v. Lifford. Lord Hardwicke could not mean, that the widow should be barred only in a case exactly similar in circumstances to Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy ; for Swannock v. Lifford was under circumstances totally different. Lord Hardwicke meant only, that he would not carry the principles farther. In this instance the Court is not desired to carry the principles farther. This is exactly within the principles of Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy. The only question is, whether taking an assignment to a trustee for the purchaser makes any difference. It cannot make the least difference. According to the express terms of the trust the trustee is trustee for the purpose to attend the inheritance : for all persons interested : a trustee then for the purchaser taking the estate. What difference would an assignment to another trustee make, which must be in precisely the same terms ? The argument, that this trustee is trustee for the widow, assumes the whole question. He is not so according to the terms of the trust clearly ; but merely as a Court of Equity would remove that term for her benefit. It certainly is frequent to have an assignment upon a purchase. It is more convenient to the purchaser to have a trustee, with whom he is acquainted, than to have the term outstanding in a stranger. That is the reason of the practice for a purchaser to take an assignment in trust for [*574] * himself by name. But this is a purchase by a near relation ; in which case it is very unusual ; especially, where the transaction was of so recent a date. It may be usual, where the term is in a stranger, an old man ; whose personal representative may be uncertain. But what alteration does it make ? Is not the assignee as much entitled to be protected under that trust, as if it was taken for him by name ? It is true, Lord Hardwicke talks of the term being assigned. It happened to be assigned in that instance : but the meaning was, the term being kept alive, not merged. Lord Hardwicke speaks of the term being assigned, as well in the case of a mortgage as of a satisfied term. Suppose, the purchaser paid off the mortgage ; but did not take an assignment : could it be said, as no act was done to show, he meant to have the benefit of the mortgage, he did not mean to have the benefit of it as a purchaser, to prevent the widow's redeeming ? There are some passages thrown out in Lord Hardwicke's argument, that tend to countenance that doctrine : but it is very difficult to know the principle of it. It may be considered, that by paying off the mortgage the nature of the estate is altered. The real distinction is that of the purchaser and the heir at law of the husband. This purchaser was entitled to call upon the trustee at any time.

(1) 1 Term Rep. B. R. 763.

There is another ground, independent of the term, upon the deed of 1791, executed before the marriage to such uses as Robert Maundrell should appoint ; and in default of appointment, to him for life : and after his decease to his right heirs ; in effect to him in fee. He executes the power after the marriage by conveying the estate to Henry Maundrell ; and the question is, whether all the intermediate estates are not determined, as if they never had existed ; and whether Henry Maundrell did not take an estate in fee ; so that the husband never took an estate, upon which dower would [*575] attach. * The sole object of this deed was to prevent dower. The moment he executed the appointment a new use sprung up in the appointee ; who took, not under the appointment, but under the original deed, in 1791, previous to the marriage, and therefore paramount to the right of dower. There is no case upon this point : these means of preventing dower by giving a power of appointment to the husband, being of very modern invention : but these are the principles, upon which that practice has been established.

Mr. Alexander, in reply.—Upon the last point the cases referred to are, where the husband has no sole legal estate : but under the limitations of the deed of 1791 the trustees have no estate until some appointment. Those cases therefore have no resemblance.

Upon the other point, in this particular case, where there is an outstanding term, this Court constantly aids the dowress, and even against a purchaser. All these cases proceed principally upon this ground ; that a great number of titles depend upon this understanding in the profession, that, if the purchaser takes an assignment of the term, he is safe ; and, in order not to disturb that, the Court has in those instances decided against the dowress. The ground is, that the purchaser has used due diligence ; a ground, that does not exist in this case : this purchaser relying on the covenant of the husband. When the reliance is placed on the outstanding term, the practice is to get it in. There is no distinction between this and the case of the mortgage, stated by Lord Hardwicke. It is assuming the question to say, this purchaser might have called for this term. It may as well be said, he might in the case of the mortgage. The Court must decide, who has the better right to call for it. They have the right between them. The trust is to * protect the [* 576] inheritance, as it stood in Henry Maundrell, against all strangers. When he takes it to protect the inheritance, he takes it to protect all interests, which these persons take under him, in whatever way that interest arises.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].—I certainly should not have discovered any solid distinction between this case and Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy ; and it is difficult to comprehend the distinction stated. It is admitted, that, if the purchaser had taken an assignment to a trustee, he would have been completely protected against dower. It is difficult however, for me at least, to find a solid distinction between doing that and letting the term remain in the name of the original trustee ; for as it stands at present, it is to A. upon trust for B., his heirs and assigns, and to attend the inheritance. Then what is the distinction between taking for the benefit of the heirs and assigns by the general description, and taking it for the benefit of the heir and assign by name, substituted for the description ? It would be only a change of the person, and a detailed description of the person instead of the general one ; and yet Lord Hardwicke does in that decision constantly introduce it as a term in every proposition he states, that the purchaser has taken an assignment of the term to a trustee of his own ; which he always supposes to be that, which gives the protection to the purchaser against the claim of dower. I wish therefore to have the opportunity of maturely considering that case ; for it is not to be supposed, that Lord Hardwicke should so guardedly express himself, whenever he mentions the protection of the purchaser, unless there was some ground for it.

* The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT].— [* 577] The principal question is, whether a purchaser can protect himself against a claim of dower by a term attendant upon the inheritance ; of which he has not procured an assignment. The Report states a particular assignment of a satisfied mortgage term to a trustee for the husband, and to attend the inheritance. At the hearing I was inclined to concur in the opinion of the Master : but upon consideration of the doctrine relative to the nature of terms attendant upon the inheritance and their effect in barring dower I am satisfied, that without an assignment to a trustee for the purchaser the term does not exclude that claim. At Law all Terms are considered as terms in gross; and therefore every existing Term, without regard to the purpose, for which it was created, prevents a dowress from having any legal benefit from her recovery in dower: as she recovers with stay of execution during the Term. But Equity regards the purpose, for which the Term is created and subsists; and if it is only for the benefit of the owner of the inheritance, it is considered part of the inheritance, not indeed absolutely merged, but so attendant upon it, as to follow and accompany it, and every right and interest growing out of it either by operation of law or by voluntary agreement of parties. Equity ought not therefore to [* 578] permit such a term to be in any case used against the [* 578] *owner of the inheritance, either of the whole or a part of the inheritance; for the uses adapt and accommodate themselves to all the interests, which arise out of that inheritance; with which in contemplation of Equity the term for most purposes is considered incorporated. Every description therefore of ownership shall in its order, degree, and proportion, have a use in the term commensurate with the interest existing in the inheritance (1). Therefore when dower arises, the term in a proportion is just as much attendant upon that interest, growing out of the inheritance, as before it was attendant upon the inheritance during the husband's life. The heir therefore, though he can avail himself of the term at Law, is not allowed in this Court to defeat the widow's claim to dower; for, having a certain quantity of interest, Equity must consider her as having correspondent interests in the term.

When the husband conveys to a purchaser, and the wife does not by fine join, nothing passes but the estate the husband had; that is, an estate subject to dower. The right to dower remains just where it was. The purchaser stands precisely in the place of the husband. The outstanding term will accompany the inheritance thus conveyed in the mode and manner, in which it was attendant upon the same inheritance, before it was conveyed. The term being a mere accessory, the operation of the conveyance upon it is purely derivative and consequential. It is impossible, that a greater interest can be incidentally acquired under the term than directly in the freehold.

But it is said, this is not consistent with the case of Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy. It was not necessary in that case to decide any thing inconsistent with these *principles, which I have laid down, and, according to the best information we have as to the grounds of that decision, nothing inconsistent with these principles was intended to be decided. It was not necessary to decide against them; for my proposition relates to a term left to remain, as it was before, generally attendant upon the inheritance; not a term, of which the purchaser or subsequent incumbrancer has obtained an assignment. In that case the purchaser had used the precaution of taking an assignment for the protection of his purchase ; and then notwithstanding that circumstance great doubt was entertained upon the question. It is to be inferred therefore, that the general principle was considered established. Even against such a purchaser the first decree was in favor of the dowress. That was reversed upon a rehearing : but there was a great inclination in the House of Lords to reverse that reversal. This circumstance, as well as the particular ground of the affirmation of the decree, is stated by Lord Hardwicke in Swannock v. Lifford, in the note to Coke upon Littleton (1). The danger of shaking titles by denying effect to an established mode of securing purchasers against claims of dower seems to have been the only solid foundation for this judgment ; for upon principle I do not think it could be supported ; as the case of a purchaser taken by itself is nothing. A purchaser, merely as such, has no equity whatsoever against the widow, claiming by title prior to, and both legally and equitably as good as his. The term, if it continued outstanding, is as much attendant in equity upon dower as the remaining interest in the inheritance ; and therefore ought not to be set up by the latter against the former. As to the operation of the assignment in protecting subsequent against prior interests, [ 580] that depends upon the purchaser obtaining it bona fide without notice of the interest, against which he sets it up. How could the purchaser there be said not to have notice ; when he knew Lord Bodmyn to be married ; and took an indemnity from him against dower ? I do not wonder therefore, that in Lady Williams v. Wray (2) it was in the first instance successfully contended, that this applied to the interest of the heir, as much as a purchaser. It was argued, as I have stated, that Vandebendy had full notice of dower, and got in the term to protect him against the dowress ; and therefore having notice was to be considered only as a volunteer ; and certainly if it was res integra, I should think, the dower could not be excluded more in one case than the other. It is evident, Lord Hardwicke thought so, from what he states in the outset of the judgment in Swannock v. Lifford, and what he subjoins to his statement of the case of Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy ; that ever since that case it has always been said, that the Court is bound by it ; and on the other hand he had heard it often said by the Court, that they will go no farther. Lord Hardwicke then proceeds to show, why he thought, he was not going farther ; but that on the contrary that case was somewhat less favorable to the dower ; as the term was not a mere satisfied term, as that in Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy was in part at least, but a subsisting mortgage term, for which full consideration was paid.

(1) 1 Ball & Beat. 445, 6.

But what are the cases, which Lord Hardwicke thinks precisely

(1) Edition by Hargrave and Butler, 203 ; note a, 105.

(2) I.P. Will. 137 ; Pre. Ch. 151.

within Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy, and by which the Court is bound? Those only, in which an assignment is taken by the purchaser either to himself or to a trustee of his own. In [* 581] Atkyns (1) it is stated, that *since the case of Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy it was a settled rule of the Court, that if a purchaser took in a term precedent to the right of dower, whether it was a satisfied term, or money paid for it, it was a bar to the wife's dower: but if the mortgage had subsisted at the husband's death, the wife might have redeemed, and been entitled to her dower: or if the husband had paid off the mortgage, and taken an assignment of the term to attend the inheritance, and died seised, the wife would have been endowed; but if a purchaser came in, after the mortgage was paid off, and the death of the husband, and took an assignment of the term, that would prevent dower.

According to Ambler (2) Lord Hardwicke says, a dowress may redeem a term against a mortgagee, and remove it out of the way against an heir; but cannot against a purchaser of the inheritance, who has taken an assignment of the term to protect his title. In the full Report, in the note to Co. Lit. (3) Lord Hardwicke never once mentions the effect of the term in protecting a purchaser against dower, but with a qualified condition, that it shall be assigned to a trustee for him. Is it possible to suppose Lord Hardwicke would have produced an irrelevant term? The judgment would not only be inaccurately expressed, but would mislead, if it is true, that the mere existence of the term would answer the purpose as well as the assignment. If we pass by the circumstance of notice, as the judgment in Lady Radnor v. Vandebendy compels us to do in the particular case of dower, every thing depends upon the assignment. The term, though in most respects incorporated with the inheritance, is not wholly merged. It protects equally the [* 582] general * mass growing out of the inheritance; but is capable of being disannexed, and of protecting particular interests: but that can be done only by assignment.

The whole doctrine upon this subject is discussed by Lord Hardwicke in Willoughby v. Willoughby (4). Lord Hardwicke notices the opinion of some Conveyancers, that, where there is a term, of which the trust is already declared to attend the inheritance, it is not necessary to disturb it, and take an assignment to new trustees. Lord Hardwicke shows, that is not generally true; but, if there are antecedent incumbrances, nothing but an assignment can protect it; and, that he conceived dower to be such an interest as could be guarded against only by an assignment, I have shown from the whole tenor of the judgment in Swannock v. Lifford. Therefore, the term does not exclude this Plaintiff from dower.

(1) 2 Atk. 209.

(2) Amb. 7.

(3) Edition by Hargrave and Butler, 208; note a, 105.

(4) 1 Term Rep. B. R. 771. See post, this case reheard, vol. x. 246; Ex parte Knott, xi. 609; xv. 335, 6; Frere v. Moore, 8 Pri. 475.

Then, another question is, whether the Plaintiff is not excluded by the form of the conveyance. Before the marriage the estate was limited to such uses as the husband should by Deed or Will appoint; and in default of appointment to the use of himself for life; and from and after his decease to the use of his right heirs. The purchaser, it is said, is in by appointment; which supersedes the fee in the husband until and subject to the appointment. First, I doubt, whether the purchaser can be said to be in under an appointment. The words and the instrument are as much adapted to pass an interest as to execute a power (1); and the recital is, not that he has power to appoint, but that he is seized in fee of estates in the county of Wilts, not comprised in the settlement.

* But secondly the power of appointment is merely nugatory, and nothing distinct or different from the fee. The fee was clearly in the husband until appointment (2). In Goodill v. Brigham (3) it was held, that a power added to the fee was merely void. So the power in this case followed by a limitation of the fee must be absorbed in the fee; which includes every power. The reason commonly given, why a power may have effect, though limited to the owner of the fee, is, that he may appoint in a mode, by which his legal fee would not entitle him to convey. I give no opinion upon the sufficiency of that reason. But in this case it is to such uses as he should by Deed or Will appoint; that is, by Deed or Will legally executed; and by those Instruments he might have passed the fee; though nothing was said about the appointment. The limitation, therefore, operates purely as a limitation of the fee; and that fee he could only convey subject to her right of dower.

Therefore I am of opinion, the Exception must be allowed (4).

1. A PURCHASER, or a mortagor, (who is a purchaser pro tanto,) though he has notice of a right of dower attaching upon the estate he is about to purchase, may advance his money, and, taking in a term, may avail himself of it, and thereby utterly defeat the right of dower. Wynn v. Williams, 5 Ves. 134; Mole v. Smith, Jacob's Rep. 497. And the widow of the owner of a qualified fee will be excluded from all claim to dower, by the due execution of the power of appointment to new uses: see, ante, note 3 to Cor v. Chamberlain, 4 V. 634.

2. At law, a widow whose husband was seized of a reversion in fee, expectant upon a term of years, may recover judgment in dower, but the writ of seisin will not be awarded until the outstanding term is ended; although the term was only created as a collateral security for a limited purpose, and subject thereto, the term was declared to attend the reversion and inheritance, which was in the deceased husband of the claimant in dower. Lady Williams v. Sir Bourchier Wray, 1 P. Wms. 138. But, in equity, the doctrine is established as it is laid down in the principal case, that where a term has been created for a particular purpose, and that purpose has been satisfied, the term is to be used and moulded so as to aid the interests of all persons having equitable claims upon the inheritance; for all of whom the trustee of the term is a trustee, according to their priorities. Shine v. Gough, 1 Ball & Beat. 445. And the exception which excludes a dowress

(1) Ante, Cor v. Chamberlain, vol. iv. 631.

(2) See, ante, vol. iv. 636; v. 748; and the notes i. 309; ii. 706.

(3) 1 Bos. & Pul. 192. See, ante, vol. iv. 637; post, x. 265.

(4) See the decision of this case upon a rehearing, before Lord Eldon, C. post, vol. x. 246.

from the benefit of this general rule, and allows a purchaser, with full notice, who can get in an outstanding but satisfied term thereby effectually to displace the benefit of dower, is an anomaly in the law, but one which is now become invete-rate. Freere v. Moore, 8 Price, 490.

3. A mere partition does not revoke a previous devise of the undivided interest in the estate which is the subject of partition; but, if the legal fee has been modified, by any addition to the mere object of partition, that modification, however slight, will operate a revocation: see note 3 to Brydges v. The Duchess of Chandos, 2 V. 417.

4. That a remainder, in default of appointment, is a vested interest, subject only to being divested by a due execution of the power of appointment, see note 1 to Smith v. Lord Camelford, 2 V. 698.

5. Where a party, who had both a power and an interest, has done an act so equivocal that it may with equal fairness be referred to either, the Court would certainly not be disposed to adopt that construction which would defeat the instrument. Blake v. Marnell, 2 Ball & Beat. 46; Cox v. Chamberlaine, 4 Ves. 636.

6. As to the advantage which, amongst parties having all equal equities, may be derived from getting in a satisfied term, see note 6 to Evans v. Bicknell, 6 V. 174.

DETILLIN v. GALE.

[1802, AUGUST 13.]

MORTGAGEE, though entitled to costs in general, deprived of costs occasioned by improper conduct; and even compelled to pay costs (a).

Bill for a general account lies against a solicitor and agent, taking a security without a settlement of accounts (b), [p. 584.]

THE bill in this cause, among other objects, prayed a redemption and account against the Defendant Sidney; who, having been employed by the Plaintiff as his solicitor and agent, took a bond and judgment and a mortgage for his bill without any settlement of accounts between them. An inquiry having been directed as to what was due to the Defendant upon his securities and otherwise, great delay and expensive litigation was * occasioned by his conduct, before any account could be procured from him; and finally his demand was reduced by a great deal more than a sixth. The Plaintiff pressed for a general account against him,

(a) Vroom v. Dutmars, 4 Paige, 527; Van Buren v. Olmstead, 5 Paige, 9; Slee v. Manhattan Bank, 1 Paige, 48; Brockway v. Wells, 1 Paige, 617; Saunders v. Frost, 5 Pick. 271-274. In this last case it was said by the Court that the rule that the mortgagee is under no circumstances chargeable with costs, is not only unreasonable, but is opposed to the statute of Massachusetts, 1798, c. 77, which expressly authorizes the Court, "at their discretion to award costs to either party, as equity may require."

In the above case of Saunders v. Frost, upon a bill in Equity to redeem, the defendant interposed objections, some of which were groundless and unreasonable, and he failed in his defence, but the plaintiff was also in fault, and the Court refused to allow costs to either party.

See Turner v. Turner, 3 Munf. 66; Archdeacon v. Bowes, 1 M'Clel. 149; S. C. 13 Price, 353; Hodges v. Croydon Canal Co. 3 Beav. 86.

(b) See Jones v. Thomas, 2 Young & Coll. 498; Newman v. Payne, ante, 2 V. 199, note (a); Mott v. Harrington, 12 Verm. 199.

with rests, and also for costs. For the Defendant it was insisted, that there was no instance of making a mortgagee pay costs, and that in that character he was entitled to his costs.

Mr. Richards and Mr. Hall, for the Plaintiff: Mr. Piggott and Mr. Fonblanche, for the Defendant.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—Upon the transactions and circumstances of this case a bill might have been filed, that would have called for the decree now prayed: the Defendant, standing in the character of Attorney and Solicitor, and general Manager, converting the debt from his client into a mortgage and judgment, when the accounts were unsettled and the balance might be doubtful. A bill producing that state of circumstances, and alleging, that it was against the duty of the Defendant, in his character of agent to take a security, carrying interest, instead of discharging the demand by the money of his employer, as received by him, might have been filed, to have a decree for a general account, without regard to the security; and that in that account interest should not be allowed on one side, and not upon the other. The first obligation upon the Defendant, standing in that relation to the Plaintiff, is, a duty upon his part perfectly easy, that his accounts ought to have been quite clear. The conclusion upon his answer to this bill for an account, that his accounts would not be ready for six weeks, is, that he had not done his duty (1).

It is said, because he is a mortgagee, he is to have his costs. That is not of necessity. Prima facie he is to have them certainly. The owner coming to deliver the * estate from [* 585] that incumbrance he himself put upon it, the person having that pledge is not to be put to expense with regard to that; and so long as he acts reasonably as mortgagee, to that extent he ought to be indemnified. But that principle does not go to such a case as this: the solicitor an incumbrancer with regard to law expenses; taking a bond and judgment for his bill. The expense of the suit as to that is not incurred by the mortgagor in delivering his estate from a demand admitted to be just: on the contrary, the great expense of the suit is incurred in a successful endeavor of the mortgagor to prove, what he has established, that the Defendant charged him with a great deal more than he ought; and, the Court having taken off a great deal more than a sixth part of his bill, there is no doubt I act equitably, following the principle of the Legislature, by saying, that as to so much of the suit as relates to that bill he shall pay the costs.

It was pressed, that I should now direct the account, with rests, and, farther, call upon him to pay costs as mortgagee. Upon the allegations of this bill the shape of the record is an objection to directing the account in that manner; and I should take from him the opportunity of answering, as the justice of the case should require, that the interest account upon the one side and the other should be taken.

(1) Ante, Newman v. Payne, vol. ii. 199; and the note, 204.

It is then asked, is he to have his costs as far as he is mortgagee? Though a mortgagee, acting reasonably as such, is to have his reasonable expenses, it does not follow that he can claim his own expenses from other persons, with whom he is litigating, with regard to those acts, which upon his part are, not only unreasonable, but grossly oppressive (1). He was under an obligation to bring into the Master's Office clear accounts capable of being [* 586] * clearly vouched; for he is not a mere mortgagee; but became so in consequence of his transactions as agent. Is he to charge the estate with all the expense attending a useless and unnecessary litigation in the Master's Office? He is not therefore entitled to his costs in this cause as mortgagee. It is a very different consideration, whether, being a mortgagee, he is to pay the costs of the mortgagor: if any, it is to be considered, what costs; for the suit goes to other accounts with other incumbrances; and to points, as to which to a certain extent he must have had costs. It is admitted, there is no instance, in which a mortgagee has been called upon to pay costs; and it is clear, as to some, he cannot; for some are the necessary effect of the suit to redeem. It is said, it will be an extremely bad precedent to hold, that in any case a mortgagee can be called upon to pay the costs of the mortgagor. I will not say, the Court will not, and am very far from saying, the Court ought not, to make that precedent; but it ought to be made upon great consideration; for though it is a very clear moral proposition, that the mortgagee ought to pay all costs his unnecessary and oppressive dealings have occasioned, yet I have learned, that there may be great wisdom in a general rule established for a great length of time; though perhaps at the instant it is considered that may not be discovered. The costs of the inquiry as to what was due must be paid by him, and when the course of his proceedings from the answer, till the cause came here, is stated to me beyond all possibility of contradiction, it would be a disgrace to the Court to give him the costs incurred by such conduct. I will give him his costs down to the answer, and no farther.

A few days afterwards the Lord Chancellor observed, that in the case of Shuttleworth v. Lowther the late Lord Lonsdale, [* 587] * a mortgagee, was made to pay costs on the ground of a tender, and an appropriation of the money; which was paid into the Bank, and refused (2).

With respect to the general right of a mortgagee to the allowance of costs incurred by him in respect of any suit concerning the mortgage estate, and the circumstances which will deprive him of any such claim, see, ante, note 6 to Lord Cranston v. Johnson, 3 V. 170.

(1) Loftus v. Swift, 2 Sch. & Leb. 642; Morony v. O'Dea, 1 Bell & Bea. 109; Beames on Costs, 39 to 46.

(2) —— v. Trecothick, 2 Ves. & Bea. 181; Harvey v. Tebbutt, 1 Jac. & Walk. 197.

THOMPSON v. LAMBE.

[1802, AUGUST 13.]

EVIDENCE not to be received by the Master, after he has settled his Report (a). A party charged by his answer or examination cannot discharge himself by it, unless the whole is stated as one transaction; as that on a particular day he received a sum and paid it over: not, that upon a particular day he received a sum; and on a subsequent day he paid it over (b), ante, 404, note (a), [p. 587.]

AN Exception, taken to the Master's Report, charging the Defendants with a sum of money, was over-ruled by Lord Rosslyn upon the 13th of March, 1801. The Exception came on to be re-argued upon the petition of the Defendants.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Cox, in support of the Exception, made two objections to the Report: First, that the Master refused to receive farther evidence, because produced, after the Report was settled.

Secondly, That the Defendants, who were charged by their answer, were also by their answer discharged.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. W. Agar insisted, that the practice is, that, after the Report is settled, the Master cannot receive any other evidence; which was decided in a late case at the Rolls, Fearon v. Dawes; the Plaintiff after the Report settled having brought in affidavits to prove a more considerable balance, the Master refused to attend to them; and upon an Exception it was determined, that the Master did right.

(a) 2 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 153; Trotter v. Trotter, 5 Sim. 383.

(b) The authorities upon this point were very thoroughly sifted by Mr. Chancellor Kent, in the case of Hart v. Ten Eyck, 2 John. Ch. 62, at pages 87-98; and he there arrives at the conclusion, that where the answer is put in issue, what is confessed and admitted need not be proved; but where the defendant admits a fact, and insists on a distinct fact by way of avoidance, he must prove the fact so insisted on in defence. See also in support of the same position, Ringold v. Ringold, 1 Har. & Gill, 11, 80-83; Beckwith v. Buller, 1 Wash. 224; Lampton v. Lampton, 6 Monro, 620; Payne v. Coles, 1 Munf. 373; Boardman v. Jackson, 2 Ball & Beat. 382; Thompson v. Lambe, 7 Ves. 587; Wasson v. Gould, 3 Blackf. 18; Robinson v. Scotney, 19 Ves. 584; Randall v. Phillips, 3 Mason, 383; New England Bank v. Lewis, 8 Pick. 119, 120; Copeland v. Crane, 9 Pick. 73; Hoffman's Master in Chancery, (ed. 1824,) 75, et seq., ch. 2, § 9; 2 Smith, Ch. Pr. (Am. ed.) 117, 118.

The case of Hart v. Ten Eyck was, however, reversed on this point by the Court of Errors in New York. The decision of the Court of Errors, is not reported. See note to Woodcock v. Bennet, 1 Cowen, 744, and extracts from Mr. Emmet's argument, in which the doctrine contended for by the appellants before the Court of Errors is very ably and clearly stated. In Woodcock v. Bennet, 1 Cowen, 712, it was held, that an answer responsive to the bill, and within the discovery sought, is legal evidence, and this, whether it be a denial of some fact alleged by the complainant, or set up as a fact by way of avoidance merely. See also Stafford v. Bryan, 1 Paige, 239; Forsythe v. Clark, 3 Wend. 643; M'Caw v. Blewitt, 2 M'Cord, 90, 101, 102; Columbia Bank v. Black, 2 M'Cord, 344, 350. See farther the cases cited in Cowen & Hill's note to 1 Phil. Ev. 154, note, 292; Blount v. Burrow, ante, 1 V. 546, and notes.

As to the effect of answers as evidence in general, see Pember v. Mathers, 1 Bro. C. C. 52, 53, note (2), and cases cited.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—In some respects this is material to the practice. The course is this. The party claiming under the Order is to lay a state of facts or charge before [* 588] the Master; who * calls upon the other party, to the intent, that he may suggest objections. In the nature of things practice must have set some limits to this species of proceeding upon all these warrants. The Master gives due notice according to the course of the Court, that his Report is to be settled on a particular day. What is he to do? The extent of the mischief is obvious, if the Master is to proceed up to the point of settling his Report, before the parties, without any consideration of respect to the Master state, what they mean to prove, or by what proof. The rule must be, that he, who will not produce his proof before that stage, must be told, he comes too late. I am glad to hear the decision of this point in Fearon v. Dawes (1); for otherwise the Master would be subject to the negligence of any one; and no suitor could hope for an end of his cause (2).

Upon the other point I am clearly of opinion, a person charged by his answer cannot by his answer discharge himself: nor even by his examination; unless it is in this way; if the answer or examination states, that upon a particular day he received a sum of money, and paid it over, that may discharge him: but if he says, that upon a particular day he received a sum of money, and upon a subsequent day he paid it over, that cannot be used in his discharge; for it is a different transaction (3).

The exception was over-ruled.

1. In analogy to the principle established by the present cases (and which the bill now before Parliament for the regulation of Chancery practice adopts,) when a question has been referred to the master, correct practice requires, that objections (if any are intended to be made) should be taken to the draft of the report; and this is not form, but substance. However, when a compliance with this rule has been prevented by accident or surprise, which fact is verified by affidavit, the Court will give the party leave to accept: Bowker v. Nixon, 3 Mad. 439; Pennington v. Lord Muncaster, 1 Mad. 555. And, where the whole matter appears on the face of the report, a party who has not taken exceptions to the report, may bring forward his objections to the master's conclusions at the hearing: see, ante, note 3 to Adams v. Claxton, 6 V. 226.

2. In what cases a defendant may, by his answer, discharge himself from sums with which he is charged by his admissions in the same answer, see the note to Ridgeway v. Darwin, 7 V. 404.

(1) See Mr. Beames's note, Ord. Ch. 260.

(2) Upon a motion, the following day, where a party would not attend the Master, for an Order upon the Master to make his Report, the Lord Chancellor refused to make that Order; inferring that the Master had some reason for delaying it; and his Lordship referring to the case of Thompson v. Lambe, expressed a wish, that the Masters would be strict upon those, who would not attend them; and make Reports ex parte; adding, that the Court would always support them in such cases.

(3) Ante, Ridgeway v. Darwin, 404; Blount v. Burrie, vol. i. 546; post, Robinson v. Scotney, vol. xix. 582.

HOLE v. THOMAS.

[1802, August 16.]

INJUNCTION between tenants in common against destruction: not against pure equitable waste (a).

A REAL estate was devised to trustees for 500 years without impeachment of waste; and from and after the expiration of that term, as to one third, to the use of Susannah Elizabeth Thomas for life without impeachment of waste, except wilful waste in letting down houses; remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to the use of the heirs of her body; and for default of such issue to the use of her right heirs for ever. Another third was devised to Mary Hole in the same manner, and with similar remainders to Susannah Elizabeth Thomas; and the remaining third to Mary Frances Thomas, and the heirs of her body in the same manner; with limitations over in moieties to Susannah Elizabeth Thomas and Mary Hole, and the heirs of their bodies, and the ultimate limitation to their heirs respectively.

Mary Hole and her late husband suffered a recovery to the use of Mary Hole in fee. Upon the marriage of Mary Frances Thomas with Henry Byne, articles were executed for suffering a recovery and settling her third part; with the ultimate remainder to her in fee.

A motion was made, upon a bill filed by Mary Hole, for an injunction to stay waste by Henry Byne. The affidavits stated, that the Defendants in May and June cut coppice wood; that those months were the improper season; that in June they cut 20 oak timber trees, improper to be felled, not being one third of their growth; that June is the improper season for cutting oak; that they cut and continue to cut a considerable number of fir trees; and the deponents believe, they intend to cut the beech trees in the park and avenues, and the barton; and that those trees are ornamental, and a *shelter to the mansion-house and estates; [*590] and the cutting them will be an irreparable injury.

Mr. W. Agar, in support of the Motion.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I never knew an instance of an application to stay waste by one tenant in common against another: one tenant in common having a right to enjoy, as he pleases (1). The principle in the case of the tenant for life is, that he is to take according to the Will of the testator or grantor. A case of malicious destruction may be a ground: but a great part of the subject of this motion is pure equitable waste. I have no objection to grant an in-

(a) Eden on Injunct. (2d. Am. ed.) 210-211; Smallman v. Onions, 3 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 621; Twort v. Twort, 16 Ves. 128; Hawley v. Clowes, 2 John. Ch. 122; Durham and Sunderland R. R. Co. v. Warren, 3 Beavan, 119; S. C. 2 Nich. H. & C. 395.

(1) Mr. Lloyd (Amicus Curiae) mentioned the case of Paris Mountain; where an injunction was refused on the same principle. See Smallman v. Onions, 3 Bro. C. C. 621; Twort v. Twort, post, vol. xvi. 128; Goodwyn v. Sprox, 2 Dick. 667.

junction against cutting saplings and any timber trees or underwood at unseasonable times, until answer or farther order; for that is destruction.

The order was made accordingly.

In the case of coparceners and tenants in common, no legal remedy is provided as to acts of waste or trespass between themselves. Matis v. Hawkins, 5 Taunt. 24. But Courts of Equity will interfere, not only when (as in the principal case) one tenant in common is committing acts which, if suffered to go on, would amount to a destruction of the property, (Norway v. Rove, 19 Ves. 159,) but, also, whenever it appears that any sort of waste has been committed, or threatened, by one tenant in common, who has, by contract, become the occupying tenant of the other, and who is consequently bound to treat the property as any other occupying tenant should treat it, (Twort v. Twort, 16 Ves. 132,) though prospective relief cannot be given, as between tenants in common against acts of mere equitable waste. Snalman v. Onions, 3 Brown, 622. The remedy, in such cases, is to apply for a partition. Goodwin v. Spry, 2 Dick. 667.

BAILEY v. HAMMOND.

[ROLLS.—1802, AUGUST 16.]

PAYMENT ordered, where one party entitled had not been heard of for twenty years, upon a recognizance to refund in the event of a claim (a).

THE testatrix bequeathed 2000*l.* to each of her brothers and sisters as should be living at her decease, and to the child or children of such other of her brothers and sisters as should be then dead, in such shares and proportions as they would take under the Statute of Distributions (1).

There were several nephews and nieces. The administratrix of one of them, a son of a sister of the testatrix, presented [* 591] a petition for a transfer. Only one brother of the testatrix was living at her death; who had not been heard of for twenty years.

Mr. Cooke, in support of the petition said, that in a case under such circumstances the Court had paid the money to the party upon a recognizance to refund in the event of a claim.

The MASTER OF THE ROLLS [Sir WILLIAM GRANT] adopted that course; and made the Order accordingly.

As to the limits of the presumption with regard to the duration of the lives of persons of whom no account can be given, see, ante, the note to Ex parte Grant, 6 V. 512, and the note to Lee v. Willock, 6 V. 605.

(a) The presumption of the duration of life ceases at the end of seven years from the time when the person was last known to be living. It is enough if it appears that he has been absent for seven years from the particular State of his residence without having been heard from. See the note and cases cited in Manufacturing v. Baxter, ante, 5 V. 458, note (c).

(1) Stat. 22 & 23 Char. II. c. 10.

COCKAYNE, Ex parte.

[1802, AUGUST 17.]

THE old rule, that the next of kin of a lunatic, if entitled to his estate upon his death, was not to be Committee of the person, is not now adhered to.

THE petitioner being brother of the half-blood of a lunatic, and entitled in remainder to his real estate, was appointed Committee of the real estate : but objecting to be appointed Committee of the person, another was appointed.

The petition prayed, that the petitioner may be appointed Committee of the person ; having made the objection under a conception, that the appointment would be against the practice upon the old rule.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] agreed with the Counsel, that the old rule had not been adhered to for a great length of time (1) ; and made the Order.

THE old rule, (suited only to barbarous times,) which excluded, as a matter of course, the next of kin to a lunatic from the office of committee of his person, if such next of kin was also heir to the lunatic, is not only exploded, but consanguinity, though it confers no positive right, is now always considered as a considerable recommendation in the selection of a committee ; and a strong ground must be shown before the afflicted party will be severed from all his relations. Lady Mary Cope's case, 2 Cha. Ca. 239 ; Ex parte Le Heup, 18 Ves. 227.

LOBB, Ex parte.

[* 592]

[1802, AUGUST 19.]

SEPARATE creditors, who had taken a joint security, permitted on giving it up to resort under a Commission of Bankruptcy to their original debts (a).

THE case upon the petition and the affidavits in support of it was, that the petitioners, linen-drapers, sold goods to Seward and to Pipon separately. Seward and Pipon were in partnership as merchants at Southampton. The debt from Seward amounted to 80*l.* ; that from Pipon to 16*l.* 8*s.* 10*d.* The goods were delivered to each separ-

(1) Dormer's Case, 2 P. Will. 262.

The distinction, upon which in Neal's Case and Ex parte Ludlow, 2 P. Will. 544, 635, that rule was considered not applicable to the next of kin from their interest in the probable increase of the personal estate during the life of the lunatic, is not satisfactory. To those, upon whom the suspicion, which was the foundation of that rule, could attach, immediate gain is a stronger temptation than the hope of future advantage, subject to disappointment, not only by the casualties of life, but also, where the state of the lunatic admits it, by the liberal application of his income for maintenance.

(a) See Thomas v. Frazer, ante, 3 V. 399, note (a).

ately: they were debited in the books so; and the transactions were entirely separate. The petitioners had at various times goods returned, consigned to them by Seward and Pipon as partners, to the amount of 48*l.* 18*s.*; and there were also some small separate accounts between each of the petitioners and Seward and Pipon. In January last Pipon came to the petitioners for the purpose of settling his accounts and paying his debts; and at the same time he expressed a desire to settle and pay the bill due from Seward and every other matter of account between the petitioners and them. The petitioners at his request, as the easiest mode, made out one general balance-sheet of the said debts due jointly as well as separately: upon which the balance due to the petitioners was 112*l.* 7*s.* 3*d.* Pipon undertook to settle with his partner; and the petitioners with each other; and by the desire of Pipon a bill at two months was drawn upon him and Seward for the balance. Before the bill was due, Pipon and Seward became bankrupt. The petitioners applied to prove their original debts against the separate estates: but their proof not being admitted, the petition was presented; praying, that the petitioners may have relief under the Commission: and prove their said debts, so as to have the full benefit of the separate estates.

[* 593] * Mr. Richards, for the Petitioners said, it was merely intended to take the Lord Chancellor's opinion; and no one appeared on the other side.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] said, clearly they must give up the bill; and that being admitted, his Lordship made the Order; observing, that the point, whether by taking the joint security they were not concluded, might bear argument, but he thought they might resort to their original debts.

THAT the joint form of a security will not estop a Court of Equity from dealing with it as if it were separate in point of form, or vice versa, in order to aid the substantial intent of the parties, see, ante, the note to Thomas v. Fraser, 3 V. 399.

NOYSOMHED, CASE OF THE DANISH SHIP.

[1802, AUGUST 14, 16, 20.]

THE appellant from a decision of condemnation by the Admiralty Court is not bound to adhere to the security given; but may follow the property or the proceeds in the hands of an agent.

The prize jurisdiction extends to the question, whether a person, who received and sold the property, received it as consignee for valuable consideration, or as prize agent, [p. 593.]

A Prohibition therefore against a Monition to bring in the property or the proceeds was refused (a), [p. 593.]

THE Danish ship Noysomhed was detained in the West Indies by a British ship; and the cargo having been condemned as lawful prize by the Admiralty Court of Tortola, the owners appealed to the Lords Commissioners of Prize. The cargo being sent by the captors or their agents to Chorley at Liverpool was sold by him. The Court of Appeal reversed the sentence; and decreed restoration; and that the captors should bring in an account of the proceeds within a month; and under that decree a monition to bring in the proceeds issued against Chorley; who moved for a prohibition; and by his affidavit represented, that the property was consigned to him, not as prize agent, but as a general merchant, for the purpose of sale; and that he sold it; * and [* 594] placed the produce to the credit of the consignors; and has since paid to or accounted with them for their respective shares.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Steven, in support of the Motion.—If the Lords Commissioners of Prize have a right to follow the proceeds of prize property in infinitum, they are right in assuming the jurisdiction in this instance. But they can only take from the captors or the sureties, or those, who have property in their hands as prize. This property was consigned to Chorley, not as prize agent, but for the purpose of sale, as a general merchant, connected with the house, from whom he received it. There is no difference between applying the money to the account of his correspondents, and actually paying them the money. His right to do either stands upon this ground; that, when the captor has given sufficient security, namely, security approved by the Court, that he will either restore the cargo, or pay the value, he has a right to dispose of it; and the appellant must rely upon the security; for keeping it would be a burthen. If the jurisdiction of the Court of Prize does not stop here, there can be no limit, so long as the proceeds can be traced. According to the meaning and the letter of the Act of Parliament (1) after condemnation and delivery to the captors, notwithstanding the appeal, the property is vested in him: his vendee takes it to his use: the jurisdiction of the Court of Prize is at an end; and the notice of the appeal is immaterial. It could never be intended, that perishable goods should remain without any power of disposition. In that case there is a necessity for a conversion ; and it is provided for by the Act. After sentence there must be a power of [* 595] sale ; and the captor * receiving the price effectually exonerates the thing from any claim of the original owner.

(a) As to writs of prohibition, see 1 Madd. Ch. Pr. (4th. Am. ed.) 14, 15.

(1) Stat. 33 Geo. III. c. 66.

In Snart v. Wolfe (1) Lord Kenyon was of opinion, that a change of property should be a bar to a monition. Where a Court of Prize or inferior Court misconstrue their jurisdiction, it is a ground of prohibition. In Brymer v. Atkins (2) that is laid down by Lord Loughborough ; and in Holme v. Lord Camden (3) the reversal of the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas does not proceed upon the denial of that principle of law.

Mr. Romilly and Mr. W. Agar, against the Motion, referred to Le Caux v. Eden (4) and Lindo v. Lord Rodney (5), as to the extent of the prize jurisdiction ; and proceeding to maintain the right of the appellant to go against the proceeds, were stopped by the Lord Chancellor ; who said, there was no doubt, the party is not bound to content himself with the security ; but may look to the goods themselves.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—My present opinion is, this is not a case for a prohibition. It is asserted, that under the true construction of the act there is no remedy except against the captor and his sureties, with the exception of prize agents : but there is nothing in taking that security, that prevents this at least ; that the party may go against the captor or the prize agent for the proceeds, if they are much more than the value in the security ; which I take to mean the appraised value. The security means only, that [* 596] * he shall call upon the captor to restore, if he can, in specie, or, if he cannot, the appraised value. But you have a right to fix him with the proceeds, if you can ; and then go to the Court of Prize for a monition and process, to take them out of his hands. There is nothing to prevent the prize agent from suggesting, that the proceeds are in his hands, not as prize agent, but by consignment for valuable consideration. But the Court of Admiralty must have the power to try, whether they are in his hands as prize agent. That is consequential upon the jurisdiction to call for the prize. I do not take them as deciding, that a consignee for valuable consideration, authorized to hold the proceeds for his own benefit, would hold them as an agent, out of whose hands they might be called : but they seem to have thought, they might examine that question ; and that Chorley had not satisfied them, he had the proceeds otherwise than as agent for the captors ;

(1) 3 Term Rep. B. R. 323. See p. 342.

(2) 1 Hen. Black. 164.

(3) 1 Hen. Black. 476; 2 Hen. Black. 533; 4 Term Rep. 382; 6 Parl. Cas. 8vo. page 203.

(4) Doug. 571.

(5) Doug. 591, n.

or, which is the same thing, for their agent. I understand the affidavit, that they were sent to him by the agents for the captors. It is one thing to say, he received these sugars in the course of a mercantile transaction, with authority to apply the proceeds of these sugars, as he would their own, regularly remitted to him; and a different thing, that they were not remitted to him upon their own account, but as agents of the captors; and that he carried them to their account in the same character; and then without authority he abstracts the produce from the account with them as agents of the captors to his private account with them. The question, therefore, decided by the Court of Admiralty is, that this property was in the hands of Chorley as agent of the captors; a question incidental to the principal question, fitly decided by them; and therefore I think, they had jurisdiction. Want of allegation in these cases is strong negative proof; and from the short explanation [ 597] given I rather think, he did receive as agent.

Aug. 20. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—I have looked into the cases; and am of opinion, I am not authorized to grant a prohibition.

WITH respect to the general doctrine as to prohibitions to Courts of limited jurisdiction, see, ante, the notes to Feson v. Harris, 7 V. 251, and the fifth note to that case as to the particular instances of prohibitions to the Admiralty Courts.

BARCLAY, Ex parte.

[1802, AUGUST 19, 20.]

BILLS, in lieu of which other bills are given, if permitted to remain with the holder, and the latter bills are not paid, may be enforced (a).

Notice, that a bill is dishonored, to effect a discharge, must come directly from the holder (b), [p. 597.]

BENJAMIN CLAY, indebted to the petitioner to the amount of 422*l. 3s. 4d.*, in August 1800 indorsed to him two bills of exchange, drawn by Kemp at two months date, upon John Dearlow, for 100*l.*

(a) See Chitty, Bills, (10th Am. ed.) 180, 181; Bishop v. Rowe, 3 Maule & Sel. 363; Sloman v. Cox, 1 Crom. Mees. & Ros. 471; S. C. 5 Tyrw. 174; 1 Stephens, N. P. 937; Kendrick v. Lomax, 3 C. & J. 405; Dillon v. Rummel, 1 Bingh. 100.

(b) Or from some person entitled to call for payment or reimbursement. Bayley, Bills, (2d Am. ed.) 248; Williams v. Mathews, 3 Cowen, 252; Chanoine v. Fowler, 3 Wendell, 173; Brewer v. Wooten, 2 Tayl. 70; Chitty, Bills, (10 Am. ed.) 493, 494; Story, Bills, § 303, 304.

The holder of a promissory note who receives and endorses it for the sake of collection only, although a mere agent, is to be considered as the real holder, for the purpose of receiving and transmitting notices. Ogden v. Dobbin, 2 Hall, 112.

each, and dated the 28th of August and the 2d of September. Those bills were neither accepted, nor paid. Clay afterwards drew two bills upon Samuel Sampson, payable to the petitioner or order, one dated the 11th, the other the 16th, of November, 1800, for 100*l.* and 103*l.*, the amount of the former bills, interest and charges. The former bills were permitted to remain with the petitioner; whose debt exceeded the amount of the four bills. The two last bills were not accepted: but Sampson paid that for 103*l.* when due. The petitioner placed all the bills generally to the account of Clay. Kemp and Clay became bankrupt. Proof of the two former bills under the Commission against Kemp was rejected, on the ground, that the two latter were accepted in satisfaction and discharge of them; upon which the petition was presented; insisting, that they were not so accepted; and praying, that the petitioner may be admitted to prove the two first bills, or one of them.

Another objection was taken; that notice to Kemp, that the bills were dishonored, did not come from the petitioner who was the holder, but from Clay.

[* 598] * Mr. Pemberton, in support of the latter objection, referred to Tyndal v. Brown (1); in which it was held, that the notice must come from the holder; and must come up to this; that the holder looks to that party for payment.

Mr. Mansfield, in support of the petition, insisted, that notice from Clay, having notice from the holder, had the same effect as notice directly from the holder.

The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—If two bills are dishonored, and two others are given “in lieu” of them, but the former are allowed to stay in the hands of the holder, that fact will give a construction to the words “in lieu”; and the meaning will be only, in case they are paid.

As to the other question, whether the holder not having given notice himself to the drawer, that the bills were not paid, can avail himself of the notice given by another person, who had not the bills, I shall look into the cases.

Aug 20th. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON].—The settled doctrine is according to the language of Mr. Justice Buller, in Tyndal

It is now settled, that notice of dishonor may be given by any party to the bill. Newen v. Gill, 8 Car. & Payne, 367; Chapman v. Kean, 3 Adol. & Ell. 193; S. C. 4 Nev. & Man. 607; Chitty, Bills, (10th Am. ed.) 338; 1 Stephens, N. P. 886.

It is said by Mr. Justice Story in his learned work on Bills, § 304, that it may be laid down as universally true, that a party entitled, as holder, to sue upon a bill, may avail himself of the notice given in due time by any other party to it, against any other person upon the bill, who would be liable to him, if he, the holder, had himself given him due notice of the dishonor. See also the last note to § 304; Stafford v. Yates, 18 John. 327; Stanton v. Blossom, 14 Mass. 116; Bank of U. S. v. Goddard, 5 Mason, 366; Bachellor v. Priest, 12 Pick. 406; Maro v. Johnson, 9 Yerger, 6; 3 Kent, (5th ed.) 108. The doctrine of the principal case, as well as of Tyndal v. Brown, 1 Term R. 167, on this point seems to be entirely over-ruled.

(1) 1 Term Rep. 167.

v. Brown; and there is great reason in it; for the ground of discharging the drawer is, that the holder gives credit to some person liable as between him and the drawer. Notice from any other person, that the Bill is not paid, is not notice, that the holder does not give credit to a third person. The doctrine has been acted upon very often since.

The Petition was dismissed. —

As to the notice necessary to be given to the drawer of a bill of exchange that has been dishonored, see, ante, note 1 to Wright v. Simpson, 6 V. 714. And that, where a bill has been taken for a previously constituted debt, if such bill be not paid, the creditor may resort to his demand for the antecedent debt: see the note to Ex parte Shuttleworth, 3 V. 368. So, a renewed bill, given and accepted upon terms, if those terms are not strictly complied with by the debtor, is like a case of mere accord without satisfaction, and the creditor, giving up the renewed or substituted bill, may recover upon the original bill, (Norris v. Aylett, 2 Campb. 331,) unless he has neglected to procure payment of the substituted bill in a reasonable time, and by his default the money has been lost to the drawer. Smith v. Wilson, Andr. 190. It will, however, be sufficient for the creditor to prove presentation of the substituted bill to the acceptor for payment, and that it was dishonored, without proving, in an action on the original bill, that he gave notice to the drawer of the substituted bill of the dishonor of that bill, as, if he had sued upon it, he must have done. Bishop v. Rose, 3 Mau. & Sel. 367.

BEAUMONT v. BOULTBEE. (a)

[1802, AUGUST 10, 11, 23.]

ACCOUNTS opened, and a general account decreed, against an agent, who was also tenant to his principal, in respect of fraud (b).

The character of agent accompanying him in his situation, as tenant, deprives him of the benefit of an objection that might be competent to another person: as the laches of the Plaintiff in not bringing forward the demand at an earlier period (c), [p. 599.]

The decree affirmed on a re-hearing, [p. 599.]

Accounts settled between two agents without vouchers, upon confidence, not to be considered settled against their principal without liberty to surcharge and falsify (d), [p. 617.]

THE decree in this cause (1) directed an account of the quantity of coals got from the Newbold Colliery, beyond 10,000 loads in every year during the lease, dated the 1st of August, 1760, and of the value thereof; and an account of what was paid by Joseph Boulbee, deceased, to Edward Dawson and John Cotton respectively for the purchases from them; and interest to be computed thereon at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from the respective times of payment, until Boulbee had raised so much coal beyond the quantity of 10,000 loads in each year as was sufficient to repay such sums of money so paid to Dawson and Cotton, with interest thereon computed as aforesaid; and that what should be found due in respect thereof should be deducted from the value of the overplus of coal got from the said colliery. The Master was directed to inquire, whether the Defendant would elect to convey so much of the estate, called Rotten Row and the Manor of Thringston, as remained unsold, to the Plaintiff; and in case the Defendant should not elect to make such conveyance, it was ordered, that he should pay the value of such overplus of coal after such deduction, as aforesaid, to the Plaintiff; and if the Defendant should elect to convey, then the Master was also to take an account of what was paid by Joseph Boulbee, deceased, for the purchase of the said estate, and compute interest on the said purchase at the rate of 4 per cent. per annum from the time of payment of such purchase-money, after deducting

(a) See the notes to this case, ante, 5 V. 485. It is ordinarily the duty of agents to keep regular accounts and vouchers of the business in the course of their agency, and if this duty is not faithfully performed, the omission will always be construed unfavorable to the rights of the agent, and care will be taken that the principal shall not suffer thereby. Story, Agency, § 332, and note (1); Lord Hardwicke v. Vernon, ante, 4 V. 418, note (1), of Mr. Hovenden. See also on this subject of the duties of agents and others acting in a fiduciary character, 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 218; Garthside v. Sherwood, 1 Bro. C. C. (Am. ed. 1844,) 558-565, notes.

(b) See 1 Story, Eq. Jur. § 523; Matthews v. Wallwyn, ante, 4 V. 125, and note (b); Newman v. Payne, ante, 2 V. 199, note (a); Sloughton v. Lynch, 2 John. Ch. 217; Higginson v. Fabre, 3 Desaus. 93.

(c) Ante, 5 V. 485, note (a).

(d) See Matthews v. Wallwyn, ante, 4 V. 118, note (b).

(1) Reported, ante, vol. v. 485.

what had been received for the part of the said estate sold ; and in such case it was farther ordered, that what should be found due for principal and interest of the said purchase-money after such * deduction, as aforesaid, should be deducted from [* 600] the aforesaid value of the overplus of coal got from the said colliery ; and in such case it was farther ordered, that the Defendant should convey so much of the estate, called Rotten Row and the Manor of Thringston, as remained unsold, to the Plaintiff free from incumbrances.

A petition was presented by the Defendant ; praying a re-hearing of so much of the decree as directs him to account for the extra quantities of coal got by Joseph Boulbee, deceased, from the said colliery, beyond the 10,000 stack loads per annum.

Mr. Mansfield and Mr. Hart, in support of the Petition of Re-hearing, insisted principally upon the length of time elapsed before the demand : a demand set up against an executor ; the property having been disposed of under the impression, that no such demand would be raised ; the vouchers lost, &c.

Mr. Richards, and Mr. Stanley, in support of the Decree, urged the ignorance of Bridge upon the subject ; and the duty of Boulbee, in a situation of trust and confidence, to protect his employer in his dealings with any other person, much more in any bargain with himself. They compared it to the case of Gibson v. Jeyes (1), a sale by an attorney to his client, and, with reference to the advantages gained by dealing with the owners of the adjoining collieries, to the cases of trustees and executors dealing with the trust property for their own benefit (2). Admitting the hardship in many cases of proceeding against an executor after a considerable length of time, when vouchers may have been lost, &c. that objection, it was insisted, was not applicable to a case, * where there was [* 601] no suggestion of that fact, and no doubt, that the money was still due : the son also having assisted his father in all the transactions ; and the disposition made by the father of his property being necessarily subject to the consequences of having acted in this manner.

Aug. 23d. The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON], (after stating that part of the Decree, which was the subject of the Petition).

The bill also prayed relief ; which appears to have been denied by the decree ; particularly an account of all dealings and transactions from 1783 to the settlement of the last account ; and relief is prayed, if the Court does not think proper to open those accounts, for liberty to surcharge and falsify. Neither relief was given as to so much of the transactions up to the last settlement of accounts : but the Court has contented itself with giving the account from the foot of the accounts so settled.

The petition applies only to one particular direction ; and it will be necessary for understanding this case thoroughly, and will be some security for a right decision, to consider all the circumstances of the transaction from 1757 to the filing of the bill ; certainly taking care, that inferences arising from one transaction shall not press too much upon the judgment to be formed as to another transaction : but every transaction in the history of the business is in some degree to be considered with regard to every other transaction in the same period.

(1) Ante, vol. vi. 266.

(2) See Ex parte Hughes, Ex parte Lacey, Lister v. Lister, ante, vol. vi. 617, 625, 631, and the references.

It seems, a person named Yarwood, a relation of Boulbee, was in possession of the property at some period previous to 1757.

[*602] At what time Boulbee himself *came into the possession I cannot determine ; as there is a different result from the papers. There is something like an agreement for him to take possession in 1756 : but from the accounts he does not seem to have taken possession till 1757. He took possession, as it appears, from those accounts, previous to the lease, at a rent of 200*l.* a-year as to the colliery ; for they give credit to Sir George Beaumont for that rent previous to the lease. Also in a very early period of the accounts (1760), before the lease, there is a document, an account settled ; which has a tendency to show, what was the nature of the duty Boulbee took upon himself for the salary of 20*l.* per annum ; for though subsequent to the lease that salary was frequently, and generally, charged dryly for collecting the rents, yet the first time there is any mention of the duty in the accounts, the entry is thus made :

“ For looking after your estates and collecting your rents for one year.”

And it is impossible upon the letters, and attending to the conduct of the present Defendant, when his allowance was raised from 20*l.* not to perceive, that it was understood, that there was attached upon him the duty of an under-steward, subject certainly to the revision of a superior steward, as usual in the case of a gentleman of large fortune, who cannot personally manage his own affairs. There is decisive evidence under the hand of the Boulbees, that it was the duty of Boulbee to look after the estate rather more than merely collecting the rents ; and that on that account he had the property cheaper in addition to his salary of 20*l.* a-year. There was an obligation resulting from the duty of the mixed character of tenant of the colliery and part of the estate and in a sense the manager of the whole estate. It was *not in the nature of things, considering Bridge's residence, and engagements, that he could control, as a duty upon him, for the improvement, melioration, and management, of this estate, except acting by Boulbee's advice ; and I agree with Lord Rosslyn, as represented in the Report, that to a certain extent a duty was imposed upon him, proposing to derive interest in the estate, to represent truly what he knew of it from his intercourse with it as steward. It appears by a letter, dated the 1st of June, 1757, in Boulbee's hand, that he had been as early as that date dealing with Dawson for the coals in his land ; and at that time dealing on behalf of Sir George Beaumont.

[*603]

It is necessary to give very particular attention to the contents of the lease. I am not able to satisfy my mind, how this lease upon the face of it only reserves the rent of 140*l.* a year ; when it is clear, 200*l.* was the stipulated rent, paid up to 1760 ; and a bond was given for the additional rent of 60*l.* : whether it was upon some management with respect to the public taxes, or what was the plan, I ought not to conjecture, and certainly I cannot determine : for there is no evidence upon it. This is a dead rent. It was not to be apportioned with regard to the quantity of coals got : but that rent was to be paid at all events. The lessor seems to think it for his benefit to have what they call a going or working colliery ; and undoubtedly in many instances it prevents the customers going elsewhere. Therefore an obligation was expressly imposed upon Boulbee, that he should work the mine, and in a husbandlike manner ; and a great variety of expression is used for that purpose ; and a power of inspection is reserved to the landlord and his agents ; and there is an express covenant by Boulbee to deliver up at the end of the lease all the premises, and expressly to keep in repair the fire engine, and at the expiration of the *lease to deliver it up in at least as good condition as it was at the beginning of the lease. Then he covenants not to work beyond 10,000 loads in any one year.

This lease, when we are considering the effect of it in a Court of Justice, is a bargain, with which the parties at the time must be taken to be perfectly contented. It must be taken, that Sir George Beaumont was content to demise this property ; and it is not necessary to look for the present at the charge, that he had not sufficient information : and Boulbee must be taken to have been content at that time to take the premises, such as they were, and in such condition : the engine in the state of repair, in which it then was ; and all the premises, as they were : and with the obligation to work the colliery according to his covenant ; and the necessary effect is, that, if the machinery should not be sufficient during the lease, he must be understood to be content with the obligation at his own expense to make it sufficient. There is also a covenant, which imposes upon him, as a duty, not merely to place himself in a situation to be called upon to make satisfaction for a breach of his covenant, but to observe it, and making it his duty, generally speaking, to forbear working any coal beyond 10,000 loads. Having entered into the lease he recollects, that he might take more or less in different years ; and therefore there would be an inconvenience in being limited to that quantity in each year ; and that upon the whole it was not expedient between lessor and lessee ; for I now put it so. I doubt a little, whether that construction of this memorandum, which supposes that the account of these over-workings could not be settled till the end of the lease, was the necessary one ; though it is clear, Boulbee acted upon it, as if that was the construction; for no account of the quantity of the over-working was made up till 1780. That memorandum is a material stipulation, having reference to the covenant in the lease, intending to secure to Sir George Beaumont, that, if the colliery should be thrown upon his hands at the end of the lease, it should be a going, working, colliery; and he should take possession of a colliery producing a profit. Nothing material occurred from the execution of the lease till 1769, except that accounts were rendered to Bridge of the rent of the colliery, of the management in a sense; for I take the letters accompanying those accounts to be important evidence as to the duty, with which Boulbee's character clothed him; and these accounts in common with those, down to 1780, are accounts, with regard to which, though Bridge was put in possession of the vouchers as to other persons, he was not as to the accounts between himself and Boulbee.

I should have had very strong doubt, whether, attending to the character, in which Bridge and Boulbee stood, it was competent to the latter, if the Equity was pressed to the utmost, to complain of a decree going a great deal farther upon dealings and transactions between 1783 and the date of the decree, than a decree, which does not touch any account in that period; whether it is competent to any under-steward to be permitted to take advantage of accounts, as settled, which he owing a duty to his master knew another owing also a duty to his master had not settled with those forms, and that production giving authenticity to settled accounts as such; and it would have been a very considerable time, before I should have parted with those parts of the case without giving a complete liberty to surcharge and falsify all those accounts, and upon that ground. This is material in another view; for such a transaction as an under-steward between 1757 and 1794 having settled all accounts [* 606] with the upper-steward without vouchers, * and upon mere confidence, amounts to most weighty and momentous evidence of the confidence reposed, and comes to be material as evidence of the extent and amount of that confidence, when the transaction took place in 1780.

In 1763 the old engine, which Boulbee was under covenant to repair, and to leave in a specified state of repair, seems to have been abandoned by Boulbee; and I have no doubt, that was upon some agreement or understanding with Bridge; for I perceive in the account of 1764 or 1765 Boulbee takes notice, that he had fallen a quantity of oak wood; which he says he is to be at liberty to apply without charge to the new engine. That account seems evidence, that the nature of the transaction was, that if Boulbee did not choose to go on with the old engine under the obligations of the covenant, those obligations were to be transferred to the new engine; and he was content with that stipulation, provided the lessor only gave him timber necessary for the erection of the new engine. That is also the inference from this; that in a paper of May 1766 there is an express article as to repairing the engine; and the lessor was to furnish nothing but a new boiler; which, it is evident, is not a very essential part of the expenditure of the repairs. It is incumbent upon Boulbee to show, that was not the nature of the transaction: for there is no express written contract between him and his landlord.

From 1763 there is nothing to observe till the contracts with Dawson and Cotton. The contract with Dawson was one Boulbee had in view as early as June 1757; as appears from a paper of that date; and I will take it for this purpose, that it is not open to the observation, that there was a breach of trust from the communication * of the level: but I take it as [* 607] furnishing this question: upon what terms as between him and his landlord could Boulbee acquire, by virtue of the command his tenancy gave him, such an interest in their coal as it appears he did acquire in that coal by looking into his express contracts with those persons.

The contract with Dawson was concluded upon the 6th of February, 1766; and contains these conditions: "but" (which is very important) "without sinking or making any pit or pits, and" (which is also very important) "without liberty of stacking or placing such coals, when got, or" (which is also very important) "of making any roads, &c."; and there is an express covenant by Boulbee to take the coal in this manner without any of these easements upon the surface of the ground.

The contract with Cotton in 1772 I need not state particularly. It was to get the coal under his land in the same manner, and with no more liberty and easement upon the soil than as to Dawson's.

Then see, how it stands. Boulbee being tenant to Sir George Beaumont, and Sir George Beaumont's colliery furnishing the level, with which the coals under Dawson's and Cotton's lands could be got, and without which their coal could not be got, Boulbee does not contract with them to get their coal, merely taking advantage in his character of tenant to Sir George Beaumont, having in that character the level, that would enable him to get their coal; but having that advantage, which alone would enable him in any manner to get the coal, he agrees in effect to sell to them the benefit of that level, which is not his to sell; provided they will let him enjoy their coal in a way, in which he could not without the leave of

* Sir George Beaumont; expressly undertaking to dig no [* 608] shaft, to stack no coals, &c. but through his colliery to bring those coals to bank, and upon his land to stack them, from his land to sell them, and upon his land to make use of all the easements and liberties of pits, wagon-ways, &c. necessary for the sale of those coals. I should not hesitate to say, that in every act he did he was a wrong-doer; unless he meant Sir George Beaumont to have the benefit. He was a wrong-doer in selling the level, and all the other acts; and as I should not infer, that he meant to be a trespasser, unless that purpose is clear, the true effect of his acts, as evidence of his intention, is, that the benefit he had got as lessee by the use of the property should upon reasonable terms be acquired for his landlord, and not for himself (a).

Then in 1780 those transactions occurred, upon which this petition is brought; and I think with Lord Rosslyn, that to a very considerable extent Boulbee was clothed by his character as steward with the duty of representing generally the circumstances of the estates fairly to Sir George Beaumont on behalf of all dealing for interests in the estate. But for the moment laying out of the question the obligation attaching upon him as steward, it is clear, towards the expiration of the lease he had broken his covenant by over-working; and if he took upon himself for the information of the steward to represent the terms, upon which it was reasonable that the account should be settled, and took to himself the confidence of Sir George Beaumont, directly, or by taking to himself the confidence of Bridge, then he was bound to a reasonable and accurate representation; and it is difficult to discharge him from the obligation of the decree, taking it upon the transaction of 1780, and without looking more particularly at him in the character and with the obligations [* 609] of steward. The *representations began upon the 29th of November, 1780. The letter of that date contains an account of the coals got in 1757-8, 1758-9, 1759-60; and it states, that less than 10,000 loads were got in those years. I remark it; for as steward to any one else he would have said, it was quite unreasonable, that, when a man had the enjoyment under a contract, and paid his rent, for three years, because he had got less than he had stipulated for in those three years, any part of the rent should be called back twenty years afterwards for reasons not directly connected with what passed twenty years before. That he would undoubtedly have said, if he had been landlord instead of tenant.

With respect to the account, as given in the letter, and the payments to Dawson and Cotton, upon both those contracts it is a question, if it does not amount to the same thing by the calculation; for there would not be an excess, if those quantities are not taken in: but if that was not the result, it is too favorable to him to say, he was to take those coals as tenant to Sir George Beaumont: rather he must acquire them, or the full value, for his landlord, subject to just allowances only: I do not enter into the consideration, whether this was sent studiously with all this dark expression to the person, who was to understand it, if any one could; for Bridge had dealt with Boulbee in all the transactions. No one else knew any of them. But it appears, Bridge did not understand it.

With respect to Bridge's letter of the 13th of December, 1780, in answer, it is exceedingly true, a man in the relation of steward coming to enter into a transaction of compromise may put himself altogether in an adverse situation; may devest himself of the character of steward altogether; and deal so that no one can state, that any confidence was reposed in him. This letter would perhaps by no means justify so much observation, if written to a man, with whom Bridge was not in the habit of corresponding; that leading to a correspondence of a particular nature; but he is writing here in terms very much as if he was writing to any other tenant: and if Boultee meant to get the best bargain his knowledge would enable him to get, one question is, whether having acquired that knowledge in the service of his master it should be used for that purpose. No question could arise, that he might put himself in an adverse situation. But does he attempt to put himself in that character? He does not; and his answer to that letter amounts to a representation in nature of a warranty, that his advice was reasonable, and such as his two employers, (for I consider both Sir George Beaumont and Bridge as his employers,) might rely on; and advice of such character, that I would not take upon myself now to say, if the propositions had been acted upon more distinctly than they appear to have been, it would not have been within the power of the Court to relieve even in such a case. But it is not necessary to consider that. This letter (1) (printed in the Report) is very material. The rough copy states, "I do not desire or expect any allowance." These words are struck out. I cannot read this rough draft of the letter without being convinced, he thought this a most impudent demand; so strong, that at first he could hardly pen the request. It is, to be sure, a very extraordinary demand in respect of short-working for three years prior to the lease in 1760, without any demand in that year with regard to that; and when it was * his duty to make it then; the lease being made by his [* 611] master upon consideration of all the circumstances; and the lessee dealing for himself then upon those circumstances with regard to all he then thought it reasonable to demand. The rough draft then goes on thus:

(a) Story, Agency, § 192; Massey v. Davies, ante, 2 V. 317, note (a), and cases cited.

"I am very willing to pay an additional year's rent of 150*l.* for every 10,000 loads." &c. The words "I am very willing to pay" are struck out; and he inserts as an assertion, that "the most reasonable" and (not only that but) "the regular mode of payment, would undoubtedly be an additional year's rent of 150*l.* for every 10,000 loads, which exceeds my quantity." With respect to the statement as to the purchase of the Rotten Row and the Manor of Thringston, there is evidence of a tender of that purchase to the guardians of Sir George Beaumont. The reason assigned, why that purchase ought to have been Sir George's and not his, is very material; because it leads to the question, what is the construction of the proposition in 1780, and, whether it was ever carried into effect.

(1) The Lord Chancellor stated this letter, (see, ante, vol. v. 490,) from the rough copy, which by accident had been sent to his Lordship with the papers in evidence. At the close of the judgment his Lordship said, it made no difference in his decision.

The conclusion of the letter shows, he expected an answer; and that answer was to close this proposition.

This letter contains certainly some propositions, which may be called argument, and some which may be called assertion or representation. He begins with argument as to the coal wrought in the three years. I do not say much upon it; for it is upon the face of it so glaringly unreasonable, so monstrously open to objection, that no one can doubt upon, or misunderstand it: therefore, if all the letter contained was such a proposition, I should say, there was a distinct, intelligible, letter; upon which they either had or had not acted. As to the additional rent of 150*l., it is a very different proposition to give that rent, and to state, as matter of fact (and it can [ 612] be nothing * else than matter of fact), that it is the most regular mode; which applies to a habit; and he adds the word "undoubtedly." There never was a more unreasonable proposition. It is also as little the regular mode of payment as any, that can be suggested. What do the res gestae in this cause furnish as evidence upon that? When in 1784 the new engine was erected, and the colliery was to be wrought upon his reliance, that Sir George Beaumont would do what was reasonable, did Boultnbee in that or the subsequent year imagine, that if he was to get 5000 loads out of a coal pit, it was reasonable to increase the quantity to 10,000 upon the same terms? No: the bargain there is that, which ought to have been made in this instance, that the additional quantity is to be paid for at a much higher rate, namely, 1*s.* 6*d.*: the payment for the original quantity being 1*s.* The reason is obvious. The labor, expense, capital, and work, are infinitely less, because so much has been employed in getting the original quantity. But if that is not reasonable, where the lease permits you to get additional quantities, it is much less so, where it forbids that; and therefore you have no right to propose an additional rent; and the additional quantity ought to be accounted for according to the justice resulting from the obligation of the contract not to take more: namely, an account of the value, deducting only just allowances: that is for the labor of getting it. This is therefore a representation false, if he had power to get more; and more palpably false, being forbid to get more.

There is a circumstance belonging to this case; that, though Cotton's coal was contracted for in 1772, and Dawson's at a different period, I cannot find, that the facts of those contracts were ever communicated. No visit of Bridge to the colliery could inform him of it; and if Boultnbee had given the communication he [* 613] ought, * he should have sent the contracts, and the express terms.

With respect to his statement as to the fire engine, it must be remembered, he was under covenant to keep the old engine in sufficient repair; and all he could in reason demand appears from that document to be the oak timber. What right had he to demand any thing in respect of that engine? Is it clear, he had any right to dispose of the engine ; supposing his tenancy put an end to ; and considering his obligation as to the old engine ? There never was a more improvident act, I do not say, blamable, for guardians do not like to enter into those speculations, than permitting Boulbee to be the purchaser of this estate of Rotten Row and Thringston. The representation made by Boulbee was, that it was to be purchased for 2000*l.* He himself gets it for 1600*l.* I do not recollect, that the alteration of the price was communicated ; which might be very material. In 1780 they were dealing for the terms, upon which they were to part at the expiration of the lease, not with regard to the continuance of the relation of lessor and lessee. He speaks, not of that, which was deep coal at the time of the purchase, but of the future coal, and future operations necessary to get at the coal to advantage. Upon the latter part of the proposition Lord Rosslyn has understood it to mean this ; that if the account was to be closed, not merely an allowance was craved with regard to the difference between 10*l.* a-year, and the interest of 1600*l.*, but that it was closed upon these terms ; that what ought originally to have been Sir George Beaumont's should become his ; which implies, that he should pay for it, without any thing said as to that ; and that is the necessary construction of the letter in my opinion : otherwise it was a most unreasonable demand ; if they were to part upon the terms, that Sir George Beaumont is to have his old estate back, * and Boulbee to keep this ; and if the assertion is true, [* 614] that the coal could never be got to advantage without it.

What consideration was Sir George Beaumont to have for paying the whole difference between 10*l.* a-year and the interest of 1600*l.*, between the periods of the purchase and dissolving the relation ? The consideration proposed was, that by means of that estate he will have the benefit of getting the deep coal adjoining. That benefit he cannot have, unless he has the estate. That proposition therefore necessarily must be taken to mean, that if the matter was to be settled upon the footing of this letter, it should include an arrangement making Sir George Beaumont the owner of that estate, and not leaving Boulbee the owner. Nothing was done upon that representation. The transactions afterwards took place as to building the new engine, and giving leave to get larger quantities of coal than was stipulated ; and they go on till 1794 ; when the connection was dissolved ; and they quarrelled.

I make no observation as to the Newbold Colliery ; as to the rents of 220*l.* and 50*l.* ; beyond this ; that Boulbee had that colliery, as he had all the others, upon these terms, in effect here stipulated, and stated to be fair and just. There is testimony to this effect, that at that time the Newbold colliery was thought to be failing : but they were dealing upon terms in that article, showing, that Sir George Beaumont was acting upon Boulbee's representation ; and I cannot look at the subsequent transactions, the land-tax assessments, &c., without feeling this arising out of his conduct ; that he felt a duty upon him to represent the state of the property ; and FORD, Ex parte.

THREE OTHER PETITIONS.

[1801, DEC. 26, AND SEVERAL OTHER DAYS. 1802.]

ORDER made in the case of Drury Lane Theatre upon the authority of the cases of the Royal Circus and the Opera House.

THESE petitions brought before the Court the affairs of the Theatre Royal in Drury Lane ; which had fallen into a state of great embarrassment among various incumbrances and claims under the execution of a deed of trust.

[* 618] * The Lord CHANCELLOR [ELDON] expressed great reluctance to entertain jurisdiction upon a subject so unmanageable ; and said he would not, if the cases of the Royal Circus and the Opera House (1) had not been heard : but, that he was bound by those authorities. His Lordship observed, that the consequences of the interference of the Court by appointing a Receiver upon such a property must be ruinous : and that of necessity the first provision must be for those demands, without providing for which it would be impossible for the Theatre to go on : as the rent, the salaries of the performers, &c.

After a discussion in length without example, having taken up several days at different periods, an arrangement was proposed ; according to which an Order was made in the Vacation after Trinity Term 1802.

THAT, although the regulation of the details of a theatre is not a very manageable jurisdiction, Courts of Equity are bound by precedent not to renounce it, dealing with such questions, exactly as if they were cases of ordinary partnerships, see, ante, note 2 to Ex parte O'Reilly, 1 V. 112.

(1) Ante, Ex parte O'Reilly, vol. i. 112, and the notes, 130, and vol. iv. 628.

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

A

ACCOUNT.

Account of rents and profits confined to the filing of the bill under special circumstances; as laches by the Cestui que trust in not asserting his right. Pettiford v. Prescott. 540

See Copyright, 1. Principal and Agent, 2, 3, 4.

ADMINISTRATION of ASSETS.

See Charity, 2.

ADMINISTRATION (TEMPORARY.)

1. Administration granted under statute 38 Geo. III. c. 87; where the executor went to Scotland. It cannot be disputed in this Court; though it may at law. Though not for a limited time, it is for a limited purpose; viz. being made Defendant to suits in equity. The effect of the return of the executor, in this instance the executor's executor, is, that he must be made a party in the usual course: and then the temporary administrator may account, have his costs, and be discharged; but the proceedings had are not put an end to. Rainsford v. Taynton. 460

2. Administration during a particular period, or till a particular

ADMINISTRATION—continued. event, determines at that period, or on that event: for instance an administration during the absence of an executor; and the administrator ought in his declaration to aver, that the executor is out of the realm. 467

ADVOWSON.

Advowson in gross assets by descent at common law for specialty debts. 447

AFFIDAVIT.—See Injunction, 2.

AGENT.—See Principal, Prize. AGREEMENT.

1. Decree for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, of which only one part, signed by the Plaintiff, was found in the possession of the Defendant, upon the circumstances, possession, drafts prepared and approved and the execution deferred only till repairs completed. An extension of the term according to a variation of the agreement, also in writing, was refused on the ground of want of consideration. Robson v. Collins. 130

2. Specific performance of a written agreement with a variation by writing; not with a variation by parol. 133

3. Where the time, at which the contract was to be executed, is

AGREEMENT—continued.

- not material, and there is no unreasonable delay, the vendor, though not having a good title at the time the contract was to be executed, nor when the bill was filed, but being able to make a title at the hearing, is entitled to a specific performance. Wynn v. Morgan. 202
4. Though a Defendant resisting a specific performance may go into parol evidence, that by fraud the written agreement does not express the real terms, a Plaintiff cannot for the purpose of obtaining a specific performance with a variation. Woolam v. Hearn. 211
5. By the rule of law, independent of the Statute of Frauds, parol evidence cannot be received to contradict a written agreement. 218
6. Whether a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years is determinable at either of the intervening periods at the option of both parties, or of the lessee only, nothing being expressed as to that, Quære. Dann v. Spurrier.* 231
7. The relief in respect of expenditure under an erroneous opinion of title or an expectation of a larger interest, or that the enjoyment would not be disturbed, with the knowledge and permission of the other party, requires a case of bad faith clearly made out. In this instance it failed for want of evidence. Dann v. Spurrier. 231
8. A. receiving goods under circumstances, that would give him a right to return them, disaffirming the contract, if it would be against the interest of the other to return them, may sell them, considering himself as agent, and bring an action for the difference. 247

* Determined, that the option is confined to the lessee. 3 Bos. & Pul. 399, 442.

AGREEMENT—continued.

9. Specific performance decreed : the abstract, though delivered very late, and under a notice, that the vendee would insist on his deposit with interest if the title should not be made out, and possession delivered by the time of payment, having been received and kept without objection ; and the vendee upon the construction and the circumstances not being entitled to insist on the time, as the essence of the contract. Seton v. Slade. 265
10. An agreement signed by one party only good to charge him within the Statute of Frauds. Seton v. Slade. 265
11. Time not regarded in this Court as at law : for instance the case of redemption of a mortgage ; which cannot be prevented even by special agreement. So upon a mortgage at 5 per cent. with condition for 4, if regularly paid, or at 4 per cent. to have 5, if not regularly paid : the 5 per cent. regarded in this Court only as a penalty to secure the 4 ; and relief given upon that principle. So in the old cases upon relief against the penalty of a bond, before the jurisdiction at law. 273, 274
12. From the execution of the contract the estate is in equity the property of the vendee, descendible and devisable, as such. 274
13. To entitle the heir to the performance of an agreement for a purchase out of the personal estate, the agreement must have been binding upon the parties contracting, so that the property was converted in equity before the death. Buckmaster v. Harrop. 341
14. Payment of the auction duty is not a part-performance taking an agreement out of the Statute of Frauds. Buckmaster v. Harrop. 341
15. The ground of the doctrine of

AGREEMENT—continued.

part-performance is fraud. Buckmaster v. Harrop. 341

See Auction. Copyright, 2.
Revocation, 8, 13,

ALIMONY.

See Ne execat Regno, 1, 2, 4.

ANNUITY.—Ante, vol. v. 610.

1. Upon the Plaintiff's appeal from the decree at the Rolls the decree was reversed; and an account was directed of the consideration paid by the original grantee of the annuity, with interest at 5 per cent.; and of the payments of the annuity to the grantee or any persons claiming under him by assignment or otherwise; to be applied in discharge of the interest and principal of the consideration: and if the consideration with interest shall appear fully repaid, or, if not, upon payment by the Plaintiff of what shall be remaining due from him, the securities to be delivered up, &c., without costs: the Lord Chancellor's opinion being in favor of the jurisdiction; that the principle of the relief is, not redemption, but the invalidity of the grant; and that the assignee, unless under special circumstances, is in the situation of the grantee. Bromley v. Holland. 3

2. Courts of law have no authority to order instruments void under the Annuity Act to be delivered up, farther than the Act expressly gives it. 18

3. Annuity void under the Act: at law the balance of the consideration may be recovered, deducting the payments under the annuity. 23

4. Annuity void under the Act: upon an account of the consideration and the payments under the annuity, if the balance is against the grantee, it has been decided in equity, (Byne v. Potter, ante, Vol. V. 609,) that it cannot be recovered. 24

ANNUITY—continued.

5. Distinction between an annuity and a legacy; the former commences from the death; and the first payment is due at the end of the year: a legacy, generally, does not begin to carry interest till the end of the year. 96

6. An annuitant fails under the general character of legatee; unless distinguished by the testator: entitled therefore under a residuary bequest in favor of legatees. Sibley v. Perry. 522

See Bankrupt, 3. Interest, Insurable. Legacy, 2, 3, 4.

ANSWER.—See Charge and Discharge, 3. Copyright, 1.APPEALS TO THE LORDS.

See page 88.

APPOINTMENT.

See Dower, 2. Power. Revocation, 14.

APPOINTMENT OF STEWARD.

See Power, 3. Trustee, 1.

ARREST.—See Privilege.ARTICLES (MARRIAGE).

The rule, that a limitation to the heirs of the body in articles shall be carried into execution by a strict settlement, does not prevail, where the concurrence of both parents would be necessary to bar the entail. 390

ASSETS.—See Advowson. Exoneration. Power, 7.ASSETS (CONVERSION OF).

1. General residuary bequest, including a leasehold farm, with the stock, to be converted into money as soon as conveniently may be, upon trust to pay the interest, &c. for life, and as to the capital for the children. The stock being considerably increased between the death in April and the sale at Michaelmas, it was decreed, that the conversion was in a reasonable time; and the party entitled for life should have interest from the conversion; and as to premises, that

* See the note, ante, page 211.

ASSETS—continued.

- from a defect of title could not be sold, that, being for the interest of all, that they should not be sold, a value should be set upon them, to carry interest at 4 per cent. from the death. Gibson v. Bott. 89
2. General rule, that where personal property is bequeathed for life with remainders over, and not specifically, it is to be converted into the 3 per cents., subject in the case of a real security to an inquiry, whether it will be for the benefit of all parties: and the tenant for life is entitled only upon that principle. Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth. 137
3. The Court, in laying out money in the funds, does not attend to the difference in the price of stock. 551

See Trust (Resulting), 3.

ASSETS (EQUITABLE).

- A charge for payment of debts makes equitable assets. Bailey v. Elkins. 319

ASSETS (MARSHALLED).

Simple-contract debts not charged upon real estate by a Will, first devising, that all his debts and funeral expenses might be satisfied and paid by his executors; all the real estate being specifically devised. Assets marshalled, but no sale decreed, until the infant devisee attains twenty-one.* Powell v. Robins. 209

See Executor, 3.

ASSIGNEE.—See Annuity, 1.ATTORNEY.—See Power of Attorney. Privilege, 1.*AUCTION.

1. Bill for specific performance of a purchase by auction dismissed by Lord Rosslyn with costs, merely as being a hard bargain, from inadequacy of value. Upon a re-hearing, Lord Eldon was of opinion, that was not a sufficient ground for refusing a spe-

* See the note, ante, p. 211.

AUCTION—continued.

- cific performance of a purchase by auction without something more, as fraud or surprise, &c. But the decree was not affected upon another ground; that a material witness being incompetent, the bill was not supported by evidence. White v. Damon. 30
2. Sale of land by auction is within the statute of frauds; and the name of the vendee being put down by the auctioneer is not sufficient. Buckmaster v. Harrop. 341

See Agreement, 14.

AUTHOR.—See Copyright.B*BAILIFF.—See Privilege, 1, 4.*BANKRUPT.

1. A mere gift of money by the bankrupt to his son not within the statute, 1 Jam. I. c. 15. Ex parte Shorland. 88
2. Adjudication of bankruptcy on Saturday too late for the Gazette. On Monday another solicitor having notice obtained a supersedeas under the general Order, 26th June, 1793: both the bankruptcy and the supersedeas appeared in the Gazette on Tuesday. The supersedeas was quashed; and a procedendo issued. Ex parte Ellis. 135
3. Bond upon a loan of stock, to secure a re-transfer and the dividends in the mean time. The obligor becoming a bankrupt after the day mentioned in the condition, proof was admitted for the amount of the dividends due before the bankruptcy, and the value of the stock at the date of the Commission, by analogy to the case of annuities. Ex parte Day. 301
4. Though a Commission of Bankruptcy cannot stand upon a concerted act of bankruptcy, it may be supported, if any other act of

BANKRUPT—continued.	BARON AND FEME—continued.
bankruptcy, not liable to that objection, has been committed ; and the privity of the bankrupt is no objection ; nor, that the object of the Commission is to defeat an execution. Ex parte Edmonson. 303	band of B. joined in a sale. The purchase-money was laid out in the funds in the names of trustees without any declaration of trust or agreement as to the applica- tion : nor was any notice of this fund taken in the Wills of B. and her husband, and B. being the survivor, made a general disposi- tion of all her personal estate in favor of A. A., though still un- married, held absolutely entitled to the stock. Scawen v. Blunt. 294
5. Petition to supersede a Commis- sion of Bankrupt, before any meeting, upon affidavits of the solvency of the bankrupt, that he never committed an act of bank- ruptcy, and did not owe the peti- tioning creditor 100 l. , refused : nor would the Lord Chancellor direct an issue. Ex parte Stokes. 405	4. Husband under the circumstan- ces decreed to procure his wife to join in a surrender of copy- hold estate. Stephenson v. Morris. 474
6. Commission of Bankrupt an exe- cution for all creditors. The petitioning creditor therefore cannot receive his debt, and the Commission be superseded, while the others are unsatisfied. 408	See Ward of Court.
7. Separate creditors, who had ta- ken a joint security, permitted on giving it up to resort under a Commission of Bankruptcy to their original debts. Ex parte Lobb. 592	BIDDINGS (OPENED). The rule, that an advance of 10 l. per cent. entitles the party to open biddings, not to prevail in future. Andrews v. Emerson. 420
8. Supersedeas of a country Com- mission of Bankruptcy under the General Order, 26th June, 1793, for want of notice of the adjudica- tion, though from the distance impossible by course of post. Ex parte Henderson. 137, n. See Privilege, 1, 3, 4, 5.	BILL OF EXCHANGE. 1. Bills, in lieu of which other bills are given, if permitted to remain with the holder, and the latter bills are not paid, may be enfor- ced. Ex parte Barclay 597
	2. Notice, that a bill is dishonored, to effect a discharge, must come directly from the holder. Ib.
	BOND.—See Agreement, 11.
BARON AND FEME.	C
1. Husband may forfeit or dispose of his wife's chattel real during her life : if he does not, it sur- vives to her : if he survives, it goes absolutely to him. 183	CHANCERY (COURT OF). See Prohibition, 3.
2. Many obligations, which do not survive against the husband after coverture. 183	CHARGE AND DISCHARGE.
3. A. tenant for life, in case she should so long continue unmar- ried ; in case of her marriage, to her in fee ; and in case of her decease unmarried, to her sister B. in fee. A. and B. and the hus-	1. Executor, charged by his answer, not permitted to discharge him- self by his affidavit of payments to the testator in his life. Ridge- way v. Darwin. 404
	2. Admission of the receipt of sums, which sums he had paid, &c. a good discharge. 405
	3. A party charged by his answer or examination cannot discharge

CHARGE, ETC.—continued.

himself by it, unless the whole is stated as one transaction; as, that on a particular day he received a sum, and paid it over: not, that upon a particular day he received a sum; and on a subsequent day he paid it over.

Thompson v. Lambe. 587

CHARGE ON REAL ESTATE.

See Assets (Equitable). Assets (Marshalled).

CHARITY.—See ante, Vol. I. 464.

1. Upon a re-hearing of that part of the decree, which relates to the charity, the decree was affirmed: the Lord Chancellor collecting the result of the authorities; that, where there is a general indefinite purpose, not fixing itself upon any object, the disposition is in the King by sign manual: but, where the execution is to be by a trustee, with general or some objects pointed out, there the Court will take the administration of the trust. The costs of all parties were given out of the fund as between attorney and client.

Moggridge v. Thackwell. 36

2. Formerly a portion of the residue of every man's estate was applied in charity by the ordinary. 69

3. If the general substantial intention of a Will is charity, the failure of the particular mode shall not defeat it: but the law will substitute another mode. 69

4. See The Attorney General v. Andrew, ante, Vol. III. 683. A compromise, applying part of the fund to an establishment at St. John's College, Oxford, with which the Merchant Taylors' Company are connected, and giving the rest to the next of kin, was, the Attorney General consenting, established by decree. Andrew v. The Master and Wardens of the Merchant Taylors' Company. 223

5. Bequest in trust for the poor inhabitants of several parishes; to be applied at times and in proportions, and either in money, provision, physic or clothes, as the trustees think fit. The fund being very considerable in proportion to the objects, the application was upon the principle of cy pres extended for the benefit of the same objects to purposes not expressly pointed out by the Will; instruction and apprenticing of children; against the claim of the next of kin. The Bishop of Hereford v. Adams. 324

CHARITY—continued.

6. An increase of the revenues of a charity applied for the benefit of the charity. Ex parte Jortin. 340

7. Bequest to poor relations sustained as a charity. White v. White. 423

8. In charity cases the Court often gives the relators costs beyond the taxed costs. 425

9. Residuary bequest for the purpose of educating and bringing up poor children in the Roman Catholic faith void. The fund does not go to the next of kin; but is in the disposition of the Crown to some other charitable use by sign manual. Cary v. Abbot. 490

CHILD.

The word "children," legally construed, is confined to legitimate children. 458

See Devise, 3. Guardian.
Revocation, 1.

CLERGYMAN.

1. An agreement in 1800 for a lease of a farm to a clergyman for the purpose of occupation is void under the stat. 21 Hen. VIII. c. 13. Morris v. Preston 547

2. Whether a clergyman buying a lease, as property, or taking it by devolution of law, as next of kin, &c. is within the statute 21 Hen. VIII. c. 13, Quare. 556

See Ward of Court.

COMMAND OR EAST INDIA SHIP (SALE OF). —See Illegal Contract.	COPYRIGHT—continued. fused till recovery in an action. Walcott v. Walker. 1
COMMISSION OR LUNACY. See Lunatic.	COSTS. Costs entirely in the sound discre- tion of the Court. 28
COMMISSION TO EXAMINE ABROAD. —See Practice, 9.	See Charity, 8. Mortgage, 2 Ne Ezeat Regno, 2, 4. Prochein Amy.
COMMITTEE. —See Lunatic, 3.	COURT OF CHANCERY. See Prohibition, 3.
COMMON OR PASTURE. See Injunction, 2.	COURT OF EQUITY. See Jurisdiction.
CONSIDERATION. See Agreement, 1. Auction, 1. Jurisdiction, 1. Power of At- torney.	COVENANT. —See Satisfaction, 3.
CONTEMPT. See Practice, 4. Privilege, 1. Prohibition, 1, 2. Ward of Court.	CREDITOR AND DEBTOR. See Devise, 2. Privilege.
CONTINGENCY. Contingent interest devisable, &c. 300	CREDITORS, JOINT AND SEP- ARATE. —See Bankrupt, 7.
CONTRACT. —See Agreement.	CROWN (THE). See Charity, 1. Escheat.
CONTRACT (ILLEGAL).	CY PRES. —See Charity. Power, 3.
1. A contract for sale of the com- mand of an East India ship is illegal; and therefore cannot be enforced by suit upon the equity against the fund paid by the Company as a compensation, under the regulation of 1796, to restrain the practice in future. Thomson v. Thomson. 470	D
2. Upon a contract for smuggled goods, though they are received, the money cannot be recovered. So upon an illegal insurance contrary to the Act of Parlia- ment, though the money was re- ceived by the broker, it cannot be recovered. 473	DEBTOR AND CREDITOR. See Devise, 2. Privilege.
CONVERSION OF ESTATE. See Estate.	DEBTS. —See Assets (Marshalled). Interest, Insurable.
COPYRIGHT.	DECREE. —See Practice, 7, 8.
1. The Court will not act either by giving an injunction or an ac- count, even upon a submission in the answer, upon a publica- tion of such a nature that an ac- tion could not be maintained. Walcott v. Walker. 1	DEED. —See Jurisdiction, 1.
2. Injunction against an invasion of copyright, depending upon the effect of an agreement, re-	DEMURRER. Bill alleging fraud as to quantity and quality of goods sold, not discovered till they were export- ed to America; that they were sold in consequence at a loss; and the Plaintiff being threat- ened with an action paid the original price according to the contract, under a protest, that he would seek relief in Equity; and praying an account and payment in respect of the loss, and a commission to America. Demurrer allowed. Kemp v. Pryor. 237
	See Witness, 1.
	DELIVERING UP INSTRU- MENTS. See Annuity, 2. Power of At- torney.
	DEPOSITIONS. —See Practice, 5.
	DESCENDANTS. —See Issue.

DESTRUCTION.See Injunction, 7.DEVISE.

1. Every devise of land must of necessity be specific; whether in particular or general terms: otherwise as to personal property. 147
2. A provision by Will effectual in law or in equity; for payment of creditors is not within the statute of Fraudulent Devises. 323
3. By the common law a man could not by testamentary disposition affect his lands or the guardianship of his children. 370

See Assets (Marshalled).

Contingency. Frauds (statute of), 2. Revocation.

Trust (Resulting), 3. Will.

DISCHARGE.—See Bill of Exchange, 2. Charge.DISCLAIMER.

A Defendant cannot get rid of a disclaimer without a strong case on affidavit. Seton v. Slade. 265

DISCOVERY.—See Witness, 1.DOWER.

1. A purchaser cannot protect himself against a claim of dower by a term attendant upon the inheritance, unless he has procured an assignment. Maudrell v. Maudrell. 567
2. Husband having a power of appointment, paramount the right to dower, in default thereof to himself for life, remainder to his right heirs, if the power could have effect, yet a purchaser taking by a conveyance adapted to pass the interest in the estate, as a limitation of the fee, was held to take in that way, not by way of appointment, and therefore subject to dower. Ib.
3. At law all terms are considered as terms in gross; and therefore without regard to the purpose prevent a dowress from any legal benefit from recovery in dower; for she recovers with stay of execution during the term. But equity regards the purpose, for which the term is created and subsists; and if only for the benefit of the owner of the inheritance, it is considered part of the inheritance: not absolutely merged, but so attendant as to accompany it and every right and interest growing out of it by operation of law or agreement. Not to be used therefore against the owner of the whole or any part of the inheritance: every description of ownership having a use in the term commensurate with the interest in the inheritance. When dower arises therefore, the term in a proportion is as much attendant upon that interest as during the husband's life upon the inheritance; and protects it against either heir or purchaser. 577

DOWER—continued.

DRURY-LANE THEATRE.See Theatre.E*EAST INDIA SHIP.See Contract (Illegal).EDUCATION.—See Maintenance.ELECTION.

The heir claiming under a Will, and against it a copyhold estate unsurrendered, put to his election. Pettward v. Prescott. 540

See Frauds (Statute of), 2. Will, 5.EQUITABLE ASSETS.See Assets (Equitable).EQUITABLE WASTE.See Injunction, 7.ESCHEAT.

The ordinary rule for the Crown to give a lease to the party discovering an escheat. 71

ESTATE (CONVERSION OF).

1. Upon the construction of a deed for the purpose of a partnership real estate held to be converted out and out into personal. Ripley v. Waterworth. 425
2. General principle, that where a

ESTATE (CONVERSION OF)—continued.

- person dealing upon his own property only has directed a conversion for a particular purpose, or out and out, but the produce to be applied to a particular purpose, when the purpose fails, the intention fails; and this Court regards him as not having directed the conversion. 435
3. Property held converted under the effect of a contract by relation; though the actual conversion depended on a contingency, not in the option of the owner; and did not take place during his life. 436
4. Real estate purchased with a partnership fund held to have descended to the heir against the claim of the residuary legatee. Ripley v. Waterworth. 453

ESTATE FOR LIFE.

Devise of "my copyhold estate at P. consisting of three tenements, and now under lease," &c.: but not specifying for what interest: an estate for life only passes. Pettigard v. Prescott. 540

See Articles.

ESTATE (PERSONAL).

See Devise, 1. Exoneration, 1.

ESTATE PUR AUTER VIE.

1. The interest in an estate pur auter vie to a man, his executors, administrators and assigns, beyond the debts, belongs to those who are entitled to the personal estate. The executor was therefore held a trustee for the residuary legatees. Ripley v. Waterworth. 425
2. Tenant pur auter vie made a lease for years; and died during that lease, living the Cestui que vie. The lessee for years would take the estate itself. 442

ESTATE (REAL).

See Assets (Marshalled).

ESTATE TAIL.—See Articles.

ESTOVERS.—See Injunction, 2.

EVIDENCE.

1. Parol evidence admissible to rebut a presumption; without regard to the nature of it; as, whether a mere casual conversation with a stranger, or between the parties and upon the subject; or whether at the time of the transaction, previous or subsequent. But those circumstances are very material with reference to the weight and efficacy of it. Trimmer v. Bayne. 508
2. Where the executor is trustee of the residue for the next of kin, parol declarations previous and subsequent to the will, as well as at the time, are admissible: but their weight and efficacy very different. 518

See Agreement, 2, 4, 5. Satisfaction, 2. Trust (Resulting), 2.

EXAMINATION.

See Charge and Discharge, 3.

EXECUTOR.

1. Executors charged with interest upon balances in their hands. Longmore v. Broom. 124
2. The Court will protect an executor in doing what it would order. 150
3. Transfer by an executor a clear misapplication of assets, immediately after the death, to secure a debt of the executor and future advances, under circumstances of gross negligence, though not direct fraud, set aside by general legatees. Hill v. Simpson. 152
4. In many respects and for many purposes third persons may consider executors absolute owners. 166
5. Power of disposition generally incident to an executor. 166
6. One executor and trustee charged under the circumstances with a loss occasioned by joining in the sale of stock; the other having received all the money and absconded. Chambers v. Minchin. 186

EXECUTOR—continued.

7. General rule, that executors joining in a receipt are all chargeable: in the case of trustees, only the person receiving the money. The reason of the distinction. The Lord Chancellor disapproved the relaxation in favor of executors of that rule. 198

8. At law the appointment of an executor is a gift of every thing not disposed of 228

See Charge and Discharge.
Evidence, 2. Exoneration.
Occupancy, 1, 3. Trust (Resulting), 1, 2. Trustee, 3.

EXECUTORIAL TRUST.

See Trust (Executorial).

EXEMPTION.—See Exoneration.EXONERATION.

1. To exempt the personal estate from the debts there must be declaration plain or manifest intention. 149

2. The heir of a purchaser exonerated by his personal assets from a mortgage: the result of the transaction being a personal contract; and the personal assets therefore the primary fund. Waring v. Ward 332

3. No exoneration of the heir by the personal assets of a party, who never personally contracted; or not originally, but only as a farther security in a subsequent transaction, not intended to disturb the order of charge: as the transfer of a mortgage; or the purchase of an equity of redemption: even though the interest is raised, the excess follows the subject of the original contract. 336

4. Exoneration of the heir from a mortgage, the personal debt of the ancestor. Ripley v. Waterworth. 453

FFORECLOSURE.

See Mortgage, 1.

FRAUD.

See Agreement, 4, 15. Auction,
1. Principal and Agent, 3.

FRAUDS (STATUTE OF).

1. Difference between the 5th and 6th sections of the Statute of Frauds. 372

2. Principle, upon which instruments not duly attested according to the Statute of Frauds are rejected, and even one part may have effect, as to the personal estate, though not as to the real; not even raising a case of Election. 375

See Agreement, 10, 14. Auction, 2. Revocation, 3, 4, 8. Will, 5.

FRAUDULENT DEVISES (STATUTE OF).

See Devise, 2.

FUNDS (PUBLIC).

See Assets (Conversion of), 2, 3.

GGAME.—See Trustee, 3.*GUARDIAN.

1. The proper application to change a Guardian is by petition. Ex parte The Earl of Ilchester. 348

2. The testator, married, but not then having children, gave the guardianship of all his daughters born or to be born to his wife, and of all his sons hereafter to be born to his wife and his brother or the survivor. The guardianship extends to all the children by that or a future marriage. Ex parte The Earl of Ilchester. 348

3. Testamentary appointment of Guardian not revoked by a subsequent testamentary appointment, not executed according to the Statute, and not directly importing revocation. Ex parte The Earl of Ilchester. 348

See Devise, 3. Revocation,

4. Trustee, 1.

H HEIR. See Agreement, 13. Election. Exoneration, 2, 3. Infant. Trustee, 3. HUSBAND. See Baron and Feme. Ward of Court.	INJUNCTION—continued. opening a mine, and continued the work into other land of the lessor, not comprised in his lease. Injunction as to both. 308 4. Injunction in the case of trespass to prevent irreparable mischief. 308 5. Injunction in the case of trespass to prevent the multiplicity of suits. 310 6. No injunction upon belief of an intention to cut timber. 417 7. Injunction between tenants in common against destruction ; not against pure equitable waste. Hole v. Thomas. 589 See Copyright, 1, 2.
I ILLEGAL CONTRACT. See Contract (Illegal). INADEQUATE CONSIDERATION. See Auction, 1. INCLOSURE.—See Injunction, 2. INDORSER. See Bill of Exchange, 2. INFANT. Sale decreed, or a Receiver ; where evidently for the benefit of the Infant Heir, to avoid the Parol demurring. Mould v. Williamson. 211, n. See Maintenance.	INSURABLE INTEREST. See Interest. INSURANCE, (ILLEGAL). See Contract (Illegal), 2. INTEREST. See Agreement, 11. Executor, 1. Legacy, 1. INTEREST, CONTINGENT. See Contingency. INTEREST, INSURABLE. Arrears of annuity, or any other debt insurable. 302 INTEREST, VESTED. See Vesting. ISSUE. Though the word "Issue" will comprehend all descendants, upon the particular construction of this Will it was confined to children. Sibley v. Perry. 522
J JOINT CREDITORS. See Bankrupt, 7. JOINT TENANT. See Vesting, 1, 4. JURISDICTION.	1. The ancient jurisdiction of this Court not destroyed by the assumed jurisdiction of Courts of law dispensing with Profert, and permitting averment of a consideration not in the deed. 19
3. Lessee committed waste by

JURISDICTION—continued.

2. The extension of the jurisdiction of Courts of Law in modern times to cases, that formerly were subjects of equitable jurisdiction exclusively, has not destroyed the jurisdiction of Courts of Equity. 249

3. Equitable jurisdiction to grant an injunction, or order an instrument to be delivered up; though it might be the subject of an action. Discretionary, whether an issue or an action shall be directed or permitted. Jervis v. White. 413

See Annuity, 2. Power of Attorney. Prize.

KKING (THE).—See Charity, 1.*L*LACHES.

See Account, 1. Principal and Agent, 3.

LANDLORD AND TENANT.

See Injunction, 2, 3. Lessor and Lessee. Principal and Agent, 3.

LEGACY.

1. In all cases of legacy interest only from the end of a year from the death; unless otherwise directed: the old rule, depending upon the fund, as productive or barren, being exploded. 97

2. Whether a sum of money directed to be placed out to produce an annuity is to be considered as legacy or annuity with reference to the time of payment, quare. 97

3. Under a residuary bequest to the legatees in proportion to their legacies, all legatees, pecuniary and specific, even of rings, etc., not expressly or by implication excluded, were held entitled: so annuitants, if they had not been excluded upon the construction of the whole will. Nannock v. Horton. 391

LEGACY—continued.

4. A charge of legacies held a charge of annuities. 402

See Annuity, 5, 6. Devise, 1. Satisfaction, 2.

LEGITIMATE CHILD.

See Child.

LESSOR AND LESSEE.

1. Whether a lease for seven, fourteen, or twenty-one years, is determinable at either of the intervening periods, at the option of both parties, or of the lessee only, nothing being expressed as to that, Quare. *Dann v. Spurrier. 231

2. The relief in respect of expenditure under an erroneous opinion of title or an expectation of a larger interest, or that the enjoyment would not be disturbed, with the knowledge and permission of the other party, requires a case of bad faith clearly made out. In this instance it failed for want of evidence. Dann v. Spurrier. 231

See Injunction, 2, 3.

LIMITATION OR ACCOUNT.

See Account, 1.

LITERARY PROPERTY.

See Copyright.

LORD OF MANOR.

See Injunction, 2.

LORDS.—See Appeals.LUNATIC.

1. A person, having an interest under a contract with the lunatic, permitted to traverse. Ex parte Hall. 261

2. The Lord Chancellor inclined to quash the inquisition: the Commission not having been executed near the place of abode; and an Order, that the lunatic should have due notice, having been disobeyed. Ex parte Hall. 261

3. The old rule, that the next of

* See the note, ante, page 236.

LUNATIC—continued.

kin of a lunatic, if entitled to his estate upon his death, was not to be Committee of the person, is not now adhered to. Ex parte Cockayne. 591

MMAINTENANCE.

A large allowance for maintenance and education ordered under circumstances; but with reluctance. Ex parte Petre. 403

MARRIAGE.

The expression "without being married" in a Will construed according to the common acceptance "without having ever been married." 458

See Revocation, 1.

MARRIAGE ARTICLES.

See Articles.

MARSHALLING.

See Assets (Marshalled).

MINE.—See Injunction, 3.MORTGAGE.

1. No order under the Stat. 7 Geo. II. c. 20, s. 2; the bill not being confined to a mere foreclosure; but including also another subject. Bastard v. Clarke. 489

2. Mortgagee, though entitled to costs in general, deprived of costs occasioned by improper conduct; and even compelled to pay costs. Detillin v. Gale. 583

See Agreement, 11.

NNE EXEAT REGNO.

1. Writ of Ne exeat Regno issues in the case of alimony; but only for sums actually due and costs. Shaftoe v. Shaftoe. 171

2. Writ of Ne exeat Regno issues in the case of alimony; but only for sums actually due: viz. arrears and costs. Dawson v. Dawson. 173

NE EXEAT REGNO—continued.

3. Analogy between the writ of Ne exeat Regno and bail. 174

4. Writ of Ne exeat Regno for arrears of alimony and costs. Oldham v. Oldham. 410

5. Affidavit for a writ of Ne exeat Regno must state an intention to go abroad; that the Defendant will hide himself is not sufficient. It must be positive, that he is going abroad, or to some declaration, that he is, by himself, not a third person. Oldham v. Oldham. 410

6. To obtain a writ of Ne exeat Regno the affidavit must be positive as to the intention to quit the kingdom, or declarations to that effect. It is sufficient, that the debt will be endangered, without stating, that it is to avoid the jurisdiction. Etches v. Lance. 417

7. Ne exeat Regno a high prerogative writ. 417

NEXT OR KIN.

See Trust (Resulting), 1.

NOTICE.—See Bill of Exchange, 2.O*OCCUPANCY.

1. Executor may be a special occupant. 440

2. Requisites to occupancy; a vacant possession, and a filling up of it by some person, who meant to occupy. 442

3. No special occupancy of a rent; being an incorporeal hereditament: but if the heirs, &c. are named in the grant, the executor is said to be quasi occupant. 448

OFFICER.—See Privilege, 1, 4.P*PARENT AND CHILD.

See Bankrupt, 1. Satisfaction, 1

PAROL DEMURRING.

See Assets (Marshalled). Infant

PAROL EVIDENCE.

See Agreement, 2, 4, 5. Evidence.

PAROL REVOCATION.

See Revocation, 3, 8.

PARTITION.

See Revocation, 13, 14.

PART-PERFORMANCE.

See Agreement, 14, 15.

PARTY.

Defect of parties : Defendant being liable to another suit. 11

See Injunction, 1.

PASTURE (COMMON OF).

See Injunction, 2.

PENALTY.—See Agreement, 11.

PERSONAL ESTATE.

See Devise, 1. Exoneration, 1.

PLEADING.

See Disclaimer, 1. Jurisdiction, 1.

PORTION.—See Satisfaction, 2, 3.

POWER.

1. Bequest to executors in trust that they shall pay, &c. unto and amongst the testator's two brothers and his sister, or their children, in such shares, &c. and at such times, &c. as the trustees, or the major part, or the survivor, his executors, &c. shall think proper. All the children living at the death of the testator held entitled with the parents, per capita; the Court not having a discretion. Longmore v. Broom. 124

2. Bequest to A. or B. void for uncertainty : if at the discretion of C., good. 128

3. Settlement in pursuance of articles, previous to marriage, to convey, to the use of the husband for life; remainder to wife for life; remainder upon trust to convey unto and amongst all and every or any of the children in such parts and proportions, &c. as the husband and wife or the survivor should by deed or writing with or without power of revocation, or by Will appoint: in default of appointment, to the first and other sons in tail male; remainder, subject to trusts that failed, to

POWER—continued.

the heirs of the husband. A joint appointment by deed, subject to a proviso for revocation and re-appointment by the husband and wife and the survivor, well revoked by the wife surviving; and by the same deed a re-appointment to the daughter and two sons successively for life, with remainders in tail to the grand-children, and the ultimate remainder to the daughter in fee, void for the excess beyond the power, viz. the estates to the grand-children, and the ultimate limitation upon them to the daughter; and the principle of Cy pres not applicable; all beyond the life estates of the children therefore to go as in default of appointment. Brudenell v. Elvies. 382

4. Investment of stock directed in trust to pay the dividends to the testator's son for life; and after his death to transfer part of the capital according to his appointment: an interest for life only, with a power. Nannock v. Horton. 391

5. Power of appointment not executed by a Will having no reference to the power or the subject of it; and the Court will not inquire into the circumstances of the property. Nannock v. Horton. 391

6. Where a particular, limited, interest and a power concur, though the latter alone might amount to an absolute gift, they are distinct. 398

7. Distinction between a power and absolute property. A power, unless executed, not assets for debts. Holmes v. Coghill. 499

8. Power executed by Will, but afterwards discharged; and a new power created. A subsequent codicil will not by the mere effect of republishing the Will be an execution of the power. Holmes v. Coghill. 499

POWER—continued.

9. Though the rule is settled, perhaps with some violation of principle, but with no practical inconvenience, that equity will in certain cases aid a defective execution of a power, the want of execution cannot be supplied. Holmes v. Coghill. 499
 10. Limitation to such uses as A. shall appoint: and in default of appointment to him in fee: the fee is in him until appointment. 583

See Dower, 2. Revocation 14.

POWER OF ATTORNEY.

Power of Attorney revocable, and in ordinary cases would not found the jurisdiction for delivering up instruments: but where executed for valuable consideration, this Court would not permit it to be revoked. 28

PRACTICE.

1. Decree for execution of a trust to pay debts against the trustees: the other Defendant not appearing, upon process to sequestration. Downes v. Thomas. 206
 2. Order to amend, not served or drawn up, does not prevent a motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution. Anonymous. 222
 3. Return to an attachment for want of appearance “Cepi Corpus,” but from illness and infirmity she could not be removed: a messenger ordered. Miles v. Lingham. 230
 4. An infant Plaintiff, a ward of the Court, having married, proceedings stayed, till the husband shall appear. Brummell v. M-Pherson. 237
 5. The Court refused to permit depositions in the French language to be delivered out for the purpose of being translated. Fauquier v. Tynte. 292
 6. Though the Court orders an original Will to be delivered out

PRACTICE—continued.

- for a special purpose, as to the jurisdiction, Quare. 292
 7. An omission in a decree, if perfectly of course, supplied on motion. In this instance the common direction to examine all parties upon interrogatories being omitted, an order was made, on motion, that the Master should be at liberty to examine, &c. Wallis v. Thomas. 292
 8. An omission in a decree, if perfectly of course, supplied on motion: viz. in the usual decree upon a creditor's bill against executors the direction for an account of the personal estate. Pickard v. Matheson. 293
 9. To obtain a commission to examine witnesses abroad, it is not necessary to state the points, to which it is intended to examine, or the names of the witnesses. Rougemont v. The Royal Exchange Assurance Co. 304
 10. Prerogative probate not dispensed with on account of the smallness of the sum. Newman v. Hodgson. 409
 11. Motion by Defendant for inspection of letters, referred to by the Plaintiff's depositions, as exhibits, refused, with costs. Wiley v. Pistor. 411
 12. Evidence not to be received by the Master, after he has settled his report. Thompson v. Lambe. 587
 See Biddings. Disclaimer. Guardian, 1. Injunction, 1, 2. Party. Privilege.
 PREROGATIVE PROBATE.
 See Practice, 10.
 PRESUMPTION.
 Payment ordered, where one party entitled had not been heard of for twenty years, upon a recognition to refund in the event of a claim. Bailey v. Hammond. 590
 See Evidence, 1. Satisfaction, 2.

PRINCIPAL AND AGENT.

1. Payment to an agent is payment to the principal. Thompson v. Thompson. 470
2. Bill for a general account lies against a solicitor and agent, taking a security without a settlement of accounts. 584
3. Accounts opened, and a general account decreed, against an agent, who was also tenant to his principal, in respect of fraud. The character of agent accompanying him in his situation as tenant, deprives him of the benefit of an objection, that might be competent to another person, as the laches of the Plaintiff in not bringing forward the demand at an earlier period. The decree affirmed on a re-hearing. Beaumont v. Boulbee. 599
4. Accounts settled between two agents without vouchers upon confidence not to be considered settled against their principal, without liberty to surcharge and falsify. 617

See Prize.

PRIVILEGE.

1. A person attending under a summons of Commissioners of Bankrupt privileged from arrest. Ordered, that the parties arresting, and who had lodged detainers, having notice, should discharge him. The attorney, having undertaken to indemnify the officers, and they having acted under that, guilty of a contempt; and ordered to pay all costs out of pocket. The Lord Chancellor also intimated, that a creditor attending to prove his debt, though not under a summons, is entitled to privilege. Ex parte King. 312
2. Party attending his own suit privileged from arrest. 314
3. Bankrupt's privilege from arrest in attending the Commissioners, independent of the stat. 5 Geo. II. 314
4. A Bankrupt's privilege from ar-

PRIVILEGE—continued.

- rest extends to the end of the 42d day. Ordered, that the Plaintiff in the action should discharge him; and the officer having acted without instructions was ordered to pay the costs. Ex parte Donlevy. 317
5. Whether a deviation by a bankrupt, returning from examination, for the purpose of leaving his books at the house of the assignee, will deprive him of his privilege, Quare. Ex parte Donlevy. 317

PRIZE.

The appellant from a decision of condemnation by the Admiralty Court is not bound to adhere to the security given; but may follow the property or the proceeds in the hands of an agent. The prize jurisdiction extends to the question, whether a person, who received and sold the property, received it as consignee for valuable consideration, or as prize agent. A prohibition therefore against a monition to bring in the property or the proceeds was refused. Case of the ship Noysonked. 593

PROBATE.—See Practice, 10.PROCHEIN AMY.

The Court refused a Prochein Amy the costs beyond the taxed costs. Osborne v. Denne. 424

PROFERT.—See Jurisdiction, 1.PROHIBITION.

1. A proceeding upon a bail bond in the Marshalsea Court, assigned according to the practice of that Court to one of the officers, is not a proceeding against a prohibition restraining the original action, so as to incur a contempt. Iveson v. Harris. 254
2. Whether a prohibiton issued from the Court of Chancery, without application in Court, upon an affidavit stating merely, that the cause of action arose out of the jurisdiction, not adding, that foreign plea was tendered, and refused, is regular, Quare. But if it is irregular, any proceeding against it is a contempt. The party ought to apply to the Court to supersede it. The form of the affidavit to be altered in future. Iveson v. Harris.

PROHIBITION—continued.

254

3. The Court of Chancery always open: and therefore can issue a prohibition in the Vacation. 257

PURCHASE.

See Auction. Dower, 1, 2.

RREAL ESTATE.

See Assets (Marshalled), 1.

RECOMMENDATION.

See Trust, 1.

RECOVERY.

Estates comprised in an equitable recovery: the words being sufficiently comprehensive notwithstanding an inference against the possession of the party and his intention to include them from acts done under a misconception of his title. Pigott v. Waller.

98

RELATOR.—See Charity, 8.RENEWAL.

Grant of an annuity for life out of tithes leased for years, with covenant for farther assurance. The lessee afterwards renewed the lease; married: and died. Her husband administered; and renewed with his own money. The annuity is a charge upon the renewed term, generally; and the grantee is not bound to contribute to the expense of renewal. Moody v. Matthews.

174

RENT.—See Occupancy, 3.REPRESENTATIVES.

See Exoneration.

REPUBLICATION.—See Will, 1.RESIDUE.

See Stock. Trust (Resulting), 1, 2.

REVOCATION.

1. A second marriage and the

REVOCATION—continued.

birth of children, the wife and children provided for by settlement, and there being children by the former marriage, a case of exception from the rule, that marriage and the birth of a child revoke a Will. Ex parte The Earl of Ilchester.

348

2. An act inconsistent with the Will, though by some accident, independent of the Will, it fails of effect, is a revocation; as a covenant to make a feoffment and letter of attorney to make livery; but no livery made. 370
3. Parol revocation of Will before the Statute of Frauds. 371
4. Previously to the Statute of Frauds and that as to guardianship any declaration, from which an intention to revoke could be collected, was sufficient. 371
5. Disposition by Will, so as to have legal effect, and afterwards another, by which the former would be revoked, but the other substituted; and it is evident, the testator did not intend revocation for any other purpose, than to give it effect: if the second instrument cannot have the effect of disposition, it shall not be a revocation. 372
6. Where the act is valid for the whole purpose, but by disability of the person to take, or some matters dehors or subsequent to the Will it is ineffectual, it is a revocation. 373
7. A Will may be revoked by an Instrument, not attested, as would be required to give it effect. Any disposition, that would by the instrument have completely put an end to that Will, shall have that effect, though the instrument becomes ineffectual by any accident or circumstance dehors the Will. 374
8. The rule of the Civil Law required the same solemnity to annul an instrument, that was necessary to its completion:

REVOCATION—continued.

- relaxed by Justinian in certain cases as to the revocation of a Will. The rule never adopted in its full extent in this country. Parol revocation of a Will good before the Statute of Frauds. Parol revocation of agreements. Different solemnities by that Statute for the framing and the revocation of Wills. 376, 7
9. Ground of the cases of feoffment without livery and bargain and sale without enrolment as to the revocation of a Will. 378
10. A perfect and complete Will, inconsistent with the former, is a revocation, though the devisee may never derive benefit from it: otherwise, if defectively executed and incapable as a Will. 379
11. An express revocation, if only subservient to another purpose, for which it is incompetent, shall not revoke. 379
12. Rule of the Civil Law: “Tunc prius testamentum rumpitur cum posterius perfectum est.” 380
13. The effect of revocation in equity produced by an agreement for partition, in such a manner as to deprive the testatrix in equity of any interest in the estate devised; and the devisee disappointed has no right to compensation from the heir. The agreement good to this effect, though it cannot be precisely executed; admitting compensation. Whether, if abandoned, the Will is set up again, Quare. Knollys v. Alcock. 558
14. Mere partition, whether by compulsion or agreement, is not a revocation of a Will: but the slightest addition, as a power of appointment prior to the limitation of the uses, is sufficient. 564

See Guardian, 3. Power, 3.
Power of Attorney.

S

SALES BY AUCTION.

See Auction.

SALE OR COMMAND OF EAST INDIA SHIP.

See Contract (Illegal), 1.

SATISFACTION.

1. A son placed by his father in business, accounting to his father for all the profits, deducting only the expense of his board, having made no demand for wages during his father's life, was held not entitled as a creditor after his father's death; or, if he had a demand, it was satisfied by a Will, giving him a legacy to a greater amount, and other benefits. Plume v. Plume. 258

2. Presumed satisfaction of a legacy by a portion; the evidence not being sufficient to rebut the presumption. Trimmer v. Bayne. 508

3. Distinction as to satisfaction between the case of double portions and performance of a covenant. In the former small circumstances of difference are overlooked. 515

SEPARATE CREDITORS.

See Bankrupt, 7.

SETTLEMENT.—See Articles.

SMUGGLED GOODS.

See Contract (Illegal), 2.

SOLICITOR.

See Principal and Agent, 2.

SPECIAL OCCUPANCY.

See Occupancy.

SPECIFIC BEQUEST AND DEVISE.

1. Bequest of personal estate not held specific merely from being combined with a devise of land. Howe v. Earl of Dartmouth. 137

2. Legacies not specific without something marking the specific thing; as the description “my Stock,” &c. A mere direction to transfer, and that so much capital be kept in the same pub-

SPECIFIC BEQUEST AND DE-	THEATRE.
VICE— continued.	Order made in the case of Drury Lane Theatre on the authority of the cases of the Royal Cir- cus and the Opera House. Ez parte Ford. 617
lic fund, is not sufficient. Sib- ley v. Perry. 522
See Assets (Marshalled), 1. Devide, 1. Legacy, 3. Will, 8.
SPECIFIC PERFORMANCE.	TIMBER.—See Injunction, 6.
See Agreement, 1, 2, 3, 4, 9. Auction, 1.	TITLE.
STATUTE OF FRAUDS.	Exception to a report, in favor of a title, on the ground, that the reversion in fee might have been disposed of, so as not to have descended to the heir, from whom the title was derived, over- ruled. Sperling v. Trevor. 497
See Frauds.	TRAVERSE.—See Lunatic, 1.
STEWARD.	TRESPASS.
See Principal and Agent. Trus- tee, 1.	See Injunction, 3, 4, 5.
STOCK.	TRUST.
Stock bequeathed by a Will with- out two witnesses is subject in the hands of the executor to the directions of the Will; even for the purpose of a residuary bequest. 440	Words of recommendation not con- sidered imperative, unless the objects and subject are certain. 85
See Assets (Conversion of), 2, 3.	See Charity, 1.
STOCK (Loan of).	TRUST, (Executor). 201
See Bankrupt, 3.	Where any act is to be done, as a conveyance to be made, the estate is a trust, not a use exe- cuted. 201
SUPERSTITIOUS USE.	See Use.
The stat. 1 Edw. VI. c. 14, relates only to superstitious uses of a particular description then exist- ing. 495	TRUST, (Resulting).
See Charity, 9.	1. Executors, though not having legacies, held trustees of the residue for the next of kin. Uryuhart v. King. 225
SURVIVORSHIP.	2. A legacy to an executor raises a presumption against his legal title to the residue; which he may rebut by evidence. 229
See Vesting, 1.	3. The produce of real estate sold under a power in a Will passed by a residuary clause with the personal estate: the object being a conversion out and out: but part remaining unsold was held a resulting trust for the heir at law. Brown v. Bigg. 279
T	See Evidence, 2.
TEMPORARY ADMINIS- TRATION.—See Administra- tion.	TRUSTEE.
TENANT.—See Landlord. Prin- cipal and Agent, 3.	1. The Court refused to order Court Rolls, &c. to be deliv- ered by the steward appointed by the trustees to the steward of the testamentary guardian:
TENANT FOR LIFE.
See Assets (Conversion of), 1, 2.
TENANT IN COMMON.
See Vesting, 1, 4.
TENANT PUR AUTER VIE.
See Estate pur auter vie.
TERM ATTENDANT ON THE INHERITANCE.
See Dower, 1, 3.
TERM IN GROSS.
See Dower, 3.

TRUSTEE—continued.

- there being no suggestion of improper conduct or advantage from the change. Mott v. Burton. 201
2. The Court controls a trustee in the exercise of a power to appoint new trustees, though given in very large words. Webb v. The Earl of Shaftesbury. 480
3. A trustee and executor, though taking under the Will a commission as a satisfaction for his trouble, entitled to allowances under a general trust to set and manage, as he should think proper, and out of the rents and profits to pay all rates and taxes, charges of repair, stewards', bailiffs', and game-keepers', salaries and expenses, and all other charges and expenses he should think proper. But he was not allowed to appoint an establishment, game-keepers, &c. except as the due management required. Inquiry therefore directed as to that; and whether the liberty of sporting during the continuance of the trust could be let for the benefit of the Cestui que trust: if not, the game belongs to the heir. Webb v. The Earl of Shaftesbury. 480
4. A provision, in case of the death of a trustee, for the substitution of another, and a conveyance by the survivor so that he and the new trustees should be jointly interested in the trust, satisfied by the substitution of two trustees, after the death of both the former, and a conveyance by the heir of the survivor. Morris v. Preston. 547

See Charge and Discharge.
Executor, 6, 7. Trust (Resulting).

U

USE.

Devise, charged with debts, to trustees and their heirs; in trust to receive and take the rents, issues and profits; and thereout to support and educate the devisor's son till the age of 21; and then to him. Not a use executed in the son before the age of 21. 322

USE—continued.

See Superstitious Use. Trust (Executory).

V

VESTING.

1. Under words importing a tenancy in common, though combined with words of survivorship, the interests vested at the death of the testator; and therefore vested in one of the legatees, who died between the death of the testator and the death of the person entitled for life. Brown v. Bigg. 279
2. Legacy, when the legatee shall attain twenty-one, may be so controlled by the apparent intention as to postpone the possession only, not the vesting; as where it was to two children, when they shall attain twenty-one, to be equally divided between them, share and share alike; appointing their father in trust for the same and trustees for them during their minority; and in case of the death of either the survivor to take the whole; and in case both die in their minority, over. Branstrom v. Wilkinson. 421
3. Bequest to the testator's three children to be equally divided between them, share and share alike, but in case of the death of any without being married and having children, the share of such child so dying to be divided between the surviving children, and so if one should only survive: one being married and having a child, her share vested. Ripley v. Waterworth. 453

VESTING—continued.

4. Construction of a Will, giving a vested interest, though subject to a contingent charge; and creating a tenancy in common as to part of the property, and as to the residue a joint-tenancy; there being nothing to control the legal effect of the words.
Jackson v. Jackson. 534

See Power, 1.

W.

WARD OF COURT.

Upon a marriage of a Ward of the Court, under flagrant circumstances, the husband obtaining a license upon a false oath, that she was of age, the clergyman was ordered to attend, and reprimanded: the husband was committed and ordered to be indicted. Being convicted and having suffered the punishment, upon his petition to be discharged on executing a settlement, the Lord Chancellor would not approve a proposal giving him any farther interest than, in case of his surviving and no children under her appointment: requiring the fund to be transferred to the Accountant General: with a trust declared to pay the dividends to her separate use for life, from time to time, and not by way of anticipation: after her decease the capital among all her children by any marriage: if none, and he survives, according to her appointment by Will; if no appointment, to her next of kin; and if she survives subject to her appointment, to her, her executors, &c. No costs to the husband. Millet v. Rose. 419

See Practice, 4.

WASTE.—See Injunction, 2, 3, 7.
WIFE.

See Baron and Feme. Ward of Court.

WILL.

1. A codicil, with three witnesses, though relating only to personal estate and expressing no intention as to re-publication of the Will, is a re-publication, and therefore the Will containing a general devise, lands purchased in the interval pass. Pigott v. Waller. 98
2. The Court never alters or adds to a Will without necessity. 130
3. Rule of construction not to make any intendment contrary to the plain and usual sense of the words, unless from other parts of the Will plainly appearing not intended to have that extensive operation. 368
4. Though the testator might not have contemplated the event, that will not affect the construction. 369
5. A Will not executed according to the Statute of Frauds has no operation; not even to raise an election against a person taking a benefit in the personal estate. 372
6. Distinction as to real and personal estate. Every gift of land, even a general residuary devise, is specific; and that only, to which the party is entitled at the time, can pass: in the case of personal property what he has at his death will pass; and if the description is specific, it may operate as a direction to purchase. 399
7. “And” construed “or” to give effect to all the words. 458
8. The Court will not take into consideration the amount of the property or the number of objects, for the purpose of constructing a Will, except in the case of a specific disposition. Sibley v. Perry. 522
9. Testator having directed a transfer of 3 per cent. Consols, three months after his decease gave several other legacies of stock “as aforesaid.” Those words upon the whole Will referred to the description of the stock, not to the time of the transfer.

WILL—continued.

Sibley v. Perry. 522

See Assets (marshalled). Contingency. Devise. Exoneration, 1. Frauds (Statute of), 2 Guardian, 3. Legacy. Marriage. Power, 1, 2. Practice, 6. Resulting Trust, 3. Revocation, 1. Specific Bequest. Trust, 1.

WITNESS.

1. Bill for discovery, in aid of an action: demurrer by a mere

WITNESS—continued.

witness allowed; though the discovery would be more effectual than the examination at law, and notwithstanding a charge of interest in the Defendant; as to which he may be called by the Plaintiff, waiving the objection, and if called against him may be examined upon the voir dire. Fenton v. Hughes. 287
 2. A party having called a witness cannot discredit him. 290

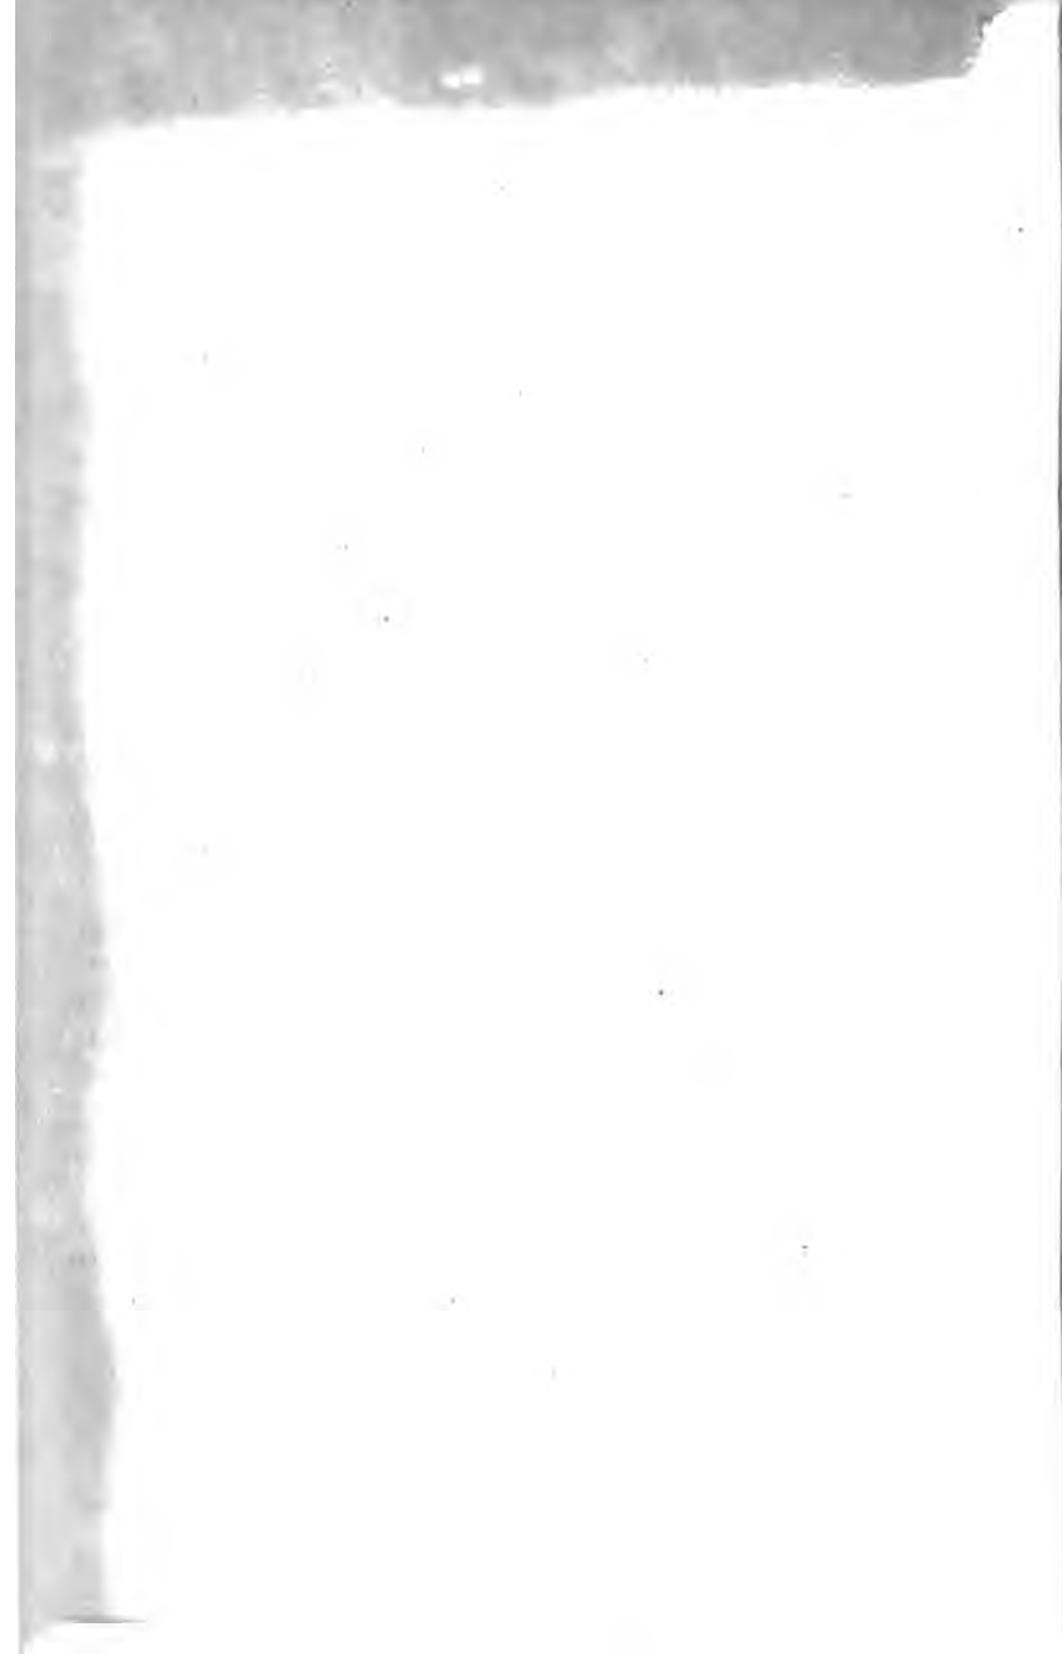

See Practice, 9.

WRIT OF NE EXEAT REGNO.

See Ne exeat Regno.

END OF THE SEVENTH VOLUME.

Stanford Law Library

3 6105 062 834 408

